The question ‘Are these people waiting, probably, for God to come to them…’ means: in a way which they had not expected. Are they waiting until they see the amazing, harmonious universe be obliterated, the whole universe be disintegrated and the sun overthrown, and the stars fall, and everything in existence change; and then they will be surprised to find themselves before their Lord. So what are they waiting for?

They must grasp the opportunity to act before all of this takes place, and before the chance slips from their hands and their possibility of returning to God ends. Why do they delay entering completely into Islam? What are they waiting for? Are they waiting for God to change or for God’s Way to change? This will not happen.

We emphasise again that when we hear something related to the True Lord the Most High which has an equivalent in humans, we must take this in the light of ‘There is nothing like Him;’ for just as you believe that God has an Essence which is not like other essences, you must also know that God has attributes which are not like other attributes, and that God has actions which are not like other actions. Do not affirm that God’s Essence is different from human essences, and then, take the attributes which God ascribes to Himself and make them just like human attributes. If God 'comes', do not imagine that His coming is such that He goes from one place to another, for He the Exalted is omnipresent and no place is devoid of Him, and this is part of His majesty.

When it is said '…for God to come to them…' do not think that His coming is like yours because His Essence is not like your essence and because people's actions differ according to their levels so that their actions differ according to their status and their attributes differ according to their status, whilst the True Lord the Most High is beyond all things and all imagination. Let us take everything about Him according to 'There is nothing like Him': your Lord's actions are different from your actions, and beware of subjecting His actions to the laws of your own actions; for your own actions require effort and time which differ according to your power and your ability, whilst God does things without any effort so that it takes Him no time at all, but rather, He says 'Be!', and it is.

It is as though the True Lord the Most High wants to give us an image of the event which humans will not be able to choose to avoid, and so says: When this thing takes place, no created being will have any power over it, and all authority will be for God Alone.

Are these people waiting, probably, for God to come to them in shadows of clouds, with the angels; and by then the matter will have been decided? And to God all matters are returned.

'…In shadows of clouds….' There are things which shade you, and things by which you seek shade. You have no control over the things which shade you except inasmuch as you see where their shadow falls and so go to that place. There are other things which you can control, such as parasols, which you can open wherever you want. The word 'shadows' (zhulal) means things which cover you from the source of light; this meaning is illustrated in another verse, albeit in a different context, where the True Lord the Most High describes the state of people on board a ship in a storm where the waves engulf them like shadows (Luqman: 32).

That is, the greatest fear comes to them like a shadow engulfing them. It is as though God the Most High wants to tell us that the entire universe will be obliterated and there will come unto you the terrifying thing, the calamitous thing. The believer will have been expecting it, and it will be cool and peaceful for him because this is what he embraced faith for. But the disbeliever will be afflicted with the greatest fear because he will be surprised by something he will not have been expecting.

Compare the coming of this event to the one who was expecting it, and its coming to the one who was not expecting it. The True Lord the Most High is saying that when these shadows and the angels come, the matter will have been decided. When you hear, '…the matter will have been decided…' know that this means that the chance will have slipped from the hands of the people, and so those who have not already returned to their Lord will have no further chance to return. An example of this is what the True Lord said in the story of Noah peace be upon him: And the matter was decided and the ark came to rest on Mount Judi (Hud: 44).

That is, everything was over, and the people had no ability to repent what they had been doing. God the Most High says: What are you waiting for? Are you waiting until this day comes to you? You must take the opportunity to return to your Lord before the chance to go back slips away from you. '…And to God all matters are returned.' Sometimes, in other verses, we have a slightly different version of this statement: 'and to God all matters return.'

There is a difference between 'matters return' in the active form, and 'matters are returned' in the passive form. It is as though matters sometimes are said to move of their own accord, and other times they are said to be driven to God: the willing person will return to his Lord by himself because he will be going on to the goodness which he is waiting for; on the other hand, the unwilling one, who did not hope to meet his Lord, will be taken back against his will, and another force will come and send him back; those who do not come willingly will be made to come against their will.

The True Lord the Most High then says:

سَلۡ بَنِيٓ إِسۡرَٰٓءِيلَ كَمۡ ءَاتَيۡنَٰهُم مِّنۡ ءَايَةِۭ بَيِّنَةٖۗ وَمَن يُبَدِّلۡ نِعۡمَةَ
ٱللَّهِ مِنۢ بَعۡدِ مَا جَآءَتۡهُ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ شَدِيدُ ٱلۡعِقَابِ ﴿٢١١﴾

[Prophet], ask the Children of Israel how many clear signs
We brought them. If anyone alters God’s blessings after he has received them, God is stern in punishment [211]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 211)

It is as though God the Most High is not directly rebuking the children of Israel because He wanted them to admit themselves the good with which God honoured them previously. When you say, ‘Ask so-and-so what I did for him,’ you only ask that because of you are certain that he will not be able to answer in any way that does not support your side. The True Lord the Most High is telling His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to ask the children of Israel about the goodness which He previously bestowed upon them, and He the Exalted well knows that despite their argumentative nature they will not be able to say anything which does not confirm the point which He is making, and will therefore become an argument against them.

The True Lord the Most High says, ‘Ask the Children of Israel how many clear signs we have given them….’ When you hear the words ‘how many’ in a situation such as this, know that it is a way of affirming that something is copious, and is different to the expression ‘how many’ which is intended as a question. You say, ‘How many times have I done this for so-and-so,’ or ‘How many good turns have I done him,’ and ‘How indulging have I been with him,’ and ‘How generous have I been to him!’ So when you hear this kind of ‘how many’, know that it implies a large quantity which could be figuratively described as being ‘beyond counting.’

‘Ask the Children of Israel how many clear signs we have given them….’ The True Lord the Most High wants to give us an example like the example of someone who usurps your wealth and denies your favours, and complains about you to others, and so you respond to the one who conveys to you his complaint: ‘Ask him about all the favours I have done for him;’ I myself will not talk, but rather will make him do the talking. You would not say this unless you are certain that he will not be able to deny a thing.

Did He not part the sea for them? Did He not transform Moses' staff into a snake? Did God not shade them with clouds? Did God not give them manna and quails? God gave them all of this, and they did not give thanks for God's blessings, and so they incurred His wrath. He afflicted them with drought and famine, and sent upon them lice, frogs, and blood; God did all this with them. And when the True Lord the Most High says to His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him, 'Ask the Children of Israel…' this applies also to the community of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him. If one of them comes to you, ask him: 'How many signs did God give to you, and then you denied them, and procrastinated, and were stubborn?' Now we come to the question: '…how many clear signs we have given them….' The words 'how many' indicate a large quantity, and 'sign' means a miraculous thing, and 'clear' means something plain which no one can fail to notice.

'Ask the Children of Israel how many clear signs we have given them. And whoever changes the favour of God after it has reached him; assuredly God is severe in chastisement. How can someone change God's favour? When God's favour comes to a person, they should meet it with gratitude; and 'gratitude' means to ascribe the favour to the One Who gave it, and to be ashamed to disobey the One Who granted the favour to them. If people meet God's favour in any other way than this, it has thereby been changed. This is why the True Lord the Most High poses the question in another verse: Have you not seen those who have changed God's favour for disbelief? (Ibrahim: 28) Since they have preferred to deny it, this means that disbelief has taken the place of faith. So they should have met God's blessing with faith, and by drawing nearer to God, but they exchanged the blessing for disbelief.

'…And whoever changes the favour of God after it has reached him, assuredly God is severe in chastisement.' We might understand that 'severe in chastisement' is something related to the Hereafter; and perhaps there are some who see the Hereafter as something very far-off, or who do not believe in the Hereafter at all, and if this chastisement were confined to the punishment of the Hereafter only, people would be made miserable by those who do not believe in the Hereafter, or who see it as far-off because they would spread corruption throughout the earth, not fearing the Hereafter, or even believing in it, or even thinking of it at all.

The one who believes that the Hereafter will come and that there will be a reckoning therein, will behave according to this belief; on the other hand, the one who does not believe that there will be a Last Day, he will make the world miserable. If God had not made a form of immediate chastisement for those who do not believe in the Hereafter, or those who see the Hereafter as far-off, people would all be made miserable by those who do not believe, or who see it as far-off.

For every group which does not accept the way of God, and exchanges God's favours for ingratitude, it must be that God has some kind of immediate chastisement for them; this is so people know that he who is not deterred by faith and fear of the Last Day should be deterred by fear that retribution will come to him in this world. If a wrongdoer knows that another wrongdoer like him was punished and held to account in this world, he will fear to do wrong even if he does not believe in the Hereafter because he will be sure that he will definitely be held to account himself. This is why God the Most High does not delay all retribution to the Hereafter, but rather, He unleashes some of it in this world. The True Lord the Most High says about those who exchange God's blessings for ingratitude that they have caused their people to land in that abode of utter desolation, hell, which they will have to endure, and how vile a state to settle in (Ibrahim: 28-29).

This is the punishment of the Hereafter; and God the Most High will not leave them in this world without any punishment.

And even those who do wrong and deviate despite being Muslims, God will not leave them unpunished in this world, and will not delay their punishment to the Day of Resurrection; rather, something must happen to them in their worldly life to make them a lesson to others so that the motions of life will be upright for all people, otherwise people will suffer on their hands, and the hands of those who do not believe in the punishment of the Hereafter.

A righteous scholar used to say, 'O God, the people see Your Hereafter as being far-off, and Your forbearance has deluded them; so, take them to task as only the Almighty Who can determine all things!' For if He the Exalted delayed their punishment to the Hereafter, they would be corrupted and would be a trial for the believers around them. Because of this, God decreed to ordain, in His way of faith, laws of crime and punishment which take place in this world. Why? It is so that corruption is not spread by those who doubt in the Hereafter. God does not make His severe chastisement in the Hereafter only, but rather, He also makes it in this world as well, which is why God the Most High says that the one who turns away from His monition, his shall be a life of misery; and on the Day of Resurrection He shall raise him up blind (Ta Ha: 124).

Then He the Exalted says:

زُيِّنَ لِلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ ٱلْحَيَوٰةُ ٱلدُّنْيَا وَيَسْخَرُونَ مِنَ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ وَٱلَّذِينَ
ٱتَّقَوْا۟ فَوْقَهُمْ يَوْمَ ٱلْقِيَٰمَةِ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ يَرْزُقُ مَن يَشَآءُ بِغَيْرِ حِسَابٍ ﴿٢١٢﴾

The life of this world is made to seem glamorous to the disbelievers, and they laugh at those who believe. But those who are mindful of God will be above them on the Day of Resurrection: God provides immeasurably for whoever He pleases [212] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 212)

The True Lord the Most High wants to make us see the place of man in the universe, this place which shows that he is the master of that universe, which means that all other beings serve him. We know that minerals serve vegetables, and minerals and vegetables serve animals, and minerals, vegetables and animals all serve man, and so man is the master of these beings.

Logic dictates that this master should search for a being higher than himself; for just as the beings below him were at his service, this higher being must in turn also merit mastery. Yet, he could find nothing in existence which is higher than the race to which he belonged, and so man should have said: I want another being to tell me about myself, for I am in dire need of this. And so when the messengers came and said, ‘The One Who is higher than you, o man, is God, and there is nothing like Him, and He is exalted above all species;’ man should have welcomed this information, for the knowledge of God solved the mystery for him. The messengers only came to solve the mystery which man was trying to solve, and so man should have rejoiced in the coming of the messengers, especially since God the Most High did not want any favour from him; man is the one who needs to worship God so, He will subdue all created beings for him, and he worships Him so that He gives him honour. So the believer stands between two things: between that which is compelled to serve him and is lower than him, namely the species of minerals, vegetables and animals, and One Who gives to him and favours him willingly and is higher than him, namely God.

So, if someone takes one of these and leaves the other, he has thereby taken the lower and left the higher, and so the True Lord the Most High says to him: Take the higher. If you are happy with what you are given by creatures which are lower than you, and you like to get more from them, how can you not want to get more from One Who is higher than you? He is God.

When the True Lord the Most High says, ‘Beautified for those who disbelieve, is the life of this world…’, He wants to alert us to the fact that the standards of the disbelievers are inferior, base standards because the thing which seems goodly to them is the lower matter, and it is terrible judgement for a person to take the lower thing and favour it to the higher. When the word ‘beautified’ (zuyyina) is mentioned in the Quran, it is in the Arabic passive voice verb form, such as in God’s statement that beautified for man is the enjoyment of worldly desires through women, children and heaped-up treasures of gold and silver (Al-ʻImran: 14).

There, it is ‘beautified for man,’ and here in the verse of the chapter of al-Baqara which we are currently examining, it is ‘Beautified for those who disbelieve….’ Why did the True Lord the Most High say here ‘Beautified for those who disbelieve…’? It is because those who disbelieve have nothing, but the life of this world, for they do not believe in anything higher; but when it comes to people in general, God the Most High says that beautified for man is the enjoyment of worldly desires through women, children, heaped-up treasures of gold and silver, horses of high mark, cattle and lands. All this may be enjoyed in the life of this world – but the most beauteous of all goals is with God (Al-ʻImran: 14). He the Exalted is saying to mankind: Take life as it comes. The word (zuyyinat) literally means ‘was made beautiful. Who was it who made them beautiful? God the Most High made them beautiful. How can you forget the One Who made them beautiful for you, and made them attractive, and placed them under your command?

It was essential that you took them as a means to faith in Him Who provided them to you, and that whenever you see something beautiful in existence, you say ‘Glory be to God!’ and increase your faith in God. As for you taking the thing and removing it from the One Who created it, this is an inferior standard of judgement.

Or, God the Most High made them beautiful by placing in man instincts which are attracted to the things which this worldly life offers him. We say: Did He the Exalted give these instincts and then not give a way of guidance to elevate these instincts? No; He gave these instincts and also gave a way of guidance to elevate these instincts, so, do not take one and leave the other. This is why the True Lord the Most High says that good lasting deeds are of far greater merit (al-Kahf: 46).

When the True Lord the Most High says, ‘Beautified for those who disbelieve is the life of this world…’ He exposes those who think that there is no life after this life. We say to them: This is an inferior standard, and an imprecise judgement, and proof of foolishness because you have gone to what is lower and discarded what is higher; and it is strange that you have done this; and then there are these clear differences between you and those who chose what is higher. You are in the lower position, and yet you ridicule those who gave regard to what is higher. The True Lord the Most High says, ‘…and they ridicule those who believe….’ Why do they ridicule them? Because those who believe are devout, and as long as someone is devout, he will keep himself away from anything in existence which comes to him from an unlawful source, whilst those others have turned all their powers and faculties to all in life which is attractive to them.

This is why you find a person living within the means of his lawful income, owning nothing, but a single suit of clothes, while another person steals from others. You find that the latter person lives, by the wealth of others, with a fine and neat appearance, and when the two of them meet, the one who steals ridicules the one who lives lawfully. Why? That is because he sees himself as being superior to him; he sees himself in his neat and ‘chic’ attire. So the True Lord passes final judgement on this matter and says, ‘…but those who fear God are above them on the Day of Resurrection….’ Why on the Day of Resurrection? Are they not already above them now?

The True Lord the Most High is speaking about the way people see things; for they do not see inner peace, the harmony of a person's faculties when he goes to sleep having not inflicted upon himself a religious error, or a moral error, and having hurt no one, and having not engaged in corruption, and having not tale-borne or backbitten anyone; how will he be, when he thinks about his actions during the day before he sleeps? He will certainly feel a happiness which cannot be rivalled by the wealth of this world.

This is why God does not enter this feeling into the comparison, but rather, He uses something over which no one has power: '…but those who fear God are above them on the Day of Resurrection….' Therefore, the True Lord the Most High says that wrongdoers are wont to laugh at believers, and whenever they pass by them, they wink at one another derisively, and whenever they return to people of their own kind, they return full of jests, and whenever they see those who believe, they say that these people have indeed gone astray but they have not been given the charge to watch over the beliefs of others (al-Mutaffifin: 29-33).

And then, after this, the True Lord the Most High gives us the final picture: On the Day of Judgment, the believers will laugh at the erstwhile disbelievers as, resting in paradise on couches, they will look on and ask whether the disbelievers were justly rewarded for what they were doing (al-Mutaffifin: 34-36).

That is: 'Did We not know how to requite them?' We say, 'Yes, Lord!' – Particularly since the laughter of the Hereafter will not be followed by weeping.

God says, '…but those who fear God are above them on the Day of Resurrection….' Notice that the True Lord the Most High changes the usual approach in this verse since it might have been supposed that He would say: Those who believe, shall be above them. Instead, He said '…but those who fear God are above them…' because faith might only be nominal: it might be known of you that you are a believer, but this attribution is not enough to ensure that you will attain the highest rank unless your actions show you to be God-fearing.

So do not say, 'I am a believer', and then, someone else says, 'I am a believer', and the 'believers' come to number billions of people all over the world; we say to them: You cannot attain faith simply by name; you can only attain faith by adhering to the Way of Heaven. This is why God the Most High did not say: Those who believe shall be above them on Resurrection Day; but rather, He said, '…but those who fear God are above them…' in order to show the distance between the mere name and the real attribute. The True Lord the Most High concludes the noble verse by saying, '…and God gives provision to whom He wills without account.' What is 'provision'? They say that provision is everything that is beneficial so that everything from which you benefit is your provision. According to this definition, thieves consider ill-gotten gains to be provision; but it is unlawful provision.

People always reduce the word 'provision' to one thing which is always on their minds, namely 'money.' We say to them no; provision is everything which brings benefit, and everything which gives benefit, is part of provision: your knowledge is a kind of provision; your moral character is a kind of provision; your honour is a kind of provision, and everything you benefit from is provision. When you say that all of this is provision, consider God's statement that those who are more abundantly favoured, are often unwilling to share their provisions with those whom their right hands possess so that they all might be equal in this respect (an-Nahl: 71).

It is as though God the Most High wants His creatures to share their provisions with others, and that everyone who has a distinction, and has more of some kind of provision, must share this with others; but people only understand provision to mean money; they do not understand that it means everything which is benefitted from.

If this is the case, then, what does '…and God gives provision to whom He wills without account' mean? We must understand the word 'without account' on the basis that account requires one who reckons, and one who is reckoned, and that for which he is reckoned. In this light, for the words 'without account,' who reckons, and who is reckoned, and for what is he reckoned?

It is provision without account from God. God the Most High might give you provision according to your work, or He might give you more; and He gives provision without account because there is no power higher than Him which could say to Him, 'Why did you give so-and-so more than he deserved?'

He grants provision without account because His stores are never exhausted; and He grants provision without account because no laws govern Him; He grants it by His Omnipotent Power. He the Exalted gives to the disbeliever so that you might be confused by this and say, ‘Why does He give to the disbeliever and not the believer?’

If anyone is able to hold Him to account, let them ask Him why this is so. He repays good deeds seven hundredfold, beyond all reckoning. There can only be reckoning when you take something which is countable: if you take, for example, one hundred from one thousand, you subtract one countable from another, and so it must become less, and when you see it becomes less, you are afraid to give more. But God is not like this, for He gives that which is countable from that which is beyond counting.

So, when you read ‘without account’, say that if reckoning comes from God to others, he does not give according to a person’s labour, but rather gives them more than this; and He does not reckon Himself, nor could anyone else hold Him to account. God addresses mankind saying that all that is with them is bound to be exhausted, whereas that which is with God is everlasting (an-Nahl: 96).

So, the statement that ‘…God gives provision to whom He wills without account’ should make every person keep his good manners and hold his tongue when he sees that someone else has been granted more provision than he has; for he does not know God’s wisdom behind this. There are many people who, when God gives them a blessing, say, ‘Our Lord has honoured us,’ but when He takes this blessing from them they say, ‘Our Lord has humiliated us!’ About this, God the Most High says that man, whenever his Lord tries him by His generosity and by letting him enjoy a life of ease, he says, ‘My Lord has honoured me;’ and whenever He tries him by straitening his means of livelihood, he says, ‘My Lord has disgraced me’ (al-Fajr: 15-16).

You are wrong when you consider a favour to be an honour from God; and you are also wrong if you think that withdrawal of favour is a humiliation from God. A favour is an honour from God only if He gives you the success to use this favour well; and a favour is only a humiliation if God the Most High does not give you the success to fulfil the right of the favour – and the right of the favour is always to thank the One Who gave it, and not to be distracted by it from the One Who provided you with it.

We should understand also that God’s words ‘…and God gives provision to whom He wills without account’ can have another meaning which is that

He the Exalted does not like for you to estimate your provision by a reckoning based on your work alone; for a reckoning based on your work might be incorrect, like in the case of the farmer who sows crops and then estimates what his provision will be according to what grows from the land, but then a pestilence might come and take everything away, as we see happening sometimes, and in such a case the provision of the farmer at that time comes from a different source which he had never thought of. Because of this, a person must work using the means available to him, but he must not make a reckoning based on these means, thinking that this is his provision; for provision might come from a place which never entered into your reckoning or your accounts. About this the True Lord the Most High says that for whoever fears God, God will always grant him a way out of misery and provide for him from whence he has never expected (at-Talaq: 2-3).

After this, the True Lord the Most High says to us in another verse something which clarifies and elucidates the matter of doctrine and the succession of messengers on earth, which began and then, continued successively from one messenger to the next. The True Lord the Most High says:

كَانَ ٱلنَّاسُ أُمَّةً وَٰحِدَةً فَبَعَثَ ٱللَّهُ ٱلنَّبِيِّـۧنَ مُبَشِّرِينَ وَمُنذِرِينَ وَأَنزَلَ مَعَهُمُ
ٱلْكِتَـٰبَ بِٱلْحَقِّ لِيَحْكُمَ بَيْنَ ٱلنَّاسِ فِيمَا ٱخْتَلَفُوا۟ فِيهِ ۚ وَمَا ٱخْتَلَفَ فِيهِ إِلَّا ٱلَّذِينَ
أُوتُوهُ مِنۢ بَعْدِ مَا جَآءَتْهُمُ ٱلْبَيِّنَـٰتُ بَغْيًۢا بَيْنَهُمْ ۖ فَهَدَى ٱللَّهُ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ لِمَا
ٱخْتَلَفُوا۟ فِيهِ مِنَ ٱلْحَقِّ بِإِذْنِهِۦ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ يَهْدِى مَن يَشَآءُ إِلَىٰ صِرَٰطٍ مُّسْتَقِيمٍ ﴿٢١٣﴾

Mankind was a single community, then God sent prophets to bring good news and warning, and with them He sent the Scripture with the Truth, to judge between people in their disagreements. It was only those to whom it was given who disagreed about it after clear signs had come to them, because of rivalry between them. So by His leave God guided the believers to the truth they had differed about: God guides whoever He will to a straight path [213] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 213)

Someone might say: If the people were one community, and God the Most High links the coming and sending of the prophets to their being one community, where did the conflicts in human life come from? We say: You must seek to explain this general verse in the light of another, specific verse, namely God's statement that mankind was but one community united in religion, but then, they differed; and if not for a word that preceded from the Lord, it would have been judged between them immediately concerning that over which they differed (Yunus: 19).

We must therefore take this verse in the light of the verse in the chapter of Yunus: when the True Lord the Most High addresses man, He addresses him in a way which will awaken his mind and his thought so that he can receive God's word with his entire intellect, and so that the whole Quran will be present in your mind, each part of it serving the other.

'Mankind was one community [before their deviation]; then, God sent the prophets….' Before God sent the Prophets, all mankind were one community who followed Adam peace be upon him. The True Lord the Most High imparted to Adam peace be upon him His way of guidance after He elected him and guided him, and Adam taught his children the Way of God, and his children continued to have faith in a single doctrine, and nothing happened between them to make their caprices differ; for the world was vast, and no one lived in it save Adam peace be upon him and his children alone, and the bounties of the world were more than enough for everyone in it. So there was no squabbling over anything, and if someone wanted something, he could just take it, and possession was shared between everyone because no one had any private ownership of anything. If someone wanted to build a house, he could build it, even if it took up two thousand acres; and if someone wanted to eat a fruit or a berry from any orchard, he could take whatever he wanted.

An example of this from our daily lives: The head of a household might bring twenty kilos of oranges and put them before his children. Each child wants one or more oranges, so, he takes what he wants without any problems, but if he had only bought one kilo of oranges, every child would only be able to take one orange.

So, mankind were one community, that is, there was no greed, and no desire to monopolise beneficial things that could make them clash. The root of conflict is greed for worldly pleasures, and this is where caprice comes in.

This should have been the case after Adam peace be upon him took the way of guidance from God the Most High and taught it to his children: they should all have accepted the Way. But one of his children rebelled against God's Way, and love of monopolising arose because of the scarcity of those beneficial things which were monopolised; and from here, conflicts arose. The story of Cain and Abel explains this to us: each one of them offered a sacrifice, and it was accepted from one of them, but was not accepted from the other. And Cain said, 'I will surely kill you.' Abel replied, 'God accepts only from those who fear Him' (al-Ma'ida: 27).

We know that Adam and Eve peace be upon them are the root of existence, and Eve peace be upon her bore a set of twins every time, and Adam peace be upon him wanted to marry them to one another. But how could they be married when they were all his children, and the children of a single generation, and each one of them knew the other as a sibling?

The Sacred Law dealt with this matter at that time by considering the division to be that of separate pregnancies; in other words, if two children were born from the same pregnancy, they were considered siblings, whilst if one was born before or after the other, they were not considered siblings. In this way, Adam and Eve peace be upon them would wed those children to one another who were not born from the same pregnancy, and the purpose of this separation was so that the woman would be considered as not a close relation of her brother.

It is related from Ibn Abbas and Ibn Mas'oud God be pleased with them that Adam peace be upon him used to marry the male of one pregnancy to the female of another, and that Abel wanted to marry the sister of Cain; and he was older than Cain, and Cain's sister was beautiful and Cain wanted to take her for himself instead of his brother. Adam peace be upon him ordered him to give her in marriage to Abel, but he refused, and so he ordered them both to make a sacrifice. Abel offered a fattened lamb, as he owned sheep, whilst Cain offered a bundle of his worst crop. A fire came down and consumed Abel's offering, and rejected Cain's offering, so, he was infuriated and said to his brother, 'I will kill you so that you cannot marry my sister.' Abel replied that God accepts only from those who fear Him (al-Ma'ida: 27). So, the origin of the first dispute between men was that two people competed to have complete possession over something beneficial; and this was a clear example of what can happen when beneficial things are not sufficiently numerous to satisfy desires.

‘Mankind was one community….’ But they differed the moment they first began to seek to monopolise beneficial things, and every person came to have caprice. Had God willed to make the way of guidance He gave Adam peace be upon them last until the end of time, He would have done so, but in His Mercy, He knows that He created us, and He knows that we remember sometimes and forget at other times, and that we adhere sometimes and neglect at other times, and therefore God the Most High decreed to send His creatures the succession of messengers. This is what we understand from God’s words: ‘…then God sent the prophets as bringers of good tidings and warners…’. The purpose of giving glad tidings and warnings is that people remember that there is a paradise and a Hell, and so every messenger gives those who believe in him glad tidings of paradise and warns those of them who disbelieve of Hell. The True Lord the Most High reminds us that He made us all bear witness against ourselves of His Oneness, saying that He brought forth from the loins of the children of Adam their offspring and called upon them to bear witness about themselves that he was their Lord and they answered that they do bear witness to that. God reminds mankind of this lest they say on the Day of Resurrection that they were unaware of this; or lest they say that it was but their forefathers who, in times gone by, began to join idols with God, and that they were, but their late offspring; and they would ask God if He would destroy them for the doings of those inventors of falsehoods (al-A‘raf: 172-173).

God the Most High tells us that He the Exalted brought all of the progeny of Adam peace be upon him from their forebears to bear witness against themselves that God the Most High is their Lord and Sovereign, and that there is no god but He, just as He made it their natural disposition to do so. Then, after He sent them into existence through Adam peace be upon him, He came to the first man, Adam, and gave him His way of guidance at a time when caprice did not exist, and the way continued to be followed by the sons of Adam peace be upon him. After this, caprices grew numerous, and this only happens because of the desire to monopolise things of benefit, because of the fear that others will take them for themselves. So love of the self and egoism emerged, and when things of benefit were not enough to satisfy all the desires of the people, the love of monopoly and ownership spread.

We find this matter clearly illustrated when commodities are readily available and abundant in the markets so that you can buy any commodity at any time you like, and you find it readily available. When this is the case, there is no crisis; but crises arise when the available quantity of the commodity is less than the needs of the people so that they struggle to claim it for themselves. In this way, we see that when beneficial things exist but are not enough to meet desires, problems arise.

It is of the mercy of the True Lord the Most High with mankind, and the perfection of His knowledge of the weakness of mankind before their own caprices and their desire to monopolise benefits, that He sent messengers to mankind to give glad tidings and warnings, '…and sent down with them the Book in truth to judge between the people about that in which they differed. And none differed over the Book except those who were given it - after the clear proofs came to them….' It is as though the True Lord the Most High did not want to leave mankind to disagree, but rather, it was their own heedlessness which created this disagreement '…out of jealous animosity among themselves….' From this wise statement, we know that disagreement only arose out of a will based on 'jealous animosity' and jealous animosity arises when a person seeks to take what is not rightfully his. Whenever each of us wants to take what is not rightfully his, it is inevitable that hatred will arise.

'…And God guided those who believed to the truth concerning that over which they had differed, by His permission….' That is, God the Most High guides those who believe, from every nation, in the messenger who came as a herald of glad tidings, a warner and a bearer of the way of the True Lord the Most High in order to judge between the people in the matter of those things about which they disagreed. Thus, the way of guidance remains dominant until such a long time passed that the soul becomes heedless, and desires begin to come and cause God's way to be forgotten, and caprices arise, whereupon God sends messengers to return the people to the upright way. This continued until the message of Islam came as a seal, and God the Most High sent our master Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to the entire world, and with this the True Lord the Most High ensured for us that no further disagreement would arise about the essential matters; for if we were to disagree about the essential doctrine, there would happen to us that which happened to the nations who came before us: they disagreed, so, God sent to them messengers as heralds of glad tidings and warners. But the True Lord the Most High wanted the community of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to have a clear way which would protect them from disagreeing on the essential doctrine; and if people of the community of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him disagree, they must seek guidance from the true way embodied in the Quran and Sunna.

We know that one of the Prophet's distinctions is that he is truly the Seal of the Prophets, and you will not find, in the succession of messengers, any messenger whom God entrusted with establishing a new law which had not been revealed in the Book of God the Most High except our master Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. God gave our master the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him the mandate to issue laws on God's behalf, in light of how God made him infallible, as He the Exalted commanded the believers to accept willingly whatever the Messenger gives them and refrain from demanding anything that he withholds from them (al-Hashr: 7).

This is a clear command to the believers that they must obey the command of the Noble Messenger peace and blessings be upon him because what he commands them to do is good and right, and that they must refrain from what he prohibits them because He peace and blessings be upon him only forbids those things which entail no good for the believers. And the True Lord the Most High commands all the believers to obey the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him because this is part of obedience to God, as he the Exalted says that whoever obeys the Messenger will be obeying God, and as for those who turn away, God had not sent the Messenger to be their keeper (an-Nisa': 80).

In this way we see that to obey the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is part of obeying God, and whoever refuses to obey him will be punished in the Hereafter. The True Lord the Most High emphasises coupling obedience to Him and obedience to the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him when He commands His Messenger to proclaim to the believers to obey God and the Messenger, and if they turn away, let them know that God does not love the infidels (Al-'Imran: 32).

Thus we know that obedience of the Most Merciful entails obedience of the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. So God gave His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him the mandate to legislate for mankind, and he peace and blessings be upon him does not speak out of his own desire.

Another distinction for the Islamic community is that the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him left us the right to employ reasoning in those matters for which there came no text from the Quran or the Sunna, or for which there was a text, but it bore more than one interpretation. This means that the True Lord the Most High trusted the community of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to arrive, by the use of reasoning, to a decisive settlement to any disagreement, and that no disagreement would arise about the fundamental matters. Had God known from pre-eternity that we would disagree about the true doctrine, He would have sent new messengers to us.

We find that all the disagreements between the Muslim factions do not go outside the bounds of different understandings of the texts of the Quran or the Hadiths of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him, and that every Muslims seeks to derive his evidences from the Quran and Sunna.

This means that we have not abandoned the essentials, but rather, we each want to derive the correct ruling. Moreover, we find that some of the Muslims who could not find their evidence from the Quran and Sunna attempted to fabricate Hadiths which they ascribed to the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him in order to base the ruling they wanted upon them. Such people are destined for Hell because they have ascribed words to the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him which he never spoke, and have lied against him; and whosoever lies against him intentionally, let him take his place in hell.

So, our point of convergence is the Quran and the Prophetic Sunna; so, where is the problem? The problem is that people should be intelligent and have knowledge so that they know whether an argument based on the Quran is acceptable or not, and whether Hadiths which have been properly subjected to textual criticism exist or not.

So, the judiciousness of reasoning and opinion in the community of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him have made them trustworthy with every aspect of God's Way; and disagreements between them have not gone as far as was the case with the previous communities. But they must be vigilant, and ascend so that they can recognise those things which are not from the Quran, but which some people try to present as being from the Quran.

They must not explain the Quran by using their caprices, but rather by using what the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him brought so that their caprice will be in line with what he brought. We must be aware that God the Most High entrusted the community of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with the Quran and the message of Islam, and the Quran and the message of Islam cannot be afflicted with alterations or corruptions; and all that is required, is that the believers be people of precision and sagacity so that if someone wants to abuse any temporal power, or fabricate a Hadith to promote his falsehood, the Muslims must uncover the evil intentions of this person.

We understand that God the Most High wanted Islam to support moral life, just as He willed water to support material life. In order for water to remain water, it must continue to be without flavour, colour, or smell. If you want to give it flavour, it loses its essential quality; it might become a drink, or juice, or the like. Some people might like a certain kind of juice, but everyone likes water because life is preserved by it. If you see a religion which has been coloured by a group, or an organisation, or a form, know that this is outside the sphere of Islam. Every group which wants to paint God's religion a certain colour, only thereby takes it out of its essential nature. This is why we find that our nation here in Egypt has preserved the sciences of Islam with the Noble Azhar University, and every Islamic scholar on the face of the earth is indebted to this noble university. And we find that we love the Household of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him, but yet not one of us is Shi'ite, and at the same time, not one of us hates Abu Bakr or 'Umar God be pleased with them. This is Islam which cannot be coloured because Islam is the religion of man's instinctual disposition: '…the dye/religion of God. And who is better than God in giving a dye [ordaining religion]?…' (al-Baqara: 138).

So, those who try at any time to paint the religion with a particular form, or custom, or colour, or picture, or shape, we say to them: You want to take Islam away from the natural universality which God wants for it, and you must stop at the boundaries of the natural Islamic disposition, and not colour Islam in this way. In this way we will properly live up to God’s words: ‘…And God guided those who believed to the truth concerning that over which they had differed, by His permission. God guides whom He wills to a straight path.’ We know that guidance means that which leads to a goal, and when God the Most High speaks of guidance, we must be aware that guidance from God has two different meanings: The first meaning is direction to the path which leads to the destination, and the second meaning is assistance.

I gave previously an example for this: that of the traffic policeman who shows you the way to get to the place you want to go – this is an example of the first meaning of guidance; if you respect his words and follow them, he will give you some assistance by going with you or taking you to the place you want to get to – and this is the second kind of guidance. So what about the True Lord the Most High, Who has the highest example? He guides everyone, meaning He shows them the way; and for those who believe in Him and love Him, He guides them a second time by helping them with that which they have chosen for themselves. Some of us are amazed when we hear the words of the True Lord the Most High that He offered the tribe of Thamud guidance, but they chose blindness in preference to guidance; and so the thunderbolt of disgraceful suffering fell upon them as a result of all the evil that they had done, and God saved those who had believed and feared Him (Fussilat: 17-18).

Some of us might wonder: ‘How can He the Exalted say that He guided them, and then say that they preferred blindness to guidance?’ We say that the meaning of His having ‘guided’ them here is that he ‘pointed the way’ to them, but they preferred blindness to guidance; as for those who responded to the guidance of direction and believed, God aided them and saved them because they knew how to fear Him the Exalted.

We also hear some people saying: Since God guides whom He wills to a straight way, what is the fault of those whom He did not will to guide? We say: The True Lord the Most High guides whom He wills to a straight way, that is, He points to them the way to guidance; and if someone follows the guidance of direction, God the Most High gives him more with the guidance of assistance, and facilitates the matter for him. We know that God the Most High negated the ability to give guidance for His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him in one verse and then affirmed it for him in another even though it is a single action with a single doer. The True Lord the Most High negated it when He told His Messenger that he cannot guide aright anyone whom he loves (al-Qasas: 56). And then He the Exalted affirmed it for the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him in another verse, where He said to him that he does guide to a straight path (ash-Shura: 52).

From this we understand that guidance is of two kinds: the guidance of direction, so he 'guides' inasmuch as he directs people to the way of goodness; and there is another form of conceptual guidance which is from God, and the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is not involved in it, and this is the guidance of assistance.

So, God's words to His Messenger that he guides to a straight path (ash-Shura: 52) mean: You direct to the straight way, but God the Most High is the One who aids in this guidance, '…And God guides whom He wills to a straight path.' So, we must consider all of the verses in which God the Most High stated His will to guide a believer and not to guide someone else. The True Lord the Most High says that He does not guide people who refuse to acknowledge the truth (al-Baqara: 264).

This means that God only guides those who believe in Him, and His guidance to the believers is by assisting them to continue to be guided; the guidance of direction came to everyone, but the True Lord the Most High distinguished the believers with the guidance of assistance. About this, the True Lord the Most High poses the rhetorical question on which is better: the one who has founded his building on God-fearing and His goodly acceptance or the one who has founded his building on the edge of a water-worn, crumbling river-bank so that it would tumble down with him into the fire of hell, and God does not grace with His guidance people who do wrong (at-Tawba: 109).

The True Lord the Most High clarifies for us the distinction between the one who founds the building of his life on God-fearing, seeking goodness and paradise – and he is the one who followed the guidance of direction when it came to him, so, the guidance of assistance also came to him from God – and the one who founds the building of his life on the edge of a crumbling river-bank which is close to falling so that the building falls down with him to the fire of hell. He is the one who ignored the guidance of direction when it came to him so that the guidance of assistance would not come to him; this is the wrongful hypocrite who desires bad things to happen to the believers. The True Lord the Most High tells his Messenger that it does not matter whether he prays for the forgiveness of the staunch infidels, or does not pray for them; for even if he were to pray seventy times that they be forgiven, God will not forgive them, seeing that they insist on denying God and His Messenger; and God does not grant His guidance to wicked people (at-Tawba: 80).

The True Lord the Most High tells His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him that however much he were to pray for the forgiveness of the hypocrites who pretended to be Muslims and concealed their disbelief, God the Most High would not forgive them. Why? That was because the guidance of direction came to them and they claimed to believe in it, and the guidance of assistance did not come to them because they disbelieved in God and His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him, and God does not guide such wicked people who in their hearts are outside the Way of God. After this, the True Lord the Most High says:

أَمۡ حَسِبۡتُمۡ أَن تَدۡخُلُواْ ٱلۡجَنَّةَ وَلَمَّا يَأۡتِكُم مَّثَلُ ٱلَّذِينَ خَلَوۡاْ مِن
قَبۡلِكُمۖ مَّسَّتۡهُمُ ٱلۡبَأۡسَآءُ وَٱلضَّرَّآءُ وَزُلۡزِلُواْ حَتَّىٰ يَقُولَ ٱلرَّسُولُ وَٱلَّذِينَ
ءَامَنُواْ مَعَهُۥ مَتَىٰ نَصۡرُ ٱللَّهِۗ أَلَآ إِنَّ نَصۡرَ ٱللَّهِ قَرِيبٞ ﴿٢١٤﴾

Do you suppose that you will enter the Garden without first having suffered like those before you? They were afflicted by misfortune and hardship, and they were so shaken that even [their] messenger and the believers with him cried, 'When will God's help arrive?' Truly, God's help is near [214]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 214)

That is, did you suppose you would enter paradise without any trials coming to you? The True Lord the Most High negates this supposition, and says that it is not so, but rather, the burdens of faith must be borne. If faith was a matter of words only, it would be easy; but what makes faith difficult is action, that is, making the soul follow the way of faith. Some of those who lived at the time of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him were too arrogant to utter the testimonial of faith: 'There is no god but God,' because they understood what its requirements were. If it were only a matter of speaking words with no actions to back them up, it would have been easy for them to say it; but they would not say the word without fulfilling its rights, so they knew very well that if they said, 'There is no god but God,' all of their previous beliefs would have come to an end. But they did not say it because they were loath and averse to living up to its rights, and fulfilling its requirements.

The True Lord the Most High says, 'Or do you think that you will enter paradise while such [trial] has not yet come to you as came to those who passed on before you? They were touched by misfortune and hardship….' What is the relationship between this verse and the verses which came before it? The discourse before concerned the children of Israel who thought they would enter paradise without being tried first, and they came to have caprices with which they corrupted the Way of guidance. As for the community of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him, they must prepare themselves for trials, and know how to bear hardships.

We know that in Arabic grammar, there are particles whose function is to negate and cause verbs to take the apocopate form. One of these particles of negation is lam, which means 'did not,' as in 'Zaid did not attend,' which refers to the past tense, as he might now be in attendance. But when you say 'Zaid has not attended yet' with the particle lamma ('not yet'), the negation is still continuing now, that is, he has not come at the time of speaking, but his attendance and his coming is expected. We find this meaning in the statement of the True Lord the Most High that the Bedouins say that they have believed. Then He commands His Messenger to say to them that they have not attained faith yet; they should rather say that they have submitted (embraced Islam outwardly); for true faith has not yet entered their hearts (al-Hujurat: 14).

When the Bedouins heard this, they said, 'We praise God, for there is still hope that we will attain faith.' God wanted the Bedouins to be truthful with themselves; according to some exegetes, this verse was revealed about some members of the tribe of Asad who came to Medina in a year of drought, and they testified before the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him, saying ‘There is no god but God, and Muhammad is the Messenger of God.’ They were seeking charity, and attempted to ingratiate themselves with the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him by saying that they had not fought him as others had. This verse came to clarify that faith is a higher level than merely displaying Islam, but this does not mean that they were hypocrites, which is why the Noble Quran clarified that displaying Islam, does not mean one has faith because faith is a matter of the heart.

They announced their intention to submit to God, and they wanted to do the same things the Muslims did, but this is not all that faith means. They said that they have believed, and the True Lord the Most High answered them: No; you have not yet attained faith, but be truthful to yourselves, for faith is an act of the heart; it cannot be said that you have attained faith because it is something in your heart. Rather say, ‘I have submitted,’ that is, have submitted and done what the believers do. Yet, as to whether you did this out of faith or not, this is something else.

Here, the verse says, ‘…do you think that you will enter paradise while such [trial] has not yet come to you as came to those who passed on before you?…’ That is, you cannot enter paradise without first coming to you trials such as the ones that came to the communities who lived before you, and you must be tested and tried with misfortune and hardship, and those who are still firm after this, truly deserve to enter paradise. Do not think your community is different from any other community in the matter of being tested; you shall not enter paradise without being tried; on the contrary, your trials will be commensurate with your blessings.

You shall take a high rank amongst the communities, and therefore your trials must be commensurate with your rank. If you are people of a high rank, and shall carry the Final Message, and spread throughout the world, your trials must be commensurate with the immensity of your responsibility and your mission.

The verse says, ‘…while such [trial] has not yet come to you as came to those who passed on before you? They were touched by misfortune and hardship and were shaken….' God's word 'lamma' ('has not yet') indicate that the trials which came to those who lived before them would also come to the believers.

When you reflect on God's word 'zulzilu' ('were shaken'), you will discover a unique onomatopoeic feature of the Arabic language, which is how the sound of the word expresses the meaning of the action. The verb zulzilu is derived from the word zalzala which is made of two parts: zal and zal. Zal means 'to drop from one's place', or 'to fall from one's place', and the second part has the same exact meaning, i.e. 'to fall from one's place', so, the word as a whole gives us the meaning of a repeated fall, a first fall and then a second; and the second fall is not a continuation of the first fall, but rather, it is in an opposite direction. If it was in the same direction, in would be in sequence; but the second fall is in the opposite direction to the first fall, as though it tumbles to the right first, and then to the left.

Likewise, the word khalkhala ('loosen by shaking') means to move in two opposite directions: the first khal is to the right, and the second khal is to the left, and in this way the loosening (khalkhala) continues.

In this way, the meaning of the word zalzala has within it the element of the change of direction which is termed 'inertia'. An example of this is what happens to someone when he is riding in a car and the driver forcefully and abruptly presses the brake. When this happens, the passenger is propelled forwards once and then backwards once; and perhaps the rear window of the car might break if the propulsion is strong enough. What is the cause of this propulsion? The cause is that the body of the passenger was set for moving forwards, and the driver stopped the car whilst the passenger was still set for forward motion, so, he rocks, and might bump into part of the car's interior when it stops so suddenly. The action of 'shaking' (zalzala) is just like this, as something is made to rock back and forth or left and right, in any two opposite directions.

So, the term '…were shaken…' means that they were stricken with the greatest calamity, recurring disastrously; and recurring not in the same pattern, but rather in numerous patterns: sometimes concerning faith, other times concerning misfortunes and events; and it kept recurring until the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him and those who believed with him said: 'When is the help of God?' This was followed by the statement: '…Unquestionably, the help of God is near.' Did they doubt at first, and then return to their senses and say to themselves, '…Unquestionably, the help of God is near,' or is this a clarification that the matter swings back and forth between 'When is the help of God?' and '…Unquestionably, the help of God is near'?

At the time of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him, the trials and tribulations reached their upmost limit, yet despite this, the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him and those with him continued to cling to their faith. Misfortune and hardship befell them, and they were shaken, that is, afflicted with a mighty upheaval which unsettled them so that the effects of this unsettling reached the point where '…the messenger and those who believed with him said, 'When is the help of God?' Unquestionably, the help of God is near.'

The form of this question 'When is the help of God?' means that help at first was seen to be slow in coming, and then, the glad tidings came after that with God's words: '…Unquestionably, the help of God is near,' and this was not due to any doubt or uncertainty in it. This worry about the slow coming of the help coupled with this expression of glad tidings, came in the midst of the violent shaking, when thoughts had become confused so that some people said 'When is the help of God?' whilst other voices in the midst of the battle responded to them, saying, '…Unquestionably, the help of God is near.'

The context of the verse indicates that the ones who said, 'When is the help of God?' were the Companions, and the one who said '…Unquestionably, the help of God is near' was the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him.

The True Lord the Most High then discusses another matter, something which had become prevalent in this form, namely the questions of the believers about various things. This was a sound phenomenon of faith; and it was possible for the believers to refrain from asking about things for which no religious ruling had been issued, out of fear that the answer would lead to restriction of freedom. This is why the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him said:

Leave me regarding those things which I have left [mentioning to] you; for those who came before you were only ruined by their excessive questioning and differing with their Prophets. If I command you with something, do it as well as you can; if I forbid you something, keep away from it.(1)

(1) Narrated by Imam Muslim, An-Nasa'i, Ibn Maja, and Imam Ahmad in his Musnad, on the authority of Abu Hurayra God be pleased with him

Despite this, they would still ask about the most detailed aspects of life, and this phenomenon confirmed that they yearned for responsibilities from God; they wanted to base all their actions on Islam, and they wanted to ask about the ruling of Islam for every action so that they could act on its principles. The True Lord the Most High says:

يَسْـَٔلُونَكَ مَاذَا يُنفِقُونَ ۖ قُلْ مَآ أَنفَقْتُم مِّنْ خَيْرٍ فَلِلْوَٰلِدَيْنِ وَٱلْأَقْرَبِينَ وَٱلْيَتَٰمَىٰ
وَٱلْمَسَٰكِينِ وَٱبْنِ ٱلسَّبِيلِ ۗ وَمَا تَفْعَلُوا۟ مِنْ خَيْرٍ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ بِهِۦ عَلِيمٌ ﴿٢١٥﴾

They ask you [Prophet] what they should give. Say, ‘Whatever you give should be for parents, close relatives, orphans, the needy, and travellers. God is well aware of whatever good you do [215] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 215)

The question came from ‘Amr ibn Al-Jamuh, a very elderly man who said, ‘O Messenger of God, I have much money, so, how much charity should I give, and to whom should I give it?’ He was not only asking for himself, but was expressing the feelings of others as well, which is why the answer was in general terms, and did not refer to the questioner alone, but rather encompassed all believers.

The question was about ‘…what they should spend…’, so, it is as though they were asking about the thing to be spent. Spending on others (infaq), as we know, requires a spender, and a spent thing – namely money – and someone who is spent on. They asked about what they should spend on others, as though the matter of spending on others itself was a given, but they wanted to know what they should spend. So the question concerned that particular aspect, and the response answered that aspect and also something else.

The True Lord the Most High says, ‘They ask you, [O Muhammad], what they should spend….’ This is the question, and the answer is: ‘…Say, “Whatever you spend of good is [to be] for parents….”’ A person of superficial understanding may say that the question is only about what should be spent, and may ask why the answer was about whom it should be spent on. We say: No; why have you forgotten that God says that the spending must be from that which is ‘good’ (khair, which means both ‘good’ and ‘wealth’ in Arabic)? The money which is spent on others must be able to be described as having come from a good source.

After this, He elaborates and explains: As long as you believe that spending on others is obligatory, you must know what it is you should spend, and who deserve to be spent upon. '…Say, "Whatever you spend of good…"' and khair means something good and beneficial. The ones to be spent upon are the members of the social circles of the one who spends, because God wants to make the believer responsible for his personal circles so that each circle will link with the other and all of society will become responsible for all of society; for when He the Exalted makes me responsible for my family, parents, and relatives, this is a means for the security of the family. We all have parents and relatives; my circle encompasses my parents and relatives, and then spreads to something else: orphans and the needy.

Take every person and gauge his circles of parents, relatives, and the orphans and needy around him, and you will find that the adjacent circles encompass all those in need, and all members of the society will be responsible for one another, and after this there will be no one left but those who are unable to work. We know that the one who asked this question was 'Amr ibn al-Jamuh; and he had an amazing story: he was lame, and the lame are excused by God from having to participate in fighting, for there is no blame on the blind, the lame, or the sick for not taking part in fighting.

The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him was about to go out to a battle when 'Amr ibn Al-Jumuh came to him and said, 'O Messenger of God, do not forbid me from struggling (in God's Way), for my sons have forbidden me from going out to fight because of my lameness.' The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him answered him, 'God has excused you amongst those whom He excused.' He said, 'But Messenger of God, I would love to enter paradise by my lameness!'

This was the one who asked about what they should spend on others, and the answer came from the True Lord the Most High: '…Say, "Whatever you spend of good …"' that is, the money you give – for to spend means to give, and good (khair) here means money, and spending means all that money that goes out of a person's possession in the form of a purchase, a gift, or a grant.

The root of the Arabic word infaq (‘to spend’) is the verb nafaqa, which means for a market to sell out: if you go to the market and find there are no goods left, this means that the market has sold out; whereas if you find the goods are piled up, this means that the market is still ongoing.

So, for a market to ‘sell out’ (nafaqa) means that all the goods go from it, just as life goes out of an animal which is why we also use the verb nafaqa to mean ‘die’. The ways of spending were specified by God the Most High in saying, ‘…for parents and relatives and orphans and the needy and the wayfarer….’ Is every orphan in need? An orphan might have inherited wealth, but we must understand that it is not only about fulfilling a needy person’s need, but also about standing by a person who is weak in any way; for when a child is orphaned – although he may possess wealth – and then he sees you show him affection, he will feel as if his father has not died because his fatherhood remains in his believing brethren, and thereafter he will not grow up envying children whose parents are still alive. But if an orphan sees that every father is too busy with his own children to bother with orphans whose fathers have died, he will feel resentment, and the tendency to resent fate will develop in him, and he will feel: Why was I the one whose father died? But when he sees that all people are his parents, and they greet him with smiles, love, welcome and support, he will feel that when someone has one father the people leave him to rely on his father, but if his father dies, people turn to him with affection and love; and as a result of this, love will spread through the Islamic community, as will contentment and satisfaction with God’s decree, and no one will object to the death of one’s father; for when fate has taken his father, it has left for him many other fathers.

Those who neglect to show love and affection to an orphan just because his father left him enough money to suffice him – if they knew what spiritual benefits came from this affection, they would compete with one another to show him affection. It is not about material needs, but about spiritual needs.

I always say that we must instil in the youth the understanding that God never causes any of His creatures to die when there is a need for them in the world; consider this matter with respect to those around you, and you will find that someone dies and leaves behind young children, and so his family and friends are saddened because he has left his young children, and then, they forget about it after this; and time passes, and then the people are surprised to find that this man's children have become the leaders of the neighbourhood. It is as though their father was blocking off their provision so that when the father died, God opened the stores of provision for the children; and this is so that no one becomes deluded by a material cause.

After spending on orphans, we find that we should then spend on the needy and the wayfarer. We know that the needy person is one who is in need, and that the wayfarer is the one who is cut off from his family and his wealth during travel. The True Lord the Most High concludes this verse by saying, '…And whatever you do of good, indeed, God has knowledge of it.' God wants to turn human nature to a concept, which is: Beware of seeking the reward for the good you do for these people from any human being, but rather seek it from God; and beware of trying to make yourself known to the people as someone who spends on near kin, orphans and wayfarers, for those to whom you wish to be known are not able to reward you, and their knowledge of you will not increase you in anything. It is enough for you that God knows what He has given you, and that which you have given from what He put you in charge of by way of seeking His pleasure. When people spend to please others, they will find ingratitude and denial in return so that the one who gives, has wasted what he spent, and only preserved the evil of those whom he spent upon.

If a Muslim, by spending and doing good, intended to seek the pleasure of the Sublime Creator the Most High, he would thereby preserve what he spent as good deeds and reward on the Day of Resurrection, and God would soften the hearts of those upon whom he spent with love and gratitude for the favour; and this is the justice of God which is manifested in that He does this with those who give ostentatiously, for they give, whilst having it in mind that they are giving only to the recipient; if they had given to God, the recipient would not have shown ingratitude for the favour they gave. You gave to them to please them, and so it is as though God is saying to you: I will leave you for them to reward you. This is why the one who gives charity secretly, will be one of the seven whom God will place in His shade on a Day when there is no shade but His; for amongst them are: '…A man who gives charity and conceals it so that his left hand does not know what his right hand spends.'(1) This is the best way to give supererogatory charity; as for the obligatory poor-due, it is better to give it publicly. The same is true in the case of prayer: it is better to perform the obligatory prayer publicly, whilst supererogatory prayers are best offered privately.

But if God the Most High is on your mind when you act, you will find the effect of the giving in the gratitude of the recipient. Beware of trying, even slightly, to make people aware that you are doing good deeds.

After this, the True Lord the Most High brings back a topic that He had treated earlier in saying, '…and do not fight them at the Sacred Mosque, unless they fight you there…' The True Lord the Most High brings back the subject of fighting, and speaks about the general principle of fighting, saying:

كُتِبَ عَلَيْكُمُ ٱلْقِتَالُ وَهُوَ كُرْهٌ لَّكُمْۖ وَعَسَىٰٓ أَن تَكْرَهُواْ شَيْـًٔا وَهُوَ خَيْرٌ لَّكُمْۖ
وَعَسَىٰٓ أَن تُحِبُّواْ شَيْـًٔا وَهُوَ شَرٌّ لَّكُمْۗ وَٱللَّهُ يَعْلَمُ وَأَنتُمْ لَا تَعْلَمُونَ ٢١٦

Fighting is ordained for you, though you dislike it. You may dislike something although it is good for you, or like something although it is bad for you: God knows and you do not' [216] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 216)

To hate fighting is a natural thing, a thing which the Creator of mankind acknowledges; therefore, He the Exalted does not treat the issue in a sophistic way, like saying, 'Now what is wrong with fighting?' No; the Creator says: I know that fighting is hateful, and so when you are afflicted by that which you hate, you know that the One Who legislated it, took this into account. Had the True Lord the Most High not said that fighting is hateful, people would have understood that God was presenting something difficult as though it were easy.

God the Most High is saying to those who believe: Know that you will have to undergo hardships and difficulties, and to leave your wealth, and leave your pleasures and comforts. This is why we find that the great leaders who excelled in politics and succeeded in leadership, did not like their peoples to enter battles unless they were forced to; and when they were forced to, they would make it clear to their armies that they were fighting to ward off that which was even worse than fighting. This means that they mobilised the human soul so that it could face the situation with all its power, and all its faculties, and all its will.

(1) Narrated by Muslim on the authority of Abu Hurayra God be pleased with him

The True Lord the Most High says, ‘Fighting has been ordained for you even though it is hateful to you….’; He the Exalted is saying to us: I know that fighting is hateful to you, but I want to instil a concept in you, which is that you cannot judge the great issues with your own knowledge because your knowledge is always imperfect; rather, take issues according to My Own knowledge; for I might ordain something hateful, but then good comes from it, whilst you might see something as beloved, yet, evil comes from it. For this reason, the True Lord the Most High alerts us to the fact that there are many things which we love and yet, they bring us evil so that one of us might say, ‘I was expecting something good from this, but it brought me evil instead.’

And there are other things which you think will bring evil, yet they bring good. This is why the True Lord the Most High leaves clues in society so that people can be sure that God the Most High does not make goodness proceed according to the requisites and standards of human knowledge, but rather, the judgement proceeds according to the requisites, standards and knowledge of the Lord of mankind. Let us consider, for instance, what the True Lord the Most High says about this as an example to mankind in the story of Moses and his servant during their wanderings: Moses said to his servant that he will not give up his journey until he reaches the junction of the two seas, even if he has to spend many years in his quest. But when they reached the junction between the two seas, they forgot all about their fish, and it took its way into the sea and disappeared from sight. And after the two had walked some distance, Moses asked his servant to bring them their lunch as they have indeed suffered hardship on that day of their journey. The servant told Moses that when they took rest at that rock he forgot about the fish and that was the doing of none but Satan, and the fish strangely took its way into the sea. Moses exclaimed that that was the place they were seeking; and the two turned back, retracing their footsteps (al-Kahf: 60-64).

Moses peace be upon him was heading with his servant to the junction of the two seas, which is said to be somewhere in the east, and they had with them some food, namely a salted fish. But the journey and the hardship made them forget the fish, and by a sign from God, the fish found its way back to the sea. When Moses peace be upon him arrived at the junction of the two seas, he asked his servant to bring them the food after this long toil, but the boy told Moses peace be upon him that he had forgotten the fish, and that none but Satan had made him forget it, and that the fish had made its way back to the sea. Moses peace be upon him said, ‘This is the sign we were looking for to tell us that we had reached our goal, the junction of the two seas.’ That is, ‘What happened with the fish, and how it was lost, were what we have been seeking – the sign they were waiting for; and the man whom we have come to see is there in that place.’ So, Moses peace be upon him and the servant turned and retraced their steps.

So, what happened? Moses peace be upon him met the righteous servant al-Khidr peace be upon him, who was one of the Friends of God to whom God had taught from the Lordly knowledge which He grants to His pious servants as a fruit of their sincerity and God-fearing. Moses peace be upon him asked this godly servant, our master Al-Khidr peace be upon him, to teach him something of the guidance he possessed. But this godly servant, to whom God had given knowledge which was beyond the cognisance of human capability, said to Moses peace be upon him that he will never be able to have patience with him, as how could he be patient about something that he cannot understand within the compass of his experience (al-Kahf: 67-68).

Moses peace be upon him had already known that losing the fish was something which appeared to be bad, but was actually good because this was the way and the sign by which Moses peace be upon him could recognise how to reach the righteous servant. The very same concept continues in the story of Moses and the righteous servant: events which seemed to be evil but which were actually good, whether it be story of the boat which he breached, or the lad whom he killed, or the wall which he rebuilt. The knowledge of the righteous servant was Lordly knowledge, which is why Moses peace be upon him wanted to learn some of this knowledge; but the righteous servant had warned Moses peace be upon him that what he might see, would be beyond the limits of his patience, for the things which Moses peace be upon him would see, would appear to be evil to him, when actually they were good.

Moses peace be upon him agreed to take the position of a student and have proper manners with his teacher to whom God had given this Lordly knowledge; and the righteous servant stipulated that Moses peace be upon him must not ask about anything until he himself gave him an account of it. Moses and the righteous servant peace be upon them came across a boat, and boarded it, and then the righteous servant damaged the boat, and Moses peace be upon him asked him why he made a hole in it – was it to drown the people in it? Indeed, he has done a grievous thing (al-Kahf: 71). The righteous servant replied by asking Moses: Had he not told him that he will never be able to have patience with him? (al-Kahf: 72). Moses peace be upon him recalled that he had promised the righteous servant peace be upon him to be patient; but what could Moses have done when he saw the righteous servant peace be upon him breaching a boat which was carrying them in the sea? This is something difficult for the soul, and so Moses peace be upon him asked the righteous servant not to take him to task for having forgotten, and not to be hard on him on account of what he has done (al-Kahf: 73).

Moses peace be upon him returned to the promise which he had made to the righteous servant, and asked him only not to burden him with things beyond his capability. The righteous servant peace be upon him set off again with Moses peace be upon him, and the righteous servant peace be upon him found a lad and killed him, whereupon Moses peace be upon him asked him why he had killed an innocent soul without him having killed another person. Indeed, he has done a deplorable thing (al-Kahf: 74).

The righteous servant peace be upon him reminded Moses peace be upon him that he would not be able to have patience with him, and Moses peace be upon him apologised for what he had not known. The righteous servant peace be upon him continued on with Moses peace be upon him until they reached a village whose inhabitants they asked for hospitality, but the people of the village refused to provide it to them, and then the righteous servant peace be upon him found in it a wall which was about to fall down and began to rebuild it, whereupon Moses peace be upon him told the righteous servant that had he so wanted, surely he could have obtained some payment for it (al-Kahf: 77).

This spelt the parting of ways between the righteous servant and Moses peace be upon them, and the righteous servant peace be upon him informed Moses peace be upon him of what he had no knowledge and had not borne patiently: the boat was breached to save its owners from having it seized from them, for there was a king who was wont to seize every good boat by brute force, so, he wanted to damage it so that the king would leave those needy people alone.

And the killing of the youth was a mercy for his believing parents, as their son would bring them wickedness and disbelief, and God the Most High wanted to give them something better in his stead.

And the wall which he rebuilt stood over a treasure which belonged to two orphans from that village whose father had been a righteous man, so, the wall had to be rebuilt until the boys came of age, so they could dig up their treasure. And as God the Most High tells us, the righteous servant said that he had not done any of this of his own accord; that was the real meaning of all those events that Moses was unable to bear with patience (al-Kahf: 82).

The righteous servant did not ascribe these Lordly acts to himself, but ascribed them to the Creator who had taught him. So the True Lord the Most High disposes of some of the matters of existence in such a way to show man that goodness does not always lie in that which he loves, nor does evil reside in that which he hates. This is why He the Exalted says, '…but it may well be that you hate a thing while it is good for you; and it may well be that you love a thing while it is bad for you….' Although fighting is hateful for you, it may well be that it is good for you. Since hatred is mentioned, we clarify that in Arabic there are two words, karh and kurh. Karh means something hateful which you are forced and compelled to do, whilst kurh means something which is arduous.

Something might be hateful, whilst it is not arduous, or it might be arduous but not hateful. The True Lord the Most High says 'Fighting has been ordained for you even though it is hateful to you….' We can observe that when the True Lord the Most High issues some legislation, He always uses a passive form ('is/has been ordained'), not the active form 'I have ordained.' This is so that we understand that God only legislates for those who believe in Him; He has not ordained any responsibilities for the disbeliever. But is it logical for God to hold those who believe in Him morally responsible, whilst leaving the disbeliever with no responsibilities?

Yes, it is logical because moral responsibility is a good thing. Some people might look at moral responsibility as being restrictive. We say to them: If the moral responsibilities of faith are restrictive, God would have charged the disbeliever with them; but God only holds those whom He loves morally responsible, and He the Exalted only commands that which is good. Moreover, God only holds those who believe in Him to be morally responsible because the believing servant is in a covenant of faith with his Lord.

So, when God the Most High says 'has been ordained', this means that He is implying that He did not infringe upon anyone's freedom of choice which was given to them; God the Most High left people the freedom to choose whether to believe or not to believe. Those who believe freely and dutifully thereby enter into a covenant of faith with God, and as a consequence of this covenant, God ordained moral responsibilities for them. One of these moral responsibilities is fighting, and therefore He the Exalted says, 'Fighting has been ordained for you….'

His words 'for you' ('alaykum, literally 'upon you') mean that when fighting is ordained, on the surface it seems like nothing but an arduous task, so, the word 'alaykum is used to reflect this. Yet after the fighting is over, if we have gained victory, we will take the spoils, whilst if we have been defeated and martyred, we will enter paradise.

The True Lord the Most High speaks about the outward appearance of fighting, so, He says, '…even though it is hateful to you; but it may well be that you hate a thing while it is good for you; and it may well be that you love a thing while it is bad for you….' As we have said, this is a general matter, which is why we should refer it to the one who knows: '…and God knows, whereas you do not know.' We must refer everything to the wisdom of God Who ordained it, for He is the One Who knows.

There is a folk tale which tells the story of a man from China who owned a great expanse of land with many horses, and there was one stallion out of all these which he loved dearly. One day this horse went out into the pasture and did not return, and so the man grieved for it. The people came to him to console him over the loss of his horse, but he smiled and said, ‘What makes you think this is a bad thing, for which I need your consolation?’

After a while, the man was surprised by the return of the horse along with several other horses which it brought with it. When the people saw this, they came to congratulate him, and he said to them, ‘What makes you think this is a good thing?’ So, the people refrained from congratulating him. After this his son mounted the horse, but it reared and threw him, and he fell and broke his leg. The people came once again to console the man, but he said, ‘What makes you think this is a bad thing?’ It happened after this that a war broke out, and the government drafted all the young men of the land to fight in the army, but they left the man’s son because his leg was broken. The people came to congratulate him, but he said to them, ‘What makes you think this is a good thing?’

The lesson is that we must not judge everything by its outward appearance as to whether it is good or bad, but rather, we must take every matter of life in light of the teaching of the True Lord the Exalted: that we should not despair over whatever good has escaped us nor exult unduly over whatever good has come to us (al-Hadid: 23).

The True Lord the Most High says, ‘…and God knows, whereas you do not know.’ God is beyond compare, however an example we have given before serves to illustrate the situation: The example of the loving man who loves his only son and hopes for a long life for him. When the son gets ill, the father gives him bitter medicine. When he is given the medicine, the son hates it, but it is good for him.

After this, the True Lord the Most High answers another question:

يَسْـَٔلُونَكَ عَنِ ٱلشَّهْرِ ٱلْحَرَامِ قِتَالٍ فِيهِ ۖ قُلْ قِتَالٌ فِيهِ كَبِيرٌ ۖ وَصَدٌّ عَن سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ
وَكُفْرٌۢ بِهِۦ وَٱلْمَسْجِدِ ٱلْحَرَامِ وَإِخْرَاجُ أَهْلِهِۦ مِنْهُ أَكْبَرُ عِندَ ٱللَّهِ ۚ وَٱلْفِتْنَةُ
أَكْبَرُ مِنَ ٱلْقَتْلِ ۗ وَلَا يَزَالُونَ يُقَـٰتِلُونَكُمْ حَتَّىٰ يَرُدُّوكُمْ عَن دِينِكُمْ إِنِ ٱسْتَطَـٰعُوا۟ ۚ
وَمَن يَرْتَدِدْ مِنكُمْ عَن دِينِهِۦ فَيَمُتْ وَهُوَ كَافِرٌ فَأُو۟لَـٰٓئِكَ حَبِطَتْ أَعْمَـٰلُهُمْ
فِى ٱلدُّنْيَا وَٱلْـَٔاخِرَةِ ۖ وَأُو۟لَـٰٓئِكَ أَصْحَـٰبُ ٱلنَّارِ ۖ هُمْ فِيهَا خَـٰلِدُونَ ﴿٢١٧﴾

They ask you [Prophet] about fighting in the prohibited month. Say, 'Fighting in that month is a great offence, but to bar others from God's path, to disbelieve in Him, prevent access to the Sacred Mosque, and expel its people, are still greater offences in God's eyes: persecution is worse than killing.' They will not stop fighting you [believers] until they make you revoke your faith, if they can. If any of you revoke your faith and die as disbelievers, your deeds will come to nothing in this world and the Hereafter, and you will be inhabitants of the Fire, there to remain [217] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 217)

The question here is not about the sacred month because it was well known to them from the days of pagan ignorance. Rather, the question was about fighting in the sacred month – so, what was the use of the question? It was a provocative question, and there is a story behind it. We know that there are twelve months in the year, and that God made four of them sacred: One stands alone, namely Rajab, whilst the others are consecutive, namely Dhu Al-Qi'da, Dhu Al-Hijja, and Muharram. The meaning of 'sacred months' is that fighting is prohibited in those months.

God the Most High knew how human beings have pride in front of one another, and so He gave them a cover to shield their pride. One of these ways which God the Most High instituted is the prohibition of fighting in the sacred months and the sacred places. War may harm the warrior, but his pride in front of his enemy does not allow him to stop fighting, so he continues to wage war no matter what the cost. So the True Lord the Most High says to the warriors: Cease fighting in these months, for I have made fighting in them unlawful. The warriors themselves might have been longing in their hearts for someone to come and stop the war, but their pride did not let them back down. When the verdict of Heaven intervened, both sides would have a reason to back down whilst preserving their reputations. Likewise, God the Most High made certain places sacred, and prohibited fighting within them so that people would say that it was God who prohibited it and would thereby have a means of safeguarding their pride.

So, the True Lord the Most High, Who created man, wanted to protect man so that blood would be spared. When people went without fighting for three months, and then another month, they would enjoy in this time peace, tranquillity, and calm, and might thereby become used to peace and not think of waging war again. But if war continued without pause, the lust for war would remain in their souls; and this is the special nature of the sacred months.

The sacred months are sacred in time and place, for time and place are the loci for all events. Every event requires a time and place, and when the time and place are made sacred, both sides of the fighting can grasp the opportunity for calm.

The True Lord the Most High deals here with an issue which the enemies of Islam, the disbelievers of Quraysh and the Jews, wanted to stir up. The Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him used to send squadrons to scout, a squadron being a specific number of soldiers. Once the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him sent a squadron led by ‘Abdullah ibn Jahsh Al-Asadi, the paternal cousin of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him, sending eight others with him and making him their commander. He gave him a written message and told him not to open it until two days’ journey had passed so that no one would know where the squadron was heading, which was a precaution to keep the information secret.

After the squadron had travelled for two nights, Abdullah opened the message and read it; it read: ‘Go to Batn Nakhla’ – a place between Mecca and Ta’if – ‘and scout the caravan of Quraysh, and do not force any of those with you to go unwillingly.’ This meant that each one of them had the freedom to do as he wished, and so if anyone did not want to go with the squadron, they had the right not to go.

Whilst they were on the way, a camel belonging to Sa‘d ibn Abu Waqqas and ‘Uqba ibn Ghazwan went missing, so, they set out to search for the camel, and the remaining six soldiers stayed with ‘Abdullah. These six went to Batn Nakhla and found ‘Amr ibn Al-Hadrami with three others with a caravan belonging to Quraysh. They began to battle them, thinking that the day was the last day of the month of Jumada Al-Akhira when in fact they realised later that it was the first day of Rajab, that is, a day of the sacred month.

The Muslim warriors killed Ibn Al-Hadrami; it was Waqid ibn ‘Abdullah, one of the companions of ‘Abdullah ibn Jahsh, who killed him. They took two of those who were with him prisoners, and one got away. When this happened, and they knew they had done it on the first of Rajab, they realised that their fighting and spoils taking had violated the sanctity of the month of Rajab.

The event caused disagreements among the Muslims before Quraysh spoke about it, saying, ‘Muhammad claims that he respects sacred things, and respects the sacred months, yet, despite this, he fought in the sacred month, and spilled our blood, and plundered our wealth, and took men captive.’ So the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him refrained from taking the spoils and the captives until God had passed judgement on the matter, and then, the ruling of Heaven on the matter was revealed with these noble words: ‘They ask you about the sacred month - about fighting therein. Say, ‘Fighting therein is great [sin], but averting [people] from the way of God and disbelief in Him and [preventing access to] the Sacred Mosque and the expulsion of its people therefrom are greater [evil] in the sight of God. And fitnah (oppression/trial) is greater than killing.’ And they will continue to fight you until they turn you back from your religion if they are able. And whoever of you reverts from his religion [to disbelief] and dies while he is a disbeliever - for those, their deeds have become worthless in this world and the Hereafter, and those are the inmates of the fire, they will abide therein eternally.’

We allow that fighting in the sacred month is a great sin, but look, o disbelievers of Quraysh what you have done with Our servants and compare the enormity of this with the enormity of that. You say that fighting in the sacred month is a great sin, but your turning men away from the Way of God and disbelieving in Him, and your barring the Muslims from going to the Sacred Mosque and your expelling the people of Mecca from it is all graver in the sight of God than fighting in the sacred month. Do not do what is even worse than killing in the sacred month, and then, become jealously protective of sacred things!

It is as though the True Lord the Most High wanted to make something plain, which is: Do not take individual religious matters and use them to hide behind a word of True Lord the Most High while you intend falsehood, for reality shows the truth of things. We say: Yes, fighting in the sacred month is a great sin, but you, O Quraysh, should know that to oppress the believers in the matter of their religion and to turn them away from the path of God, and your disbelief in Him the Exalted, and your violation of the sanctity of the Sacred Mosque (Ka'ba) by worshipping other than God in it as you do, and your expelling its people there from – all of these wicked things are more grievous and more wicked in God's sight than fighting in the sacred month in order that the Muslims might reclaim from you some of that which is rightfully theirs.

So, God the Most High directs the accusation of the idolaters right back at them. '…And they will continue to fight you until they turn you back from your religion if they are able….' That is, beware of imagining that they will respect either the sacred month or the sacred place: rather, they '…will continue to fight you…' that is, they will insist on, and continue in, fighting you '…until they turn you back from your religion if they are able….'

Reflect on His words 'if they are able.' This is a challenge to them that they will never be able to do this, for the word 'if' always refers to doubtful things. The True Lord the Most High continues to say, '…And whoever of you reverts from his religion [to disbelief] and dies while he is a disbeliever - for those, their deeds have become worthless in this world and the Hereafter, and those are the inmates of the Fire, they will abide therein eternally.' They will continue to fight you until they turn you away from your faith, if they can. The True Lord the Most High then concludes the verse by referring to the following issue: '…And whoever of you reverts from his religion [to disbelief]….' This verse is complemented by another in which the True Lord the Most High explains that whoever rejects belief, in vain will be all his works: for in the life to come, he shall be among the lost (al-Ma'ida: 5).

If we compare the two verses, we find that the verse which we are currently examining contains the words '…and dies while he is a disbeliever…' whilst in the verse in the chapter of al-Ma'ida this is not mentioned; but rather, it says that whoever rejects belief, in vain will be all his works (al-Ma'ida: 5).

Scholars have differed in interesting ways about this issue, but they are all in agreement, first of all, that if anyone leaves Islam and then dies, whilst outside Islam, all his works will come to naught. Their point of difference, however, is as to whether, if he returns once more to faith and so does not die as a disbeliever, but rather returns to faith after his apostasy, will his actions have come to naught or not?

Imam Ash-Shafe‘i was of the opinion that if someone apostatises from religion, his works will come to naught if he dies in a state of disbelief, but if he returns and embraces Islam again the works he did before he apostatised will be counted for him. Imam Abu Hanifa had a different view, saying: No; the verse in the chapter of al-Ma'ida does not say '…and dies, while he is a disbeliever…', which means that we should apply this to the verse in the chapter of al-Baqara which mentions this, by way of applying the general to the specific; and in this case, if someone disbelieves after having had faith, his actions come to naught whether he returns to faith after this or not, and he will not have any works counted for him.

What, then, is the point of difference? Suppose that a person has faith and performs the obligation of the pilgrimage, and then – God forbid – apostatises and disbelieves, and then returns to faith, will the pilgrimage he performed before he apostatised remain for him, or will it be counted as naught so that he has to perform pilgrimage again? This is the point of difference; Ash-Shafe‘i sees that his actions do not come to naught as long as he has returned to faith because God the Most High says, '…and dies while he is a disbeliever…', which means that if he does not die upon disbelief, his actions do not come to naught, but he will gain no reward for the pilgrimage which he performed before. Imam Ash-Shafe‘i God be pleased with him paid attention to something which many people might neglect, which is that pilgrimage is one of the Pillars of Islam, and the one who does not perform the pilgrimage ,whilst he is capable of doing so, will be punished by God for his negligence, whilst the one who performs the pilgrimage, will not be punished, but rather rewarded for his action.

It is as though if you do not do the things which the True Lord the Most High requires of you if you are able to do them, you will be punished, whilst if you do them, your action will pass through two stages: The first stage is that you will not be punished, and the second stage is that you will be rewarded for your action. Ash-Shafe'i God be pleased with him said the one who does something for which people are rewarded, and then, disbelieves, and then, returns to Islam, he will not be punished, but he will not be rewarded either. As for Imam Abu Hanifa God be pleased with him, he said that the works which come before apostasy are totally fruitless, in accordance with God's judgement that in vain will be all his works, that is, they will be annulled, and will vanish as though they never existed.

The Quran uses the word habita ('have become worthless') here, which is used as an allusion to a tangible matter, as the verb habita literally means for an animal to be afflicted with an illness called hubat which is caused by its having eaten a kind of food which causes it to swell up and possibly die. The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Some of that which spring produces can cause death by swelling, or almost cause it.'(1)

He peace and blessings be upon him is warning us here that evil might be concealed in what is good, such as that which occurs in spring when certain plants grow which animals like to eat, but which cause them to become bloated (hubat) so that they swell up and die, or almost die. Likewise, the works which the disbelievers do will become on the surface like a swollen belly, yet, all these works will perish just as the animal which eats this kind of plant perishes its stomach swelling up so that the onlooker might think it is fat, after which he is surprised to learn that it is ill. With these words, God gave us the concrete concept because of the similarity between the two images; when the animal swells up it looks as though it has grown and fattened, but its growth is abnormal – it is not fat or meat, but rather, distension. Likewise, the works of those who disbelieve are in vain, even though it seems to them that they have done great works which on the outside appear to be good and sound.

Some people say: 'Does it make sense that those disbelievers who made great accomplishments from which all humanity benefited should have their works end up like this? They found cures for malignant diseases and eased people's pain, and built machines which brought comfort and benefit to all people.' We say to those who have these kinds of opinions: Wait a moment. There is something which we must first agree upon, which is that when someone performs an action he seeks reward from the one for whom he performs it. Did all these people act whilst thinking of God, or were they thinking of humanity, glory and fame? Humanity gave them glory and fame, and as long as they received this reward in this life, they should not expect any reward in the Hereafter. This is why the True Lord the Most High says that the deeds of the infidels are like a mirage in the desert which the thirsty supposes to be water – until, when he approaches it, he finds that it was nothing: Instead, he finds God there, and He will pay him his account in full – for God is swift in reckoning (an-Nur: 39).

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari, At-Tirmidhi, and Ibn Maja.

The disbeliever thinks that his works are good and beneficial, but in the Hereafter, they will be like the mirage which one sees in the desert and thinks it to be water, and then, he will find himself in the Hereafter at the moment of reckoning, and God will give him his reckoning with punishment; and they will have no reward save hell, and the same will apply to them as applies to all those who disbelieve in God the Most High, which is: '…and those are the inmates of the fire, they will abide therein eternally.'

This being said, the True Lord the Most High clarifies the truth of the matter to those who believe in Him and in His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him in order to give them immunity of faith against the disbelievers' hopes of harming the believers, so, He teaches us that they will never relent until they have made you turn away from your religion; for the way of God always scares those who are on the side of falsehood alone. The well-organised and balanced person who wants to live in the world with peace and take goodness in accordance with his work in life, will not be alarmed by the ascendancy of the principles of Islam, but the principles of Islam only alarm those who want to usurp the fruits of the labours of others, and they try their utmost and use all the means at their disposal to make the Muslims leave their religion. But will God the Most High allow them to do this? No; for there will always be hope for goodness if the Islamic community hold fast to the way of the truth.

He the Most High gives an immunisation to the believers; and as we know, immunisation means to give a healthy person microbes of an illness in a weakened state so that, his immune system has an opportunity to defeat these microbes. This is why the True Lord the Most High says to them, '…And whoever of you reverts from his religion [to disbelief] and dies ,while he is a disbeliever - for those, their deeds have become worthless in this world and the Hereafter….' The essential difference between the believer and the disbeliever is that the believer only does good deeds with the intention that the One Who will reward them is God, and has a sincere intention in everything he does, and utilises God's means of knowledge so that others can benefit from it, and the benefit is all-encompassing and vast. The believer should be the first to make discoveries and inventions and revive the Muslim world, and the believing scientist should be a beacon which shines the light of faith before the people, not simply leave the disbelievers to make all the scientific discoveries whilst he is indifferent and lazy.

The believer must take the means God the Most High provides him with in life because Islam encompasses both the religious and worldly life, and it is the religion of knowledge and progress, and it secures for the one who follows its way the happiness of this world and the happiness of the Hereafter. If the believer enjoys products made by disbelievers, he should know that the disbelievers have taken their reward from those for whom they worked; as for the believer, when he excels in industry, agriculture, science and discoveries, he will take reward in this life and in the Hereafter because the One Who gives it in this case will be God.

As for the deeds of the disbeliever, they are deeds from a coerced and subjugated thing such as a tool, a mineral, a plant, or an animal, subjugated to serve mankind. If God distinguished the believer from the disbeliever with reward in this life and the best reward in the Hereafter, does it not befit the believer to outstrip the disbeliever in developing Islamic society, and be, by means of his works, a guiding beacon for those around him?

The True Lord the Most High then says:

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ وَٱلَّذِينَ هَاجَرُواْ وَجَٰهَدُواْ فِي سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ
أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ يَرْجُونَ رَحْمَتَ ٱللَّهِۚ وَٱللَّهُ غَفُورٞ رَّحِيمٞ ٢١٨

But those who have believed, migrated, and striven for God’s cause, it is they who can look forward to God’s mercy: God is most forgiving and merciful [218]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 218)

The verse mentions three categories of people: the first category is those who have believed, the second is those who have emigrated and the third is those who struggle. Those who believe with a faith which is sincerely devoted to God, and emigrate to give support to the religion, and struggle for the sake of making the word of Islam ascendant, they do all this looking forward to the mercy of God. Someone might wonder: Is mercy not something absolutely assured for these people? We say: Nothing from God the Most High is absolutely certain for the servant because you might forget about some of your sins for which you have not made proper repentance, nor desisted from. You must always keep this in mind, and make sure that you have a sincere intention for God in everything you do; for your soul might suggest something to you which spoils your action. This is why the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him, the master of mankind and the master of all who are connected with their Lord said: ‘O God, I seek refuge in You from knowledge which gives no benefit, and a deed which is not raised, and a prayer which is not heard.’(1)

The Noble Messenger peace and blessings be upon him, the master of all those who are sincere in all that he did, taught us that the soul might cause one to do something which spoils the act of obedience. The Muslim should always be hopeful, and the believer who has trust in his Lord should not say: God has to do such-and-such for me; because the basis of your worship of God has already been recompensed, and anything else you receive after this is a favour from God upon you. Your worship was recompensed by the fact that you were brought into existence out of nothing and given sustenance out of nothing, and it was recompensed by the fact that God gave you to enjoy all kinds of things. If you compare this with what God asks of you – even supposing that you gained no benefit from it – you have already benefitted from what He gave to you first, and any good that comes to you after this is a favour from God to you; and favours are hoped for, not expected with certainty.

(1) Narrated by Ahmad, Al-Hakim and Ibn Hibban on the authority of Anas God be pleased with him.

The magnificence of the True Lord the Most High is that you call upon Him with both fear and desire. The example often given – and God is beyond compare – is that the greatness you ascribe to your father lies in the fact that that you have a father whom you fear, and who you hope will help you attain some of your ambitions. If one of these two aspects were absent, the whole essence of the father-son relationship will be absent.

Likewise, the greatness of the Lord inspires both fear and desire; if you desire Him, but do not fear Him, your faith is deficient; and if you fear Him, but do not desire Him, your faith is also deficient. Therefore, the two must coexist: fear and desire. If a person considered with insight the things which God has obliged him to do as religious responsibilities, he would find that he benefits many times over from these responsibilities. Everything which God gives His servants as reward is only favour and surplus; and every provision given to mankind is pure favour, and pure favour is hoped for, not expected.

The True Lord the Most High commands the believers to call their Lord humbly, and in the secrecy of their hearts. Indeed, He does not love those who transgress the bounds of what is right; and do not spread corruption on earth after it has been so well ordered. And call Him with fear and longing: indeed, God's grace is ever near to the doers of good (al-A'raf: 55-56).

The whole world is subjugated by the Power of the Most Merciful and His will, and He can do whatever He wants with everything in existence, and He is the Splendid Creator. Therefore, one should call upon God with humility and submission in private and in public; and the True Lord the Most High does not love those who transgress by speech, or by being ostentatious, or by harming others.

Faith must be sincerely devoted to God so that man does not corrupt the earth with idolatry or disobedience; for the True Lord the Most High has set in place, the true way to reform the world, which is the Quran and the Message of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him; and God’s mercy is near to those who obey the True Lord the Most High.

One aspect of the greatness of the Lord is that He is both feared and desired; if you desire Him but do not fear Him, your deed will not be accepted, and if you fear Him, but do not desire Him, your deed will not be accepted. Desire and fear are both required together, which is why the believer who strives in the cause of God looks forward to God’s mercy.

The True Lord the Most High says, ‘…those hope for the mercy of God….’ What is mercy? Mercy is that you are spared from being subjected to pain from the outset. The True Lord the Most High says that through the Quran, He bestows all that gives health to the spirit and is a mercy to those who believe (al-Isra’: 82).

Giving health means that you were afflicted with an illness and then, God cures you of it, but mercy means that the illness does not afflict you in the first place. ‘…And God is Forgiving and Merciful.’

God the Most High knows that not all of His servants are free of sin, and if He were to reckon us with completely strict standards some of us would suffer, which is why I always love to make this supplication with my brethren: O God, with grace, not justice; and with kindness, not with the balance; and with clemency, not with strictness. That is, treat us with grace and not justice, and with Your kindness and not with the balance because the balance would be hard for us.

The Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him taught us that admittance to paradise is not attained by works alone, but rather by God’s grace, mercy and forgiveness. The Noble Messenger peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘None of you shall enter paradise by his acts.’ His companions asked, ‘Not even you, o Messenger of God?’ He answered, ‘Not even me, unless God enfolds me in His mercy.’(1)

So, the believer has hope in God, and does not set conditions for God; he offers his good deeds to God with sincerity and hopes for acceptance, forgiveness, and mercy, and all of this is from God’s grace.

(1) Narrated by Ahmad, Al-Bukhari, Muslim, and Al-Bayhaqi.

The True Lord the Most High then mentions another question:

يَسْـَٔلُونَكَ عَنِ ٱلْخَمْرِ وَٱلْمَيْسِرِ ۖ قُلْ فِيهِمَآ إِثْمٌ كَبِيرٌ وَمَنَٰفِعُ
لِلنَّاسِ وَإِثْمُهُمَآ أَكْبَرُ مِن نَّفْعِهِمَا ۗ وَيَسْـَٔلُونَكَ مَاذَا يُنفِقُونَ قُلِ
ٱلْعَفْوَ ۗ كَذَٰلِكَ يُبَيِّنُ ٱللَّهُ لَكُمُ ٱلْـَٔايَٰتِ لَعَلَّكُمْ تَتَفَكَّرُونَ ﴿٢١٩﴾

They ask you [Prophet] about intoxicants and gambling: say, 'There is great sin in both, and some benefit for people: the sin is greater than the benefit.' They ask you what they should give: say, 'Give what you can spare.' In this way, God makes His messages clear to you, so that you may reflect [219] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 219)

As we know, the Arabic word khamr ('wine') is derived from a word meaning 'cover', so, if a person enters a khamra it means he enters into the cover of tangled trees to hide there. The word khimar means the scarf a Muslim woman wears to cover her head, and this word, too, is taken from the same root. The verb khamara means to mix; all of these meanings are derived from the action of covering. The word maysir ('gambling') is derived from the word yusr, meaning 'ease', because it allows people to make easy money without much effort.

Intoxicants and gambling were things which were well known during the time of pagan ignorance before the coming of Islam. When Islam came to confront the establishments of this ignorance, it confronted the doctrine of the age without any clemency; it did not oppose it and confront it with gradual phases, but rather, it did away with it from the very outset, and the banner of 'there is no God but God the Most High and Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the Messenger of God' was raised. After this, Islam came to those things which were considered customs and began to minimise them; since people were accustomed to them, Islam took them with a certain amount of gentleness and clemency. This was an aspect of the wisdom of the Sacred Law in that it did not initially make the laws a matter of compulsion, for this could have created disturbances in society and in all existence. Rather, it took things with lenience.

Since the word for ‘wine’ (khamr) is derived from the word meaning ‘to cover’, what does it cover? It covers reason, which is shown by the fact that the one who imbibes it loses his reason. God the Most High does not want man, whom He honoured with intelligence, to go to the thing with which He honoured him, and with which his vicegerency on earth is directed, and cover it and cause it to be absent; for it is as though the one who does this, returns to God the blessing which He gave to him, and this is foolish.

Moreover, those who take intoxicants justify their action by saying that they want to forget the troubles of this worldly life. We say to them: Does forgetting about troubles stop them from coming? No; and so Islam asks you to live with your troubles to face them with your whole intellect; and if there are troubles and problems, Islam does not want you to forget them. No; rather, you must use your intelligence to face them. As long as you are required to face your problems with your intelligence, do not come to the centre of management of life’s matters, the reason, which helps you to face your problems, and overrule it and prevent it from working.

Does escaping and forgetting difficulties prevent them? The thing which prevents difficulties is that you try with your entire mind to find a way out of them. If this is not within your capabilities, it is foolish to think of it; for God wants you to relieve your reason from these kinds of things. If the problem can be solved, and you are able to solve it, you need your intelligence with all of its power.

The True Lord the Most High guides us in this matter with the wisdom of the All-Wise, and gives us that by which we ourselves can judge the matter before it is required from us. He the Exalted reminds us of His blessings when He says that He grants us nourishment from the fruit of date-palms and vines; from it we derive intoxicants as well as wholesome sustenance (an-Nahl: 67).

When God the Most High mentions ‘intoxicants’, He passes over it without any comment, whilst when He says ‘sustenance’ He describes it as ‘wholesome’. We should have been aware that God the Most High was laying the ground for the Islamic position on intoxicants. He did not describe the ‘intoxicants’ with any adjective, whilst He called the sustenance ‘wholesome’. When people derived intoxicants from these fruits, they changed it from being wholesome sustenance, since there is a difference between eating grapes as a meal and fermenting them and corrupting them and making from them a cover for the reason.

This being said, there is a difference between legislation and advice. When you advise someone, you say to him, 'I will show you the way to goodness, and you are free to follow it or not.' But when you legislate and make a ruling, you command this or that person to do that thing alone and nothing else.

The True Lord the Most High says, 'They ask you about wine and gambling….' He mentioned for us the evils of them, and left us to judge them. He the Exalted said, addressing His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him, '…say, "In both is great evil and some benefit for people"….' Had He not said 'some benefit for people', they would have objected and said, 'We take benefit from wine, and we earn money from it, and we forget our troubles with it.' These were benefits as far as they were concerned, but the True Lord the Most High clarifies that their evil is greater than their benefit, that is, the advantage of consuming them is less than the harm they cause. This is a just appraisal, for the matter had not yet become a matter of prohibition since it was still a matter of advice and guidance.

God's words '…But their evil is greater than their benefit….' make them into a kind of sin. The gradual introduction of the ruling was required because He the Exalted was dealing with something which was a widespread custom, so, He the Exalted was laying the ground to bring an end to this custom. A custom is something which leads to habituation so that if time passes without you having what you are accustomed to have, there will be disturbance in your psyche and your blood. As long as something leads to habituation, it is better to close the door from the beginning and prevent this habit.

The beginning of the ruling on intoxicants came when one of the Muslims drank some wine before it had been prohibited, and then he went to pray and erroneously recited a Quranic verse saying, 'O you who disbelieve, I worship that which you worship,' whereupon came the reproach from the True Lord the Most High interdicting prayer, while in a state of drunkenness (an-Nisa': 43).

This was a way of getting those who were used to intoxicants to withdraw from them since the ruling was given to the one who prays not to attempt to pray whilst drunk; so, when will he have to abstain from it? When he wakes up in the morning, he cannot approach intoxicants until he prays the dawn prayer, and then the Noon Prayer is close so, he must prepare for it, and then after this, comes the mid-afternoon prayer, and then, the sunset and evening prayers. That is, he will have no time to drink in those times in which he is due to pray, so, his only chance will be late at night, so, when night comes, he will drink a glass and then, will fall asleep. The time in which he abstains from intoxicants, will be longer than the time in which he takes them.

Once their habit of taking intoxicants began to diminish, some problems and arguments arose which drove them to ask the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him to clarify for them a final ruling about intoxicants, whereupon God's words were revealed explaining to the believers that intoxicants, gambling, idolatrous practices and the divining of the future are but a loathsome evil of Satan's doing, and enjoining them to shun them in order to attain success. By means of intoxicants and gambling, Satan seeks only to sow enmity and hatred among the believers, and to turn them away from the remembrance of God and from prayer. The verse is concluded by exhorting the believers to desist (al-Ma'ida: 90-91).

Upon this, they said, 'We desist, o Lord!' So, by prohibiting intoxicants, the True Lord the Most High wanted to protect man's reason, for reason is the anchor of man's moral responsibility, and it is the crux of selection between alternatives, so, the True Lord the Most High wanted to protect this blessing for man.

The primary purpose of religion is to safeguard the five essentials which man cannot do without: to safeguard life, dignity, possessions, reason and religion. All laws revolve around the preservation of these five essentials; and if you consider these essentials, you will find that the protection of them all begins with the protection of the reason; for when reason is safe, it makes one think of religion, makes him think of work, and makes him cautious to preserve his dignity.

So reason is the basis of the responsible action which this matter revolves around, and the True Lord the Most High does not want man to obscure his reason with any kind of intoxicant so that there is no threat to these five essentials.

In the verse which we are currently examining, God referred to both intoxicants and gambling, for He the Exalted wants to guard man from moments of heedlessness. Gambling in its simplest form is for two people to sit before one another, each one eager to get what is in the pocket of the other. What kind of brotherhood will remain between these two? Each of them wants to send the other home with empty pockets, so, what kind of brotherhood will there be between them?

It is strange that you see those who gamble with one another seem to be friends, each one of them eager to meet the other: what treacherous friendship this is! And it is strange that each of them is content with what the other one does: taking his money and remaining his friend; and what is strangest of all is the cheating and stealing that goes on between those who habitually gamble. If you looked at the lives of those who gamble, you would find that they spend and squander money without any caution, and they never benefit from the money that comes into their hands, no matter how much it is. Why? It is because when money is earned through gambling, it is spent without any caution. This is the state of the one who wins; as for the one who loses, you find him living in woe and pain for what he has lost, and you find that he is always poor, and perhaps he is forced to sacrifice his dignity and honour, if not to sell his own clothes and the dearest things he owns. This all happens because of fallacious dreams and false hopes which Satan makes alluring to both sides, winner and loser: the winner hopes to increase the money he has more and more, and the loser hopes to regain what he has lost, and then win.

When a person becomes habituated to earning without working, everything loses its value to him, and he gets used to living on cheap and easy earnings; and when he can find no gullible person to play with, he might steal or pilfer. This is the state of those who gamble; they are blight on society, for they are the ones who bribe, steal, and act boisterously, and they have no manners, and no friends or companions, and their houses are wrecks, and their families are fragmented, and they are wretched even in their form and appearance.

This is why the True Lord the Most High says, ‘They ask you about wine and gambling; say, “In both is great evil and some benefit for people. But their evil is greater than their benefit.”’ As long as the evil is greater than the benefit, the side of evil is dominant. This is concerning the nature of the action itself; then as for the time of the action, He the Exalted commanded the believers to avoid praying while drunk (an-Nisa’: 43).

And after this, He the Exalted gave the final ruling by prohibiting intoxicants and gambling along with other blameworthy practices in explaining to the believers that intoxicants, gambling, idolatrous practices, and the divining of the future are but a loathsome evil of Satan's doing and commanding them to shun those practices in order to attain success (al-Ma'ida: 90-91).

Then the verse moves on to another issue: '…And they ask you what they should spend; say, "The excess (beyond needs)."' This is the very question which 'Amr ibn Al-Jamuh asked, and the answer given before was: 'Say, "Whatever you spend of good is [to be] for parents and relatives and orphans and the needy and the wayfarer"' (al-Baqara: 215). Here the answer takes a different form: '…say, "The excess (beyond needs)."' The word 'afw literally means 'excess/increase', and we find the word used in another verse where the True Lord the Most High tells us about past nations to whom He had sent prophets and tried them with misfortune and hardship so that they might humble themselves and pray to God; then, He transformed the affliction into ease of life so that they 'afaw ('grew in number, increased, prospered') and said that misfortune and hardship befell their fathers. Then God took them to task, all of a sudden, without their being aware (al-A'raf: 94-95).

God Almighty is giving a warning and a caution so people take heed and reflect. He the Exalted did not send a prophet to any people whom they met with disbelief and denial save that He took them and tried them with poverty, misfortune, illness and hardship so that they would repent to their Lord and humble themselves before Him so that He would lift from them that with which He tried them. And then, when they did not return and abandon their disbelief and obstinacy, He tested them and tried them with prosperity, with verdure, wealth, health and ease, until they thrived and their wealth and possessions increased, and in the midst of these blessings they said, 'All of the fortune, misfortune, good and evil which comes to us is nothing, but the way of the universe, and the custom of time, and our ancestors and forefathers were met by the same as that with which we are met.' And when they insisted upon their disbelief, God the Most High sent His torment upon them all of a sudden, and sent down upon them a sudden punishment. God the Most High took them from hardship to ease, and treated them with good and ill fortune so that they would have no argument to make against God; and when the baseness of their natures emerged, and they adhered to their falsehood, God took them to task as only the Almighty Determiner can. Let us reflect on what God says about this. He the Exalted tells His Prophet that He had indeed sent messages to people before his time, and seized them with misfortune and hardship so that they might humble themselves; yet, when the misfortune decreed by God befell them, they did not humble themselves, but rather, their hearts grew hard, for Satan had made all their doings seem fair to them. Then, when they had forgotten all that they had been told to take to heart, God threw open to them the gates of all good things, until – even as they were rejoicing in what they had been granted – God suddenly took them to task: and they were broken in spirit (al-An'am: 42-44).

That is, We did not bring forth their punishment immediately, but rather, We left them so that they continued in their disobedience, until when they rejoiced in the favours, riches and increase in numbers they had been given, He suddenly took them to task, and they were broken in spirit (al-An'am: 44), that is, despairing of God's mercy, or regretful and woeful, yet, regret could not avail them at that time, for the opportunity had passed, and they had squandered it.

The True Lord the Most High sends down this torment as a punishment, and it makes the transformation all the more difficult. They persisted, so, the True Lord the Most High punished them with a mighty punishment, just like one who lifts somebody into the sky and then, lets him fall to the earth. The word 'afaw ('prospered') here might also mean that they increased in wickedness. Another meaning of the word 'afw, can also be 'to leave' as we see in another verse where God, in the case of legal retribution for murder, says that whoever is 'ufiya ('left, given remission') from his brother anything, then, there should be a suitable follow-up (al-Baqara: 178).

That is, if someone is left something by his brother let him take it. So 'afw can sometimes mean 'excess', and sometimes 'to leave'. Here, in the verse under consideration, the True Lord the Most High says, '…And they ask you what they should spend; say, "The excess (beyond needs)."' That is, spending should only be from that which one owns in excess of one's needs, so, the word ‘afw here means ‘excess’ or ‘left aside’. And so we see here that ‘afw is the same in both instances; Do not think that the different meanings are contradictory because together they lead to the intended meaning in the end. ‘Afw means ‘excess’ and it can also mean ‘forgiveness.’ So, spending from one’s excess wealth leads to forgiveness, and also to comfort in the society. If someone farms lands and produces that which he needs to support himself and his dependants and more besides, will he leave that which is in excess to his needs to go rotten, or will he spend it on his needy relative or neighbour? Which option is closer to reason and logic? This was before the True Lord the Most High had legislated the zakat (‘poor-due’) in its conventional form; and what was the secret behind its having been changed from voluntary charity to obligatory poor-due?

It was because the True Lord the Most High wanted to give value to people’s work, and make their work a means of ease for them, not a burden; for others benefit from a person’s work, whether he intends it or not. This is why we find that there is a ‘poor-due on precious minerals’, which is the poor-due which must be paid on the treasures extracted from underground such as precious metals, oil, and so on; the True Lord made the proportion of this poor-due 20%, that is, one fifth, whilst the one who ploughs the earth and plants seeds in it and then, leaves them until rain falls on them and they grow, must pay poor-due of one tenth for what his farming produces.

As for the one who farms by irrigation, he only has to pay one twentieth; and for the one who trades every day and works hard, going to the producer and buying his wares and then supplying them to the customer who buys them, we tell him that he must pay only two-and-a-half per cent (2.5%).

So, the poor-due is in accordance with one’s work and effort, as though the True Lord the Most High protects man’s work from the foolishness of man-made legislation. God the Most High encourages the strong worker to increase his work so that society benefits; and God has granted the judge who follows the way of Islam to take from the rich that which will protect the dignity of the poor if the rich are stingy with the favours God has given them and refuse to spend God’s provision on the poor. The way of truth protects wealth from the corruption of greed, and the corruption of laziness, and it wants life to be upright and secure for the people.

The one who spends his wealth on his family, lives in security; and if one spends on his family and dependants, the circle of security increases. In this way, by the poor-due, God the Most High protects human aspirations from the foolishness of man-made legislations; for the human lawmaker comes to the one who works more, and increases his due taxes. We say to him: This worker does not intend to benefit society, yet, society will benefit from his work: a person might possess wealth, so, God the Most High places the notion in his mind: 'What if you build an apartment building with ten storeys, and each storey containing four apartments?' He calculates how much these apartments will make for him every month. This man is thinking of nothing but profit; so, let us leave him think of profit; we will find that society will benefit from this act when we consider how many people will work on the construction of this new building, starting from the builders and then moving on to the carpenters, blacksmiths, whitewashers, plumbers, and so on.

All of the poor sectors of society have benefitted and profited from this man's wealth before a single penny has entered his pocket. God the Most High put the thought in his head, so, he took everything from his pocket and placed it in the pockets of the others before he even had an apartment building. In this way, God the Most High protects the work of the worker because his work will benefit others whether he intends this or not.

But if we say to him, 'We will take your excess wealth forcibly,' he will inevitably say to himself, 'I will only work as much as I need, and only a little more.' The True Lord the Most High does not want this way of thinking to be prevalent amongst people; He wants them to work in life in a way that is earnest and lawful; and the more they work, the less their obligatory poor-due will be because it is not only the worker who benefits from his work, but rather, society as a whole benefits; one person is idle, another farms, and a third works; and it is better for a person to eat from the work of his own hands than to eat from the charity and poor-due of others.

Al-Miqdam ibn Ma'd Yakrib God be pleased with him narrates that the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him said, 'No one ever ate any food better than that which he ate from the labour of his own hand; and God's Prophet David peace be upon him used to eat from the work of his hand.'(1)

The True Lord the Most High then says:

فِي ٱلدُّنۡيَا وَٱلۡأٓخِرَةِۗ وَيَسۡـَٔلُونَكَ عَنِ ٱلۡيَتَٰمَىٰۖ قُلۡ إِصۡلَاحٞ لَّهُمۡ خَيۡرٞۖ وَإِن
تُخَالِطُوهُمۡ فَإِخۡوَٰنُكُمۡۚ وَٱللَّهُ يَعۡلَمُ ٱلۡمُفۡسِدَ مِنَ ٱلۡمُصۡلِحِۚ وَلَوۡ شَآءَ
ٱللَّهُ لَأَعۡنَتَكُمۡۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ عَزِيزٌ حَكِيمٞ ٢٢٠

on this world and the next. They ask you about [the property of] orphans: say, 'It is good to set things right for them. If you combine their affairs with yours, remember they are your brothers and sisters: God knows those who spoil things and those who improve them. Had He so willed, He could have made you vulnerable too: He is almighty and wise' [220]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 220)

The True Lord the Most High begins this verse by saying: 'On this world and the Hereafter….' It is as though He is saying to us: Beware of thinking that every moral responsibility which comes from God will be rewarded in the Hereafter only; never – the reward will come to you in this world as well.

Reflect on the lives of those who adhered to the way of their religion and the moral way in their lives, and you will find that they took their reward in this world as contentment, happiness, and security so that you might find people wondering, 'How could so-and-so have raised his children, and how could he have taught them, when his means were so modest?'

They do not know that God's Hand is with him in the form of blessings in every action of his life. Do not think that this reward is restricted to the Hereafter alone, but rather, God will bring the reward forward to this world; and as for the Hereafter, it will be an increase, and we will enjoy the delights of the Hereafter by the grace of God. The Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him said, 'None of you shall enter paradise by his acts.' The companions asked, ‘Not even you, O Messenger of God?’ He said, ‘Not even me, unless God enfolds me in His mercy.’(1)

(1) Narrated by Ahmad and Al-Bukhari

I would like us all to reflect on the state of those people who are upright in their way of life, and see how they live, and how they spend on their children, and reflect on the gladness and contentment which they enjoy, and how their lives are free of problems and psychological complications.

It is as though He the Exalted is alerting us to the fact that everything in the Straight Way only came to organise our lives for us and to take us away from the soul’s whims.

We say that after the True Lord the Most High concluded speaking about the pilgrimage, the fifth Pillar of Islam, He showed us two categories of people in society: The first is the hypocrites whose speech does not reflect the truth of their hearts and souls: ‘And from among the people is one whose speech concerning worldly life pleases you, and he calls God to witness as to what is in his heart, yet he is the fiercest of opponents. And when he turns away, he strives throughout the land to cause corruption therein and destroy tilth and progeny. And God does not like corruption’ (al-Baqara: 204-205). If only when this sector was alerted to this, they turned back and repented; but no; when they are told by someone who advises them out of love and concern to fear God, they are filled with false pride because of their sin!

The other sector of society are those who would willingly sell their own selves to please God, which is represented either by their giving up their lives when fighting and so being martyred, or by their keeping their lives in order to do good in accordance with the way of God. He the Exalted said, ‘And from among the people is he who sells himself, seeking means to please God, and God is kind to His servants’ (al-Baqara: 207).

Then God the Most High spoke about entering wholly into Islam (submission to God), since entering into Islam, requires us all to enter into every kind of peace in life: peace with yourself so that your faculties are not in disarray and you do not say anything that contradicts your heart; peace with the society in which you live; peace with the universe which serves you as minerals, plants, and animals; and peace with the community in which you live. He the Exalted said, ‘O you who have believed, enter into Islam completely and do not follow the footsteps of Satan. Indeed, he is to you a clear enemy’ (al-Baqara: 208).

(1) Narrated by Imam Al-Bukhari, Muslim, Imam Ahmad in his Musnad, Al-Baihaqi, and others in different versions

All of this indicates to us that when the True Lord the Most High created mankind, He gave them the way of guidance which would secure peace and security for them in every aspect of this life; therefore, if you see a fissure or disturbance in the universe, or you see any fear or worry, know that one of the ways of Islam has been neglected. When the True Lord the Most High commands us to enter wholly into Islam, He the Exalted is forewarning us that if we stumble from His way of guidance, God is Almighty and All-Wise and cannot be overwhelmed by anyone, and no one can overpower Him, for He is the fully Capable and Powerful according to whose wisdom everything proceeds; so, do not think that you are doing God ill by dropping from His Way, for you are only doing ill to yourselves and your fellow men; for God cannot be overwhelmed.

The True Lord the Most High also alerts us to something else: He draws our attention to the fact that we do not know when the Hour (Doomsday) will come; for the Hour will come suddenly and unexpectedly, a calamitous cry and a tremulous earthquake. Take care, then, that this calamity does not come to you whilst you are heedless of it. This is all so that we also enter the Last Day in peace; it is as though the True Lord the Most High is alerting us to the fact that the words of the Quran are not mere theoretical words, but rather, they are words of the All-Wise and Knowing, which governed the history of the communities that came before the message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

The True Lord the Most High sent many signs to the children of Israel, and they tarried, and did what they did; and they themselves suffered, and society suffered on their account; so, this discourse is not theoretical. And God wants us to look at the affairs of life, and not to look at the superficial surface of things; we must not let the allures of the life of this world deceive us about the life of the Hereafter, for the life of this world is short. We must measure the life of this world by how long we live in it; and we only live in it for a short while, for some of us die old, whilst others die young.

And the True Lord the Most High tells us that He did not neglectfully leave His creatures, but rather, He sent to them messengers to show them God's Way. The people were one community united in truth until the whims of their souls were agitated, yet, God had mercy on them and did not leave them to their whims, but rather, the succession of messengers continued for mankind; and every time whims reigned and corruption spread, the True Lord the Most High, in His mercy, sent a messenger to alert the people, until the Final Messenger peace and blessings be upon him came, whom God the Most High distinguished by making his way of guidance eternal, and placing its values in his community. And the Muhammadan community became the bearer of the duty of guarding God's way by which life on earth is made sound; for the True Lord the Most High trusted no other community to do this, this is why the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him was the Seal of the Prophets.

Then after this, God the Most High alerted us to the fact that for a person to end up in the delights of paradise, does not come easily and lightly, but rather is a road surrounded by adversities; and therefore you must be cautious, and train your selves, and make them content with bearing these adversities, and accustom them to bearing these hardships, as the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Paradise is surrounded by adversities, and Hell is surrounded by lusts.'(1)

The True Lord the Most High then mentions His blessing to His creatures in how He gave to man, His vicegerent on earth, reason to think with, and power to carry out the directives of the reason, and a material universe before him which responds to his actions. The reason plans, and the power carries out these plans in the material which was created and subdued by God. So all the tools of action belong to God, and you, o man, do not have the ability to create any part of it, other than to direct created powers to act in created substances; you do not bring anything into existence.

(1) Narrated by Ahmad, Muslim and At-Tirmidhi on the authority of Anas God be pleased with him

After this, the True Lord the Most High asks you, O Muslim, to preserve life's motions by allotting a part of your work's fruits to those who are unable to work; therefore, you must do enough work to suffice yourself, those you support, and those who cannot work themselves. In this way, God looks after those who cannot work by means of the works of those of their believing brothers who can work; and He the Exalted assures you that if you do this, and you look after those who cannot work, He the Most High will look after you when you yourself cannot work.

God the Most High has made life's conditions alternate through people so that there are not some people who are always able and others who are always incapacitated; rather, the True Lord the Most High makes those who were able yesterday incapacitated today, and makes those who were incapacitated yesterday able today so that work spreads evenly throughout existence, and so that we all know that God asks from you when you are able in order to give to you when you are incapacitated. This is why He asks us to spend on others, and the occasion for spending on others only arises after one has met the necessities of one's life. It is as though the True Lord the Most High is telling you that you must work enough in life to suffice yourself and allow you to spend on your dependants; if not, and if you only work enough for yourself, you might not find anything to spend.

After this, He the Most High tells us that every believer is charged with fulfilling the responsibility of spending on his near circle so that, everyone will be responsible for a part of society which is connected to him by blood, such as parents and near kin, and that we make the support of weak orphans a collective responsibility of the whole society, required of all; whether we have a family tie to them or not, they are all our family because God has made us responsible for taking care of them.

But can the way of God become settled without anyone ever transgressing it? No; which is why the True Lord the Most High alerts us to the fact that we will find people who are not happy to implement the way of God in life because they only live by wronging others; these people will be aggrieved by seeing the way of God implemented. So you should be aware of these people, which is why the True Lord the Most High ordained fighting so we can safeguard the earth from the mischief of disbelief; for disbelief asserts the existence of multiple gods so that each person follows whims and his 'god' becomes his whim, and there will be as many gods as there are caprices. This is why God the Most High ordained fighting for the believers and told them 'even though it is hateful to you.' All of this secures for us the goal we seek, which is to enter wholly into security, peace and Islam. After this, He asks us to struggle with wealth and our lives, and to leave our homes and families if the course of the faith requires this, saying, 'Indeed, those who have believed and those who have emigrated and struggled in the Way of God - those hope for the mercy of God. And God is Forgiving and Merciful' (al-Baqara: 218).

After this, the True Lord the Most High draws our attention to the essential instrument of planning in the human being in order that he protects it and keeps it a sound instrument which is able to plan with clarity, wisdom and strength, namely reason; and He alerts us to how essential it is that we keep it from anything that intoxicates it, i.e. that veils it from working. Why do we keep it from intoxicants? So that it will remain, as God intends, a tool for selecting between alternatives.

Since reason is the thing that plans how the power that exists in man is to act on the material that exists in the universe, this planning reason must be left in a sound state, and man must not try to veil it; and no one should say, 'I veil it from the excessive increase of problems,' because problems do not require a single mind from you, but rather, they require two: so, do not take the only one you have and cover it with intoxicants, for the confrontation of problems requires you to plan robustly.

After this, the True Lord the Most High warns us not to usurp the work of others without any work or effort on our part, warns us against gambling, which is a means to easy earnings. The warning against gambling only came to ensure that everyone works in life with honourable work which is untainted by deception. And it is as though all that we have just said was inspired by God's words 'On this world and the Hereafter….' And after this, the True Lord the Most High says, '…And they ask you about orphans. Say, "Improvement for them is best. And if you mix your affairs with theirs - they are your brothers. And God knows the corrupter from the amender. And if God had willed, He could have put you in difficulty. Indeed, God is Mighty and Wise."'

We know that orphans might not necessarily be needy people, but God the Most High is drawing our attention to the fact that the case of orphans is not a matter of need for sustenance, but rather, the orphan is in need of our replacing, by our faithful solidarity, that which he lost when he lost his father, and this will stop him from becoming resentful of children whose fathers are still alive. When the orphan finds that all the believers are his fathers, he will feel the solidarity that replaces for him paternal love, and he will not suffer from pangs of grief when he looks at his fellows who are distinct from him in that their fathers are still alive; and in this way, he will be free of resentment.

Muslims in the past used to mix their wealth with the wealth of orphans in order to make it easier for themselves and to lessen the burden of the work needed to support the orphans. If an orphan entered into the care of someone, and this person wanted to give the young orphan an independent life and an independent sphere of movement and an independent way of life, this would prove difficult to manage for the man; and for this reason God the Most High gave permission for the guardian to mix his wealth with the wealth of the orphan, and to make the management of this wealth part of the management of his own wealth so that the guardian would not have any hardship. When the words of God the Most High were revealed that forbade the believers to approach the money of an orphan except to improve it until he comes of age (al-An'am: 152), people in the Muslim community were disturbed, and wondered how they should deal with orphans since the True Lord the Most High had said that those who sinfully consume the possessions of orphans fill their bellies with fire (an-Nisa': 10). So people kept their hands off the wealth of orphans, and the True Lord the Most High wanted to make the matter easier, and so revealed His words: '…Say, "Improvement for them is best. And if you mix your affairs with theirs - they are your brothers….' This mixing must be on the basis that orphans are your brethren; and be very careful that there is nothing in this mixing which is not in the interest of the orphan.

And beware of understanding that social convention allows the guardian to supervise the orphan's wealth without keeping any accounts, for God the Most High distinguishes between him who spoils things and him who improves. No one should try and say to the people that he has opened his door to the orphan, and that he has taken care of the orphan, when in reality this is not the case; for God the Most High distinguishes between the corrupter and the amender.

The True Lord the Most High says, '…And if God had willed, He could have put you in difficulty….' To put someone in difficulty means to take someone and put him in an adverse situation. Had God not allowed you to share your wealth, you would have been afflicted with hardship; so, God made it easier for the believers by allowing guardians to mix their wealth with the wealth of the orphans in their care. The meaning of 'mixing' is that the guardian unites the work of the orphan with his own work, and unites the living of the orphan with his own living, instead of the orphan having, for example, his own separate cutlery, which is what would happen.

In those days leftover food would be spoilt, since there was no way of keeping and preserving food like refrigerators; and this was a source of harm both for the orphan and for the one looking after him. But when God the Most High said, '…And if you mix your affairs with theirs…' this relieved the guardians of this hardship, since to share one's life means to live with them in a way which engenders no differentiation.

When we were children, we had in school a lesson called 'mixing and blending'. To mix (khalt) is to combine, for example, to mix the seeds of beans with lentils, or grains of rice with hazelnuts. If you want to tell one kind from the other, you are able to do so, and you can separate one kind from the other with a sieve; so, mixing takes place between seeds and the like.

As for blending (mazj), this takes place with liquids. The True Lord the Most High guides us to share or mix (khalat) with orphans, not to blend their wealth with our wealth; for the orphan will reach adulthood one day, whereupon the guardian will have to separate his wealth from the wealth of the orphan.

The True Lord the Most High continues: '…And God knows the corrupter from the amender…' because the guardian might claim to the people that he is looking after the rights of the orphan and that he is improving his condition and respecting his wealth, whilst his intention might be contrary to this; yet, He the Exalted did not leave the matter to the superficial understanding of society of the conduct of the guardian with the orphan and the mixing of his life, but rather, He ascribed all this to the supervision of God above all other supervision; and this is so a person can be cautious and aware that the protection of God is above all other protection. Had the True Lord the Most High willed it, He could have imposed hardships upon the guardians and made them work for the orphan alone, and separate the life of the orphan from their lives and their living conditions, and this would have caused severe hardship for the soul. In order for us to understand the exact meaning of hardship and suffering ('anat), let us consider the words of the True Lord the Most High when He tells the believers that there has come to them a Messenger from among themselves: heavily weighs upon him the thought that they might suffer; full of concern for them and full of compassion and mercy towards the believers (at-Tawba: 128).

To you has come, o believers, a Messenger from amongst you, an Arab from Quraysh to deliver to you the Message of God the Most High, full of concern for you lest you fall into hardship, or live in the wretchedness of disbelief, and concerned that you be of those who are rightly guided. The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him did not come from the kind of angels, but rather from the kind of humans; and no person can say, 'He is not an appropriate role-model for me.' He grew up in Mecca, where Quraysh lived, and his history was well-known to his people, which are borne out by the fact that they testified to his possessing the first of the necessary attributes of message-bearing, which is trustworthiness. The True Lord the Most High brought him forth from amongst mankind, and he was not a stranger to them; and simply by his telling of the Revelation, there were some who believed in him before he recited the Quran, and before he issued any challenge to them.

When the angel Gabriel peace be upon him came to him in the cave of Hira' and said to him, 'Read,' he said, 'I am not a reader,' So, he took hold of me and whelmed me in his embrace until he had reached the limit of my endurance (that is, he hugged him and squeezed him; and the wisdom of this was to keep him from any distraction so his heart was alert), and then, let me go and said, 'Read.' I said, 'I am not a reader,' so, he took hold of me and whelmed me in his embrace a second time until he had reached the limit of my endurance, and then, let me go and said, 'Read.' I said, 'I am not a reader,' so, he took hold of me and whelmed me in his embrace a third time, and then, let me go and said, 'Read in the name of your Lord Who has created – created man from a clot. Read – for your Lord is the Most Bountiful Who has taught the use of the pen, taught man that which he knew not' (al-'Alaq: 1-5). The Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him went back home with a trembling heart to his wife Khadija bint Khuwaylid God be pleased with her and said to her, 'Cover me, cover me.' She covered him until the alarm left him, and then he told Khadija what had happened, saying, 'I feared for myself;' but Khadija God be pleased with her, with her sound reasoning, said, 'No, by God; God would never degrade you, for you keep family ties, support the needy, provide for the destitute, you receive guests with hospitality, and you help those afflicted with disasters.(1) Khadija God be pleased with her adduced that whoever possessed all these attributes was ready to receive the Message. The True Lord the Most High tells the believers that there has come to them a Messenger from among themselves who heavily weighs upon him the thought that they might suffer; full of concern for them and full of compassion and mercy towards the believers (at-Tawba: 128). That is, he loves you, and the same things cause him hardship and trouble him as cause you hardship and trouble you; this is why the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him was so concerned for his community, and it is narrated that He peace and blessings be upon him used to repeat, 'My people! My people! My people!'

And the True Lord the Most High knew that the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him was concerned for his people. 'Abdullah ibn 'Amr ibn Al-'As God be pleased with him related that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him once recited God's words reporting the supplication of Abraham peace be upon him to his Lord that the idols have misguided many people and that he who follows him in faith is truly of him (Ibrahim: 36), and the supplication of Jesus peace be upon him asking God to spare his followers suffering and if He causes them to suffer, indeed, they are His servants; and if He forgives them, indeed, He alone is Almighty, truly Wise (al-Ma'ida: 118), and then, he raised his hands and said, 'O God, my people, my people!' And then, he wept. God the Most High said: 'O Gabriel, go to Muhammad – and your Lord knows best – and ask him why he weeps.’ Gabriel peace be upon him went to him and asked him, and the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him told him what he had said – and God knew best – and then, God the Most High said, ‘O Gabriel, go to Muhammad and say: “We shall give you cause to be pleased with your people, and we shall not disappoint you.”’(1)

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in the chapter on the beginning of the Revelation

When we reflect on the exactness of the Prophet’s answer, we realise that the Noble Messenger peace and blessings be upon him was concerned for his people; he saw himself as being the brother of every believer; but a man might change towards his brother, which is why the Noble Messenger peace and blessings be upon him did not want the affair of the Muslims to be out of the Hand of God and His mercy – as He is the All-Generous Creator – to his own control peace and blessings be upon him.

The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him knows that God is more merciful with His creatures than anyone, even the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him himself. We are saying all this as we show the meaning of the hardship and suffering (‘anat) which could afflict a person if he does not preserve the right of God connected to the wealth of the orphan, for God is Almighty and Wise, and He is the True Lord the Most High Who overwhelms and cannot be overwhelmed by anyone. We see in the words of the True Lord the Most High ‘…Indeed, God is Mighty and Wise’ that the attribute of might is tied to the attribute of wisdom.

After this, the True Lord the Most High takes us on to a new issue which, if we consider it, we will find it to be the basis of any motion in life and in society, which is the issue of marriage. He the Exalted wants to secure stability and happiness for the being whom He honoured and made him His vicegerent on earth, and for whose service He subdued all other beings.

The True Lord the Most High wants this being to go forth from a single spring of guidance because it is conflicting caprices that corrupt the motions of life, so, He wanted all of humankind collectively to emerge from a single spring of faith, and He wanted to protect this spring from being affected by the multiplicity of inclinations and caprices, which is why the True Lord

(1) Narrated by Muslim

the Most High alerts us to this issue. He the Exalted wants to safeguard the soundness of the vessel which would produce man after marriage; since with marriage man reproduces and life continues through procreation. For this reason, there must be precision when choosing the spring from which one's progeny will come; so, He the Exalted says:

وَلَا تَنكِحُوا۟ ٱلْمُشْرِكَٰتِ حَتَّىٰ يُؤْمِنَّ ۚ وَلَأَمَةٌ مُّؤْمِنَةٌ خَيْرٌ مِّن مُّشْرِكَةٍ
وَلَوْ أَعْجَبَتْكُمْ ۗ وَلَا تُنكِحُوا۟ ٱلْمُشْرِكِينَ حَتَّىٰ يُؤْمِنُوا۟ ۚ وَلَعَبْدٌ مُّؤْمِنٌ خَيْرٌ
مِّن مُّشْرِكٍ وَلَوْ أَعْجَبَكُمْ ۗ أُو۟لَٰٓئِكَ يَدْعُونَ إِلَى ٱلنَّارِ ۖ وَٱللَّهُ يَدْعُوٓا۟ إِلَى
ٱلْجَنَّةِ وَٱلْمَغْفِرَةِ بِإِذْنِهِۦ ۖ وَيُبَيِّنُ ءَايَٰتِهِۦ لِلنَّاسِ لَعَلَّهُمْ يَتَذَكَّرُونَ ﴿٢٢١﴾

Do not marry idolatresses until they believe: a believing slave woman is certainly better than an idolatress, even though she may please you. And do not give your women in marriage to idolaters until they believe: a believing slave is certainly better than an idolater, even though he may please you. Such people call [you] to the Fire, while God calls [you] to the Garden and forgiveness by His leave. He makes His messages clear to people, so that they may bear them in mind [221]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 221)

The True Lord the Most High says, 'And do not marry idolatresses until they believe….' This is the first brick in the building of the family and society, because if she is not a believer, what will happen? She will raise the new-born in a way which reflects her idolatry and your role as a father and educator will not come until after a long time has passed, by which time, these things will have been implanted in the child. So beware of a union between a believing man and an idolatrous woman because this will disrupt the organisation of the family; the actions of the mother with the child affect its first stages of development: they affect its values and its moral development, and this is something which begins as soon as he can see and perceive. The baby spends its first years in its mother's care, and after this it grows up and comes into its father's care. If the mother is an idolatress and the father is a believer, faith will not come to the child until idolatry has already taken hold of him and overcome him.

We know that human infancy is the longest infancy of any living being; there are some infancies which last only two hours, such as that of a fly, and other infancies which last a month; and the longest infancy is that of man because this it is appropriate for the mission which man will undertake. All of the infancies which came before it are infancies which have very easy missions, yet man is the one who must take his values from it, which is why his infancy is so long. It lasts until he reaches puberty, and in this respect, the True Lord the Most High teaches the believers that when the children among them reach puberty, they should ask permission to enter their parents' chambers like those before them have been enjoined to ask it. In this way God makes clear His messages: for God is All Knowing, Wise (an-Nur: 59).

It is as though an infant remains an infant until he reaches puberty, so, how many years does he remain an infant? And how many years will this infant drink from the springs of idolatry if his mother is an idolater? It is such a long time that he cannot be a believer after this without his faculties being disturbed. Even if such a person can become a believer, his belief will remain under the compulsion, pressure and authority of his father and this kind of faith will be something superficial, not settled, or grounded on a sincere basis.

We know that the fruits we enjoy eating only ripen after the seeds from which the new tree are made ripen, and before this, they are only unripe fruits with no taste. The True Lord the Most High wants to alert us to this fact in order that man take care to keep fruits until they ripen and have seeds.

A woman cannot be good fruit unless she produces a child who, like her, is righteous and beneficial. The True Lord the Most High wants the youth not to be confused about its faith, which is why He the Exalted says, 'And do not marry idolatresses until they believe.' That is, beware of being deceived by base, ignoble standards. You must all accept God's judgement that '…a believing slave woman is better than an idolatress, even though she might please you...' because if a person is pleased by a woman without considering her faith, this will be a short-lived pleasure.

If we collected all the moments of time in which a woman's physical beauty can be enjoyed, the total would not add up to more than a single month of all the years of marriage. Every week, there might be a meeting which lasts only minutes, and then the beauty fades and the values remain deep-rooted in the soul; and we find that when a woman marries and is slow in becoming pregnant, she suffers from worry, as does her husband.

If the man marries her for her looks, her beauty, her figure, and her eyes, this will all cool off and fade away after a time, and then, there will be other standards for life to continue, and when the person looks for them, but does not find them, he will be consumed with regret because they were not in his mind when he made his choice.

Because of this, the woman tries to consolidate her position by having a child to tie the man to her, and so that society will say, 'You must put up with her for the children's sake!' After marriage, a man wants different standards from those physical standards which he first had. For this reason, God the Most High forewarns us, saying, 'And do not marry idolatresses until they believe…,' and He stresses 'until they believe' because Islam expiates all that came before it as long as she attains faith, all the rest is forgotten.

Look at the precision of God's words: 'And do not marry idolatresses until they believe, and a believing slave woman is better than an idolatress….' That is, a Muslim slave is better than an idolatrous free woman '…even though she might please you….' God's words here refer to the standards of physical attraction in order to alert us to the fact that it is not right for us to ignore eternal standards and adopt standards which are ephemeral and transient.

Then, the True Lord the Most High says, '…And do not marry idolatrous men [to your women] until they believe….' This is a similar statement, not an inverse one since He did not tell believing women not to marry idolatrous men, but rather said, '…And do not marry idolatrous men [to your women] until they believe….' This is precise discourse because men have the authority to give women in marriage, and so He addresses them, saying: do not give in marriage, whilst women do not have the authority to give themselves in marriage. We know the legal principle which says, 'There can be no marriage without a guardian.' He did not address His words to women because a woman is governed by her emotions whilst her guardian will look at the matter from every other angle which influences the situation.

It is true that we ask for the virgin girl's assent to be sure that her feeling is not against the marriage, but the father or whichever male guardian it is will judge things according to various standards. If we leave the girl to judge according to her own standards, the marriage will collapse as soon as her emotions abate; and when she then applies rational standards, she might not find this marriage to have been right for her, so, the marriage fails. This is why Islam asks us to seek the woman's opinion so that we do not bring her someone she dislikes, but the one who actually gives her in marriage to this man is her guardian because he has rational, social and moral standards which the girl might not consider. She might be swept away by the suitor's fine appearance, handsomeness and smooth speech, but once we come to the matter of the motions of life and its endurance, she might find that he is not right for her.

In order that the matter combines the emotion of the girl, the reason of the father and the experience of the mother, the girl must be consulted, and the father must seek the opinion of the mother; and every marriage which takes place in this way, will have the opportunity to be blessed with success because all the standards will have been involved so that no standard is left out. The father bases his verdict on the agreement of the daughter; if the girl refuses – even if the standards of the father are all met, but the girl does not accept this man, the marriage should not take place.

Many marriages have failed because we did not find those who implemented God's way of entering matrimony; and then, when God's way of entering matrimony is not implemented, and they are met with failure, they cry out for the rulings of Islam to save them. We say to them: Did you enter the matrimony according to God's religion? Since you entered matrimony according to your own opinions, which were not in line with the way of God, then, solve the problem with your own opinions, too. The religion is only responsible for those who begin with its standards; but if you enter matrimony according to other than God's standards, and then, you want God, or those who adhere to God's command, to solve your problems for you, you thereby wrong yourself and those who adhere to God's command. If these problems did not occur, we would accuse the way of God, and we would say, 'Look, we have left the way of God, and yet lived happily!' Therefore it was necessary that such problems occur.

So, the words of the True Lord the Most High ‘And do not marry idolatresses until they believe….’ refer to a matter which had a specific cause, but their lesson lies in their general application, not their specific cause. The cause for the revelation of these words is that there was a Companion of the Prophet named Marthad ibn Abu Marthad Al-Ghanawi, who was sent by the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him to Mecca to bring some Muslims out of it. He had been in love with a woman before Islam named ‘Inaq, and she also loved him, and when she saw him, she wanted to be alone with him, so, he said to her, ‘Woe to you, Islam has come between us!’ She replied, ‘Marry me,’ so, he said to her, ‘I shall marry you, but only after I seek the leave and permission of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him.’ When he asked him, the words of God the Most High were revealed: ‘And do not marry idolatresses until they believe, and a believing slave woman is better than an idolatress, even though she might please you….’

It is also said that God’s words ‘…and a believing slave woman is better than an idolatress, even though she might please you…’ were revealed about Khansa’,(1) a black slave-girl of Hudhayfa ibn Al-Yaman to whom Hudhayfa said, ‘O Khansa’, you are remembered in the Highest Assembly despite your blackness and ugliness, and God has made mention of you in His Book,’ and he set her free and married her.

The True Lord the Most High then says, ‘…And do not marry idolatrous men [to your women] until they believe, and a believing slave is better than an idolater, even though he might please you….’ The standards are the same when it comes to choosing a life partner; it is the desire to build a family life on good foundations. The goal of anything is what determines its value, and it is not the means which determine something’s value; you might travel on a dangerous road, but its destination is good, or you might travel on a road carpeted with flowers and fragrant plants, but its destination is evil. For this reason, the True Lord the Most High says, ‘…Those invite to the Fire, but God invites to paradise and to pardon, by His permission. And He makes clear His verses to the people that they may remember.’ Those who invite to the fire are the people of idolatry; as for God, He invites people to paradise, and forgiveness comes by His permission, that is by His facilitation and His conferral of success. We all know the aphorism spoken by Imam 'Ali God be pleased with him: ‘There is no good in a good which is followed by Hell, and there is no evil in an evil which is followed by paradise.’

(1) The name Khansa’ means a woman with a low-bridged nose with slightly wide sides (a pug-nose).

God’s words ‘…that they may remember’ are repeated often; what does this remembering achieve? To remember something makes you feel that the matter was known to you, but heedlessness veiled it. If you become aware of your heedlessness, it reminds you of what you had forgotten before; but if the heedlessness stretches on and the principle is forgotten, this is the real disaster which consigns the matter to oblivion.

So remembering involves several stages: the first stage is that you come to know if you had not known, or you learn if you had been ignorant. The second stage is that you remember if you have forgotten, or you make an accord between what you know and what you do. Remembering tells you to make an accord between your knowledge and your behaviour so that you do not fall into ignorance; and ignorance means that you ‘know’ something which contradicts the truth. God wanted to safeguard the person who chose faith when He forbade him from marrying a woman of the people of idolatry.

The True Lord the Most High wants to secure for the one whom He made His vicegerent on earth a single doctrine from which would issue human conduct; for if doctrines multiply according to caprices, then ways of conduct will also multiply according to caprices; and when ways of conduct are manifold, the motions of life conflict instead of converging.

So, the True Lord the Most High wants to secure the unity of doctrine which is immune to any outside influence; this is why He specified for the laying of the first brick of the family that a believer cannot marry an idolatress because in this situation the idolatress will undertake the raising of the child for a long period of time which, as we said, is the longest infancy of any living being. If the father is a believer and the mother is an idolater, the father will be busy with work so that many values which contradict sound faith will take root at the hand of the mother.

The True Lord the Most High also does not want the believing woman to marry an idolater because if she marries an idolater, she will go to live with him and his idolatrous environment and his family, and her child will grow up in an environment of idolatry so that values that contradict sound faith will take root in him. The True Lord the Most High wants by this protection, i.e. by believers not marrying idolaters of either sex, to protect the first stage of infancy; and when the first stage of infancy is protected, the first spring from which comes the doctrinal education of the infant, will be a united spring, and he will not swing to and fro between different doctrines. This is why the True Lord the Most High says, 'And do not marry idolatresses until they believe, and a believing slave woman is better than an idolatress, even though she might please you. And do not marry idolatrous men [to your women] until they believe, and a believing slave is better than an idolater, even though he might please you. Those invite to the fire, but God invites to paradise and to pardon, by His permission. And He makes clear His verses to the people that they may remember.'

All of this is in order that the True Lord the Most High can conserve the environment in which the new-born child grows up. We must understand that the True Lord the Most High gave male believers a dispensation to marry women of the people of the Book when He addressed the believers saying that all the good things of life have been made lawful to them. And the food of those who have been given revelation before is lawful to them, and their food is likewise lawful to them. And lawful in wedlock to them are women from among the believers and women from among those who have been given revelation before their time – provided that they give them their dowers, taking them in honest wedlock, not in fornication, nor as secret love-companions. But as for him who rejects belief – in vain will be all his works: for in the life to come, he shall be among the lost (al-Ma'ida: 5).

Scholars have taken two positions regarding the dispensation given by the True Lord the Most High to male believers allowing them to marry women from the people of the Book: the first position is that it is forbidden because some of the scholars are of the opinion that the people of the Book have deviated from their beliefs to the extent that they are in idolatry; for is there anything more idolatrous than to ascribe divinity to a human being? The second position is that some scholars have allowed one to marry a woman from the people of the Book, and he must ask her whether she believes in the divinity of a human being, or she believes solely in God, the One, the All-Dominant. If it is only a matter of differing about the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him, it is not so serious; yet, if she believes in the divinity of a human being alongside God, she has entered into idolatry, and the believer must be cautious.

If the man has authority and he can marry a woman of the people of the Book, he usually takes her into his environment so that the influencing environment will be one; and the fact that authority is the father's, alongside the family's presence in an environment of faith, will affect and lessen the influence of the mother from the people of the Book on her children. Yet, since one should be aware that there are ways which entice and draw one subtly towards idolatry, it is better for the believing man to avoid all this and seek to fortify and protect himself by marrying a Muslim woman.

When the True Lord the Most High protects the first stage of infancy, He wants the infant to avoid being instilled with division, discord and conflicting dispositions. When we make sure that a child lives and grows up in an affectionate environment, he will grow up as a balanced child, and Islam wants to preserve the balance of this child. Some people pose the question: 'Why don't we make communal nurseries for raising children?' It is as though, they want to solve the problem by this means.

We say to them: The problem was not solved by those who did this before us, which is why when we read their books such as Children Without Families, we find that their infancies were torturous. Why should we go so far? When we look into the way they raise children communally in Israel, scientific studies confirm that the children live in terrible misery to the extent that they suffer from widespread incontinence until they are young adults.

How can it escape our notice that until a child reaches the age of two or more, it does not want to share its mother with anyone; even if it has siblings, it is jealous of them? So what about a whole group of children who are raised by a woman who is not their mother? The affection of a hundred carers does not amount to the affection of a mother, for all the carers combined, do not have the heart of the mother who bore the child. The affection which a mother gives is not superficial or professional affection, but it is a natural part of life which God created to give it in the right way. This is why the child must be given a period of time in which he thinks that the mother who bore him is for him alone, and no one can share her with him, even his own siblings. And when the time comes for him to leave the cradle and go out into the street to encounter the work of life, and he finds that those who work are men, and fathers of children like him, he loves after this to be ascribed to a father who has a clear role in the outer society.

One of the constituents of a child's development is that he feels he has a mother whom no one else shares with him, and that he has a father whom no one else shares with him; and if anyone shares them with him, they are his siblings, who are all included and covered by the affection of the mother and the care of the father. Those who know the science of child-rearing affirm that a child's need for its mother is an important and crucial need for child-rearing for the first two years and few months, and when the True Lord the Most High revealed to His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him fourteen centuries ago these wise and true words, He showed this fact as plainly and clearly as can be. God addresses man in general saying that He has enjoined upon him goodness towards his parents: in pain did his mother bear him, and in pain did she give him birth; and her bearing him and his utter dependence on her took thirty months. And so when he attains to full maturity and reaches forty years, the righteous person prays to his Lord to enable him to be grateful for those blessings of God with which He has graced him and his parents, and that he may do what is right that will meet with God's acceptance, and grant him righteousness in his offspring. Indeed, to God he turns in repentance, and, assuredly, he is of those who have submitted themselves to God (al-Ahqaf: 15).

The mother is the child's natural carer, as the True Lord intended it. So the True Lord wants to protect the first brick of the formation of society, the family, in the doctrinal structure, from being influenced by idolatry; and He wants to preserve a sound structure for the family.

After this, the True Lord the Most High deals with the issue of relations with a woman during menstruation; and legislation is given to regulate this matter since when Islam came there were two social attitudes in this regard:

One was to see a menstruating woman as suffering from contamination, which meant that her husband could not eat with her, or stay with her, or be intimate with her, or live with her in one house, and the same went for his sons. The other attitude was to see a menstruating woman as just an ordinary woman no different from a non-menstruating woman, that is, able to live her married life with her husband without any caution or reservations. The situation, then, was between one extreme and another, and Islam came to put a limit to this issue. The True Lord the Most High says:

وَيَسْـَٔلُونَكَ عَنِ ٱلْمَحِيضِ ۖ قُلْ هُوَ أَذًى فَٱعْتَزِلُوا۟ ٱلنِّسَآءَ فِى ٱلْمَحِيضِ ۖ
وَلَا تَقْرَبُوهُنَّ حَتَّىٰ يَطْهُرْنَ ۖ فَإِذَا تَطَهَّرْنَ فَأْتُوهُنَّ مِنْ حَيْثُ أَمَرَكُمُ ٱللَّهُ ۚ إِنَّ
ٱللَّهَ يُحِبُّ ٱلتَّوَّٰبِينَ وَيُحِبُّ ٱلْمُتَطَهِّرِينَ ﴿٢٢٢﴾

They ask you [Prophet] about menstruation. Say, ‘Menstruation is a painful condition, so keep away from women during it. Do not approach them until they are cleansed; when they are cleansed, you may approach them as God has ordained. God loves those who turn to Him, and He loves those who keep themselves clean [222]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 222)

When you read, ‘It is harm’, you take the ruling from One Who is trusted to give rulings, and the matter is not up for discussion. No matter what kind of explanations, analyses and causes medicine gives, we say to it: No; the One Who created said ‘It is harm.’ The Arabic word for ‘menstruation’ (mahid) means blood, and can also mean the place of menstruation and the time of it.

The fact that God the Most High says that menstruation is harmful, prepares the mind to receive a ruling about this harm. In this way, the mind prepares for the gravity of the ruling; and the ruling conveyed a warning and a prohibition, after its justification had already been given.

The True Lord the Most High – Who is the Creator – wanted the process of menses for a woman to be a chemical process essential for her life and her fertility, and He commanded men to keep from women whilst they are menstruating because menstruation is harmful for them. But is the blood of menses harmful for men, or women? It is harmful for both men and women because the verse affirms the harm to be general and did not specify who was meant by it. The thing which indicates this is that menses places impurities in a vulnerable place on a man, namely the place where he ejaculates, and if any microbes reach this place, they can infect him with dangerous illnesses.

What happens is that the True Lord the Most High created the woman's womb, and there are in her ovaries a number of egg cells known to Him the Most High Alone, and when one of these eggs detaches without having been fertilised, and the lining of the womb which is made of blood tissues has a low proportion of the hormones that strengthen the lining of the womb, and this proportion of hormones is low, menstruation occurs.

Menstruation is blood containing dead tissues, and the area of the vagina and uterus begins to be agitated because this area is very sensitive to the development of microbes which cause inflammations for the woman, as well as for the man if he has sexual intercourse with his wife during menstruation. Menstruation adversely affects the woman in her strength and her body, which is proved by the fact that God excuses her from fasting and praying. So it is tiring and exhausting for her, and so it is not permissible for a man to disturb her with anything more than she already has to deal with.

God's words 'it is harm' is general, meaning that the harm affects both the man and the woman. After this, the True Lord the Most High explains that the word 'harm' is a situation which requires a ruling to be given concerning it, either with a permission or a prohibition; as long as it is harmful, it will inevitably be a prohibition.

He the Exalted says, '…so keep away from wives during menstruation. And do not approach….' If someone says that mahid here means the place of menses, he bases this on the fact that the thing which is prohibited is sexual intercourse, but that which is above the navel or above the clothing is permissible to touch. This means that God's command '…keep away from wives…' means 'Do not go to them in the place where the harm, i.e. the menses, comes from, '…until they are pure. And when they have purified themselves, then, come to them from where God has ordained for you….' The verb 'they are pure' (yat-hurna) is derived from the noun tuhur meaning 'to be clean'; when we reflect on God's words '…And when they have purified themselves…' we find that He did not say 'and when they are purified'. So what is the difference between 'to be purified' and 'to purify oneself'?

'They are purified' means that their menses has finished, whilst 'they have purified themselves' means they have performed the ritual bath after menstruation; this is why there emerged a difference of opinion between scholars as to whether simply by the menstrual course ending and the blood stopping it becomes permissible for a man to have intercourse with his wife, or whether it is obligatory to wait until the woman purifies herself by bathing.

In order to avoid this difference of opinion, we say that God's words 'they have purified themselves' mean 'they have performed the ritual bath,' so, intercourse cannot take place until they have bathed. One of the wonders of the expressions of the Quran is that the words affect how rulings are derived. An example of this is God's words describing the Quran: It is a truly Honoured Quran, in a well-guarded book which none but the pure shall touch (al-Waqi'a: 77-79).

What does this mean, then? Does it mean that none can touch the Quran save the angels whom God the Most High purified from all impurities, or does it mean that human beings also have the right to touch the written Quran since they purify themselves? Some scholars say that we must include this matter under the general theme of purification which means that 'but the pure' means those who have been purified by He Who ordained purification for them. Because of this, when Muslims perform the ritual bath (ghusl) or the ablution (wudu'), two things have happened to him: self-purification, and purity.

Self-purification occurred with the ritual bath or with ablution whilst the purity was by God's law. Just as God the Most High purified the angels from the outset, He purified us humans by His law; in this way, we can understand the verse in its general sense so that the difference of opinion is removed. The words of the True Lord the Most High in the verse we are currently examining are: '…until they are pure…' that is, until God gives them leave by purifying them, and then, they obey God's law by purifying themselves. Then, God says, '…then come to them from where God has ordained for you…' that is, in those places which are lawful.

Then God says, '…Indeed, God loves those who are constantly repentant and loves those who purify themselves.' The True Lord the Most High wanted to make you feel comfortable, so, just as He asked you to purify yourself physically, He the Most High also accepts for you to purify yourself spiritually by making repentance, which is why he mentioned both the physical and the spiritual aspects of the issue. After this, the True Lord the Most High brought a new ruling, which brought an end to a dubious notion which the Jews had raised.

The Jews used to spread the notion that if a man enters his wife from behind, even in her vagina, the child would be born cross-eyed. The vagina is the proper place for intercourse, so, what is meant here is not anal intercourse – God forbid – such as the people of Lot peace be upon him used to indulge in. Since this dubious notion which the Jews spread had no basis in fact, the True Lord the Most High wanted to refute it, so, He said:

نِسَآؤُكُمۡ حَرۡثٞ لَّكُمۡ فَأۡتُواْ حَرۡثَكُمۡ أَنَّىٰ شِئۡتُمۡۖ وَقَدِّمُواْ لِأَنفُسِكُمۡۚ وَٱتَّقُواْ
ٱللَّهَ وَٱعۡلَمُوٓاْ أَنَّكُم مُّلَٰقُوهُۗ وَبَشِّرِ ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَ ٢٢٣

Your wives are your fields, so go into your fields whichever way you like, and send [something good] ahead for yourselves. Be mindful of God: remember that you will meet Him.' [Prophet], give good news to the believers [223]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 223)

The True Lord the Most High opened the way for a man and wife to enjoy each other in any way, provided that penetration occurs in the place of impregnation. The True Lord the Most High used the word 'tilth' here to show that tilling takes place in the place of planting. God teaches the believers: '…come, then, to your tilth….' What is tilth? Tilth is the place where plants grow; we find the word used in another verse where God the Most High speaks about the hypocrite who goes about striving to '…destroy tilth and progeny…' (al-Baqara: 205).

So, come to your wives in the place of crops, the crop of children; as for the place where no child can grow, do not go near it. Some people incorrectly understand that God's words '…come, then, to your tilth as you may desire…' mean that a woman can be entered in any place; but this is a mistake because

His words ‘Your wives are your tilth…’ mean the place where crops are planted, and the crop of men and women is children, so, enter her in the place where a child can be made, from any direction you wish.

The True Lord the Most High continues: ‘…but first provide something good for your souls…’ that is, be careful not to think that it is only a matter of sexual enjoyment; rather, the True Lord the Most High wants this sexual pleasure to protect the hardships that will come from this pleasure; for the offspring that come as a result of sexual intercourse will bring many hardships and responsibilities, and had God the Most High not linked them to this pleasure, people would have renounced sex.

This is why the True Lord the Most High links between the toil and effort of parents in raising their children with the pleasure of sexual desire to secure the continuation of the human race. Despite this, the True Lord the Most High warns us not to imagine that this sexual pleasure is the main purpose of sexual intercourse, and therefore says, ‘…but first provide something good for your souls…’ that is, be well aware that this matter is not the end, but rather, the means, so, do not confuse the means with the end. ‘…But first provide something good for your souls…’ that is, save for yourselves something which will benefit you in the days ahead.

So, the chief purpose of sexual relations is procreation; ‘…but first provide something good for your souls…’ that is, do not take the passing momentary pleasure as though it is the goal, but rather take it for that which will come in the future. And how can we provide something for our own souls? Or, what should we do? It is in order that we do not suffer on account of the one who will come; and you should be well aware of this matter by providing something for your soul which will give you ease, and do that which the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him taught us: When you come to this blessing and approach your wife, you must mention God’s name and say, ‘O God, keep Satan away from me, and keep Satan away from that which You grant me.’ Then, when a Muslim goes to his wife and conceives a child, Satan will have no way of getting to it. Some scholars say that the child will not be vulnerable to the influence of sorcery. Why is all this? It is because when you plant, i.e. conceive, you remember that the real planter was God the Most High.

As long as you recognise the Creator and planter, you give your child eternal protection. On the contrary, a child, whose father forgot to mention God when he went to his wife, will fall prey to demons.

'…But first provide something good for your souls…' that is, provide for them that which will give you ease, and extend your lives and your works in life; for when you approach the matter with the intention of conceiving a child, and you remember God and seek refuge from Satan, the Creator will bless you with a good child who will pray for you, and teach his own children to pray for you, and his grandchildren will pray for you, and this will continue so that your action does not end until the end of time; and in this way you will have provided for your soul the best thing that could be provided.

Suppose that you are blessed with a child and then he dies; you grieve for him and anticipate recompense and remuneration for him from God; you will have sent him ahead of you to close one of the doors of hell for you. For this reason, in every situation you must remember: '…but first provide something good for your souls….' And the True Lord the Most High says, '…and fear God, and know that you will meet Him. And give glad tidings to the believers.' The meaning of 'fear God' is: Beware of incurring your Lord's wrath in any of these actions; and be, o Muslim, with this fear, completely certain that you will meet God, and never doubt in this meeting. As long as you will be conscious of God and certain you will meet Him, you will not need to do more than rejoice in glad tidings of paradise.

After this, the True Lord the Most High says:

وَلَا تَجْعَلُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ عُرْضَةً لِّأَيْمَٰنِكُمْ أَن تَبَرُّوا۟ وَتَتَّقُوا۟
وَتُصْلِحُوا۟ بَيْنَ ٱلنَّاسِ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ سَمِيعٌ عَلِيمٌ ﴿٢٢٤﴾

[Believers], do not allow your oaths in God's name to hinder you from doing good, being mindful of God and making peace between people. God hears and knows everything [224]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 224)

The verse encompasses three things: firstly, virtuous deeds, and one might hate virtue because it is difficult for the soul; secondly, God-fearing, that is keeping away from evil, and God-fearing is also difficult sometimes; and thirdly, making peace between people, that is reconciling quarrelling parties, though making peace between men might be strenuous – and all this is after you refrain from allowing your oaths in the name of God to become an obstacle to this.

The True Lord the Most High says, ‘And do not make [your oath by] God an obstacle….’ An obstacle (‘urda) is a barrier which comes between two things, and the word (‘urda) also means ‘suitable’, as when you say ‘So-and-so is suitable for any task.’ An obstacle, as we said, is something which comes between two things, as when one puts his hand over his eyes so he cannot see the light; in this case the hand is an ‘obstacle’ between the person’s eyes and the sun, and he shields his eyes from the light in this way.

It is as though the True Lord the Most High were saying: I do not want oaths by Me to be an obstacle between a person and his good deeds, virtue and keeping away from evil. When someone asks you to be kind to someone who treated you badly, you might say, ‘I swore not to treat this person kindly.’ By doing this, you make your oath in God’s name a barrier between yourself and virtue.

In saying this, the True Lord the Most High wants to alert us to the fact that it is not permissible for oaths sworn in His name to prevent virtue, the maintenance of family ties, or promoting peace between men. If someone makes an oath to do something and then, sees that another course of action is better, let him do what is best and expiate his oath. Why? Because when the believer makes an oath not to do something good, he is making God a barrier between himself and goodness, and in this way the believer contradicts himself by making the barrier an oath in God’s name. God is the One Who commanded virtue, God-fearing, and promoting peace between men, this is why the True Lord the Most High says, ‘And do not make [your oath by] God an obstacle….’ That is, the True Lord the Most High wants to protect acts of virtue, God-fearing, and promoting peace between men.

If you make an oath, o believer, not to do these deeds, the True Lord the Most High wants you to break this oath and to do acts of virtue, piety, and the promotion of peace between men so that you do not contradict God’s Law. If we find that everyone in society has acted with virtue, and every person has steered clear of sin, and everyone who sees a dispute between two parties acts to resolve this dispute, is this not entering wholly into Islam? So, the True Lord the Most High wants the means of goodness to remain open to the people, and for them not to bar themselves from them.

The True Lord the Most High is the One who commands that the believer not make oaths a barrier between himself and goodness, or between himself and piety, or between himself and the promotion of peace between men. Islam is lenient in the matter of breaking oaths for the sake of virtue, and the pious predecessors used to say, 'There is no oath-breaking better than that which is for the sake of virtue.' So, when society is filled with acts of virtue, God-fearing, and the promotion of peace between adversaries, it will live up to God's words: '…enter into Islam completely…' (al-Baqara: 208).

A person might use any kind of excuse to avoid having to do virtuous deeds, keeping away from evil, and the promotion of peace between men, and might even do something which excuses him and makes it seem as though he is acting in obedience to God's command. Let us give as an example of this in what happened with our master Abu Bakr As-Siddiq God be pleased with him, when Mistah ibn Athatha joined in with those who accused the Mother of the Believers, the Lady Aisha God be pleased with her of the false charge.

The gist of the matter is that 'Aisha God be pleased with her, the wife of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him, went out with the Noble Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to the battle of Banu Al-Mustaliq which was after the time when the command for women to veil themselves had been given, so 'Aisha God be pleased with her went in a howdah.

The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him finished the battle, and the time came to return home, but 'Aisha God be pleased with her found a necklace of hers was missing; and she was very light because there was not much food at that time. 'Aisha God be pleased with her went to search for her missing necklace, and when they picked up her howdah, they did not notice that she was not inside it. 'Aisha God be pleased with her found the missing necklace, but the army was far ahead of her. She expected that they would miss her and come back for her; and behind the army came Safwan ibn Al-Mu'attal As-Salami. 'Aisha God be pleased with her recognised him, and he made his camel kneel down for her, and ‘Aisha God be pleased with her returned to Medina. The gossip of the false charge spread around by efforts of ‘Abdullah ibn Ubayy ibn Saloul, the chief of the hypocrites.

Distress and sorrow afflicted the Lady ‘Aisha God be pleased with her for a long time, and then, the True Lord the Most High announced the falsity of this rumour. So a rumour had spread about the Mother of the Believers ‘Aisha God be pleased with her, who was the wife of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him and the daughter of Abu Bakr. Abu Bakr God be pleased with him was the faithful friend of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him, and even if what happened to ‘Aisha God be pleased with her had happened to anyone else, the position of Abu Bakr God be pleased with him would have been the same when his relative Mistah ibn Athatha joined in the spreading of the false charge with the others who did so, and then God the Most High absolved ‘Aisha God be pleased with her and revealed the words which declared the Mother of the Believers God be pleased with her free from this false charge. Abu Bakr God be pleased with him used to give Mistah an allowance, and after that incident, he cut him off and said, ‘By God, I will never spend on him again!’ Why? This was because he had shared in the spreading of the false charge. On the surface, this seemed to be the right thing to do since Mistah ibn Athatha had indulged in spreading the false charge; but look at the standards of perfection, beauty and virtue which God wants us to have: The True Lord the Most High showed that this was one way, but there was also another more favourable way, in instructing those of the believers who have been graced with God’s favour and ease of life never to vow to stop helping their near of kin, the needy and those who emigrated from their land in the Way of God, but let them pardon and forbear. Then God puts forth to them the question: Do they not desire that God forgive their sins? God is All-Forgiving, All-Merciful (an-Nur: 22).

If you like God the Most High to forgive you, will you not forgive the one who does you wrong? Since you want God to forgive you, forgive other people for their mistakes. The True Lord the Most High said this to Abu Bakr God be pleased with him because he took a stance with someone who indulged in spreading the false charge with the others who did so, yet, He told him that this was not right.

God the Most High says, ‘And do not make [your oath by] God an obstacle for not doing virtuous deeds and keeping away from evil….’ Do not say, ‘I swore an oath by God that I would not do that good deed;’ rather, do it, and God will be pleased for you to break your oath and atone for it.

‘And do not make [your oath by] God an obstacle for not doing virtuous deeds and keeping away from evil and making peace among people; and God is All-Hearing, All Knowing.’ God the Most High is telling us: I do not want you to make your oaths in My name an obstacle, i.e. a barrier or an impediment against doing good. For example, if you are asked to be kind to a person who has ill-treated you, do not say, ‘I swore an oath not to treat him kindly because he does not deserve it;’ in this case, you will have made an oath by God a barrier to virtue. It is as though the True Lord the Most High wants to say to you: No; I will excuse this oath in My name; if you swear an oath not to act with virtue, God-fearing, and promoting peace between rivals, I will excuse this oath.

The Hadith says: ‘If someone swears an oath, and then sees that another course of action is better, let him do what is best and atone for his oath.’(1) In this way, God the Most High protects acts of virtue, piety and promoting peace between men even if you have sworn an oath by God not to do them. Why? Because when you swear an oath by God not to do them, and you make God the Most High the impediment to them, you contradict the Sacred Law itself, for God commands virtue, promoting peace, and piety; so, do not make a human oath an impediment to following the way of the Lord of men.

‘And do not make [your oath by] God an obstacle for not doing virtuous deeds and keeping away from evil and making peace among people….’ If you make an oath to refrain from doing something which is obligatory, it is obligatory for you to take back the oath, break it, and atone for it. The same ruling applies to the one who prevents people from benefiting from his property such as his horse or mule, or machinery, or car under the pretence that he has sworn an oath not to loan them out, which happens a lot in the countryside.

The True Lord the Most High concludes the verse by saying, ‘…and God is All-Hearing, All-Knowing.’ He the Exalted hears the oath you swear, and He knows whether your intention was good or evil; so, do not make your oath an excuse for preventing virtue, piety and promoting peace. When the True Lord the Most High speaks about oaths, He makes one of the basics for judging an oath whether it was made sincerely or thoughtlessly; and out of His mercy, God only gives weight to oaths which are made from the heart, that is, those oaths which the one who makes them truly intends not to break; as for oaths made rashly and thoughtlessly, God excuses them.

(1) Narrated by Imam Muslim, At-Tirmidhi, and Imam Ahmad in his Musnad on the authority of Abu Hurayra God be pleased with him

Take, for example, the oaths which slip from people's tongues, such as when they say, 'By God, if you had not done that, I would have done such-and-such with you,' or 'By God, I will visit you', or 'By God, I did not mean that', or oaths which are based on supposition such as when you swear saying, 'By God, such-and-such happened' when you are not completely certain that it happened, but you do not mean to lie.

As for a false oath, it is an oath and a vow which you know to be a lie so that you swear the opposite of what you know, such as, when you see someone stealing or murdering and you swear by God that he did not steal or murder. Because of all this, God the Most High passed final judgement on this matter by saying:

لَّا يُؤَاخِذُكُمُ ٱللَّهُ بِٱللَّغْوِ فِىٓ أَيْمَٰنِكُمْ وَلَٰكِن يُؤَاخِذُكُم بِمَا
كَسَبَتْ قُلُوبُكُمْ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ غَفُورٌ حَلِيمٌ ﴿٢٢٥﴾

He will not call you to account for oaths you have uttered unintentionally, but He will call you to account for what you mean in your hearts. God is most forgiving and forbearing [225]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 225)

It was appropriate for this verse to come after all that came before it because He the Exalted clarified for us the oath which does not count, as though He were saying of it: Go back on it, and break it, and I will accept your going back on it if in return you act with virtue and God-fearing and promote peace between men. If He accepted that we go back on these kinds of oaths, it is because they are replaced by doing good deeds. God's words '…what your hearts have earned…' means exactly the same as what He said elsewhere: '…But He will impose blame on you for oaths which you have sworn in earnest…' (al-Ma'ida: 89).

That is that which is tied fast in the soul, and which is firm in your soul; but God does not impose blame on oaths that runs off the lips. 'God does not impose blame upon you for what is unintentional in your oaths….' The word 'oaths' (ayman) is the plural of yamin. It means an oath or a vow. It was called yamin because in the past, when they swore oaths, they would each place their right (yamin) hand on the hand of the other as the right hand is the limb of action.

A propos of which, do not think that the active limb acts because of training and practice; it only acts by its creation, i.e. by the way God the Most High created it, and it is compelled to act according to its created nature.

This is why you may find someone whose right hand does not function and who uses his left hand instead. Do not try to make him use his right hand instead of his left because your efforts will be in vain and come to nothing; for the reason he uses his left hand instead of his right is because of how he was created; it is the part of the brain which controls movement that decides this. If it is created on the right side of the brain, the left hand will be the active one; if it is created on the left side of the brain, the right hand will be the one which works.

This is why you sometimes find that the one who writes with the left hand has better handwriting than the one who writes with the right hand. Because of this, we say that it is wrong to try and change the way of someone who uses his left hand and not his right since this is futile and will not be fruitful.

Sometimes you find that the part of the brain that controls movement is in the dead centre of the brain, in which case the left and right hands will both work with equal competency; this is why we find some people who can write with their left and right hands equally swiftly and well, and can use them both spontaneously and naturally. God the Most High has many ways of creating, and He shows us that He is not governed by any rules; He is capable of making the right hand work, and capable of making the left hand work, and capable of making both hands work equally well, or to make neither hand able to work. It is not something mechanical which is outside God's Will, but rather, everything is subject to His Will.

‘God does not impose blame upon you for what is unintentional in your oaths….’ Another word for oath in Arabic is half, which also means ‘consolidation’; it is derived from the word hilf, which means for people to join together for a certain task. When we come together to do something, we share the work between us, and when we do this, it becomes easier for all of us to do it.

‘God does not impose blame upon you for what is unintentional in your oaths, but He imposes blame upon you for what your hearts have earned. And God is Forgiving and Forbearing.’ Earning is a deliberate act; and when you swear by God unintentionally, He does not take you to task for it, which shows that God the Most High is ‘…Forgiving and Forbearing.’

The True Lord the Most High then says:

لِّلَّذِينَ يُؤْلُونَ مِن نِّسَآئِهِمْ تَرَبُّصُ أَرْبَعَةِ أَشْهُرٍۖ فَإِن فَآءُو فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ غَفُورٌ رَّحِيمٌ ٢٢٦

For those who swear that they will not approach their wives, there shall be a waiting period of four months: if they go back, remember God will be most forgiving and merciful [226]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 226)

Sometimes, some men ‘…swear not to have sexual relations with their wives….’ This is because a man sometimes feels he needs to discipline his wife, and he sleeps apart from her without making any vow or oath. Some men do not have enough will power to keep away from their wives, so, they take oaths not to approach them so that the oath will be a barrier for them, and an encouragement to be firm in doing this. This was part of the custom of the Arabs before Islam.

A man would refrain from sleeping with his wife for any length of time he wanted, and some of them would vow not to approach his wife for a specific period of time, and before this time ended, they would make another vow to extend the period of time again; this continued until the practice became a way of debasing one’s wife and frustrating her, and refusing to grant her marital rights; and this was a denial of the wife’s right to enjoy her husband.

The True Lord the Most High wanted to put an end to this practice; and He did not end it in order to favour one side over the other, but rather with the justice of the All-Wise Creator, the Dispenser of Mercy to His creatures. It was possible for Him to ban it and prohibit it completely, and forbid people from doing it, but He the Exalted knows the hidden aspects and nature of the human soul: a woman might see that she can take advantage of her husband being attracted to her, either because of her beauty or his passion, and try to degrade him by means of this; therefore God gave the man the right to abstain from his wife for up to four months; as for longer than this, a woman cannot bear for her husband to abstain from her so long.

'For those who swear not to have sexual relations with their wives is a waiting time of four months, but if they return [to normal relations] - then indeed, God is Forgiving, Merciful.' Islam wants married life to be based on a realistic foundation, not on biased and partial notions which do not confirm to reality; it recognises inclinations, and does not do away with them, but rather elevates them; and it recognises instincts, and does not suppress them, but rather regulates them.

There is a difference between regulation and repression: repression gives the opportunity for the disease to worsen surreptitiously until it explodes in the tendencies of the human soul in an abnormal way with no caution; but regulation recognises instincts and inclinations, and only tries to guide them, not do away with them. Mankind submit to this principle in all of their actions, even their manufacture: for example, those who produce steam boilers, put vents in these boilers in which gas might build up pressure which will cause them to explode –so that if there is excess pressure, it can be released; and they might design an automatic system within them that works without human interference so that the machine controls itself.

The True Lord the Most High placed a clear ordered system in His creatures whom He created, and He established for them the family structure on sound foundations. Islam builds this system firstly on the soundness, purity, and oneness of doctrine so that there would not be a multitude of influences on the family's components, and therefore it forbade Muslim men marrying idolatresses, and forbade Muslim women marrying idolaters. After this, it taught us the meaning of the instinctive union of a married couple; and the True Lord the Most High did not want to give free rein to instincts at all times of married life, so He made menstruation a time in which sexual intercourse is forbidden, saying, '…do not approach them until they are pure' (al-Baqara: 222). This way, the True Lord the Most High regulated sexual relations between the married couple in a sound and pure way.

The True Lord the Most High knows that the human soul is subject to vicissitudes because man is temporal, and has a beginning and an end, and everything which is temporal must undergo change. If a man meets with a woman, this meeting must be done in the light of the way of God because if the meeting takes place according to the way of men and their emotions, it will end in failure for the ways of men are changing and ephemeral; and this is why the meeting of man and woman must take place according to God's standards.

God the Most High knows that the soul has inclinations and variables, and it is very possible that differences might occur between a married couple, which is why God the Most High makes breathing spaces in which the husband can resort to discipline which creates refinement and preservation; and therefore, He allowed man, if he sees that his wife is degrading him with her beauty and attractiveness, and the man might have a particular disposition and desire for such things – God allowed him a period of time in which he may take an oath not to approach his wife. God the Most High did not make this period of time free for the man to decide, but rather, He restricted it to this particular oath in order that the matter be properly regulated.

The True Lord the Most High wants healing, not cruelty. Were the man not regulated with an oath, he might change his mind and go to his wife, which is why the True Lord the Most High said, 'For those who swear not to have sexual relations with their wives is a waiting time of four months….' That is, you are allowed, o husband, to vow not to approach your wife for four months; but if the period extends over four months, it will not be discipline, but rather abuse; and the Creator the Most High wants discipline, not abuse. If this period is exceeded, the husband will thereby have transgressed, and will have no right to do so.

The True Lord the Most High is the One Who created inclinations, emotions and instincts, and made sound laws for them; and He the Exalted leaves for us things which indicates this. During the caliphate of 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab

God be pleased with him, ‘Umar was once walking in the dead of night when he heard a woman saying the famous lines of verse:

This night is long and dark,
And keeps me awake with no companion to play with,
And by God, were it not that God’s punishment is fearsome,
The sides of this bed would be shaken off.

This means that the woman – whose husband was away in war – was suffering from a longing for her husband, and this suffering was almost enough to make her act improperly, but her fear of God the Most High prevented her from going astray. We might well ask how it was possible for ‘Umar God be pleased with him to hear this woman whilst he was walking in the street. I say that the woman who feels this way sings in the stillness of the night, and when the night is still and there is no clamour, it is easy to hear what is being said within houses. Did ‘Umar God be pleased with him not hear the words of the woman who argued with her daughter about adulterating milk?

When ‘Umar God be pleased with him heard the words of this woman who was suffering from longing for her husband, he went, with his sound disposition and acute awareness, to his daughter Hafsa, the Mother of the Believers God be pleased with her, and said to her, ‘How long can a woman go without her husband?’ She replied, ‘Between four and six months.’

Upon this, ‘Umar(1) God be pleased with him established a practice which became a law thereafter, which is that no Muslim soldier should have to be separated from his wife for longer than four months. So the words of the True Lord the Most High ‘For those who swear not to have sexual relations with their wives is a waiting time of four months…’ came before this incident involving ‘Umar God be pleased with him, after which the True Lord the Most High left it for the reality of life to show us the truth of what He had legislated for us, and ‘Umar God be pleased with him came to derive this ruling from the reality of life.

(1) One of the names of ‘Umar ibn Al-Khaṭab God be pleased with him was Al-Farouk, which means ‘the one who separates’ in Arabic. He was named so because he was always clear about truth from falsehood and was strong in standing for what is right.

Then God says, ‘…but if they return [to normal relations]…’ that is, if the man returns and wants to approach his wife before the four months have passed, he can atone for his oath, and that is that. But if the four months pass and the estrangement continues past its bounds, the man is commanded either to go back on his oath, or else to divorce his wife; and if the husband refuses to do so, the judge will force the divorce. Some jurists say that if the four months pass without the man going back, this counts as one finalised pronouncement of divorce. Therefore, the True Lord the Most High says:

وَإِنۡ عَزَمُواْ ٱلطَّلَٰقَ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ سَمِيعٌ عَلِيمٞ ﴿٢٢٧﴾

but if they are determined to divorce, remember that God hears and knows all [227]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 227)

Scholars differ as to whether in this case, the wife is divorced with a finalised or non-finalised divorce. The meaning of a ‘non-finalised’ (raj‘i) is, as the Arabic name suggests, that the husband has the right to take back (raja‘a) his wife without her consent or permission; but as for finalised divorce, it means that he cannot take her back without making a new marriage contract and paying her a new dowry.

Divorce which comes from the four-month abstinence is a lesser separation, which requires a new marriage contract and dowry provided that it has not been preceded by two pronouncements of divorce. The greater separation, known as the triple divorce, is when a wife has been pronounced as divorced three times, in which case her husband cannot take her back unless she marries someone else and lives a proper married life with him, and then, he divorces her for whatever reason. After that, her old husband has the right to take her back with a new marriage contract and dowry, but only after he has endured the harsh jealousy of seeing her wife of another man. The True Lord the Most High presents this matter by saying, ‘For those who swear not to have sexual relations with their wives is a waiting time of four months, but if they return [to normal relations] - then indeed, God is Forgiving, Merciful. But if they are resolved on divorce, indeed, God is All-Hearing, All Knowing’ (al-Baqara: 226-227)

Islam is a realistic religion which gives the Muslim husband ways to vent his anger and ways to discipline his wife; but Islam does not want a man to persist with this discipline, and if he persists and goes beyond these four months, we say to him: There must be a limit which brings an end to this.

After this, the True Lord the Most High speaks about the rulings of divorce, having previously spoken about marriage and abstinence which leads up to divorce.

When we reflect on Islam's stand concerning divorce, we find that it speaks realistically in a way which suits human inclinations; for as long as we are temporal beings subject to change, circumstances or feelings might affect the life of a married couple which they did not expect when they first married. When a person marries, he might be motivated by the burning of a single disposition, whilst after this, once life's realities come, many other dispositions influence him. The sexual instinct might overpower him and drive him to marry, and in seeking to satisfy his sexual desire, he might ignore the rest of the dispositions of his soul; and once he enters the reality of marriage, and the burning and passion of his instincts subside, his soul becomes aware of different qualities which he wishes to see in his wife, but which he does not find; and he asks himself what it was that hid them from him.

What hid them from him was the passion and fervour of sexual attraction. Before marriage, he looked at the woman from only one perspective, and did not consider any of the others. For example, the husband might find that his wife's character clashes with his own, and he might find that her way of thinking and her cultural attitude clash with his way of thinking and his cultural attitude, and he might find that there is no emotional concord between him and her, and that there is no mutual affection between them; and as we know, emotions have no laws.

It is possible that a man might find himself unable to suffice himself with a single sexual partner, and for this reason, he does not base his life on purity, yet he wants his wife to be pure and chaste in her life with him, whilst he gives himself the freedom to gain sexual experiences with more than one woman; or the opposite might be the case, wherein the man finds that one woman is enough for him, whilst the woman wants more than one man. Or, the man might be pure in his way of life ,whilst his wife wants him to bring her money in any way he can get it so that they differ. Or, the woman might be pure in her way of life so that she is not content that her husband earns money from an unlawful source.

Discord arises from such situations; discord comes when one of the spouses wants their life to be clean, pure and upright whilst the other is not concerned with this. This kind of scenario exists in the reality around us; how many houses suffer when family harmony is lost, and the view of one spouse about things conflicts with that of the other? This is the cause of the discord which arises between spouses when one of them does that which is not sufficient for the other; if a man and woman agree on chastity, purity and goodness, the affairs of their lives will be upright. For this reason, Islam brings its lofty rulings to accommodate all the factors of life, and the True Lord the Most High says:

وَٱلۡمُطَلَّقَٰتُ يَتَرَبَّصۡنَ بِأَنفُسِهِنَّ ثَلَٰثَةَ قُرُوٓءٖۚ وَلَا يَحِلُّ لَهُنَّ أَن يَكۡتُمۡنَ مَا خَلَقَ ٱللَّهُ فِيٓ
أَرۡحَامِهِنَّ إِن كُنَّ يُؤۡمِنَّ بِٱللَّهِ وَٱلۡيَوۡمِ ٱلۡأٓخِرِۚ وَبُعُولَتُهُنَّ أَحَقُّ بِرَدِّهِنَّ فِي ذَٰلِكَ إِنۡ أَرَادُوٓاْ
إِصۡلَٰحٗاۚ وَلَهُنَّ مِثۡلُ ٱلَّذِي عَلَيۡهِنَّ بِٱلۡمَعۡرُوفِۚ وَلِلرِّجَالِ عَلَيۡهِنَّ دَرَجَةٞۗ وَٱللَّهُ عَزِيزٌ حَكِيمٌ ٢٢٨

Divorced women must wait for three monthly periods before remarrying, and, if they really believe in God and the Last Day, it is not lawful for them to conceal what God has created in their wombs: their husbands would do better to take them back during this period, provided they wish to put things right. Wives have [rights] similar to their [obligations], according to what is recognized to be fair, and husbands have a degree [of right] over them: [both should remember that] God is almighty and wise [228] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 228)

The whole verse contains legal rulings on life situations; the first of such rulings is: 'Divorced women remain in waiting for three monthly courses….' We can observe that the ruling is not given in the form of an imperative, but rather as a statement; He says, 'Divorced women remain in waiting for three monthly courses….' When the True Lord the Most High wants to give an obligatory ruling, He does not do so using the human imperative form, but rather, He gives it as a statement, as this is a firmer and more decisive way of giving the ruling. How is this? This means that when the True Lord the Most High gives a command, the command is met by those who believe in Him with obedience, and this obedience applies to all elements so that no condition is excluded from it, and it becomes a fact which is related, not a ruling to be obeyed. As long as it has become a fact which is related, it is as though it has become a narrated history, which is: 'Divorced women remain in waiting for three monthly courses….' It is possible for us to understand the verse according to a different meaning, which is that God the Most High said, 'Divorced women remain in waiting for three monthly courses…', and so these words are a statement.

We said that statements can either be true or false; it is God who said this, and so whoever wants to believe God's words must implement the ruling; and those who wish to challenge God the Most High by denying His words and not believing Him should not implement the ruling, and see in their own selves the sign of the lack of belief, which is manifest failure; is this not more of a coercion than for others? An example of this is God's words that corrupt women are for corrupt men, and corrupt men, for corrupt women – just as good women are for good men, and good men, for good women. These are innocent of all that evil tongues may ascribe to them, forgiveness of sins shall be theirs, and a most excellent sustenance (an-Nur: 26).

Although this is a statement of fact, it is also an issued legislation which might be obeyed or disobeyed; but God the Most High wants from us that the matter be thus: 'corrupt women are for corrupt men,' which means that your Lord wants is to be that 'corrupt women are for corrupt men,' and that 'good women are for good men;' this does not mean that in reality it will inevitably be as the verse says, but rather, reality will be this way if we implement God's instructions, and it will not be the case if we disobey God the Most High and rebel against His law. The same is the case with God's statement that whoever enters the Sacred Mosque is secure (Al-'Imran: 97).

This really means: Make all who enter the Sacred Mosque (Ka'ba) secure;' and it is possible that someone might disobey God and not make the Sacred Mosque (Ka'ba) safe and secure. So God's saying 'Divorced women remain in waiting for three monthly courses….' is a ruling of moral responsibility which merits obedience from all who believe in God. God’s words ‘remain in waiting’ (yatarabbasna) mean that they will wait, and the word used here is completely appropriate to the situation as the woman who waits (mutarabbisa) is the divorced woman, and ‘divorced’ means that she is not wanted, so, she stays and waits until her waiting-period is over, whereupon her esteem returns as she is now able to marry a new husband. The noble verse (in the Arabic original) has also the word bi-anfusihinna (‘by themselves,’ absent in the English rendering) after the term ‘remain in waiting,’ even though the one who waits is the same as the one who is divorced; this is because the mindful, responsible self and the evil-commanding self would be in turmoil all of this time, which is ‘three monthly courses.’ The word quru’ (‘courses’) is the plural of (qar’) which can either mean menstruation or the time of purity in between two menstruations. When the True Lord the Most High says, ‘three monthly courses,’ which of these does He mean? Does it mean the time of menstruation, or purity? The meaning here is purity because He said thalathat (‘three’) in the Arabic numeral form which is used with masculine Arabic nouns, not with feminine nouns, and the Arabic word for a menstrual period (hayda) is feminine, whilst the word for a period of purity (tuhr) is masculine; so ‘three monthly courses’ means three consecutive periods of purity. The reason for this is to make sure that she is not pregnant, as well as to give the couple some time to reconcile; for perhaps after the first or second period of purity one might begin to miss the other, and things might go back to how they were; but once the three periods of purity are over, there is no hope or expectancy of reconciliation.

The True Lord the Most High then says, ‘…and it is not lawful for them to conceal what God has created in their wombs….’ What does creation mean? Creation means to bring into existence something which did not exist, and this thing which did not exist could either be a pregnancy or a menstrual period. The pregnant woman has her own waiting-term, as it is specified in God’s words that those who are with child, the end of their waiting-term shall come when they deliver their burden (at-Talaq: 4).

As for a woman who is not pregnant, her waiting-term is that she menstruates and becomes pure three times. There is also a third situation which concerns such women who are beyond the age of monthly courses, as well as for such who do not have any courses, their waiting-period – if there is any doubt about it – shall be three calendar months (at-Talaq: 4). That is, if a woman's monthly cycle has finished, her waiting-term is 'three calendar months, and the same ruling applies to the one who is too young to have begun menstruating, i.e. her waiting-term is three months. So the system of waiting-terms has several situations:

- If she is not pregnant, her waiting-term is three quru', i.e. three periods of purity, if she has a menstrual cycle.
- If she is pregnant, her waiting-term ends when she gives birth.
- If she is not pregnant and has reached the menopause and so no longer menstruates, or if she is too young to have begun menstruating, in both cases the waiting-term is three months.

God's words '…and it is not lawful for them to conceal what God has created in their wombs…' indicate that a woman testifies to her own condition, and no one else has the right to inspect her, and she is the one who reports the matter herself, declaring whether she is pregnant or not. And she must not conceal this; for she might be pregnant but then, conceal what is in her womb so that she does not have to wait the entire waiting-term for a pregnant woman, and then, marry another man so the child is ascribed to other than his true father; for pregnancies usually last nine months, but there are exceptions to this, and some pregnancies last only seven months, and sometimes only six. A divorced woman might remarry after three months and then claim she is pregnant by the new husband and that her pregnancy has only lasted seven or six months.

Some of us might know the story of the woman whose pregnancy lasted only six months: a woman was brought to 'Uthman God be pleased with him because she had given birth six months after marrying, and he wanted to punish her for adultery, but Imam 'Ali ibn Abu Taleb God be pleased with him intervened saying, 'How can you punish her for fornication for giving birth after six months; have you not read the words of the True Lord the Most High?' Othman God be pleased with him asked, 'And what did the True Lord the Most High say about this?’ Imam 'Ali God be pleased with him recited God’s words stating that divorced mothers may nurse their children for two whole years (al-Baqara: 233). That is, they nurse the child for a period of twenty-four months; and another verse says that a mother bears her child in pain, and in pain she gives him birth; and her bearing him and his utter dependence on her take thirty months (al-Ahqaf: 15). If we take from the first verse twenty-four months, which is the period of weaning, and subtract it from the thirty months which combine pregnancy with weaning in the second verse, we understand that pregnancy could last only six months. Upon this, our master ‘Uthman God be pleased with him said, ‘By God, This did not occur to me!’

So, a six-month pregnancy is possible, and from here we understand the wisdom of God’s words: ‘…and it is not lawful for them to conceal what God has created in their wombs….’ so that a woman cannot claim she is not pregnant and then marry another man and ascribe a child to him who is not his flesh and blood, and more than one problem can arise because of this, including the fact that the child will not inherit from his real father, and his unmarriageable kin will not be forbidden to him so that his half-sister from his true father will not be deemed his sister, and the same for his aunts, and everything will be turned upside-down – and these are only the problems relating to his true father.

As for the case of the second husband, the child will take from him rights which are not lawfully his; he will inherit from him, and the second husband’s unmarriageable kin will become his unmarriageable kin too, so he will be in their company whilst they are uncovered without having the right to do so, and unlawful mixing will take place.

So, God’s words ‘…and it is not lawful for them to conceal what God has created in their wombs…’ is a ruling which the True Lord the Most High wants to be observed so that life can be established on purity, nobility and chastity, and in which no one violates the rights of anyone else. This is with respect to pregnancies, but what about the matter of menstruation?

It is also not lawful for her to conceal her menses in order to make her waiting-term with her husband last longer. The True Lord the Most High says, ‘…if they believe in God and the Last Day….’ What is the relationship between belief and legal rulings? It is a firm relationship because pregnancy, or menstruation is a secret thing which is not governed by public laws, but rather the thing which governs each is the act of faith; for this reason, it is said that 'only the unseen oversees the unseen': as long as something cannot be seen, no one can oversee it except the Most High Unseen Being, God.

The True Lord the Most High then says, '…And their husbands have more right to take them back in this [period]….' The Arabic word ba'l means 'husband', and also means lord, master, and owner. During the waiting-term, the husband has the right to take his wife back. God the Most High says, '…And their husbands have more right to take them back in this [period]….' Does this mean there are others besides the husband who are also entitled to take the wife back, since the True Lord the Most High used the word ahaqq which literally means 'have more right,' which apparently seems to give others besides the husbands the right to take the wives back? No; the meaning is that there is no entitlement for anyone here but the husband. To take the wife back during the waiting-term is the right of the husband, and the wife cannot say no, nor can the guardian of the wife. If the husband wants to take his wife back, and she declines and refuses, his will takes precedence over hers, and he has more right than she does, and he does not have to pay regard to what she says; she does not have a right in this matter since she accepted him in the first place. As for once the waiting-term has passed, the matter is different: there must be a guardian, and a new marriage contract, and a new dowry; and the wife's agreement is essential.

'…And their husbands have more right to take them back in this [period]….' This is if they desire reconciliation, and desire is an unseen feeling. It is as though this is a warning to the couple that the law allows them to reconcile, but if the husband wants to take her back just in order to harm her for his own reasons, the religion says to him: No; you are not entitled to do that; although the law allows him to take her back, God forbids him to do this injustice. It is the right of the husband to take back his wife lawfully for the sake of chastity, integrity and matrimony, not for anything else. However, if he has wicked hidden motives such as to harm her and take vengeance on her, the religion does not allow him to do so.

Legally speaking, the law gives him the right to take her back, and no one can stand in his way, no matter what the motives of his soul might be, but if he has evil intentions behind this, he will carry the burden of sin for his actions. The True Lord the Most High then says, '…And due to the wives is similar to what is expected of them, according to what is reasonable….' That is, the wife has the same rights as the husband; but what are their rights, and what are their responsibilities? The equality here is of sex, and each of them has a right over the other according to their nature. The husband provides the wife with certain services, and the wife provides him with other services in return; for married life is based on shared responsibilities: the man has responsibilities determined by his nature as a male, and the woman has responsibilities determined by her nature as a female. The man is required to work and toil in order to spend, and the woman is required to make for the man a home in which he can take solace from her when he comes home from doing his job in life. This is why God the Most High says that among His signs is that He creates for us mates out of our own kind so that, we find rest with them, and He engenders love and tenderness between us: in this, indeed, there are signs for people who reflect (ar-Rum: 21).

To find rest with something is the opposite of going to work; and 'find rest with them' means that you work all day in order to earn provisions, and then, you go home to find peace with your wife. The man must work, and the woman must make a good home life and pleasant atmosphere for him, with tender and warm relations. The responsibilities are shared fairly: you have rights which are incumbent on the other, and the other has rights which are incumbent on you.

The True Lord the Most High says, '…But the men have a degree over them [in responsibility and authority]….' This is the degree of authority and guardianship. The degree of authority gives us a wider and more comprehensive concept, for every group must have a responsible custodian. Guardianship is responsibility, not supremacy, and he who takes guardianship as a chance to gain supremacy and control has perverted it from its proper purpose, for the basis of guardianship is that it is a responsibility by which the motions of life are organised.

There is no shame for a man to obey the directives of a woman in those things connected with her mission as a woman and in the areas of her service, that is, in women's matters; for just as a man has his area, a woman also has hers. The precedent for which man is raised is that he is more involved in worldly works, and this involvement means that the man has to spend on the woman in accordance with the statement of the True Lord the Most High that men have the degree of guardianship because they are supposed to spend out of their possessions (an-Nisa': 34). So spending is a man's duty and responsibility, and he should know that God the Most High is Mighty, and does not like to see a man degrade a woman whom He created; and God is All-Wise, and able to retaliate for a woman when man understands that his precedence over her is for domination, or if a woman understands that her goodness towards a man is a special favour from her to him; for there should be no degradation in marriage because marriage is based on love and good will.

The True Lord the Most High then says:

ٱلطَّلَٰقُ مَرَّتَانِۖ فَإِمۡسَاكُۢ بِمَعۡرُوفٍ أَوۡ تَسۡرِيحُۢ بِإِحۡسَٰنٖۗ وَلَا يَحِلُّ لَكُمۡ أَن تَأۡخُذُواْ مِمَّآ
ءَاتَيۡتُمُوهُنَّ شَيۡـًٔا إِلَّآ أَن يَخَافَآ أَلَّا يُقِيمَا حُدُودَ ٱللَّهِۖ فَإِنۡ خِفۡتُمۡ أَلَّا يُقِيمَا حُدُودَ ٱللَّهِ فَلَا جُنَاحَ
عَلَيۡهِمَا فِيمَا ٱفۡتَدَتۡ بِهِۦۗ تِلۡكَ حُدُودُ ٱللَّهِ فَلَا تَعۡتَدُوهَاۚ وَمَن يَتَعَدَّ حُدُودَ ٱللَّهِ فَأُوْلَٰٓئِكَ هُمُ ٱلظَّٰلِمُونَ ٢٢٩

Divorce can happen twice, and [each time] wives either be kept on in an acceptable manner or released in a good way. It is not lawful for you to take back anything that you have given [your wives], except where both fear that they cannot maintain [the marriage] within the bounds set by God: if you [arbiters] suspect that the couple may not be able to do this, then there will be no blame on either of them if the woman opts to give something for her release. These are the bounds set by God: do not overstep them. It is those who overstep God's bounds who are doing wrong [229] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 229)

Here, the True Lord the Most High is speaking about divorce, having just spoken about a divorced woman's waiting-term and how she can be returned and taken back. He the Exalted is now speaking about divorce in itself; and the Arabic word for divorce (talaq) is derived from a word meaning to be set free and liberated. It is as though it is the untying of a bond which existed, namely the bond of marriage; and the bond of marriage was made by God the Most High as a solemn bond, and a solemn pledge, as He said that women, in marriage, receive a most solemn pledge from men (an-Nisa': 21).

It is a solemn pledge because it makes the private parts of the spouses lawful for one another; noteworthy here is that God did not describe faith as a solemn pledge, but rather called it only a 'pledge', so, it is as though the pledge of marriage is more solemn than that of faith. The True Lord the Most High wants to instil in people the ability to seek solutions to their problems in the easiest way possible, which is why He allowed for us to untie the bond of marriage; and the end of the bond is not like its beginning: it is not thought-out. The beginning of the marriage was well thought-out, and we began it with consent, acceptance and witnesses, and when you began the thing you did so, after having thought about its demands and conditions. But divorce is different; for a man may not be able to hold back his overwhelming emotions, and he might do it for something trivial or for something which could have been overcome without resorting to divorce. So the True Lord the Most High wants to give people a chance to reflect and deliberate on untying this bond, so, He said, 'Divorce may be [done] twice…', that is, once and then, again. Someone might ask: How can it be twice, when we pronounce it three times? Indeed, a man once asked the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him this question, 'O Messenger of God, God the Most High says, 'Divorce may be [done] twice…', so why did it become thrice?' The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him smiled and said, '…Keep [them] in good fellowship, or release [them] with kindness….' It is as though the meaning of 'Divorce may be [done] twice…' is that you have, in your arena of choice, the ability to divorce a woman twice, whilst the third is not for you. Why? It is because after that, there will be a greater separation, and you will not have the right to take her back, and another man will have rights to this woman: It is God's ruling that after two divorces, the man cannot take his wife back in marriage until she first takes another man for husband (al-Baqara: 230).

And what if a man says to his wife, 'You are thrice divorced,' does this count as one pronouncement of divorce, or three? We say that time is an essential condition of the occurrence of divorce; a man divorces his wife once, then, time passes and he divorces her again as a second divorce, then, time passes again, and then, after this we arrive to the situation referred to in God's words: '…Keep [them] in good fellowship, or release [them] with kindness….' So, the text of this verse is clear and direct in that a threefold divorce with a single statement is not counted as three divorces, but is rather only one divorce. It is true that our master 'Umar God be pleased with him made it count as three divorces; but that was because people had made light of the matter so, he wanted to be hard on them so they would stop abusive practice; but they did not stop it, and because of this we should return to the origin of the law as it came in the Quran, which is: 'Divorce may be [done] twice….'

The wisdom of spreading divorce over three times, and not in one single pronouncement, is that the True Lord the Most High wants to provide the chance to take it back; and the chance to take it back cannot come in a single breath or a single pronouncement. The man who says to his wife, 'You are thrice divorced,' has not taken the chance to search his soul; and if we consider this statement of his as amounting to three divorces, the entire married life will have been destroyed with a single utterance. But the greatness of the law is that the True Lord the Most High spread divorce into separate occasions so a person has a chance to search his soul; for he may have made a mistake the first time so that, he will be more careful the next time and regret what he did. When you find the law spreading out something which may or may not happen, there must be duration of time between each occurrence.

Some loudmouths want to justify to the people the criticisms they make against God's Way, so, they say: 'God the Most High declared that polygamy is not possible when He said to men that it will not be within their power to treat their wives with equal fairness, however much they may desire it (an-Nisa': 129). They say, 'God made fairness a condition of polygamy, and then He decreed that we will not be able to treat our wives fairly however much we may desire it, so, it is as though He changed His mind about the ruling.' This is their logic. We say to them: Finish reading the verse and you will understand its meaning. The True Lord the Most High says that it will not be within our power to treat our wives with equal fairness, however much we may desire it, and then, He adds to this negation, saying that for this reason, we should not allow ourselves to incline totally to one wife and ignore the other (an-Nisa': 129).

Since an exception has been made to the negation, this means that it has been negated, and it is as they say, 'Two negatives make an affirmative.' The ability is still there, and God's words that 'we should not allow ourselves to incline totally' allude to it.

The same is the case here with: 'Divorce may be [done] twice: Keep [them] in good fellowship, or release [them] with kindness….' Since He said '…Keep [them] in good fellowship, or release [them] with kindness…' and said 'Divorce may be [done] twice…' – that is every action has its time – this is appropriate with stages of disciplining and refinement, not with punishment and separation. On the other hand, a single threefold pronouncement of divorce all at once is a single forceful action which is devoid of any disciplining, reconciliation, or refinement. About this matter, the True Lord the Most High says, '…and it is not allowed for you to take back anything of what you have given to them….' This is because the purpose of the dowry is that the husband pays it for the enjoyment of his wife; so, if divorce takes place, it is not lawful for the divorcer to take back any of the dowry he paid; but the True Lord the Most High made an exception to this, saying, '…unless they both fear that they cannot keep within the bounds set up by God. And if you fear that they cannot keep within the bounds of God, no blame shall be on either of them for what the wife shall herself give for her redemption….'

It is as though the True Lord the Most High wanted to give the woman a way out if she is subjected to abuse which she will not accept; so, the True Lord the Most High decrees: If they fear they will not keep to God's bounds, the woman is allowed to release herself with some money; and for this it is disliked to be more than the amount of the dowry she received, unless this is the result of her recalcitrance and disobedience to her husband, in which case it is not blameworthy for more than the dowry to be paid.

Reality came to confirm what God had ordained when the events took place concerning Jamila the sister of 'Abdullah ibn Ubay. When she was married to 'Abdullah ibn Qais, she went to the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him and said, 'I do not accuse him of any shortcoming in his religion or his character, but I do not wish to be faithless in Islam.’ She meant that she lived with him yet, disliked him, which meant she could not fulfil his rights; and this is faithlessness to a partner, i.e. a denial of the rights of the husband and his obedience.

She said that she did not accuse him of any shortcoming in his religion or his character in order to imply that there were other emotional reasons, and the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him wanted to know what these were, so she said, ‘I lifted the curtain and found him in a group of men, and he was the blackest, and the shortest, and the ugliest of them all.’ He peace and blessings be upon him said to her, ‘Will you return his dowry?’ She said, ‘If he wishes, I will give him more besides.’ He peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘We do not need any increase, but return to him his dowry.’

This is called ‘release/redemption’ (khul‘), i.e. for the wife to release herself from her husband if she fears she will not be able to fulfil any of his marital rights. She releases herself from him with money so that he is not harmed, for he may want to marry someone else and need a dowry to offer her. The True Lord the Most High then says, ‘…and it is not allowed for you to take back anything of what you have given to them….’ This is something about which God the Most High, in another verse, says that if a man wished to divorce his wife and marry another woman, and he had given the first wife a heap of gold, he should not take back anything of it (an-Nisa’: 20).

The True Lord the Most High then makes the exception: ‘…unless they both fear that they cannot keep within the bounds set up by God….’ This refers to the two spouses, and after this comes the responsibility of the families and guardians of the spouses and all those who are concerned with their situation: ‘…And if you fear that they cannot keep within the bounds of God, no blame shall be on either of them for what the wife shall herself give for her redemption. These are the bounds of God: so, do not overstep them; for whoever oversteps the bounds of God, they are the unjust.’

God’s bounds are those things which He has legislated for His servants as impassable bounds between the lawful and the unlawful. God’s bounds are either mentioned after prohibitions, or after commands. If they are mentioned after commands, He says, ‘…These are the bounds of God: so, do not overstep them…' that is, they are as far as you can go; so, do not transgress the bound. But when they come after prohibitions, He says, '…these are the limits set up by God, so do not approach them…' (al-Baqara: 187) because the True Lord the Most High wants to prevent the soul from the effect of unlawful things which insist on it to commit them; if you are far from them, it is best to remain distant.

Look carefully at what the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him said, 'The lawful is clear, and the unlawful is clear; and between them are doubtful matters, unknown to many people. And so those who stay clear of doubtful matters thereby free themselves of suspicion regarding their religion and their reputation; and those who fall into doubtful matters, fall into the unlawful, just like a shepherd who tends his flock near the reserved pasture, and is on the brink of entering it. Every king has his own reserved land, and the reserved land of God is all He has prohibited.'(1)

As long as the bounds include God's prohibitions and commands, everything commanded and everything prohibited must remain within the domain of the command of 'do' and the prohibition of 'do not'. If the order of 'do', moves into the domain of 'do not', and that which enters the domain of 'do not', moves to the domain of 'do', the order of the universe will be disrupted; and once the order of the universe has been disrupted, injustice will have occurred, for injustice means to take the right of one man and give it to another. The ruling of divorce is one of God's bounds, and if you try and bring something which is not in line with what God has commanded for the social order, you transfer the commanded into the domain of prohibited, and by doing this you commit injustice.

When the True Lord the Most High treats the issues of society, He treats them in a way which prevents society from falling into illnesses and fatal diseases. Even if we think the best of human beings, and that they legislate for the sake of goodness and benefit, they legislate according to their own knowledge of things, but we cannot be sure that they will not be unaware of things that may happen of which they know nothing. They legislate for those things which they know, and if they legislate for those things they know, and are surprised by things which they did not know, what will the situation be? If they are truly sincere, they will overcome the arrogance of their legislative delusion and say, 'Let us change what we have legislated.' If they remain in their excess, who will suffer? The society will suffer as a result of their obstinacy.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari, Muslim, Abu Dawud, At-Tirmidhi, An-Nasa'i, and Ibn Maja

The True Lord the Most High does not accuse any of mankind of having ill will, but there is a difference between wanting what is good and being unable to do what is good. You legislated according to your ability and your knowledge, and we all know that the misery of experimentation in theoretical social law falls on the society.

We know well that there is a difference between experimental practical science and theoretical capricious speech: Experimental science causes misery for the one who conducts the experiments; the scientist toils and labours in his laboratory, and he is the one who suffers and sacrifices his time, money and health, and lives in a state of distraction from everything, but the experiment he is working on. When he arrives at a discovery, it is society which delights in it. But it is different for theoretical things because it is society which suffers misery on account of the mistakes of human lawmakers, until a lawmaker who sympathises with society, come along to alter the mistake of those who came before him.

As for the True Lord the Most High, He sent us a legislation which protects mankind from misery; for God the Most High leaves us free in the experimental material world: Enter the laboratory, and you will arrive at things which you might agree upon; but beware of differences of caprice. Therefore, God undertook to legislate for those things in which caprices differ in order to ensure that society does not suffer misery because of the mistakes of legislators for a period of time until another legislator comes and alters for the people that which others erred in.

This is why we find in our modern world many issues which have arisen because of caprice, and in which people have clung to their caprices, and then events put pressure on them until they could not merely ignore the problems of their making any more, and they had to confront them; and when they confronted them, they found no solution for them except that which Islam has legislated; and we find that they are in agreement with the laws of Islam.

Some of those who hate Islam say: You say that your religion came to prevail over all other religions, as the Quran says in one place that it is God who has sent forth His Messenger with guidance and the religion of truth to make it prevail over every false religion; and God is sufficient witness (al-Fath: 28). And in another verse the Quran says that the infidels aim to extinguish God's light with their mouths; but God has willed to spread His light in all its fullness, however hateful this may be to the disbelievers. He it is Who has sent forth His Messenger with guidance and the religion of truth to make it prevail over all false religions, however hateful this may be to polytheists (as-Saff: 8-9).

These haters of Islam continue to say: Your Islam has not prevailed over all religions until now since there are millions of people who have not entered Islam. We say to them: Do you think that its prevalence over all religions means that everyone believes in Islam? No; they should have noticed that God the Most High says that it will prevail however hateful this may be to the disbelievers; they should have known that the prevailing of Islam over all religions must be accompanied by the existence of disbelievers who hate it; and as long as Islam exists alongside disbelievers who hate it, it will not have prevailed as a religion; but it will prevail over them, i.e. overwhelm them, as a system to which they will be forced to resort in order to solve the problems of their disbelieving societies, and they will take the systems and laws of Islam whilst hating it; which is why we find them seeking their laws and social reforms from the teachings of Islam.

If it meant that they would take it as a religion, the True Lord the Most High would not have said 'however hateful this may be to the disbelievers' or 'however hateful this may be to polytheists' because if they adopted it as a religion, there would be no haters or idolaters left. But when He the Exalted says, 'however hateful this may be to the disbelievers' and 'however hateful this may be to polytheists,' this means: Be sure, o you who believe in Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and accept Islam as a religion, that the experiences of life will come to show the deniers the truth of your religion, and the truth of God in His legislation for you, and the disbelievers and idolaters will be forced to adopt many of the stances of your Islam and take them as a system to solve their problems, despite their obstinacy and determination to oppose Islam.

We gave an example for this before, of what happened in Italy, in which is located the Vatican, the spiritual centre of the Catholic faith, when they were forced to make a law allowing divorce, and the same thing happened in Spain and other countries. Look at how they turned back on their principles in relation to which they used to criticise Islam! The circumstances of life forced them to legalise divorce with a human law, not a Divine Law. These kinds of events show us how much we should trust our religion, and that the problems of people in lands of disbelief and idolatry cannot be solved without Islam; and if they do not accept it as a religion, they will be forced to accept it as a system.

It is a credit for Islam that they do not accept it as a religion, for if they believed in it, their actions and laws would be an application of Islam by a Muslim people; but if they continue to hate Islam and then accept the principles of the religion, they hate in order to reform their corrupted societies, this is a source of great pride for Muslims. This is the understanding of the words of the True Lord the Most High ‘however hateful this may be to the disbelievers’ and ‘however hateful this may be to polytheists.’ If anyone raises this issue to you, say: It is an honour for Islam that there remain in this world idolaters, and that there remain in this world those disbelievers, and then, they are forced to solve the problems of their societies with Islamic legislations; and Islam is proud that fourteen hundred years ago, it had already arrived at the things which they are still now chasing after all this time.

The True Lord the Most High then says:

فَإِن طَلَّقَهَا فَلَا تَحِلُّ لَهُۥ مِنۢ بَعۡدُ حَتَّىٰ تَنكِحَ زَوۡجًا غَيۡرَهُۥۗ فَإِن طَلَّقَهَا فَلَا جُنَاحَ عَلَيۡهِمَآ أَن
يَتَرَاجَعَآ إِن ظَنَّآ أَن يُقِيمَا حُدُودَ ٱللَّهِۗ وَتِلۡكَ حُدُودُ ٱللَّهِ يُبَيِّنُهَا لِقَوۡمٖ يَعۡلَمُونَ ٢٣٠

If a husband re-divorces his wife after the second divorce, she will not be lawful for him until she has taken another husband; if that one divorces her, there will be no blame if she and the first husband return to one another, provided they feel that they can keep within the bounds set by God. These are God’s bounds, which He makes clear for those who know [230] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 230)

The True Lord the Most High said before that, ‘Divorce may be [done] twice…,’ after which He said, ‘…Keep [them] in good fellowship, or release [them] with kindness….' Here in the verse under discussion, the True Lord the Most High speaks about dissolution, saying, 'And if he has divorced her [for the third time], then she is not lawful to him afterward until she has married a husband other than him….' This is in order to show us that if things between the married couple come to the point of no return, there must be a hard lesson, and they cannot return to one another easily. God the Most High gave them respite with the legislation of the lesser separation which was followed by a new dowry and marriage contract, but they were not deterred, and so there had to be a greater separation where the woman must marry another man and experience another married life; and in this way, the lesson is hard.

Some men might take this matter superficially, marrying a woman who has been divorced three times with a marriage which fulfils all the conditions of a contract, dowry and witnesses, but does not include any sexual contact between them. This is the so-called muhallil (the one who marries a divorced woman only in order to divorce her so she can remarry her first husband) which we hear about, and which Islam does not allow.

The one who marries a woman as a muhallil, and the woman who accepts this, should both know that this is unlawful for both of them. There is no muhallil in Islam, and if someone marries with the intention of being such a muhallil, the wife is not lawful for him, and he has no rights over her, and moreover if he then, divorces her it is not lawful for her to return to her previous husband because the muhallil was not a real husband, but only an actor playing the part of husband; and acting has nothing to do with reality. This is why the True Lord the Most High says, '…she is not lawful to him afterward until she has married a husband other than him….' This means a normal marriage which is instituted in the normal way without any machinations or intention to allow the woman to remarry her previous husband. When this man divorces her because of unintended circumstances which lead to irreconcilable differences, not for pre-arranged reasons, it is possible then, for the previous husband to marry the woman to whom he was previously married and then divorced three times.

'…And if the latter husband divorces her, there is no blame upon the woman and her former husband for returning to each other if they think that they can keep [within] the bounds of God. These are the bounds of God, which He makes clear to people who know.’ That is, if it is deemed likely that the issues which were a cause of conflict before are now finished, and the couple have reached a state of mutual understanding and respect, and they have learned a lesson from the experience which has made each of them content with the other.

After this, the True Lord the Most High says:

وَإِذَا طَلَّقۡتُمُ ٱلنِّسَآءَ فَبَلَغۡنَ أَجَلَهُنَّ فَأَمۡسِكُوهُنَّ بِمَعۡرُوفٍ أَوۡ سَرِّحُوهُنَّ بِمَعۡرُوفٖۚ
وَلَا تُمۡسِكُوهُنَّ ضِرَارٗا لِّتَعۡتَدُواْۚ وَمَن يَفۡعَلۡ ذَٰلِكَ فَقَدۡ ظَلَمَ نَفۡسَهُۥۚ وَلَا تَتَّخِذُوٓاْ
ءَايَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ هُزُوٗاۚ وَٱذۡكُرُواْ نِعۡمَتَ ٱللَّهِ عَلَيۡكُمۡ وَمَآ أَنزَلَ عَلَيۡكُم مِّنَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ
وَٱلۡحِكۡمَةِ يَعِظُكُم بِهِۦۚ وَٱتَّقُواْ ٱللَّهَ وَٱعۡلَمُوٓاْ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ بِكُلِّ شَيۡءٍ عَلِيمٞ ٢٣١

When you divorce women and they have reached their set time, then either keep or release them in a fair manner. Do not hold on to them with intent to harm them and commit aggression: anyone who does this wrongs himself. Do not make a mockery of God’s revelations; remember the favour He blessed you with, and the Scripture and wisdom He sent to teach you. Be mindful of God and know that He has full knowledge of everything [231] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 231)

We can observe here that God the Most High says, ‘And when you divorce women and they have [nearly] fulfilled their waiting-term…,’ and we ask: If, once they have reached the end of their waiting-term, is there any opportunity for retaining them according to acceptable terms or dissolving the marriage according to acceptable terms? Is there anything left but dissolution? The next verse says that when men divorce women, and they have come to the end of their waiting-term, they should not hinder them from marrying their husbands if they have agreed with each other in a fair manner (al-Baqara: 232).

So, we are faced with two verses each of which begins ‘And when you divorce women and they have [nearly] fulfilled their waiting-term…,’ yet the first verse continues: ‘…either retain them according to acceptable terms or release them according to acceptable terms…’ whilst the second verse continues by the instruction not to hinder them from marrying their husbands (al-Baqara: 232). What, then, is the point of this difference?

We say that the verb balagha (used in the verses and rendered as '[nearly] fulfilled') has two meanings: The first meaning is 'to draw close to,' such as is the case with God's instruction to worshippers when they are about to pray, to wash their faces (al-Ma'ida: 6), that is, when you are close to begin praying, do so. The second meaning is the actual real arrival at the thing. When a person travels in a plane and lands at the destination, he notices that the pilot announces that they have arrived in whatever city it is. So sometimes to come to the end (balagha) means to be close to it, whilst other times it means to have actually reached it.

The first verse says, 'And when you divorce women and they have [nearly] fulfilled their waiting-term, either retain them according to acceptable terms or release them according to acceptable terms….' In this case, the man has divorced his wife, but her waiting-term has not ended yet, but rather, it is so close to ending that he can either let her go, or retain her in a goodly manner; there is enough time left of the waiting-term for the husband to choose either to retain, or let go, but not much time. The True Lord the Most High wants the husband to hold on to the preservation of the marriage until the last moment, and for the means to reconciliation, not separation, to remain until the last moment. This is the reason for the wording '…and they have [nearly] fulfilled their waiting-term…' that is, they are close to the end of the waiting-term. The True Lord the Most High wants us to hold onto the preservation of married life until the last possible chance we have for it, which is a moment in which the man might utter a word which either leads to divorce, or to the return to married life.

The second verse says that when men divorce women, and they have come to the end of their waiting-term, they should not hinder them from marrying their husbands if they have agreed with each other in a fair manner (al-Baqara: 232). God the Most High wants to restrict the discussion of whether to separate, or continue to the husband and wife alone so that no one but the husband and wife becomes involved in their affair because there exists between the two of them that which might make one of them soften towards the other.

But if a third party intervenes who does not have these sensibilities, the quarrel will be magnified in his mind, and, at the same time, he does not feel the need for reconciliation, and he will not seek to save the relationship of the couple. If the father, brother, or mother gets involved in the discussion, enmity will arise, and they will not feel the emotions that each spouse feels towards the other, nor the tenderness of the husband towards his wife, nor the wife's will to reconcile with her husband. These emotional matters only exist between the husband and wife; as for outside parties, they are only connected to the husband or wife by a family tie, and because of this, the desire of these outside parties to preserve the relationship of the couple, will not be like the desire of each spouse to hold on to the other.

Because of this, we must understand that every problem which arises between a husband and a wife, and which no one else interferes in, is resolved quickly without a father, mother, or brother's involvement. This is because the interference of an outside party will not have the same emotional and psychological motivations which exist between the couple; as for the couple themselves, a single glance from one of them to the other might be enough to bring things back to normal. The man might be amazed by the woman's beauty and yearn for her, and forget everything; and the woman might see in the man something which she does not want to lose, and forget what happened between them, and so on.

But will this be the case with her mother and his, or her father and his? There are no secrets, emotions, relations, or anything else between these people and the couple. For this reason, I always advise that differences be kept between the husband and wife because God the Most High has placed an emotional connection between them, and this emotional connection might lead to longing and desire for something, and this desire might be the thing to bring about reconciliation and make each side withdraw from enmity and divorce. For this reason, God's Will decreed that a man should not divorce his wife whilst she is menstruating? Why? Because when a woman is menstruating, her husband has no desire for her, and he might be averse to her; but the True Lord the Most High does not want the man to divorce his wife except when she is pure, and he has not yet had conjugal relations with her after she has performed ritual ablutions after menstruation so that he does not divorce her except at the time when he has the strongest desire for her.

So, the True Lord the Most High wants the disputes between husband and wife to be part of the private married life so that they are protected by the shield of love, affection and mercy. But the involvement of other parties destroys this shield, whether the party is a father, mother, or brother.

The True Lord the Most High says, '…and do not keep them, intending harm, to transgress [against them]….' That is, do not keep them, o men, in married life simply in order to abuse the woman and degrade her. The meaning of dirar ('abuse') is to do something which on the surface seems to be based on an intention to do good from you, but by which you really intend evil. This is why they call a mosque a 'mosque of dirar' if it was built seemingly as a place of prayer, when actually the intent behind it was to spread disbelief and dissension amongst the believers. That same is true of dirar in marriage; the man says 'I do not want to divorce her, and I will take her home', saying this whilst plotting to take her back in order to humiliate her and take vengeance on her. Islam does not allow this, but rather forbids it.

The True Lord the Most High warns against this kind of behaviour, saying, '…and do not keep them, intending harm, to transgress [against them]. And whoever does that has certainly wronged himself….' Do not, then, suppose that when you harm your wife after taking her back, you are thereby wronging her; no; you are only wronging yourself because when you harm a person, you put God on his side, and if he supplicates against you, God will answer his supplication, and in this way you prevent yourself from attaining God's pleasure; and is there any greater wrong than the wrong which will afflict you if God's wrath falls upon you?

The True Lord the Most High then continues: '…And whoever does that has certainly wronged himself. And do not take the verses of God in jest….' That is, take God's method as a method which came to govern the motions of life without any trickery or flights of fancy; it is something realistic, and it is not right for anyone to take frivolously the methods which God the Most High has sent down to protect a human being's life and dignity, whether it be a man or woman.

'…And remember the favour of God upon you and what has been sent down to you of the Book and wisdom by which He admonishes you….' Recalling God's favour upon them, whilst speaking about divorce is meant to remind the believers of the state they were in before this legislation was revealed: what part did a woman play, in the pre-Islamic times of pagan ignorance, in the matters of marriage and divorce, and what was the difference in her situation after the Quran was revealed? Her rights became protected by the Quran.

The True Lord the Most High reminds the believers of this favour in order to draw their attention to the state they were in before Islam. The man would divorce his wife and then take her back, then divorce her and take her back, and do so even a thousand times, without any controls or regulations; and he would deny her conjugal relations for months at a time, leaving her to suffer the anguish of separation from him, unable to speak.

And when a woman's husband died, she would disappear from society, never appearing again, and never coming out of her house, as though she carried an infectious disease. And above all this, a daughter was a source of shame to her father, and he would kill her before she reached adulthood under the pretence of protecting his honour and dignity.

In a nutshell, marriage was more of a joke than a serious matter; and then Islam came, and settled matters so, they were no longer chaotic, with no rules or laws. So remember, o believers, how God blessed you with Islam; and look at how He blessed you with a domestic system which the whole world from east to west is eager to imitate.

You were a nation with no civilisation and no culture, worshipping idols and fighting wars which you started against one another for the most trivial and base of reasons, and you were ignorant of reading and writing; and then God the Most High sent down to you this sublime, refined law, the like of which no other civilisation has attained up to this day. Will you not remember this blessing, which you enjoy by the grace of God? For this reason, He the Exalted said, '…And remember the favour of God upon you and what has been sent down to you of the Book and wisdom by which He admonishes you….' The Book is the Quran, and the wisdom is the Sunna of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him. The True Lord the Most High concludes the noble verse by saying, '…And fear God and know that God has knowledge of all things.'

Beware of accusing your religion of having left out any law for your benefit; for every law is present and accounted for in Islam because God has full knowledge of the states of the people, and nothing that occurs in God's universe could be beyond what God has ordained in His Book, for He the Exalted is the Creator of the universe, and the Revealer of the law.

After this, the True Lord the Most High says:

وَإِذَا طَلَّقْتُمُ ٱلنِّسَآءَ فَبَلَغْنَ أَجَلَهُنَّ فَلَا تَعْضُلُوهُنَّ أَن يَنكِحْنَ أَزْوَٰجَهُنَّ
إِذَا تَرَٰضَوْا۟ بَيْنَهُم بِٱلْمَعْرُوفِ ۗ ذَٰلِكَ يُوعَظُ بِهِۦ مَن كَانَ مِنكُمْ يُؤْمِنُ بِٱللَّهِ
وَٱلْيَوْمِ ٱلْءَاخِرِ ۗ ذَٰلِكُمْ أَزْكَىٰ لَكُمْ وَأَطْهَرُ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ يَعْلَمُ وَأَنتُمْ لَا تَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٢٣٢﴾

When you divorce women and they have reached their set time, do not prevent them from remarrying their husbands if they both agree to do so in a fair manner. Let those of you who believe in God and the Last Day take this to heart: that is more wholesome and purer for you. God knows and you do not [232] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 232)

The verse says, '…and they have fulfilled their waiting term….' This means that their waiting-term has ended, and the husband has not yet used up all his pronouncements of divorce, yet he no longer has the right to take his wife back unless he makes a new contract and pays a new dowry. Imagine that the husband wants to take his wife back again, and certain relatives who are argumentative and disputatious may become involved in the matter, and try to stand in the way of the marriage being completed. The couple themselves might each want to reconcile with the other, and have an emotional and psychological connection of which no one else knows, but the family members who become involved in the dispute are opposed to things going back to normal, out of fear that there will be a repeat of what happened, or for other reasons. We say to these people: As long as the couple are content to go back, it is not right for anyone to stand in the way of their returning to how things were.

God the Most High says, '…do not prevent them….' We know that to prevent is to hinder; and this is addressed to the relatives and those people concerned with the wellbeing of the couple who offer well-meaning advice; and '…from remarrying their [former] husbands…' refers to the ones who had divorced them.

The meaning of this is: Do not prevent husbands from taking back the wives they divorced before; and the family members who refuse to allow their daughters to go back to their husbands should know that by continuing with this disputation, they are preventing the beneficial course of the gradual stages of divorce, which was ordained by the wisdom of God.

The wisdom of legislating that divorce takes place once and then, twice is that those who do not reconcile the first time might reconcile the second time; and since God well knows the souls of men, He legislated for them that they may pronounce divorce once or twice, and gave some time to those who made a mistake the first time so that they would not make a mistake the second time. For this reason, it is not right that anyone creates an obstacle to bar married life from starting anew.

God the Most High says, '…from remarrying their [former] husbands….' Notice here that the True Lord the Most High ascribes marriage to women, saying 'from remarrying'; and this shows that it is conditional that the woman agrees to returning to the marriage; for it cannot be that he divorces her first and then, she has no say in whether she returns to him or not.

Then, the verse continues: '…if they agree among themselves on an acceptable basis….' That is, as long as they have agreed with each other, and they see that it is best to return to one another, the people of ill favour who wish to oppose the will of the two sides, should stay out of it, and leave that which is lawful to return to its course. '…That is instructed to whoever of you believes in God and the Last Day. That is better for you and purer….' This is the decree of your Lord, and an admonition to you, O you who believe in God as an All-Wise Lord and Lawgiver, Who has full knowledge of the inclinations to good in the human soul.

The word 'better' alerts us to the unlawfulness of standing in the way of a woman who wants to return to her husband who divorced her and then, her waiting-term finished, and who wants to marry her again. The True Lord the Most High tells us: Do not stand in the way of their wish to be reconciled, for any reason whatsoever. Why, o Lord?

The answer comes in the words of God the Most High: '…and God knows and you know not.' Consider the beauty of the Quranic discourse, and how God's words '…and God knows and you know not' serve the meaning intended by the verses. God knows, and you do not know that for a married couple's life to return to normal is more virtuous and cleaner.

The True Lord the Most High then says:

وَٱلۡوَٰلِدَٰتُ يُرۡضِعۡنَ أَوۡلَٰدَهُنَّ حَوۡلَيۡنِ كَامِلَيۡنِۖ لِمَنۡ أَرَادَ أَن يُتِمَّ ٱلرَّضَاعَةَۚ وَعَلَى ٱلۡمَوۡلُودِ لَهُۥ
رِزۡقُهُنَّ وَكِسۡوَتُهُنَّ بِٱلۡمَعۡرُوفِۚ لَا تُكَلَّفُ نَفۡسٌ إِلَّا وُسۡعَهَاۚ لَا تُضَآرَّ وَٰلِدَةُۢ بِوَلَدِهَا وَلَا
مَوۡلُودٞ لَّهُۥ بِوَلَدِهِۦۚ وَعَلَى ٱلۡوَارِثِ مِثۡلُ ذَٰلِكَۗ فَإِنۡ أَرَادَا فِصَالًا عَن تَرَاضٖ مِّنۡهُمَا وَتَشَاوُرٖ
فَلَا جُنَاحَ عَلَيۡهِمَاۗ وَإِنۡ أَرَدتُّمۡ أَن تَسۡتَرۡضِعُوٓاْ أَوۡلَٰدَكُمۡ فَلَا جُنَاحَ عَلَيۡكُمۡ إِذَا سَلَّمۡتُم مَّآ
ءَاتَيۡتُم بِٱلۡمَعۡرُوفِۗ وَٱتَّقُواْ ٱللَّهَ وَٱعۡلَمُوٓاْ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ بِمَا تَعۡمَلُونَ بَصِيرٞ ٢٣٣

Mothers suckle their children for two whole years, if they wish to complete the term, and clothing and maintenance must be borne by the father in a fair manner. No one should be burdened with more than they can bear: no mother shall be made to suffer harm on account of her child, nor any father on account of his. The same duty is incumbent on the father's heir. If, by mutual consent and consultation, the couple wish to wean [the child], they will not be blamed, nor will there be any blame if you wish to engage a wet nurse, provided you pay as agreed in a fair manner. Be mindful of God, knowing that He sees everything you do [233] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 233)

Look at the greatness of Islam: here, the True Lord the Most High speaks about mothers nursing their children after divorce. Divorce creates dissension between a man and a woman, and the True Lord the Most High looks at the issue in the manner of the Dispenser of Mercy, and the All Knowing of His servants; He wants to protect the fruit of the marriage before the dissension emerges between the parents, and therefore He tells us: Do not make your dissension, and your separation and your divorce, a source of misery for the innocent baby child.

These words refer to the divorced women who leave the household of their former husbands because God the Most High says after this, '…Upon the father is the mothers' provision and their clothing according to what is acceptable….' The verse speaks about '…the mothers' provision and their clothing…' and this means that the woman and her child are away from the husband because if she was still with him, the provision and clothing of the child would be taken care of. The True Lord the Most High here imposes a right for the nursing baby, and his mother would not have the right to take him if she were not nursing. Some people misunderstand this and think that the provision and clothing here are for the wives in general, to which we say: No; the provision and clothing are to be provided for the divorced women who are nursing only.

The True Lord the Most High wants to make this right a given, so, He ordained the right of the baby to be provided with sustenance and clothing by his father so that this would be known to him at the time of divorce.

God the Most High says, 'Mothers may breastfeed their children two complete years….' We notice here that He did not use an imperative form here; He did not say: O mothers, nurse…. This is because a command is open to being obeyed or disobeyed; but God presented the matter using a statement of fact, as though this is a natural and real occurrence which is not contravened.

The True Lord the Most High says, '…Upon the father is the mothers' provision and their clothing according to what is acceptable…' Reflect on the greatness of the Quranic discourse in how God says, '…Upon the father…' (the expression used in the verse means literally 'to whom the child is born') and not 'Upon the father'; and He said, 'to whom the child is born' in order to charge the man with the responsibilities of providing sustenance and clothing because the responsibility of spending on a child rests with the father, not the mother; she carried him in her womb, gave birth to him, and nursed him, and the child is ascribed to the father in the end. A poet said:

People’s mothers are nothing but vessels
Storage-places; sons belong to their fathers.

Since the child is ascribed to his father, the father must provide for him sustenance and clothing, and he must also provide sustenance and clothing for the mother who nurses him, in a fair and equitable manner which does not do an injustice and a wrong to the father by making him spend too much. The True Lord the Most High says, ‘…No person is charged with more than his capacity….’ These words refer to the mother and father for it is not allowed for the divorced woman to demand from the baby’s father more than he can bear, and she must suffice herself with a reasonable amount of spending.

The True Lord the Most High then says, ‘…No mother should be harmed through her child, and no father through his child….’ The True Lord the Most High reminds the father that he is the one who has begotten the child, and he must not harm the mother of the child by refusing to spend on his child, and he must not leave her to ask others for her sustenance and clothing. At the same time, He reminds the mother: Do not make your baby a means of making his father suffer by demanding too much sustenance and clothing from him. He the Exalted gives us the specific framework which provides the infant with its rights; for there is a difference between a baby which enjoys the warmth of life with both his parents, and one whose parents are separated.

Then the True Lord the Most High gives us another cause to think, which is that the baby’s father might die; and if the father dies, who will spend on the baby in the care of his divorced mother? Here the True Lord the Most High gives the answer with His decree: ‘…And upon the [father's] heir is [a duty] like that [of the father]….’

The True Lord the Most High affirms that the responsibility of spending falls on the heir of the baby’s father. It is true that the baby itself will inherit from its father, but the care of the orphaned child is the responsibility of the one who inherits the custody, and has authority over the father’s wealth if he dies. In this way, God the Most High ensures the right of the baby with the one who begot it, the father, if he is alive, and with the father’s heir if he dies.

With this, God the Most High has legislated for the preservation of the way of life of the baby in the circumstance of the presence of its parents, and has also legislated for it in the event that its parents divorce and its father remains alive, and has also legislated for it in the event when its parents divorce and its father then dies. The True Lord the Most High then, says, '…And if they both desire weaning through mutual consent from both of them and consultation, there is no blame upon either of them….' Look at the mercy of Islam: a man's divorce from his wife does not mean that everything that was between them has ended so that the children are neglected and made to suffer by the divorce. God's words '…through mutual consent from both of them and consultation…' indicate that there is still something shared by the two sides, which is related to the care of the children; and in this thing which is shared, the rights of the children to motherly affection and fatherly affection, must be observed so that the child will grow up without being deprived of the care of either mother, or father, even if they differed and are divorced.

They must meet with counsel and mutual consent in the matter of raising their children so that the children feel the affection of both parents, and grow up without any psychological pains, and understand that their mother values their wellbeing, as does their father; though there may be dissention and differences between them, they agree on what is best for the children with mutual consent and counsel.

The neglect of children that we witness in many cases of divorce is a very serious matter because it leaves deep negative effects and traces on the children's souls, and leads to their misery and perhaps instability in their lives. What is the sin of children for whom adults were the direct cause of their coming into this life? Is it not better that their parents should provide them with psychological and living conditions which will assure for them a dignified upbringing? The way of God is in front of us, so, why do we not follow it so that through it, we can find happiness for ourselves and for the coming generations?

At the beginning of the verse, the True Lord the Most High says, 'Mothers may breastfeed their children two complete years….' But what will the case be if things come up which make the period of nursing shorter than two years, or special circumstances make the period of nursing longer than two years? Here, the True Lord the Most High says, '…And if they both desire weaning through mutual consent from both of them and consultation, there is no blame upon either of them….'

He the Exalted shows us that separation, i.e. weaning, must take place after mutual consent and consultation between the parents, and they will thereby incur no sin. The True Lord the Most High then says, '…And if you wish to have your children nursed by a substitute, there is no blame upon you as long as you give payment according to what is acceptable….' The meaning of 'to have your children nursed by a substitute…' is to bring a wet-nurse to the infant; and if you wish to do this, there is no harm in it.

When a divorced man gives the mother her child to nurse, the infant enjoys the affection of the mother which she naturally possesses. But suppose that the mother is unable to nurse, or that her circumstances do not allow her to nurse because of a weakness in her health or her strength. In this case, the father is required to bring his child a wet-nurse, and this wet-nurse, who nurses the infant, needs for the father to give her that which will pay tribute to her and ensure that she accepts to nurse the child in safety, and watch over him faithfully.

The True Lord the Most High concludes this noble verse by saying, '…And fear God and know that God sees what you do.' The True Lord the Most High warns against anyone's taking His rulings and claiming openly to be applying them whilst being indifferent to the spirit of these rulings. An example of this is the father who wants to dupe society so that, when he sees the wet-nurse of his child in public, he claims that he is spending on her, and giving her wages to her in full, greeting her with friendliness and kindness whilst the reality of the situation is contrary to this. God the Most High warns those who do this: You are not dealing with society, you are dealing with God, and '…God sees what you do.'

The True Lord the Most High then says:

وَٱلَّذِينَ يُتَوَفَّوْنَ مِنكُمْ وَيَذَرُونَ أَزْوَٰجًا يَتَرَبَّصْنَ بِأَنفُسِهِنَّ أَرْبَعَةَ أَشْهُرٍ وَعَشْرًا ۖ فَإِذَا بَلَغْنَ
أَجَلَهُنَّ فَلَا جُنَاحَ عَلَيْكُمْ فِيمَا فَعَلْنَ فِىٓ أَنفُسِهِنَّ بِٱلْمَعْرُوفِ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ بِمَا تَعْمَلُونَ خَبِيرٌ ﴿٢٣٤﴾

If any of you die and leave widows, the widows should wait for four months and ten nights before remarrying. When they have completed this set time, you will not be blamed for anything they may reasonably choose to do with themselves. God is fully aware of what you do [234] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 234)

As we know, the waiting-term is the period of time which God ordained after marriage finishes, either by divorce, or by the death of the husband. The waiting-term takes place either upon divorce or after the death of the husband. If it is after divorce, the waiting-term is three quru', which we said means either menstruation or the period of purity between menstruations; and if the divorced woman is too young to have begun menstruating, or old enough to have undergone the menopause, the waiting-term changes from being based on menses to being based on months, namely three months (at-Talaq: 4).

We know that it is the right of the husband to take back his wife at his own decision without the intervention of the wife or her guardian, as long as the waiting-period after a revocable divorce is still ongoing; and once her waiting-term ends, his right to take his wife back of his own volition ends, and he can only take her back with a new marriage contract and a new dowry, and as long as he still has the right to do this, i.e. he has not used up all his pronouncements of divorce.

We said that if there are two pronouncements of divorce and then a third is pronounced, the woman must marry another man in the normal way, not with an intention to make her lawful once more for her first husband. As for the waiting-term of the woman whose husband dies, we know that the Quran states that she must wait for four months and ten days. This is the case if she is not pregnant, but if she is pregnant, she must wait for whichever is further-off: if the waiting-term of four months and ten days is further-off, she must wait this long, and if the furthest-off date is the conclusion of her pregnancy, she must wait that long. But is it not possible that her husband might die during the ninth month of her pregnancy so that she gives birth before he is even buried?

Does this mean that her waiting-term is over? No, it ends with the furthest-off of the two terms, which in this case is the passing of four months and ten days, although some of the jurists say that the waiting-period of any pregnant woman ends when she gives birth

But if her husband has not died, her waiting-period ends when she gives birth, and she is free to marry after that if she chooses, even a single moment after. Some people explain the wisdom of making the waiting-period of a woman whose husband has died four months and ten days, saying: It is because if she is pregnant with a boy, her pregnancy will become known to her when he moves after three months, whilst if it is a girl it will become known to her when she moves after four months, and we give her ten extra nights to be sure.

We say to them: May God the Most High reward you for your explanation; but the purpose of the waiting-period here is not to make sure she is not pregnant; for if it was, the woman's waiting-term would end when she gave birth; and if the purpose of it was to see whether she is pregnant or not, her waiting-period would be three menstrual cycles if she has one, or else three months if she does not have one because of her youth or old age. But God specified that she wait four months and ten days out of loyalty to her husband's right, and in honour of their married life.

So, God the Most High made the woman whose husband dies wait the longest period a woman can endure; and when a woman's husband dies, she should not leave her house, beautify herself, or meet stranger men, out of loyalty to her husband. Once her waiting-term is over, i.e. four months and ten days, '…then there is no blame upon you for what they do with themselves….' This means that she can beautify herself in her house and then, go out without revealing her beauty, and if someone wishes to propose marriage to her, they may. When God the Most High says, 'four months and ten,' it means four months and ten days/nights.

Here there is a matter of faith and law which shows how every legal ruling affects all those who are morally responsible, even if the ruling does not directly concern them. The woman whose husband dies, waits for four months and ten days, and during this waiting-period, God decreed that she should not beautify herself, wear make-up, or leave her house, out of loyalty to her husband's right; and once she reaches the end of this waiting-term, He says, '…then there is no blame upon you for what they do with themselves in an acceptable manner….' He did not say: There shall be no blame upon them.

God the Most High addresses these words to men because every believing man has some form of guardianship over every believing woman, and if he sees something in her behaviour, or the way she takes care of herself which contravenes the rulings of the waiting-term, he has the right to intervene. For example, if he sees her beautifying herself, he says to her or sends someone to say to her, 'Why are you beautifying yourself?' God's words 'there is no blame upon you' make men guardians over the woman whose husband dies, so, they should not say, 'We have no right to intervene here;' for the ruling of faith is a ruling which affects every believer and governs every believer. The True Lord the Most High describes the believers as those who enjoin upon one another the keeping to truth, and enjoin upon one patience in adversity (al-'Asr: 3).

God's words 'enjoin upon one another' do not mean that one group of people have been singled out with the role of enjoining others, whilst another group of people are only to be enjoined by others; rather, each one of us enjoins at some times, and is enjoined by others at other times; this is the meaning of 'enjoin upon one another.'

So, if you see weakness in someone else concerning any aspect of God's rulings, you can enjoin him; and likewise, if someone else sees a weakness in you concerning any aspect of God's rulings, he can enjoin you. When we all enjoin one another, no believer amongst us will be guilty of any open sin. So, the verse does not single out one group for counsel apart from others, but rather, everyone gives counsel to everyone else because human vicissitudes come in turns to all people. When I am weak, you watch over me and counsel me; and when you are weak, I watch over you and counsel you. This is why the True Lord the Most High says, '…there shall be no blame upon you….' He the Exalted did not direct these words to women only, but rather to all believers; and He did not address only the family guardians of the women, but rather, He left the ruling for all the community so that no one can say, ‘I have nothing to do with this woman whose husband has died, and she can do as she pleases.’ She can beautify herself according to Islamic standards, and adorn herself according to the boundaries which God has set for her in this regard.

The True Lord the Most High concludes this verse by saying, ‘…And God is Cognisant of what you do.’ That is, God is aware of what is in her soul, or her intention. Suppose that she does something illegal without anyone seeing – she should not think that just because others did not witness this act, the matter is over; no; God the Most High is aware of what she does, even if no one else sees her.

The True Lord the Most High, by all the aforementioned laws, protected the right of the husband until the waiting-term ends, and the right of the woman whose husband dies during the waiting-term, and also protected, with all these laws, the honour of the woman, making the woman inviolable so that no one can come near her to tear her veil. She has a waiting-term in which she is ascribed to another man, so no one can approach her at this time. Why? Because the woman, especially if she has been divorced, might be taken by an urge to seek vengeance for herself and her honour, and she might remarry in haste; and the issues of separation or difference might have been the result of the insinuations of another man who desires her so that as soon as she is divorced and begins the waiting-term, those who desire her swarm around her, or she might herself look to one whom she believes is right for her to marry. This is why the True Lord the Most High stipulates a period of time, and makes the waiting-term like a forbidden zone to give the woman protection which is actual, not superficial.

Because this legislation is from a Merciful God, it does not disregard human emotions, neither those of the one who wishes to marry, nor of the woman who seeks someone to marry her. He handles this matter with precision, discretion and judiciousness, saying:

وَلَا جُنَاحَ عَلَيۡكُمۡ فِيمَا عَرَّضۡتُم بِهِۦ مِنۡ خِطۡبَةِ ٱلنِّسَآءِ أَوۡ أَكۡنَنتُمۡ فِيٓ أَنفُسِكُمۡۚ عَلِمَ
ٱللَّهُ أَنَّكُمۡ سَتَذۡكُرُونَهُنَّ وَلَٰكِن لَّا تُوَاعِدُوهُنَّ سِرًّا إِلَّآ أَن تَقُولُواْ قَوۡلٗا مَّعۡرُوفٗاۚ وَلَا
تَعۡزِمُواْ عُقۡدَةَ ٱلنِّكَاحِ حَتَّىٰ يَبۡلُغَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبُ أَجَلَهُۥۚ وَٱعۡلَمُوٓاْ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ يَعۡلَمُ مَا فِيٓ
أَنفُسِكُمۡ فَٱحۡذَرُوهُۚ وَٱعۡلَمُوٓاْ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ غَفُورٌ حَلِيمٞ (٢٣٥)

You will not be blamed whether you give a hint that you wish to marry these women, or keep it to yourselves. God knows that you intend to propose to them. Do not make a secret arrangement with them; speak to them honorably and do not confirm the marriage tie until the prescribed period reaches its end. Remember that God knows what is in your souls, so be mindful of Him. Remember that God is most forgiving and forbearing [235] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 235)

The verb ('arrada) (to 'allude') comes from the Arabic word (ta'rid), which means to indicate something without a direct statement, but rather with an intimation.

The True Lord the Most High wants to give emotions a way to be vented in this regard; and venting does not mean simply to express one's emotions, but rather, it is to ensure what is most beneficial. It is possible that if He had forbidden hinting, this might cause the woman's chance of marriage to be squandered, or it might have caused those who wished to marry her to miss their chance. For this reason, the True Lord the Most High ordained rules which obliged the man and woman both to observe the manners of caution, as though He were saying to us: I forbid you from proposing marriage during the waiting-term, or making any plain statements during it; but there is no prohibition of making hints from afar.

For example, the man might praise the woman, and enumerate her virtues in a way which does not contravene the etiquettes of Islam. This kind of speech is a hint and intimation, and the benefit of it is that it expresses what is in the soul of the speaker to the divorced woman, so, she knows his opinion of her. Were he not to say this, someone else might beat him to her and deprive him of the chance to act out what is in his soul, and prevent him from coming forward to propose to her once the waiting-term is ended. This might incite him to think of something else, and express himself in an incorrect manner.

So, alluding has a benefit in that it lets the divorced woman know what so-and-so thinks of her so that if someone else comes to her, she can reject him right away. In this way, we see a part of the mercy of the True Lord the Most High with us, in that He made the waiting-term like a forbidden zone to protect the woman, and made alluding a chance to express emotions which can establish a beneficial situation thereafter. The True Lord the Most High says, 'There is no blame upon you for that to which you [indirectly] allude concerning a proposal to women….' The Arabic word for proposal or marriage-offer (khitba: engagement) is made up of the root letters kh-t-b, which indicate things which are shared by several concepts: there is khutba ('sermon' or 'speech'), khatb ('something momentous'), and there is the meaning which we are currently concerned with, which is khitba ('marriage-offer'). All of these concepts indicate that something momentous is being dealt with, for the word (khatb) means something momentous which has a strong impact, and an orator only gives a speech (khutba: sermon) on something which is very important, giving advice to society about something vital.

Likewise, a marriage-offer is a momentous thing because it is a dividing line between two lives: a life with no restrictions and a life restricted by a family and order. All of these words share in the meaning of a very important matter, a crucial matter. He the Exalted says, 'There is no blame upon you for that to which you [indirectly] allude concerning a proposal to women or for what you conceal within yourselves….' That is, you will incur no blame if you keep something in your soul of which the woman is unaware. The Muslim conceals and keeps in his soul whatever he likes; but what will let the divorced woman know that she is on your mind if you keep your feelings about her to yourself? You must intimate and hint in a way which is respectful to the woman.

The True Lord the Most High says, '…God knows that you will have them in mind….' The One Who created you knows that as long as she is on your mind, and her husband has died or divorced her, she has become a hope for you; and if He had restrained you, He would have impeded your emotions, and you would lose out on the opportunity to take her as your wife thereafter. For this reason, the True Lord the Most High permitted alluding so that no one would fall into a forbidden matter, namely: '…But do not promise them secretly…' by taking a pledge from them that they will not marry anyone but you, by saying to them, 'Marry me.' Rather, the man must hint, and not be plain and straight. Secret proposals are forbidden, but it is permitted to allude with proper manners: '…except for saying a proper saying…' by saying, for example, 'If someone had a wife like you, he would be so happy,' or compliments like that which normally please the woman. We all know that a woman who has been divorced or has lost her husband, possesses lucidity and brightness with which she can pick up the meaning and intention of words.

The True Lord the Most High continues: '…And do not resolve to undertake a marriage contract until the decreed period reaches its end….' In this way we see that even to resolve on marriage is forbidden. Resolution comes before action, so, if it is forbidden, this makes the unlawfulness of the action itself even stronger and more strictly forbidden. You may intend to marry her and place your trust in God, but do not make it a settled matter until her waiting-term is finished. Once the decreed period has come to its end and her waiting-term is over, resolve on tying the marriage-knot. It is as though the marriage contract passes through three stages: The first stage is that a hint and an allusion is made; the second stage is that marriage is resolved upon, which is not right or proper to take place until after the waiting-term ends; and the third stage is the accomplishment of the marriage contract.

The purpose of these stages is to allow each side to take their time to think deeply over this serious matter; if this thinking leads to resolution, one can go ahead with the marriage after the waiting-term ends; and if this thinking leads to abstention and the dismissal of this notion, then one is free to do as one pleases.

The True Lord the Most High wants these stages to give a chance to turn back if one party discovers something about the other which displeases them. All of these steps show us that the marriage contract should not be accomplished without resolve, and there should be no contract without resolve. The True Lord the Most High wants the Muslim not to tie the marriage-knot without firm resolve; and resolve means determination that you want to marry and are prepared to live up to the rights and responsibilities of marriage, and to pay the full marriage dowry, and to keep to it lawfully and chastely; for marriage which is not based on resolve is doomed to fail. The meaning of resolve is that you think about the matter deeply and thoughtfully in your soul so that you settle on a sure decision; after this, you can begin marriage on the basis that it will be permanent and lasting, not just an ephemeral passion which is not based on the resolve of the soul.

This is why marriage, which is not based on deliberation, but which rather hangs on ephemeral motivations such as the satiation of passion, does not last, or succeed. An instance of this is ‘temporary marriage’ (zawaj al-mut‘a): the reason temporary marriage was made unlawful is that the one who does it, does not want to continue in married life; and as long as he does not intend marriage to be permanent, this means that his intent is only ephemeral pleasure.

Those who seek to allow temporary marriage are flawed in their thinking because they ignore the element of approaching marriage with permanence in their minds. Why do you need to confine your marriage to a limited time? True marriage cannot be confined in this way. Reflect on the foolishness of these people, and you will see that it is not a case of marriage, but rather, a way to excuse fornication; if not, then why does he make it a condition of temporary marriage that he only marry her for a month, or more?

When a person specifies the limitation of the marriage to a certain period of time, this shows the foolishness of his thinking, and his bad intention because true marriage is that which one enters with the intention of permanency. He might end it after only an hour if he sees that this is necessary, and no one would object to this; so, why restrict yourself to a given period of time? The one who enters a temporary marriage, uses his reason in the wrong way; he might be intelligent in one aspect, but he is injudicious in another.

One must enter marriage with resolve after thinking deeply and carefully, and then tie the knot based on this thinking. Beware of harbouring in your soul this kind of marriage linked to desires and goals in your soul such as the lack of permanency or the goal of pleasure alone; for all of these lustful and worldly desires which some people think of, are ephemeral desires, so, abolish from your heart all of these notions; for if you seek something from marriage other than permanence and chastity, God the Most High will know it, and He will cause your thinking to bring misery to you, so, beware of this.

God the Most High does not warn someone against doing anything unless it would incur His wrath, and for this reason the True Lord the Most High concludes this noble verse by saying, '…And know that God knows what is within yourselves, so, beware of Him. And know that God is Forgiving and Forbearing.' He the Exalted knows the weakness of the human soul, and that it might weaken sometimes; and if it does some unfavourable thing, God gives the person the chance to repent, for He is Much-Forgiving and Forbearing.

After this, the True Lord the Most High says:

لَّا جُنَاحَ عَلَيْكُمْ إِن طَلَّقْتُمُ ٱلنِّسَآءَ مَا لَمْ تَمَسُّوهُنَّ أَوْ تَفْرِضُوا۟ لَهُنَّ فَرِيضَةً ۚ وَمَتِّعُوهُنَّ
عَلَى ٱلْمُوسِعِ قَدَرُهُۥ وَعَلَى ٱلْمُقْتِرِ قَدَرُهُۥ مَتَٰعًۢا بِٱلْمَعْرُوفِ ۖ حَقًّا عَلَى ٱلْمُحْسِنِينَ ﴿٢٣٦﴾

You will not be blamed if you divorce women when you have not yet consummated the marriage or fixed a bride-gift for them, but make fair provision for them, the rich according to his means and the poor according to his – this is a duty for those who do good [236] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 236)

We notice here that the discussion in the previous verses was about divorces of consummated marriages, or the consummated marriage which ended with the husband's death, leaving the wife behind. But certain things might occur which make it necessary to divorce a woman before consummating the marriage, and this verse refers to the wife being divorced in an unconsummated marriage, and in this kind of situation we may have two cases: the first is where a dowry has been specified in the contract, and the second is where the dowry has not been specified. This implies that the specifying of a dowry, is not a necessary condition of marriage contract, but rather, if the woman marries the man and no dowry has been stipulated for this marriage, adequate dowry (of the likes of the woman in her community) is considered to have been agreed upon, and the contract is valid. The proof of this is that God the Most High says, 'There is no blame upon you if you divorce women while you have not touched them nor specified for them an obligation (dowry)….' This means that she was considered a wife, although the marriage had not been consummated.

We can ask here: what does ‘touched’ (mass) mean? In Arabic, we have the words mass, lams, and mulamasa, all meaning different degrees of touching. A person might touch (mass) something without being affected by what he has touched so that, he does not notice its nature, or whether it is hard or soft, or hot or cold, and so on. As for the word lams, the thing which is touched must be felt; and as for mulamasa, it means that there is interaction between the person who touches and the thing being touched. So we have three levels: the first is mass, the second is lams, and the third is mulamasa. The word mass in this verse means sexual contact and intercourse, and it is a lighter expression than the word lams, and subtler than saying ‘contact’ (mulamasa) or ‘coition’ (mubashara). We know that it means this because there is a Quranic expression elsewhere which clearly shows this meaning, and from the usage of the word mass in that context, we can have a better understanding of its meaning in this verse we are currently examining. The Lady Mary peace be upon her, given the glad tidings that she would be given her blessed son, wondered how she can have a son when no man has ever touched her, and never has she been a loose woman (Maryam: 20).

The Noble Quran clarifies, on the tongue of our Lady Mary peace be upon her that no man has ever had the connection with her from which a child could have been produced; and the expression is of the utmost precision. And because it involved the exposing of confidential and secret matters, the Quran used the lightest word (in a decent euphemistic expression) to describe this thing, namely touch (mass). It is as though the True Lord the Most High wants to confirm her chastity even in her use of words, so, He negated that any man had even touched her, never mind had any kind of conjugal relations with her, although the meaning of the word in this context is indeed conjugal relations, since the verse is meant to affirm Mary’s chastity.

Let us reflect on the decorum and propriety of the Quranic expression in dealing with the matter in the verse which we are currently examining. It is as though the True Lord the Most High is using the word to express the limit of its meaning, with the lightest kind of expression.

The True Lord the Most High says, ‘…nor specified for them an obligation (dowry)….’ We know that when the Arabic word aw (meaning ‘or’ or ‘nor’) is used between two things, it means ‘either this or that.’ Is a dowry settled upon them in return for touching them? The direct contrast of ‘…while you have not touched them…’ is that you have touched them and the contrast of ‘…specified for them an obligation (dowry)…’ is that you have not specified a dowry for them. It is as though the True Lord the Most High is saying: You are not to blame by divorcing, while you have not yet touched them, whether you have settled a dowry for them or not. In this way, the Quranic style is intent on alerting the mind to note its meanings.

We can observe that the True Lord the Most High uses the word ‘if’ to refer to the possibility of divorce, and as we know the word ‘if’ refers to doubtful matters. It is as though God the Most High does not want divorce to actually take place, which is why He did not use the word ‘when’, but rather placed the matter in a doubtful position so that the verse corroborated what the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘The most hateful thing to God of all He has made lawful is divorce.’(1)

The True Lord the Most High says after this, ‘…But make provision for them – the wealthy according to his capability and the poor according to his capability….’ That is, if you divorce your wife before consummating the marriage, and you had not specified any dowry for her, give her provision. Scholars say that the value of this provision is that which is equivalent to half of the dowry which a woman of similar status would receive because it was assumed that she would take half the dower, and as long as no dower was specified for her, she is entitled to half the dower of a woman of her status. The True Lord the Most High says, ‘…the wealthy according to his capability and the poor according to his capability….’ That is, the provision should be within the limits of the husband’s capabilities: the affluent wealthy man must give that which reflects what God has granted him, and the poor man must give according to his ability.

The Quran’s word here ‘wealthy’ (musi‘) is derived from the verb awsa‘a, which means ‘to enrich.’ The active participle of this verb (i.e. ‘the one who enriches’) is musi‘, and the passive participle (i.e. ‘the one who is enriched’) is musa‘ alayh. Which of these words best describes the husband? If we consider that his provisions have come from the True Lord the Most High, he is ‘the one who is enriched,’ whilst if we consider that the True Lord the Most High requires you to broaden (Arabic awsa‘a) your life’s work so that your provision will come to you, and God will enrich you according to how much you broaden it, he is thereby ‘the one who enriches.’

(1) Narrated by Abu Dawud, Al-Bayhaqi, and Al-Hakim on the authority of Ibn ‘Umar

So, the ‘wealthy’ person is the one who enriches himself by broadening his means of work in this life; and to be impoverished (iqtar) means to be lacking, and provision will be given according to work, and to scanty circumstances. When the True Lord the Most High imposes a ruling of moral responsibility, He does not intend the ruling to be carried out by those from whom it is required alone, but rather, He spreads the responsibility throughout the faithful population. So His words ‘…the wealthy according to his capability and the poor according to his capability…’ mean that if there is someone who does not carry out God’s ruling, you must all come together to carry out God’s command that everyone who divorces his wife before consummating the marriage must provide for her. The fact that the imperative verb in Arabic ‘make provision for them’ is addressed to a plural, shows that the whole community must come together to obey God’s command. After this, He the Exalted says:

وَإِن طَلَّقْتُمُوهُنَّ مِن قَبْلِ أَن تَمَسُّوهُنَّ وَقَدْ فَرَضْتُمْ لَهُنَّ فَرِيضَةً فَنِصْفُ مَا
فَرَضْتُمْ إِلَّآ أَن يَعْفُونَ أَوْ يَعْفُوَا۟ ٱلَّذِى بِيَدِهِۦ عُقْدَةُ ٱلنِّكَاحِ ۚ وَأَن تَعْفُوٓا۟
أَقْرَبُ لِلتَّقْوَىٰ ۚ وَلَا تَنسَوُا۟ ٱلْفَضْلَ بَيْنَكُمْ ۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ بِمَا تَعْمَلُونَ بَصِيرٌ ﴿٢٣٧﴾

If you divorce wives before consummating the marriage but after fixing a bride-gift for them, then give them half of what you had previously fixed, unless they waive [their right], or unless the one who holds the marriage tie waives [his right].
Waiving [your right] is nearer to godliness, so do not forget to be generous towards one another: God sees what you do [237]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 237)

That is, as long as he has not consummated the marriage with her, she does not take the whole dowry, but rather, she is entitled to half. We know that there is a difference between a ruling being based on the law of justice, and a ruling giving consideration to the side of grace, and I will tell a true story from which we can learn:

Two people went to a man to ask him to arbitrate between them, and said: 'Judge between us with justice.' He said, 'Would you like me to judge between you with justice, or with that which is better than justice?' They said, 'Is there anything better than justice?' He said, 'Yes: grace.'

Justice gives everyone their right, but grace makes a person give up his right, or some of it. So when the law establishes the scales of justice, it does not want to prevent the font of faith from giving forth the munificence of grace. He gives you justice, but He the Exalted says after this, '…And do not forget graciousness between you….' Justice alone might be hard, and may cause hatred to remain in souls; but the act of grace brings an end to dispute, enmity and hatred.

Disputation only comes when I believe I am in the right, and you believe that you are in the right; and it might be that certain circumstances come to make my understanding seem good to me, and other circumstances come to you to make your own understanding seem good to you. When we hold fast to the matter of justice, we will not reach the point of contentment for human souls; but if we open to grace, we will be content, and put an end to the matter.

The True Lord the Most High says, 'And if you divorce them before you have touched them…' that is, before you consummate the marriage, '…and you have already specified for them an obligation (dowry)…,' meaning that you have stipulated the dowry, '…then [give] half of what you specified – unless they forego the right…' meaning that the divorced woman forgoes her claim.

Some ignorant people say – and we seek refuge in God from ignorance – that the Quran has a grammatical mistake in it, thinking that the verb here for 'they forgo' should take the form of ya'fu instead of ya'funa. This is a kind of ignorance which does not differentiate between the letter u as part of the root form of a verb and the letter u as a masculine plural verb suffix. Here, the u is part of the verb, since the Arabic word for 'forgo' is 'afa, which in the imperfect tense is ya'fu.

From this, we understand that the wife may forgo half of her dowry and leave it for her husband. The True Lord the Most High then, says, '…or the one in whose hand is the marriage contract foregoes it….' This means the husband, not the wife's guardian because the context of the verse indicates that it is the husband who is meant, although some exegetes say it means the wife's guardian. We should be aware that the wife's guardian does not have the right to forgo the woman's dowry because the dowry is the right of the wife, as it is a source of wealth and provision in people's lives and it is the counterpart to the man's sexual enjoyment of his wife. This is why you find that some people do not give their wives any dowry, saving it for her so that if someone is ill, she will buy medicine for him from this dowry even a single pill of aspirin because it is medicine bought with lawfully-earned provision, so God might place a cure in it. The woman saves her lawful dowry for these kinds of occasions so that she can do something with it in which God will place goodness because it is from a lawful source of provision, unadulterated by cheating or fraud.

To those exegetes who say that the wife's guardian is the one who is entitled to forgo the dowry, I reply: Why would God bring a ruling in which the woman can give up her right and forgo her half-dowry, whilst the man cannot be generous by forgoing the half? Why would Heaven place all the loss on the woman? It is logical for women, or the ones who have the marriage contract in their hands, i.e. their guardians, to forgo their right so that this forgoing comes only from the wives or their guardians, i.e. from only one side.

We should understand well the concept of grace of which God the Most High says, '…And do not forget graciousness between you….' The correspondence of forgoing is between the two of them, the man and the woman, and from here we understand that the words '…or the one in whose hand is the marriage contract foregoes it…' refer to the husband. Just as the wife may forgo half of her dowry to which she is entitled, the husband may also forgo half of the dowry to which he is entitled.

The True Lord the Most High says, '…And to forego it is nearer to righteousness…' because it is very possible that one of the two parties might think himself to be wronged even if he takes the half to which he is entitled; but if he does not take anything, this is closer to righteousness, and better for the soul.

In these kinds of situations, we must always remember the words of the True Lord the Most High: '…And do not forget graciousness between you….' Even in situations of differences which lead to the husband leaving his wife before consummating the marriage, God the Most High says, '…And do not forget graciousness between you…' that is, do not turn it into enmity, vengeance and acrimony, and know that the True Lord the Most High destines some things to bring about certain fated things of which we were not aware, and this should make one aware that his means are not the only things which act in life.

For example: a man may be pleased with a woman he sees, and he marries her; or a man might see a woman whom he does not like, but then someone else comes and is attracted to her. This means that God the Most High destined acceptance between the two of them when she saw that the man was right for her and he saw that she was right for him. For this reason, in the past, villagers used to say: Do not be sad when someone comes to seek your daughter's hand in marriage, but then finds that he does not like her because it is written on the forehead of every girl: 'O men, keep off other men's women!' She is not for him, which is why this man is not destined for her. We should not ignore the influence of fate in these matters because it is more conductive to protecting the human soul from bearing resentment and grudges. The True Lord the Most High concludes the verse by saying, '…Indeed God, of whatever you do, is Seeing.' He knows what is in the hearts, and the intention behind every action.

After this comes a verse that affirms a matter of faith, which is that all of the moral responsibilities of Islam are integral parts of a single body of teachings so that one cannot be separated from any other. Do not say, 'This is an obligation of worship,' and 'This is a principle of benefit,' and 'This is a penal matter;' no, everything which the True Lord the Most High commands is a matter of faith which, with others, makes up a complete and integral way.

So, after speaking about divorce, the True Lord the Most High says:

حَـٰفِظُوا۟ عَلَى ٱلصَّلَوَٰتِ وَٱلصَّلَوٰةِ ٱلْوُسْطَىٰ وَقُومُوا۟ لِلَّهِ قَـٰنِتِينَ ﴿٢٣٨﴾
فَإِنْ خِفْتُمْ فَرِجَالًا أَوْ رُكْبَانًا ۖ فَإِذَآ أَمِنتُمْ فَٱذْكُرُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ كَمَا
عَلَّمَكُم مَّا لَمْ تَكُونُوا۟ تَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٢٣٩﴾

Take care to do your prayers, praying in the best way, and stand before God in devotion [238] If you are in danger, pray when you are out walking or riding; when you are safe again, remember God, for He has taught you what you did not know [239] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 238-239)

What should be noticed is that God the Most High will be returning to the matter of the family, and in particular to the widowed woman, in the next verse, saying, ‘And those who are taken in death among you and leave wives behind – for their wives is a bequest: maintenance for one year without turning [them] out [of the dead husband’s home]. But if they leave [of their own accord], then there is no blame upon you for what they do with themselves in an acceptable way. And God is Exalted in Might, Wise’ (al-Baqara: 240).

So, with the verse that begins with ‘Maintain with care the [obligatory] prayers…’ the True Lord the Most High divided a single issue, namely the separation of a husband and wife, and split it into two parts, and placed between them talking about prayer. This was to remind us of the oneness of the responsibilities of faith; and since the True Lord the Most High is speaking here about things which either mean voluntary separation by divorce or inescapable separation by death, God the Most High wanted to place man in an act of worship which connects him to God Who placed the rulings for divorce and prayer, and destined death.

Why did God the Most High choose prayer, and not any other act of worship, to interrupt the flow of the discourse about the rulings concerning divorce and separation? It is because prayer is what gives the believers tranquillity if the affairs of marriage and divorce have become serious and worrisome for them either because of the voluntary separation of the divorces which have occurred, or the pain of separation through death. Nothing will strengthen their hearts except for them to stand in prayer before their Lord; and the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him would be the first to do that: when something became wearisome for him, he would rise to pray. The believer goes to the Creator Who granted him the means of marriage and decreed divorce and separation, to ask Him to lighten the worry and sadness he suffers. Since the believer has elected to go to the One Who decrees all fate, he should know that God Who has sent these decrees of fate upon him, did not leave them without any rulings to manage them, but rather, He made for every situation, an appropriate ruling. The believer has nothing more to do than to accept the turns of fate with contentment, and then, go to God in penitence, humility and prayer; for divorce and death bring shock, and separation which is either voluntary, or else decreed by death.

God the Most High then says, 'Maintain with care the [obligatory] prayers and [in particular] the middle prayer….' We can therefore understand that the prayers referred to in the verse are the five daily prayers; so, what is the middle prayer? The admonition here contains what we call a specification and a generalisation. To have a better understanding of the issue let us have a closer look at God's mentioning of the supplication of Noah peace be upon him when he prayed to his Lord to grant forgiveness to him, to his parents, to everyone who enters his house as a believer, and to all believing men and believing women; and to grant that the doers of evil shall increasingly meet with destruction (Nuh: 28).

How many times are the mother and father included here? They are included and mentioned specifically in His praying to God to grant forgiveness to him and to his parents, and then, (but without specification) in his words: to everyone who enters his house, and then, in his words: to all believing men and believing women; that is, they are included three times. So, invoking of a general thing after a specific thing means that the specific will be included in the general, and there will be repetition with respect to the specific according to its level of specificity.

God's words 'Maintain with care the [obligatory] prayers and [in particular] the middle prayer…' imply the same thing. If we ask what the command 'Maintain' (Hafizhu) means, the answer requires that we understand that the word hifzh may mean 'to memorise' i.e. the opposite of 'to forget', and may also have another meaning which is 'to save/keep', i.e. the opposite of 'to waste/lose'; and the two meanings are related because the one who remembers something and then forgets it has thereby lost it, whilst the one who saves money and then squanders it, has also lost it. So these meanings are all related to the concept of losing something, and hifzh means to assure the continuation of something which is in your possession. If you memorise a verse of the Quran, you must save it within yourself; and if God blesses you with wealth, you must look after it.

His words 'Maintain with care the [obligatory] prayers…' mean, do not waste them; it could also mean something else, which is that you have tasted the sweetness of prayer in the closeness of your Lord's company, and it behoves you to hold onto this; and these words refer to the five-daily prayers with which we are familiar.

His words '…and [in particular] the middle prayer…' mention the specific after the general, as though God commanded us twice to be mindful of this specific: once included in the general, and once again in making specific mention of it. What is the reason for singling out the middle prayer specifically? The word 'middle' in Arabic (wusta) is the feminine form of awsat, and they both mean something which lies equidistantly between two things, that is, the two sides are equal. The two sides could not be equal in number – with regard to the five prayers – unless the prayers were of an odd number; for if they were of an even number, we would not be able to identify the middle one. As long as the meaning here is the middle one out of five, this means it is the third prayer, which is preceded by two prayers and followed by two more. This is the case if you consider the number, according to the order of first, second, third, fourth, and fifth.

If consideration is given to the obligation of the prayer, the first prayer which God the Most High made obligatory was the zhuhr (midday prayer); this was the first prayer to be prescribed, then came the 'asr (mid-afternoon) prayer, then the maghrib (sunset) prayer, then the 'isha (night) prayer, then the fajr (dawn) prayer. If you take the middle prayer according to the order of being prescribed, this would be the sunset prayer, and this is the opinion of many scholars.

If we consider the middle prayer according to the number of cycles of bowing (rak'a) within each prayer, we find that there is a prayer which has two cycles, namely the dawn prayer, and prayers which have four cycles, namely the midday, mid-afternoon, and night prayers, and a prayer with three cycles, namely the sunset prayer. The middle one of these is the prayer with three cycles, lying as it does it between two and four, which again is the sunset prayer. If you consider it according to the passage of day, the dawn prayer is first, then the midday, mid-afternoon, sunset, and night prayers follow, this makes the mid-afternoon prayer the middle one.

If you consider it as the midpoint between the silent and loud prayers, it could be the dawn or the sunset prayers, as the silent prayers are the midday and mid-afternoon, and the loud prayers are the sunset, night, and dawn; between night and midday comes the dawn prayer, or it could be the sunset prayer since it comes between the midday and mid-afternoon prayers on one side, and the night and dawn prayers on the other.

If we consider it according to the times when the angels gather, it is at the ends of the day at night, and so is either the mid-afternoon or the dawn prayer. So the middle position comes from whatever point of view you take, whether it is based on number, or order of prescription, or number of cycles of bowing, or silent and loud prayers, or the descent of the angels of day or night; and every one of these points of view has its own reasoning. So, the exact identity of the middle prayer is left obscure and open to different interpretations. But why did God conceal its identity from us? We say that He concealed it in order that we all observe and recognise that there is a difference between a thing being recognised clearly for what it is, and it being concealed in the midst of other things so that, they all might be it: for this leads to our being mindful of all the prayers.

As long as the middle prayer could be the dawn, midday, mid-afternoon, sunset, or night prayer, this is all the more reason to be mindful of all the prayers. The ambiguity of the matter serves only to widen its relevance. God the Most High made the exact date of laylatul Qadr (‘the Night of Power’) vague for the very same reason; so, instead of there being only one Night of Power, there are several.(1)

This is the case with ‘Maintain with care the [obligatory] prayers and [in particular] the middle prayer…,’ that is, the five prayers in general and each individual one of them specifically. The True Lord the Most High wants us to stand in devotion in each prayer, and the plain command here is: '…and stand up full of devotion towards God.' The word qunut, ('devotion'), is derived from a root meaning of 'doing something constantly.' The Noble Quran urges us to be constant in obedience to God the Most High with humility and submission. We see a form of this word used in the noble words of the True Lord the Most High where He describes the worshipper who devoutly (qanitan) worships God throughout the night, prostrating himself or standing in prayer, ever-mindful of the life to come, and hoping for his Lord's Mercy. God, then, commands His Messenger to put forth the rhetorical question as to whether those who know and those who do not know can be deemed equal. Then God states that only those who are endowed with insight keep this in mind (az-Zumar: 9).

(1) The Night of Power is the night when God sent down the Quran to the earth. Muslims are greatly encouraged to observe the night with acts of worship and devotions. The exact date of the night is not known with certainty, but the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him says that it is one of the nights of the last ten days of the month of Ramadan – Ed.

The True Lord the Most High is commanding His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to tell us Muslims, we who believe in His Message, to compare the one who humbles himself before God throughout the night, spending it standing and prostrating in prayer, hoping for the mercy of his Lord, and the one who calls on his Lord at times of trouble and forgets Him at times of ease: are those who know the rights of God, and obey Him and declare His Oneness, equal to those who do not know, and neglect to look at and perceive the signs of God's Power?

The way to remember God is to renew one's connection with Him and stand before Him in prayer. We are commanded to perform the prayer even in the midst of battle, which is why God established the prayer of fear (in times of fighting) for us. Fighting is something which takes one away from his security, so, God the Most High says, '…And if you fear [an enemy, then pray] on foot or riding….' Even in the midst of fighting and danger, we must not forget the remembrance of God because we are most in need of God when we face our enemy. For this reason, we should not take the occasion which most befits us to be with God, and make it an excuse for forgetting God.

The same is the case of the ill person. As long as he is ill, he is in the company of God, so, it is not fitting that he abstains from praying; for no one is excused from it even the ill person: if he cannot pray standing, he prays sitting; if he cannot pray sitting, he prays lying down; and this continues even if he is forced to pray only by making motions with his eyes. Likewise, if you fear an enemy then pray, whilst walking, that is, whilst travelling on foot, or while riding. The word rijal is the plural of rajil which means to walk on one's feet. This same word is also used in another Noble verse where God the Most High commands His Messenger to proclaim to all people the duty of pilgrimage; and they will come to him rijalan (on foot) and riding on every kind of fast mount, coming from every far-away point on earth (al-Hajj: 27).

People used to perform the obligation of the pilgrimage on foot, or riding on camels which they spurred on to travel from far-away places. So (rajil) means someone who travels on foot. Feet were created to carry man's body when he stands, and to make him move when he walks. When one stands still, his feet carry him, and when he walks, his feet move. The meaning here is that the prayer is obligatory for the believers as they travel on foot or riding.

The True Lord the Most High legislated the prayer of fear by dividing the believers into two groups: one group prayed with the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him in the first rak'a (cycle of bowing), and then, completed the prayer on their own, and the second group came to be led by the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him in the following cycle so that the prayer was finished for the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him after which he waited for them until they finished their prayers, and then, gave the greeting of peace with them to end the prayer. The first group had the blessing of having begun the prayer with the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him, and the second group had the blessing of having finished the prayer with the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. This arrangement was employed at the battle of Dhat Ar-Riqa', and each of the two groups faced the enemy to guard the other group during the prayer.

I have an opinion regarding this matter, which is that the prayer of fear, which the jurists mention, was only for those battles in which the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him was present because there could not be some troops who prayed behind the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him, whilst the others were denied this, and therefore God the Most High apportioned the blessing of praying with the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him to both groups. But when the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him passed on to the Highest Companion, it was possible for those facing the enemy to have one imam (prayer leader) and the other group to have another imam. So the dividing of the prayer behind a single imam in the prayer of fear was only because the imam in that case was The Highest Imam peace and blessings be upon him, and God did not want some people to be prevented from praying with the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him by others, so, He divided the single prayer between them. But in our time, when things have been organised, and all people have become equal, and the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him is no longer amongst us, it is correct for each group to pray behind their own imam.

From God's words '…And if you fear [an enemy, then pray] on foot or riding…' we can understand that one is not exempted from prayer even when facing the enemy in battle; when the time for prayer comes, the believer must pray if he can, and if he cannot, he must say 'God is great' twice.(1) The True Lord the Most High then says, '…then remember God [in prayer], as He has taught you that which you did not [previously] know.' That is, remember that God taught you those things which you did not know; for had He not taught you them, what would you have done?

After this, the True Lord the Most High returns to speaking about the widowed woman, saying:

وَٱلَّذِينَ يُتَوَفَّوْنَ مِنكُمْ وَيَذَرُونَ أَزْوَٰجًا وَصِيَّةً لِّأَزْوَٰجِهِم مَّتَٰعًا
إِلَى ٱلْحَوْلِ غَيْرَ إِخْرَاجٍۚ فَإِنْ خَرَجْنَ فَلَا جُنَاحَ عَلَيْكُمْ فِى مَا
فَعَلْنَ فِىٓ أَنفُسِهِنَّ مِن مَّعْرُوفٍۗ وَٱللَّهُ عَزِيزٌ حَكِيمٌ ٢٤٠

If any of you die and leave widows, make a bequest for them: a year's maintenance and no expulsion from their homes [for that time]. But if they leave of their own accord, you will not be blamed for what they may reasonably choose to do with themselves: God is almighty and wise [240] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 240)

In a previous verse, the True Lord the Most High said, 'And those who are taken in death among you and leave wives behind - they, [the wives, shall] wait four months and ten [days]. And when they have fulfilled their term, then there is no blame upon you for what they do with themselves in an acceptable manner. And God is Cognisant of what you do' (al-Baqara: 234).

(1) See Al-Qurtubi's exegesis of the noble verse (al-Baqara: 239).

So here, we have before us two rulings concerning those who die and are survived by wives. One ruling says that they must undergo a waiting-term of four months and ten days; the other ruling says that when the husband is met with death, its causes, or its preludes, he should counsel and advise that his wife remain in his home for a whole year without being disturbed. The first four months and ten days are obligatory, whilst the rest of the year is optional; if she wants, she can take it; and if not, she can do otherwise.

'And those who are taken in death among you and leave wives behind – for their wives is a bequest….' This bequest is from the husband when he is about to die.

So, the woman whose husband dies is between two rulings: one compulsory ruling that obliges her to stay for four months and ten days, and another ruling where her husband bequeaths her the right to stay for a whole year without being disturbed, unless she decides to leave of her own accord, '…without turning [them] out [of the dead husband's home]…' i.e. without anyone forcing them to leave. '…But if they leave [of their own accord], then there is no blame upon you for what they do with themselves in an acceptable way. And God is Exalted in Might, Wise.' She has the choice whether to stay a full year according to her husband's bequest, or whether to leave after four months and ten days.

The True Lord the Most High then says:

وَلِلْمُطَلَّقَٰتِ مَتَٰعُۢ بِٱلْمَعْرُوفِۖ حَقًّا عَلَى ٱلْمُتَّقِينَ ٢٤١

Divorced women shall also have such maintenance as is considered fair: this is a duty for those who are mindful of God [241] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 241)

That is, all divorced women, under all circumstances, have the right to maintenance; but God the Most High clarified for us that this maintenance is for each one if you have not settled on a dowry for them. In a previous verse we have read God’s words: ‘…But make provision for them – the wealthy according to his capability and the poor according to his capability’ (al-Baqara: 236). If you have specified a dowry for her, she takes half of what you settled on. It is as though God has made an appropriate ruling for every situation, and every divorced woman has right to the maintenance as God declared for her. Then we need to reflect on what the True Lord the Most High says after this:

كَذَٰلِكَ يُبَيِّنُ ٱللَّهُ لَكُمْ ءَايَٰتِهِۦ لَعَلَّكُمْ تَعْقِلُونَ ﴿٢٤٢﴾

In this way God makes His revelations clear to you, so that you may grow in understanding [242]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 242)

We know from what we have seen before that ‘signs’ (verses) are amazing things. And when the True Lord the Most High alerts the mind to receive a certain ruling rationally, it can be noticed that if the pure intelligence directs its thought to a study of the causes of this subject, it will only arrive at this same ruling. Because of this, you find that the True Lord the Most High allows some disputes in dealings and eruptions of enmity to stray from the ruling which God ordained concerning any of the matters just mentioned, and then society is afflicted with the evil result of this infringement. It is as though by this, He is confirming the wisdom of what He legislated; if no evil came from these infringements, people would say that there was no need for that legislation; and they would leave the legislation aside without being afflicted with any evil.

So, when we do not adhere to God’s laws, logic and universal perfection dictate that bad things happen; for if no bad things happened, people would accuse God’s way, saying: Lord, we did not adhere to Your way, yet nothing bad happened to us. It is as though the bad things we find in society are there to alert us to the truth of God’s teachings and the perfection of His wisdom in defining His way. In this way, those who contravene God’s way are thereby indirectly helping God’s way.

After this, the discourse moves on to treat a matter of faith, which is that when God destines something, no creature can escape this destiny. He the Exalted says:

أَلَمۡ تَرَ إِلَى ٱلَّذِينَ خَرَجُواْ مِن دِيَٰرِهِمۡ وَهُمۡ أُلُوفٌ حَذَرَ ٱلۡمَوۡتِ
فَقَالَ لَهُمُ ٱللَّهُ مُوتُواْ ثُمَّ أَحۡيَٰهُمۡۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَذُو فَضۡلٍ عَلَى ٱلنَّاسِ
وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكۡثَرَ ٱلنَّاسِ لَا يَشۡكُرُونَ ٢٤٣

[Prophet], consider those people who abandoned their homeland in fear of death, even though there were thousands of them. God said to them, 'Die!' and then brought them back to life again; God shows real favour to people, but most of them are ungrateful [243] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 243)

After speaking about things connected to the Muslim family in the situation of the separation of husband and wife either by divorce or death, the True Lord the Most High wanted the Islamic community to know that no one can escape God's destiny. The Islamic community is the community which God trusted to bear the Message and Way of Heaven to earth until the end of time, for Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would not come again and no other prophet would be sent. A community like this had to be educated in a way which is commensurate with the mission with which God has charged it, and the True Lord the Most High will surely place in the hands of this community everything that the succession of messengers in the previous nations encountered and underwent so that they could take admonition from these events, and represent the way of God, not just by speaking theoretically, but by studying real events which befell past societies.

The True Lord the Most High wanted to alert us to the basis of this issue, which is that He Alone gives life, and the One Who gives life is the One Who takes it. He did not allot to man the means to give life, but rather, it is He the Exalted Who gives life and deals death. Life and death are the means for the preservation of the human species; however, the preservation of individual lives only comes from the sustenance which in turn must be earned.

The True Lord the Most High treats this issue by presenting an incident which Moses peace be upon him experienced with his people, the children of Israel. We know that the story of Moses peace be upon him and his people is the story which the Quran gives most space to because this was the community which caused much toil for messengers and prophets, and it was necessary that the True Lord the Most High present this matter completely to the community of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in accordance with what actually took place; He the Exalted therefore says, ‘Did not see those who left their homes in their thousands, fearing death?…’ We know from these words that the reason they left their homes was fear of death; as for the cause of this death, the verses do not specify what it was, although exegetes have spoken at length about this, some saying that they left their homes in fear that they would die of a plague which had infested the land, and others saying that they left fleeing an enemy who had subjugated them with the intention of eradicating them. What is important is that they sought to flee from fear of death.

So, the Quran deals with this issue according to what mattered the most; but as for why they fled, this is not important because the Quran is not chronicling history, so, it does not say where these things happened, or the time they took place, nor who was responsible, nor does it specify the names of the people involved; the Quran is not concerned with any of these details. Those people who tire themselves out investigating the details of these matters in the stories of the Quran are only trying to link events to specific times, and specific places and specific people.

We say to them: Had the Quran wanted this, it would have done it, and had this had any kind of relevance to the lesson and the admonition, the True Lord the Most High would have told us of it. You are weakening the significance and import of the story with these details because if the time of the story is specified, someone might say, ‘During the time in which this story took place, it was possible that such a thing could happen, but nowadays, it is no longer possible;’ or it might be said, ‘The place in which this story occurred was a possible setting for it, but in other places, it would not be possible.’ Likewise, if we specify the people involved, it will be said, ‘The story could only have taken place for those specific people because such accidental events in the universe are not repeated.’

When God the Most High makes the factors of time, place, characters and general settings ambiguous in a story, He the Exalted gives it life in every age and every place and with all people; and no one would be able to say that it is restricted to a specific setting. I always give the example for this of the people who try to determine the time, place and identity of the People of the Cave and their dog. We say to them: You are not enriching the story because when you determine a time, place and characters for it, it will be said, ‘It is only beneficial for the time in which it took place.’

For this reason, the True Lord the Most High wanted to make it ambiguous. He made it ambiguous so it would have general application; when He wants to specify, He mentions names. We find an example of this in the verse where God the Most High says that He puts forth for those who disbelieve the example of Noah’s wife and Lot’s wife: they were wedded to two of God’s righteous servants, and each one betrayed her husband; and neither of the two husbands will be of any avail to these two women before God when they are told on Judgment Day to enter the Fire with all those who enter it (at-Tahrim: 10).

The True Lord the Most High did not give the name of either of these two women, but only mentioned what was important which was that each one of them was married to a noble messenger; yet despite this, Noah peace be upon him was not able to remove the idolatrous doctrine from his wife, nor was Lot peace be upon him able to remove the idolatrous doctrine from his wife. Rather, both wives plotted against their husbands – though they were messengers – with their people and because of this, both of them were destined for Hell. One lesson we get from the story is that choosing one’s doctrine is something left up to every individual person, and freedom of doctrine is one of the clear principles of the Way of God.

Also, He the Exalted gives the story of the wife of Pharaoh as an example for those who believe; as she prayed to her Lord to build for her a mansion in paradise with Him, and to save her from Pharaoh and his doings, and save her from all evildoing people (at-Tahrim: 11).

He did not mention her name either because it is not what concerns us here; what concerns us is that she was the wife of someone who claimed to be a god, yet, despite this he could not convince his own wife that he was a god. But when He the Exalted wanted to make the story specific to one particular person, He the Exalted said that He puts forth as another example for those who believe Mary Daughter of ‘Imran peace be upon her who guarded her chastity, and God breathed of His Spirit into her, and she accepted the truth of her Lord's words and of His books, and was one of the truly devout (at-Tahrim: 12).

The True Lord the Most High mentioned her and her father's name because the thing that happened to her will never be repeated for any other woman. So to those who try to strengthen a story by mentioning its detail, we say: You are making the story poorer. What is important is that the True Lord the Most High wants to say that they left their homes in their thousands for fear of death. We want to take a moment to consider linguistically the words of the True Lord the Most High: 'Have you not considered….'

When you say to someone, 'Did you not see?' this usually means: did he not see it with his eyes? And I say: did the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him and the believers with him and the believers, who came after him until the end of time, see this event? No; the event reached them by their hearing of it, not seeing it. We know that sight takes place with the eye, and hearing with the ear, and tasting with the tongue, and smelling with the nose, and touching with the hand. These are the means by which the mind is given perception and sensation so that it can generate ideas; and about this God the Most High says that He has brought us forth from our mothers' wombs knowing nothing; but He has endowed us with hearing, sight, and minds so that, we might have cause to be grateful (an-Nahl: 78).

So, the means of knowledge comes through the senses, and the chief sense is the eye; for you may hear something from someone according to his own experience, but when you see the thing for yourself, you have your own experience. This is why it is said, 'The one who sees is not like the one who hears.' When the True Lord the Most High wanted to address us with the following question: Do you not know, you whom I address with the Quran, the story of these people? He the Exalted phrased it in this way: 'Did you not see those who left their homes….' This means: 'Do you not know…?' and knowledge here is by which means? It is through hearing. Why did He the Exalted not simplify things by saying, 'Did you not hear' instead of 'Did you not see'? By saying 'Did you not see,' He tells you of something which took place before you existed, or something which will take place after your existence, so, you must receive it in the same way you receive that which you have seen with your own eyes; for God the Most High, Who created the senses, is more truthful than the senses. For this reason, we find that the True Lord the Most High says, addressing the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him, with a rhetorical question: ‘Have you not seen how your Lord dealt with the Army of the Elephant?’ (al-Fil: 1).

We know that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was born in the Year of the Elephant, and he did not see this event; so how could God the Exalted ask him, ‘Have you not seen’? The meaning of this is ‘Do you not know?’, ‘Have you not heard it from Me?’ He did not say ‘Have you not heard?’ to affirm for him that He will be telling him of something that he had not seen, but since the True Lord the Most High was telling him of it, it was as though he did see it with his own eyes. It is as though God is saying: This matter is settled, and when I tell you of it, it is as though you have seen it.

In our daily lives we hear people say, ‘So-and-so is such a vivid storyteller!’ This means that he tells you the story as though he saw or heard it for himself. The vivid storyteller makes you think that he himself saw, and he himself heard. The True Lord the Most High tells us about these people here, saying, ‘Did you not see [consider] those who left their homes in their thousands, fearing death? God said to them, “Die” then He restored them to life….’ He the Exalted tells us that the thing which they fled from caught up with them because no one can avoid God’s destiny; so, God made them die and then resurrected them so that, they could take heed. Had God left their revival until the Day of Resurrection, they would not have taken in the lesson because after the Day of Resurrection, there will be no reflection or moral responsibility, and none of this will have any relevance.

God’s words ‘fearing death’ give the reason for their leaving their homes. The True Lord the Most High wanted to show them that precautions do not avail anything where this matter is concerned: You left your homes in fear of death, so, I shall make you die; and as for that which you sought after death, I shall make something else happen to you. For this reason, He brought them back to life again so that they would grieve, and live the rest of their appointed lives. ‘…then He restored them to life….’ to show them that death is in His hand. Whether they feared death from their enemies, or from plague and disease, the essence of the matter does not change. If the verse had said that they left their homes for fear of plague, we would not understand from it that they might have left their homes for fear of their enemies; so, the ambiguity of the direct cause serves to enrich the story.

God's words 'in their thousands' show us the extent of their failure and foolishness; for how could they leave out for fear of numbers when they themselves numbered in their thousands, and not a single one of these thousands said to them, 'Life and death are in the hand of God'? 'Did you not see [consider] those who left their homes in their thousands, fearing death? God said to them, "Die"….'

When you issue an order to someone under your command, he must have the power to do what you command. If you say to someone, 'Die', will they die? If he causes himself to die he will have killed himself; and there is a big difference between dying and killing oneself. Death comes without any participation from the one who dies, whereas killing might be caused by suicide or any other means; the important things is that it is an act of killing, not death.

The True Lord the Most High shows us the difference between killing and dying when He addresses the believers saying that Muhammad is but a messenger; all the other messengers before him have passed away; if, then, he dies, or killed, will they turn about on their heels? He who turns about on his heels can in no way harm God, and God will reward all who are grateful to Him (Al-'Imran: 144).

This verse came to extract lessons from the defeat of Uhud when the report went around the Muslims that the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him had been killed, whereupon some of them thought of leaving Islam. The True Lord's words came to show that the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him was a prophet who had been preceded by other messengers who brought God's way, and it was not right for the community of Islam, whom God the Most High had entrusted with completing His way, to have its faith shaken by the death of the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him; for whoever apostatised and turned on his heels would not harm God in the least, and the reward would be for those who were grateful for, and aware of, the grace of God's way.

We should know that the True Lord the Most High mentioned death in contrast to killing, and clarified the matter of death in the verse where He said that no human being can die except by God's leave, at a term pre-ordained. And if one desires the rewards of this world, God shall grant him of it; and if one desires the rewards of the life to come, God shall grant him of it; and God shall reward those who are grateful (Al-'Imran: 145).

So, death is tied to God's will and Omnipotent Power and His setting of a pre-ordained term for every life which cannot be brought forward or put back; and everyone will find the results of their works, and those who work for this world alone will receive their reward in it, and those who work for the Hereafter will be rewarded by God in this life and the next. For this reason the command of the True Lord the Most High was issued by His words: '…God said to them, 'Die' then He restored them to life….' It was not their will to make their own deaths, or to return to life, but rather, this was a matter of compulsion. They died by the Omnipotent Power of God which is represented by the words 'Be! – and it is'; and they came back to life by the Omnipotent Power of God which is represented by the words 'Be! – and it is.' They had no say in their deaths, nor in their revivals; it was a matter of compulsion, just as the True Lord the Most High formerly addressed the sky – and it was but smoke – and the Earth and ordered them to come – willingly or against their will – and they replied that they would come in obedience (Fussilat: 11).

His will was to create the sky in the form of smoke, so, it came into being; and He created the heavens and the earth according to His will, and it was as easy for Him as to simply say to a thing, 'Come into being, whether you like it or not,' and it heard and obeyed Him. These are matters of compulsion from the Most Noble Creator, and no creature in the heavens, nor the earth, nor in what lies between them, can do anything, but obey the command of compulsion from the Creator the Most High. When the True Lord the Most High says, '…"Die" then, He restored them to life…' this was a command of compulsion to die, and a command of compulsion to come back to life.

Was it not death in the first place that they feared and ran from, and fled in order to evade? It was; but no one can evade the destiny of God because the True Lord the Most High wanted them to know that no one can flee from God's destiny without running straight into God's destiny. This is why when our master 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab God be pleased with him wanted to prevent people from going to a land where there was plague, they said to him: 'Do you want to flee from God's destiny?' 'Umar God be pleased with him replied, 'Yes, we flee from God's destiny to God's destiny.' This makes one submit to God completely with all his being; it is true that one should be cautious, but the destiny which God has ordained will come to pass. The believer utilises the means, and submits his affair to God.

Someone might say: Why did God the Most High not leave those people of the children of Israel to die, and leave it until the Day of Resurrection to bring them to reckoning? I say: The True Lord the Most High wanted, by issuing a command of compulsion for them to be raised to life again, to impart a lesson and an admonition, which would remain before the eyes of all people, preserved in the noblest Book which God ever preserved to be a way for the people, the Noble Quran. The True Lord the Most High wanted to give an admonition, a caution, and an experience. They died by a command of compulsion, and then returned to life by another command of compulsion, and then lived the life which had been destined for them and then died whether they liked it or not. The lesson therefore remained for every true believer so that he would not fear death in God's Way.

By this experience, God wanted us to accept the struggle in God's Way so that no one would imagine that fighting is what brings about death, for death and life are in the Hand of the One Who gives life. Here are the words of Khalid ibn Al-Walid God be pleased with him as he lay on his deathbed, still here for every believer in God to consider: 'I witnessed a hundred military advances, or thereabouts and there is not a hand's span of my body but it has been struck with a sword or pierced by a spear; yet here I die on my bed as a camel dies! May the eyes of cowards never sleep!'

So, the matter of life and death is not tied to fighting or anything else, but is rather determined by God's Will. Let us consider how the True Lord the Most High concludes this verse: '…And God is full of bounty to the people, but most of the people do not show gratitude.' What is 'bounty'? It is that you are given more than you need. The True Lord the Most High does not only give people what they need, but rather, He gives them more than they need.

Therefore, if those people who left their homes for fear of a plague or an enemy had died, this death would have been a bounty from God; for had they died from plague, they would be counted as martyrs, and this is a bounty from God; and had they died when fighting their enemy and struggling in God’s Way, they would also have attained martyrdom, and this is a bounty from God.

Why would this manner of death have been a bounty from God? Because we will all die, and if a person dies as a martyr in God’s Way, this is an additional gift. Yet most people are ungrateful because they do not know the extent of the blessing inherent in the things which the True Lord the Most High sends to them; for if people knew the extent of the blessings inherent in the events which the True Lord the Most High sends upon them concerning life and death, they would thank God for everything that happens to them. The True Lord the Most High only sends upon mankind, His handiwork, that which rectifies this handiwork and that which is good for this handiwork.

The True Lord the Most High preserved the lesson of what He sent upon some of the children of Israel in order for us to see that fighting in God’s Way is one of God’s blessings upon His servants, for there is no fleeing from God’s destiny. An Arab poet put it like this:

O you who would hold me back from attending the battle
And bid me seek pleasure: can you give me eternal life?
If you are unable to ward off my destiny,
Let me, then, meet it with all of my powers.

The poet is saying to the one who calls him not to fight, but, instead, to enjoy life’s pleasures: As long as you cannot give me eternal life, and you cannot keep death away from me, let me go and fight in God’s cause with all my powers.

After speaking about the attempt of some of the children of Israel to flee from God’s destiny so that He caused them to die with compulsion and then raised them back to life with compulsion – and this is a clear lesson for the believers who would be faced with the matter of fighting in God’s Way, telling them: Do not worry, O believers, that fighting will cause you to die since death can come at any time. After this, the True Lord the Most High says:

وَقَٰتِلُواْ فِي سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ وَٱعۡلَمُوٓاْ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ سَمِيعٌ عَلِيمٞ ٢٤٤

Fight in God’s cause and remember that He is all hearing and all knowing [244] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 244)

This is a clear command to fight in God’s Way without fearing death. Why? This is due to the fact that the One who gives life and ordains its term is ‘…All-Hearing, All Knowing.’ He hears all that those who fight say, and knows their intentions.

In the past, struggling (in combat) was a heavy burden for the one who did it because he would have to spend on himself, and his mount – a horse or camel – and his weapon. Every warrior would have to equip himself for war; and if he was prepared to give up his life, he was all the more prepared to give up his wealth, and to equip himself for war. Because of this, to fight with one’s life and wealth was essential. God the Most High says, ‘And fight in the Way of God…’ that is, fight with your own life; then He the Exalted moves on to the matter of wealth, saying:

مَّن ذَا ٱلَّذِي يُقۡرِضُ ٱللَّهَ قَرۡضًا حَسَنٗا فَيُضَٰعِفَهُۥ لَهُۥٓ أَضۡعَافٗا
كَثِيرَةٗۚ وَٱللَّهُ يَقۡبِضُ وَيَبۡصُۜطُ وَإِلَيۡهِ تُرۡجَعُونَ ٢٤٥

Who will give God a good loan, which He will increase for him many times over? It is God who withholds and God who gives abundantly, and it is to Him that you will return [245] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 245)

When you hear the words ‘lend to God a goodly loan,’ this is a tremendous matter since when you give a person a loan, it is as though you are giving God a loan, but the matter is not clear. Why? Because that person will benefit directly, whilst when you spend in God’s Way, you do not give something to a specific person, but rather, you give to the general spirit of religion, and your dealing therein is with God. It is as though, when you spend money to equip yourself for war, you give a loan to God.

By using the word ‘loan’, the True Lord the Most High wants to alert us to the fact that He is seeking from us an action which is not easy for the human soul; and He the Exalted knows the nature of the soul. The Arabic word for 'loan' (qard) literally means to gnaw at something with one's teeth. He the Exalted knows that loaning is a difficult thing, and in order to show people that He knows its difficulty, He says 'lend to God a goodly loan.' He appreciates its difficulty, and He rewards it according to this difficulty.

'Who is it that will lend to God a goodly loan…?' What is a goodly loan? If you give a loan to one of God's servants, is this not a goodly loan? First of all, if you give a loan to one of God's servants, it is as though you have given a loan to God. It is true that you give a person that which allows him to get out of a difficult situation, and it is also true that when you engage in struggle, you do not give anything to a specific person, but rather, you give to God directly. He the Exalted tells us: Whoever gives a loan to my servants, thereby gives a loan to Me. How? Because God is the One Who called all of His servants into existence; and if one of His servants needs something, his need is for his provision in this world. So if a servant gives to his brother, it is as though he is giving a loan to God, who took it upon Himself to provide for this needy person.

God's words '…lend to God a goodly loan…' indicate to us that the loan is not wasted because a loan is something you give from your wealth in the expectation that you will get it back; and He the Exalted assures you that He is the One Who is borrowing from you, and He will give back what He has borrowed – not in the form you gave it, but rather in a form which has been multiplied many times over: the principal is secured, and increased. This is why He says, 'Who is it that will lend to God a goodly loan? He will multiply it for him many times over….' It is increased manifold according to the standards of God the Most High, not our human standards.

The use of the expression 'goodly loan' here indicates to us that the source of the wealth which you loan must be lawful, which is why it was said of the woman who gave charity from money earned by prostitution: 'Would that she had not prostituted herself, and given no charity.'

It is said that the reward for lending is more than the reward for charity even though in the case of charity one gives the whole thing away whilst a loan is a debt which is repaid to the one who gives it. This is because the sting of giving charity is a one-time thing as it is kind of giving the money and then, giving up all hope of seeing it again; yet, you attach yourself to a loan, and every time you are patient, this is as another good deed to your account. Moreover, the one to whom you give charity might not really be needy whilst no one seeks a loan unless they are truly in need.

Lending money from what you have, makes your money decrease, which is why God the Most High repays you for this loan with manifold increase; this perfectly fits His words '…withholds and grants abundance…' in His saying, '…And it is God who withholds and grants abundance, and to Him you will be returned', which means when we go to Him and each of us takes his right at the reckoning; that is to say, the money that you loan out appears to decrease, but God the Most High will increase it and repay it abundantly with manifold increase, and in the Hereafter the reward will be great.

God the Most High then brings up another matter which He introduces with His words 'Did thou not see…' [al-Baqara: 246], to emphasise that the report which will come after them is a true event, just as true as if one had seen it. He the Exalted says:

أَلَمْ تَرَ إِلَى ٱلْمَلَإِ مِنۢ بَنِىٓ إِسْرَٰٓءِيلَ مِنۢ بَعْدِ مُوسَىٰٓ إِذْ قَالُوا۟ لِنَبِىٍّ لَّهُمُ ٱبْعَثْ لَنَا مَلِكًا
نُّقَٰتِلْ فِى سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ ۖ قَالَ هَلْ عَسَيْتُمْ إِن كُتِبَ عَلَيْكُمُ ٱلْقِتَالُ أَلَّا تُقَٰتِلُوا۟ ۖ
قَالُوا۟ وَمَا لَنَآ أَلَّا نُقَٰتِلَ فِى سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ وَقَدْ أُخْرِجْنَا مِن دِيَٰرِنَا وَأَبْنَآئِنَا ۖ فَلَمَّا
كُتِبَ عَلَيْهِمُ ٱلْقِتَالُ تَوَلَّوْا۟ إِلَّا قَلِيلًا مِّنْهُمْ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ عَلِيمٌۢ بِٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ ﴿٢٤٦﴾

[Prophet], consider the leaders of the Children of Israel who came after Moses, when they said to one of their prophets, 'Set up a king for us and we shall fight in God's cause.' He said, 'But could it be that you would not fight, if it were ordained for you?' They said, 'How could we not fight in God's cause when we and our children have been driven out of our homeland?' Yet when they were commanded to fight, all but a few of them turned away: God has full knowledge of those who do wrong [246]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 246)

The True Lord the Most High is giving us information through words we hear from Him, and we must receive this as though we see the incident with our eyes. What do we see? ‘Did you not see the assembly…?’ What does ‘assembly’ (mala’) mean? It is derived from the verb meaning ‘to fill up’ as a vessel fills up so that, there is no place for it to take any more, and that the container is so filled by what it contains that it cannot take anything else. The word (mala’) is used to mean the nobles of a community because it is as though the nobles of a community fill the life of all that is around them so that no one else can displace them. The ‘assembly’ then are the nobles and leaders of the people, who sit to hold council.

‘Did you not see the assembly of the Children of Israel after [the time of] Moses….’ That is, have you not heard of the leaders and nobles of the people after the time of Moses peace be upon him? For example, they may be those in the time of Joshua, Ezekiel, or Samuel peace be upon them, or any one of them. This does not concern us since the Quran does not mention what era it was. What is important is that they came after Moses peace be upon him; ‘…when they said to a prophet of theirs, “Send to us a king, and we will fight in the Way of God”?’

The nobles of the children of Israel gathered to hold council, then, went to the prophet of their time and said to him, ‘Send to us a king.’ From this, we can infer that they had no king; and what can we learn from it being mentioned that they had a prophet, but no king?

We can understand from this that prophethood was concerned with supervising the carrying out of actions, and not carrying them out directly; the king was the one who carried out actions directly. If prophethood directly carried out actions, they would not have asked their prophet to send a king for them. The reason for this is that the one who acts directly is likely to be the subject of hatred from many people, and subject to failure in some of the affairs he manages; and so instead of them directing failure at the highest level, they transferred it to someone lower: the king. This is why they asked the prophet to send them a king to revise the management of things so that prophethood would be a source of truth, not an object of criticism in any way.

The True Lord the Most High tells us that He said to the prophet of the children of Israel: ‘You are the ones who asked to fight, and you are the elders’ – that is, the nobles of the people – ‘and you came with the reason for fighting, which is that you were expelled from your homes and your children’ – that is, you were subjected to such ignominy that you no longer have homes, and you were subjected to such ignominy that you no longer have children after your enemy captured them all. So the reason for asking to fight was there, but despite this, their prophet said to them, '…"Would you perhaps refrain from fighting if fighting was ordained for you?"….' Their prophet made the stipulation clear to them, saying: I fear that I might bring you a king so that you may fight in God's Way, and then God will make it obligatory for you to fight, but when we actually come to the harsh reality of the matter, you will not have the resolve to fight, and will capitulate.

But they said, '…"And why should we not fight in the Way of God when we have been driven out from our homes and our children?"…' Look at the exactness of how they said they wanted to fight 'in the Way of God,' and then attached this to their having been driven from their homes and their children! They wanted to turn things around, and say that their fighting was in God's Way, after they had suffered the experience of being hurt in those things they loved, namely their homes and children. So God is the refuge for all things, and He the Exalted accepted what they said, and considered their fighting to be in His Way.

That they were driven from their homes makes sense; but how could they be driven from their children? They must have left their children to the enemy, and the enemy might have taken them captives. But they were the ones who were driven from their homes, and their relationship with their children is like that which the poet described thus: If you set out to leave a people who had the ability keep you with them [but did not exercise it], it is they who are leaving. Look at the examination here; they were the assembly of the elders of the Children of Israel, and they went to their prophet saying, 'Send to us a king,' so that they could make a lawful war to fight in God's Way; and the prophet said to them what he said, and they said to him, '…"And why should we not fight in the Way of God …"' that is, 'How could we not fight in God's Way?'

So, the command for them to fight was issued, as God the Most High says, '…But when fighting was ordained for them, they turned away….' His word 'was ordained' (in the passive voice) means that they were the ones who asked to be allowed to fight, so, God made them part of the covenant, which is why the word 'was ordained' was used, not 'He ordained'. Yet despite this, they turned away, that is, they refused to fight. Their prophet was right in doubting their willingness to fight and in saying to them, '…"Would you perhaps refrain from fighting if fighting was ordained for you?"…' But did they all refuse to fight? No; for there were some of them who could have been described by the poet's words:

The One who made the truth bitter
Did not leave a single generation bereft of people of truth.

There were some among them who did not reject the command to fight but they were a minority. This is a necessary preparation for what was to come; so, if the majority capitulate, and the masses disappear from around you, do not say, 'I am a minority;' for it is not the large number of the group that counts, but rather, what counts is the True Lord's help and support.

Your enemies might be legion, but they have no aid from the Most-High Divinity; and you might be few in number, but you have the aid of the Most-High Divinity. This is what the True Lord the Most High wants us to be aware of when He says, '…But when fighting was ordained for them, they turned away, except for a few of them….' The words 'except for a few of them' came to impart a certain matter, which is why at the end of the story God the Most High says, '…How often has a small company overcome a large company by permission of God...' (al-Baqara: 249).

That is, victory comes by God's leave. So the thing witnessed is one, but the point of view of those who witness it differs according to their stores of faith. You see a beautiful flower and the vision is shared by all; it pleases you, you look after it, and leave it intact for its beauty to be enjoyed by you and by others; someone else sees it and thoughtlessly picks it, not caring who its owner is. In this way you see that inclinations differ from one person to another. The enemy before us might be many, whilst we are few, and all of us see the enemy as being many and see ourselves as being few, yet, feelings differ: I will consider myself to be accompanied by my Lord, whilst someone else sees them as being many and says, 'We cannot handle them,' because he has not included his Lord in the count.

‘…But when fighting was ordained for them, they turned away, except for a few of them. And God has knowledge of the wrongdoers.’ So, to turn away is to wrong oneself because one of the basic meanings of wrongdoing is to give someone’s right to someone else; you were expelled from your home, and you remained in this state, and thereby you wronged yourself, and wronged your children who were taken from you, and you did not take them back; and above all this, you were doing wrong to your religion.

Those who turned away thereby wronged themselves, their families, their society, and their religion. God’s words ‘…and God has knowledge of the wrongdoers’ indicate that God was cognisant of those who crept away secretly, wanting to destroy the morale of the people, those who today are known as the ‘fifth column,’ who subvert morale without anyone seeing them; but God knows them.

These people from the children of Israel asked their prophet to raise up a king for them; and it was enough for the prophet who was sent to them to choose for them the king under whose banner they would fight, but they increased in their reluctance and obstinacy, and wanted to shift the issue to something not connected with religion. The True Lord the Most High then says:

وَقَالَ لَهُمۡ نَبِيُّهُمۡ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ قَدۡ بَعَثَ لَكُمۡ طَالُوتَ مَلِكٗاۚ قَالُوٓاْ أَنَّىٰ
يَكُونُ لَهُ ٱلۡمُلۡكُ عَلَيۡنَا وَنَحۡنُ أَحَقُّ بِٱلۡمُلۡكِ مِنۡهُ وَلَمۡ يُؤۡتَ سَعَةٗ مِّنَ
ٱلۡمَالِۚ قَالَ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ ٱصۡطَفَىٰهُ عَلَيۡكُمۡ وَزَادَهُۥ بَسۡطَةٗ فِي ٱلۡعِلۡمِ وَٱلۡجِسۡمِۖ
وَٱللَّهُ يُؤۡتِي مُلۡكَهُۥ مَن يَشَآءُۚ وَٱللَّهُ وَٰسِعٌ عَلِيمٞ ﴿٢٤٧﴾

Their prophet said to them, ‘God has now appointed Talout to be your king,’ but they said, ‘How can he be king over us when we have a greater right to rule than he? He does not even have great wealth.’ He said, ‘God has chosen him over you, and has given him great knowledge and stature. God grants His authority to whoever He pleases: God is magnanimous, all knowing’ [247] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 247)

They were the ones who asked their prophet to raise up a king for them, and it was sufficient, then, for their prophet to choose someone and give him sovereignty over them. But their prophet wanted to implant in them respect for the one he raised as their king, so, He said to them, '…Indeed, God has sent to you Saul (Talout) as a king….' The Prophet who said this belonged to them, and was one of them, and when they asked him to raise up a king for them, they knew that he could reliably do this.

The manners of prophetic behaviour were manifested here when the prophet said, '…Indeed, God has sent to you Saul (Talout) as a king….' He wanted to reassure them that the choice of Saul as king was not his own choice because he was a human being like them. He wanted to remove his human nature from the equation, so, he said, '…Indeed, God has sent to you Saul (Talout) as a king….' And what was their response? '…They said, "How can he have kingship over us while we are more worthy of kingship than he is and he has not been given abundance of wealth?"…' This was the beginning of the reluctance and obstinacy and shifting the issue to something unconnected with religion.

They wanted prominence and wealth, whilst they should have taken the matter on the grounds that the king had come for their own good because they were the ones who asked for him to lead them in war. The matter of choosing the king was for their sake, and for their own good, so why did they imagine that the choice was against their interest, and not for their own good?

Something else we can understand from their words 'How can he have kingship over us …?' It is that this Saul was not a prominent person. Usually when the goings get tough for a community, they begin to think of who will lead them, and usually there are a few prominent personalities about whom these thoughts revolve, and the community thinks that it is possible that one of these people will be chosen. Heaven's choice of Saul was the opposite of what this community expected, and Saul was an unknown person, which can be inferred from the fact that they said 'How can he have kingship over us…?' that is, he never had kingship before.

They ascribed themselves to two lineages: One line had been granted prophethood, namely the line of Benjamin peace be upon him, whilst the other had been given kingship, namely the line of Levi, son of Jacob peace be upon them. When he said to them, 'Indeed, God has sent to you Saul (Talout) as a king,' they began searching for the records of his lineage, and found that he was descended from neither one of them, and this is why they said, ‘How can he have kingship over us…?’ This shows us that when people want a particular situation to exist, they do not want the man who is best for the job, but rather, the man who is best for themselves, which is shown by their words: ‘How can he have kingship over us while we are more worthy of kingship than him…?’

Does kingship come by arrogance and pride? As long as Saul was an unknown person, the True Lord the Most High wanted to tell something to every believer which is that when you want to choose, do not let yourself be duped by lineage, descent, or fame, but rather choose the best person from those who have experience, not merely the people of authority. They ignored the fact that the thing they sought from their prophet required two qualities: a man of physical strength, and a man of knowledge; and in Saul, God had chosen for them a man of both physical strength and knowledge.

When we reflect on the contextual flow of the verses, we find that at first God the Most High said, ‘has sent to you,’ so that none of them would be troubled by thinking Saul to be better than he is; but when they were obstinate, he said to them, ‘…Indeed, God has chosen him over you…’ with these words confirming that there was no one among those of them who possessed skill and physical strength who also possessed knowledge, and there was no one among those of them who possessed knowledge who also possessed skill and physical strength. ‘Indeed, God has chosen him over you and has increased him abundantly in knowledge and stature….’ They should have received God’s choice of Saul to be king with acceptance and satisfaction; and so what about if He also endowed him with knowledge and physical strength?

Being gifted with knowledge and physical strength were the qualifications which suited the task for which they wanted a king, which is why the True Lord the Most High said, ‘…And God gives His sovereignty to whom He wills….’ It is as though the True Lord the Most High were saying to them: Do not think that you are the one who will nominate the right king for yourselves; it is enough for you that you asked Me to send you a king, so, leave Me to choose the right king according to My own standards.

The True Lord the Most High concludes the verse by saying, '…And God is All-Encompassing, Knowing.' That is, for every situation He has a ruling, and for every position He has the right man, and He the Exalted well knows who is right for this task, and who is right for that one; not out of scarcity or paucity of men, but rather, out of infinitude and knowledge.

They received this Divine choice with obstinacy, and obstinacy is a kind of stubbornness which can only be ended with something which is directly visible to be seen and which constitutes absolute proof; so, it was necessary for a miracle to come, and for this reason the True Lord the Most High then, said:

وَقَالَ لَهُمۡ نَبِيُّهُمۡ إِنَّ ءَايَةَ مُلۡكِهِۦٓ أَن يَأۡتِيَكُمُ ٱلتَّابُوتُ فِيهِ
سَكِينَةٞ مِّن رَّبِّكُمۡ وَبَقِيَّةٞ مِّمَّا تَرَكَ ءَالُ مُوسَىٰ وَءَالُ هَٰرُونَ
تَحۡمِلُهُ ٱلۡمَلَٰٓئِكَةُۚ إِنَّ فِي ذَٰلِكَ لَأٓيَةٗ لَّكُمۡ إِن كُنتُم مُّؤۡمِنِينَ ٢٤٨

Their prophet said to them, 'The sign of his authority will be that the Ark [of the Covenant] will come to you. In it there will be [the gift of] tranquillity from your Lord and relics of the followers of Moses and Aaron, carried by the angels. There is a sign in this for you if you believe' [248]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 248)

The True Lord the Most High sent with King Saul a sign to show he was chosen by God to be king, and their prophet said to them, '…Indeed, the sign of his kingship is that the ark will come to you….' That is, the sign which indicates his kingship is that 'the ark will come to you.' We can infer from this that the ark was absent and missing, and that it was something known to them, and that they were anxiously awaiting its coming.

What is the 'ark'? The Arabic word for ark (taboot) appears twice in the Quran: once in the verse which we are currently examining, and another time in the account that God the Most High told Moses about his childhood when God instructed Moses's mother with inspiration to place Moses the child in a taboot (chest) and throw it into the river, and thereupon the river will cast him ashore, and one who is an enemy to God and an enemy to him (to Moses) will adopt him. And then God told Moses that He thus spread His love over him – and this was in order that he might grow and be formed under God's eye (Ta Ha: 38-39).

So, we know the ark from the days of the infancy of Moses peace be upon him, when his mother feared for his life, so, God the Most High inspired to her when she had cause to fear for him, to cast him into the river (al-Qasas: 7). Is this, then, the same ark which the verses we are now examining speak of?

It is likely that it is the same one because as long as it is referred to in this unrestricted way, it must mean the well-known ark. It is as though the means by which Moses peace be upon him was saved had a history with Moses, Pharaoh, their prophet, and Saul. From this, we can infer that we must take care of the relics connected with significant moments in the history of religion, and we should not say that they are objects of disbelief and idolatry; this is because they have a connection to doctrinal matters, and historical events, and a connection to sacred things. Look at the ark which contained the relics of that which the Houses of Moses and Aaron peace be upon them left behind them, borne by the angels: this shows that it is something significant and important.

So, the relics which have a link and a connection to the events of religion and prophethood are very important to faith. It is as though the Quran is saying: Leave them as they are, and take counsel and admonition from them because they remind you of sacred things. The ark was lost, which indicates that an enemy had overcome the land in which they lived; and when an enemy lusts after a land, he first tries to destroy the sacred objects which link the land to the religion. If the ark was sacred to them in this way, their enemies must have taken it. These enemies are the ones who expelled them from their homelands in their thousands in fear of death; and if they expelled them from their homelands, they would certainly have forced them to leave the ark.

God the Most High was assuring them that the sign of the kingship of Saul would be the coming of the ark which they were anxiously awaiting and which was connected to their sacred things. The sign was '…that the ark will come to you in which is assurance from your Lord….' So, psychological serenity will come to you with this ark because when one finds the ark in which a prophet was saved, containing things which we will soon come to know, he feels the peace of his connection with Heaven, a physical connection which makes the soul find peace.

For example, think about how you would feel if it was said to you, ‘This is the Quranic manuscript from which our master ‘Uthman God be pleased with him used to read.’ It is a book like any other, but what makes it special is that our master ‘Uthman God be pleased with him used to read from it, and you find inner peace when you see it. Also, you might go to the seat of the Caliphate in Turkey, and be told, ‘This is the sword with which Imam 'Ali God be pleased with him used to fight,’ and find that its weight is like that of ten swords, and marvel at how Imam 'Ali God be pleased with him used to hold it and fight with it.

Likewise, when it is said to you, ‘This is one of the hairs of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him,’ or ‘this is the container where he kept his kuhl’, there is no doubt that seeing such things will bring illumination and tranquillity in your heart; and when a person who has some doubts or fears sees them, faith will become stable in his heart.

Because of all this, I say that authority figures should not consider sacred objects to be objects of idolatry and paganism, but rather, they must take care of them and protect them, and show them to the people so that, they will be a source of inner peace and spiritual wellbeing for the people. They should advise people not to become infatuated by them, but they must leave them to remind us of those things connected to our doctrine and our Prophet peace and blessings be upon him.

Look at what the Quran says about the ark. The True Lord the Most High did not say, ‘The ark will come in a state of wholeness,’ and He did not say that it was the ark in which Moses peace be upon him was placed, but rather He only said it has ‘…assurance from your Lord and relics of what the family of Moses and the family of Aaron had left….’ It is as though the Houses of Moses and Aaron peace be upon them had looked after the relics of their prophets. Also, His words ‘carried by the angels’ confirm for us that there is no doubt that a relic carried by the angels must be something momentous of which the greatest care must be taken. ‘…Indeed, the sign of his kingship is that the ark will come to you….’

Notice that when He says, ‘the ark will come to you,’ God the Most High ascribes the act of coming to the ark itself. Was it part of the sign that the ark would come forth as they sat and watched? And because the ark was carried by the angels, no one would see them because they are invisible beings, so, no one would see them but rather, everyone would see the ark coming to them; which is why the True Lord the Most High ascribed the act of coming to the ark itself.

This sight would quicken the hearts, and make those who possessed the hardest of hearts fall down in prostration, saying, ‘O Saul, you are the king, and we will not object to you.’ We now want to know which relics of Moses peace be upon him his house were able to save, and which relics of Aaron peace be upon him his house were able to save.

Some people say that it was the staff of Moses peace be upon him, and that this was the relic which remained from the House of Moses. This makes sense since it was one of the tools of Moses’s miracle. Was it not the miracle which turned into a rapidly-moving snake and quickly swallowed all that the sorcerers had concocted? Moses peace be upon him would certainly not neglect a miraculous tool such as this, nor would those who believed in him, after what it did; and it does not make sense that the House of Moses would be careless with a staff about which God the Most High asked Moses what this is in his right hand and he answered that it is his staff; he leans on it (Ta Ha: 17-18).

There is a long story told about this staff, so, how could Moses peace be upon him and his people easily be careless with it? They must have looked after it, and deemed it sacred, and made it one of their prize possessions. The True Lord the Most High is showing us that these people were obstinate, argumentative, and hesitant, and that they did not believe in things unless they were tangible, like the ark which came to them alone; it is true that the angels carried it, but they could not see the angels, and they only saw the ark coming to them. The ark ‘…will come to you in which is assurance from your Lord and relics of what the family of Moses and the family of Aaron had left, carried by the angels. Indeed in that is a sign for you, if you are believers.’ There are no signs more wondrous than the coming of the ark in order to prove the veracity of the prophet in that God had sent Saul as a king. If they could not believe in such a thing, they needed to re-examine their faith.

The flow of the Quranic discourse indicates that God the Most High silenced them with this argument and silenced them with this sign, and silenced them with the ark; this is implied by the omission of what needed to be said here, namely: So, they accepted Saul as their king, and Saul arranged the preparations for war, and divided the troops and set them in place. The verses do not mention any of these details. The True Lord the Most High then says:

فَلَمَّا فَصَلَ طَالُوتُ بِٱلۡجُنُودِ قَالَ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ مُبۡتَلِيكُم بِنَهَرٖ فَمَن شَرِبَ مِنۡهُ
فَلَيۡسَ مِنِّي وَمَن لَّمۡ يَطۡعَمۡهُ فَإِنَّهُۥ مِنِّيٓ إِلَّا مَنِ ٱغۡتَرَفَ غُرۡفَةَۢ بِيَدِهِۦۚ فَشَرِبُواْ مِنۡهُ إِلَّا
قَلِيلٗا مِّنۡهُمۡۚ فَلَمَّا جَاوَزَهُۥ هُوَ وَٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ مَعَهُۥ قَالُواْ لَا طَاقَةَ لَنَا ٱلۡيَوۡمَ
بِجَالُوتَ وَجُنُودِهِۦۚ قَالَ ٱلَّذِينَ يَظُنُّونَ أَنَّهُم مُّلَٰقُواْ ٱللَّهِ كَم مِّن فِئَةٖ
قَلِيلَةٍ غَلَبَتۡ فِئَةٗ كَثِيرَةَۢ بِإِذۡنِ ٱللَّهِۗ وَٱللَّهُ مَعَ ٱلصَّٰبِرِينَ ٢٤٩

When Talout set out with his forces, he said to them, ‘God will test you with a river. Anyone who drinks from it will not belong with me, but anyone who refrains from tasting it will belong with me; if he scoops up just one handful [he will be excused].’ But they all drank [deep] from it, except for a few. When he crossed it with those who had kept faith, they said, ‘We have no strength today against Goliath and his warriors.’ But those who knew that they were going to meet their Lord said, ‘How often a small force has defeated a large army with God’s permission! God is with those who are steadfast’ [249] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 249)

The Arabic word fasala (rendered here as ‘went forth’) literally means for one thing to separate from another. We have another example of the word used in the Quran when God the Most High tells of when the caravan, with which Jacob’s sons were travelling, fasalat (was on its way/broke away), their father said to the people around him that he truly feels the breath of Joseph (Yusuf: 94).

The statement: ‘The caravan broke away’, means that it left Egypt and went out of it. We also use the word fasl to mean the sections of chapters in a book, meaning an amount of connected information which forms a single whole so that when the sections of a book are placed together they form chapters; and when the chapters concerning a particular science are placed together, we call this a ‘book.’

We also use the word fasl to mean a ‘class’ or ‘grade’, that is, a group of pupils of the same age and academic level, and we separate them into class one, class two, class three, and so on according to how many classes and pupils there are. In this way, we understand that the words of the True Lord the Most High 'And when Saul went forth with the soldiers…' mean that he separated them from the non-combatants, and divided them into arrayed sections, each one with its own mission.

The Arabic word for 'soldiers' (junud) is the plural of (jund), which is a singular word that indicates plurality. The root of the word is janad, which means strong, hard, thick earth; and since soldiers should be hard and strong; the word jund was applied to them. Although the word jund is in the singular form, it refers to a group of people, just like the words 'troop' and 'band'; and these kinds of words are called 'collective nouns'. 'And when Saul went forth with the soldiers, he said, 'Indeed, God will be testing you with a river….' That is, when he went to the place where the army was camped, he began to perform his first mission as king. He wanted to test them, as they had been opposed to his being appointed king, so, he wanted to plant his rule in firm soil. He said to them, on behalf of the True Lord the Most High, '…"Indeed, God will be testing you with a river. Whoever drinks from it, is not of me, and whoever does not taste it, is indeed of me, excepting one who takes [from it] in the hollow of his hand.' But they drank from it, except a [very] few of them."…' He made it clear to them: You are about to undertake a mission for God, in God's Way, and He is the One Who will subject you to a test, not I; for the test is commensurate with the mission at hand. I am only here to see that the command is obeyed, and God will now test you by a river: he who will drink of it will not belong to us, except one who scoops up but a single handful.

When you hear the words 'will be testing you,' do not explain this as being an unfortunate thing, but rather see it as a trial which some might pass and others fail. The test here was by a river; and as long as the test was by a river, this word must have had psychological relevance and meaning for them. They must have been thirsty, for if they were not thirsty, the river would not have been a trial. '…"Indeed, God will be testing you with a river. So whoever drinks from it is not of me …"'

They were thirsty, and when water was spotted they would have rushed to it ravenously to drink it and quench their thirst. Given this, the True Lord the Most High tested their firmness of resolve by instructing them to refrain from drinking it. The test came by keeping them from that which their souls craved: '…So whoever drinks from it is not of me….' But why is it so? It is so because when they saw what they loved and desired, they would be drawn to it, and would forget about God's command; and if someone forgets God's command and favours himself over it, he is not worthy of being in God's soldiers. But as for the one who sees the water and refrains from it although he is in need of it, he is a man of steadfastness and self-control, and he will be a part of God's soldiers since he preferred God's requirement to the requirement of his own belly, and he is fit to undergo the trial.

Despite this, God the Most High did not make the trial excessively difficult and allowed them enough to take the edge of their thirst, not barring them from it completely: '…"Indeed, God will be testing you with a river. So whoever drinks from it is not of me, and whoever does not taste it is indeed of me, excepting one who takes [from it] in the hollow of his hand."…' He allowed them to take a single handful to allay their thirst and keep them alive, and He allowed them enough to meet necessity. But what does this trial have to do with the action they were set to undertake?

The act of war which they were about to undertake would cause them to encounter grave affliction, and to be exposed to the exhaustion of provisions; and they were also exposed to the possibility of their enemies blockading them. In such situations, a warrior must be able to resist his desires, and only use enough of his provisions and water to keep himself alive; and a single handful of water is enough to sustain life. It is as though this training was necessary for the mission; but did they do this?

The True Lord the Most High tells us: '…But they drank from it, except a [very] few of them….' In this way, the purification was completed: in the beginning, they turned their backs and refused to fight, save a few of them, and now only a few of these few refrained from drinking. These were the sieves of election, or the filters of testing; one person might be able to withstand half the hardship, and another might be able to withstand a third of it, and another might be able to withstand a quarter of it. A few of them remained, but these were the few who were right for the mission, and had retained their faith.

Look at the filters of trial for struggling in God's Way so that no one bears the banner of the struggle except those who are worthy of doing so and know what it entails. '…Then when he had crossed it along with those who believed with him, they said, "We have no strength today against Goliath and his soldiers."…' That is, when they crossed the river, having passed all the foregoing tests, some of them said, '…"We have no strength today against Goliath and his soldiers."…" Some of them feared the final test, but those who believed in God did not fear, as the True Lord the Most High says, '…But those who were certain that they would meet God said, "How many a small company has overcome a large company by permission of God. And God is with the patient."'

Their feelings and responses were different although they all were looking upon the same scene. So those who crossed the river were divided into two groups: one group saw Goliath and his forces, and the other group saw the same thing; they were not divided concerning what they saw, but rather, they were divided concerning how they felt and responded concerning what they saw: one group feared whilst the other did not. Those who feared said, 'We have no strength today against Goliath and his soldiers.' Fear of Goliath and his forces arose in their souls, so, they said, 'We have no strength today against Goliath and his soldiers.' They went through three stages: The first stage was that they saw Goliath and his forces; the second stage was that they felt apprehension because of the power of Goliath and his forces, and the final stage was that they began to fear Goliath and his forces. But the group that did not fear, saw the same thing, and God the Most High said of them, '…But those who were certain that they would meet God said, "How many a small company has overcome a large company by permission of God."…'

It is as though they included their Lord in their assessment so that they took their enemy lightly; but the other group detached themselves from their Lord so that they saw themselves as the lesser group, and felt fear. The mere supposition of the believing group that they would meet God was enough to give them this belief; and if this was the case for mere supposition, what about absolute certainty? '…"How many a small company has overcome a large company by permission of God. And God is with the patient."' We know that there are battles in which those who have the most steadfast patience are the victors, and our evidence for this is the words of the True Lord the Most High in reminding His Messenger when he gave the glad tidings to the believers that their Lord will support them by sending down three thousand angels to help them in the battle of Badr (Al-'Imran: 124).

This is the promise; but if you have patience, what will the aid be? The True Lord the Most High reassures the believers that if they are steadfast in adversity and they fear Him, and the enemy should fall upon them in hot haste, their Lord will aid them with five thousand angels with their marks (Al-'Imran: 125).

It is as though the starting position is three thousand angels to aid the people of faith, and then this is increased to five thousand if they have patience and fear God. So aid comes in a way which is proportionate to the people's patience, because the compassion of the Divine Omnipotence for you increases when He finds you are bearing hardships; He has compassion for you, and gives you even more. God wants His servant to utilise all of his personal means of power; and when you utilise all these means with manliness and firmness, God's aid comes to you, and God says to His angels: This one deserves to be aided, so, aid him. For this reason, God the Most High stated the statement of the believers: '…"How many a small company has overcome a large company by permission of God. And God is with the patient."'

The True Lord the Most High then says:

وَلَمَّا بَرَزُواْ لِجَالُوتَ وَجُنُودِهِۦ قَالُواْ رَبَّنَآ أَفْرِغْ عَلَيْنَا صَبْرًا
وَثَبِّتْ أَقْدَامَنَا وَٱنصُرْنَا عَلَى ٱلْقَوْمِ ٱلْكَٰفِرِينَ ﴿٢٥٠﴾

And when they met Goliath and his warriors, they said, 'Our Lord, pour patience on us, make us stand firm, and help us against the disbelievers' [250]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 250)

This is the charge of faith for all who wish to face their enemy, calling out, 'O our Lord.' They do not call, 'O God,' but rather, 'O our Lord' because the Lord is the One Who undertakes sustenance and provision, whilst the implication of 'God' is worship and moral responsibility. This is why the believer calls upon his Lord in difficult times, saying ‘O our Lord,’ that is, ‘O You Who created us, and Who provides for us and aids us with means.’ The believers, who were with Saul, said: ‘…“O our Lord, pour upon us steadfastness, and set firm our feet, and give us victory over the infidels.”’

When we reflect on the words ‘…pour upon us steadfastness,’ this tells us that they asked God to fill their hearts with patience; and the effect of patience is to make firm one’s steps: ‘…and set firm our feet…’ so that they could face the enemy with faith; and at the end of patience and making firm their steps, God’s victory came to the believers against the disbelievers, and the result of the faithful resolve and fighting comes in God’s words:

فَهَزَمُوهُم بِإِذۡنِ ٱللَّهِ وَقَتَلَ دَاوُۥدُ جَالُوتَ وَءَاتَىٰهُ ٱللَّهُ ٱلۡمُلۡكَ
وَٱلۡحِكۡمَةَ وَعَلَّمَهُۥ مِمَّا يَشَآءُۗ وَلَوۡلَا دَفۡعُ ٱللَّهِ ٱلنَّاسَ بَعۡضَهُم بِبَعۡضٖ
لَّفَسَدَتِ ٱلۡأَرۡضُ وَلَٰكِنَّ ٱللَّهَ ذُو فَضۡلٍ عَلَى ٱلۡعَٰلَمِينَ ٢٥١ and so with God’s permission they defeated them. David killed Goliath, and God gave him sovereignty and wisdom and taught him what He pleased. If God did not drive some back by means of others the earth would be completely corrupt, but God is bountiful to all [251]

(The Quran, al-Baqara: 251)

The True Lord the Most High tells us that He gave victory to those who believed in Him; and the True Lord used the expression ‘they defeated them,’ which indicates that those who should have been on the attack turned away and fled. The warrior should always be attacking; and when he resorts to turning away, we need to stop to clarify his situation: is this retreat a strategy of war, and a way of getting to another position which is a more advantageous spot in which to fight? If this was the case, it does not mean defeat. But if the retreat was not for any strategy to beguile the enemy, but rather out of fear, this means defeat.

God the Most High says, ‘So they defeated them by permission of God…’ which indicates that the forces of Goliath were not all killed, but rather, the leaders of disbelief amongst them were killed; and this is indicated by what God the Most High says next, '…And David killed Goliath….' Goliath was the leader of the disbelieving army which fled, and David peace be upon him chased him and killed him. For the first time, the name 'David' appears in this long story, and we do not have any information about this name up to this point; and information will come about him after this story, when God the Most High says that He graced David with His favour and ordered the mountains to sing with him the praise of God, and also the birds. And He made iron pliable for him and commanded him to make full coats of mail and calculate precisely the links, and commanded all to do good deeds; indeed, God is seeing of what they do (Saba': 10-11).

So, the beginning of David's story came with this battle, after he killed Goliath. David peace be upon him was the youngest of eleven brothers, and the prophet said to the people, 'The man who will enter the battle against Goliath is the one who fits in the armour of Moses peace be upon him.' David's father tried the armour on all of his sons, and it fit only one of them: the youngest, David peace be upon him. The armour fit him, and David peace be upon him entered the battle and killed Goliath, the leader of the idolaters; and the wisdom of God decreed that the youngest man amongst the believers would be the one to kill the leader of the idolaters' army.

This battle was the beginning of the history of David peace be upon him, and this battle brought him a mighty victory; and then God the Most High blessed him with kingship and wisdom, and made the mountains and the birds repeat with him expressions of the glory and transcendence of God; and all of this was the result of his killing of Goliath. David peace be upon him loved the armour, and it became his hope that God might teach him to make armours, which is why he never took up any craft in his life except the making of armours. God made iron malleable for him so he could make whatever he wanted from it, as God the Most High says that He taught him the fashioning of coats of armour to protect men from each other's violence (al-Anbiya': 80).

This shows that a person loves those things which are connected with the means by which their standing was raised; and the killing of Goliath was the beginning for David peace be upon him. God says, '…and David killed Goliath and God gave him the kingship and wisdom and taught him from that which He willed. And if it were not for God checking [some] people by means of others, the earth would have been corrupted, but God is bounteous to the worlds.' Here, the True Lord the Most High makes mention of a natural law of existence, which is that war is a societal necessity, and that the True Lord the Most High repels people with people, and that were it not for the presence of power in the face of power, the world would be whelmed in corruption; for if only a single temporal power had control of existence, it would be corrupted.

The thing which keeps the universe alive is the existence of equally-matched powers within it, one power facing another. This is why we find that the world is always guarded by two superpowers; if there were only one power, error would spread everywhere. If we reflect on history since ancient times, we find that this duality of power conserved stability in the world.

At the onset of Islam, the two great powers were the Persian Empire in the East, and the Byzantine Empire in the West. Now that the power of Russia has fallen from the world scales, we see that Germany and Japan are competing to counterbalance the power of America.

God's words '…And if it were not for God checking [some] people by means of others, the earth would have been corrupted…' come as the epilogue to the story of the struggle between the children of Israel and their enemies who expelled them from their homelands. When we reflect on this story from its beginning, we find that the Israelites first asked God for permission to fight, and God the Most High raised up a king for them to fight under his banner, and the sign of the truth of this king was that God would bring them the ark. Then came a societal issue at which people can usually arrive by the use of their wisdom without the need even for revelation, which is that when one is about to do something, he must prepare for it with human means so that once his preparations have exhausted all their means, he may turn to God's aid; for as we said, the means are from the Hand of God, so, do not turn down God's Hand with its means and seek God's aid directly, but rather, you must take the means first because they are from the Hand of your Lord.

The True Lord the Most High also teaches us that these means include the purification of those who seek to defend the truth in a way which shows us the power of their resolve in the test of faith; for a person might say one thing with his tongue, but when it comes down to action, his soul tells him not to proceed. A few of the people were able to succeed in all the trials to which they were subjected, and the battle went ahead, and the believers defeated their enemies, and David peace be upon him was victorious by killing Goliath.

This was an instance when God checked one people by means of another, and the True Lord the Most High then, affirmed this as a general principle: '…And if it were not for God checking [some] people by means of others, the earth would have been corrupted….' That is, had God the Most High not used the believing minority to check their many enemies, corruption would have overwhelmed the earth. To check something here means to bar it from its attaining its intention; and if the intention of people is to do evil, God checks this. So God checks, but He makes it through the hands of His servants, as He the Exalted commands the believers to fight against the infidels and God will chastise them by their hands, and will bring disgrace upon them, and will give victory to the believers against them; and He will heal the bosoms of those who believe (at-Tawba: 14).

God the Most High uses the believers to fight the disbelievers, and the True Lord the Most High inflicts suffering on the disbelievers by the hands of the believers. When we reflect on the wise words '…And if it were not for God checking [some] people by means of others, the earth would have been corrupted…' we find that there was a previous incident which laid the way for this statement: they were driven from their homes and their children, and this was their motivation for fighting. There is also another verse which speaks about those who have been driven from their homes without right for no other reason than their proclaiming that their Lord is God; and if God had not enabled people to defend themselves against one another, cloisters, churches, synagogues and mosques – where God's Name is abundantly extolled – would surely have been destroyed. And God will most certainly support him who supports His cause; for, surely, God is Most Powerful, Almighty (al-Hajj: 40).

The contexts of the two verses are different: in the chapter of al-Baqara, the verse refers to people who were actually at war, whilst the verse in the chapter of al-Hajj refers to people who believed in the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him, who left Mecca, where they were oppressed, to join their believing brethren in the abode of faith, in order that they might return again one day to enter Mecca as conquerors.

It is true that we find one thing being shared by the two verses, which is that they had left their homes. So in one case the defence is that you turn away in order to return, that is, you leave the abode of disbelief as an emigrant in order to get yourself together along with those who are with you, and then return to your home as a conquering warrior; and in the other case, the defence is that you actually fight right away. The verse which we are currently examining indicates that they actually fought right away whilst the second verse indicates that they left Mecca in order to return later as conquerors so that, the act of leaving itself was a form of defence. Why? If the early Muslims had remained in Mecca, their enemies might have wiped them all out so that no trace of Islam remained. So they went to Medina and established the Islamic state, and then, returned as victorious conquerors 'When there comes the help of God and the victory…' (an-Nasr: 1).

The contexts of the two verses are the same, but the outcome is different. Here, the True Lord the Most High says, '…And if it were not for God checking [some] people by means of others, the earth would have been corrupted….' Why would the earth be corrupted? It is because the meaning of checking some people with others is that there are some people who accept corruption, whilst others come out from them and try to bring them back to rectitude. The True Lord the Most High gives us the reason for this in the second verse, saying that if God had not enabled people to defend themselves against one another, cloisters, churches, synagogues and mosques – where God's Name is abundantly extolled – would surely have been destroyed (al-Hajj: 40).

Cloisters (sawami') are like the Christian monasteries of today in which people used to worship God; for there are worshippers who fulfil common religious responsibilities, and other worshippers who charge themselves to do more than God commanded them, and those who worship God in this way sit in places far away from other people called cloisters, which are like the monasteries of today. The general meaning of Christian worship is that which takes place in churches, called here biya' in Arabic, whilst the special kind of worship is that which takes place in cloisters.

So, ‘cloisters’ are for those completely devoted to worship, and churches are for the generality of worshippers. The word ‘synagogues’ means the place of worship for Jews, and ‘mosques’ are the places of worship for Muslims.

So, God’s statement ‘…the earth would have been corrupted…’ in this verse and His statement ‘…cloisters, churches, synagogues, and mosques… would surely have been destroyed…’ (al-Hajj: 40) means that the earth would be whelmed in corruption if there were no cloisters, churches, synagogues, and mosques because they are what connects created beings to the Creator. Since these are the places which connect created beings to the Creator, if they are destroyed the people will no longer remember their Lord, and they will be infatuated by worldly means.

So, cloisters, churches, hermitages – when they existed – and mosques today are the guardian of morality in the world because they always remind you of your servitude and prevent you from being deluded; the name masjid (mosque) is derived from the word sujud, meaning prostration which is the ultimate act of humility before the Lord, and in them we humble ourselves before God five times every day and night. If the servant has any kind of delusion, it is sure to melt away, as he knows that the entire universe is a grace from God to His servants. So do not let any delusion enter you, O Muslims; and if no delusion enters you, you will use God’s means to do God’s bidding. But if you take God’s means and use them to do other than God’s bidding, this is an act of shamelessness on your part. Since God has given your hand the ability to move, why do you disobey God with it and strike others? And God gave your tongue the ability to speak, so, why do you speak words that hurt others? God gave you blessings; so, do not use them to disobey Him.

God the Most High said in this verse, ‘…the earth would have been corrupted…’ and He explained this when He said that cloisters, churches, synagogues, and mosques – where God’s Name is abundantly extolled – would surely have been destroyed (al-Hajj: 40), for these are the places which preserve the roots of religious values; and the ‘roots of religious values’ are not the same as ‘all religious values,’ which is why we said that the True Lord the Most High gave Islam five Pillars, and these are what Islam is built upon, and we must build Islam on these five Pillars; so do not say that Islam is these five Pillars. No; Islam is only built on them, and they are the supports or foundations upon which Islam is built. When you make foundations and set up supports for a house, this alone does not make the house fit to be lived in, but rather, the rest of the building must still be built. So Islam is built on these foundations.

The True Lord the Most High clarifies this in commanding us to look after the places which maintain these values because mosques – and we are speaking now about Islamic conventions – are the places where the True Lord's outpourings of illumination meet His creatures, and whoever wants the True Lord the Most High to pour His light upon him, should go to the mosque. So in order that the earth is not overwhelmed by corruption, these places of worship must exist; in one place, the True Lord the Most High mentions the result, and in the other He mentions the cause.

Why does God the Most High check people by means of others? Because there are people who desire evil, and others who desire good, and those who desire evil check those who desire good; and if the battle takes place in this way, the Hand of God will not forsake the side of the believer who seeks what is good; for He the Exalted says that He will most certainly support the one who supports His cause; and surely God is Most Powerful, Almighty (al-Hajj: 40).

That is, the battle will not be a long one. This is why we said before that of all the battles we see in the universe, we do not find any battle between two forces of truth because there are no two truths in existence, and truth is one. So no one can say that he is on the side of truth and his opponent is also on the side of truth; no; there is only one truth. When battles take place, they take place either between truth and falsehood or between falsehood and falsehood; and the battle between truth and falsehood is never a long one because falsehood always falls away. The battles which are long drawn are those which take place between one falsehood and another, as neither of them deserves to be aided by God for one is corrupt and the other is also corrupt, and He the Exalted crushes this corruption with the other; and when one corruption is crushed by another, the two wings of falsehood in the universe come to an end, and then, there come people who have no corruption, and they fill the universe.

In the battles which go on in any place, you find that one party has one caprice and the other party has a different one, and God does not stand on either side because no one side is more worthy of God than the other. Therefore, He leaves them to struggle with each other; and since the True Lord the Most High has left them to each other, the battle will be long; and were God on the mind of one side, He the Exalted would stand with them. This is why we see that the battles of modern times go on and on because we do not find the third party mentioned in the command of God the Most High that if two groups of believers fall to fighting, make peace between them; but then, if one of the two groups goes on acting wrongfully towards the other, fight against the one that acts wrongfully until it reverts to God's command; and if they revert, make peace between them with justice, and deal equitably with them: for, indeed, God loves those who act equitably (al-Hujurat: 9).

The True Lord the Most High commands that when two groups of believers fight one another, a third group of believers must make peace between them; and if one transgresses against the other and refuses to make peace, the True Lord the Most High commands the believers to fight the side which transgresses until it reverts to God's command; and if it reverts to God's command, the peace made between the two sides must be fair because God the Most High loves those who are just and fair.

And we find that falsehood fights with falsehood, and there is no one to make peace between the two falsehoods; rather, we find that caprices battle each other, and every side allies itself with the group that suits its caprice.

This is the great failure of the modern age: battles are long drawn because there is nothing common shared in the minds of those who fight; if there were something common shared in their minds, the war would not have begun. As long as they are heedless of this shared thing, a party must intevene which can affect a truce; but even these people do not intervene to bring about a truce, which inevitably leads to failure in the whole world, and the world will continue to be in this state of failure until they repent and change their ways. They are making the experience longer for themselves, and they will remain in this state of failure until they become aware that the only way for all this to end, is for them to abandon their own caprices in favour of the Will of their Creator.

'…And if it were not for God checking [some] people by means of others, the earth would have been corrupted….' Yes, the earth will be whelmed with corruption in those things over which God has given man influence; as for the things over which God the Most High has given man no influence, their natural laws will remain the same, and no one will affect them; no one will affect the sun, or the moon, or the air, or the rain; corruption only occurs in those things over which man has influence.

Look at the universe, and you find that those things over which man has no influence are sound, in the best form they could possibly be in, and corruption only comes to those things in which man intervenes without the guidance of God's way. Had man intervened in them according to God's way, things would have been sound just as the highest natural laws are sound.

In the chapter of ar-Rahman, God the Most High says that He has raised the sky high and that He has devised for all things a balance (ar-Rahman: 7). As long as the True Lord the Most High has raised the sky and devised the balance, the sky cannot fall onto the earth, and the system is completely controlled. The sun rises in the east and sets in the west and the moon and stars travel with absolute precision and singularity; this is because no human being has anything to do with it. If you want to make your lives sound, and that your affairs be in as perfect an order as the mechanics of the sky and the earth are, then, apply the balance of Heaven to all your actions. Follow what the True Lord the Most High then says: He has raised the sky high and He has devised for all things a balance, so you too, O men, never transgress the balance of what is right; weigh, therefore, your deeds with equity and do not cut not the balance short (ar-Rahman: 7-9).

As long as you see that the things in existence over which you have no influence move in an orderly way, and work soundly and you see that corruption comes to those things with which you have interfered, why do we not follow the way of God with those things with which we can interfere? If you follow in life the guidance of the way of God Who created life, your affairs will be sound for you just as the higher matters of the universe are sound. And be especially careful to adhere to His words: He has raised the sky high and He has devised for all things a balance, so you too, O men, never transgress the balance of what is right (ar-Rahman: 7-8).

All of us must carefully adhere to these words so that we know that the higher matters are balanced because the hand of man does not interfere with them.

The sky does not fall upon the earth because it is governed by an absolutely ordered system. And the earth does not spin away from its orbit because its Creator has established for it an absolutely ordered system. Because of this, the True Lord the Most High says that the system of the celestial bodies in the universe is such that, it is not allowable for the sun to reach the moon, nor does the night overtake the day, but each, in an orbit, is swimming (Ya Sin: 40).It is a precisely-ordered system because man has no influence over it. So make a balance for all the things over which you have the ability to exercise your free will so that you do not transgress the balance.

Since God the Most High created man and gave him free will and some people choose one path, whilst others chose a contrary path, each path being outside the way of God, the True Lord the Most High left the two sides to battle and fight one another; and because He the Exalted is Merciful with all mankind, the elements of goodness remain in existence, in case someone sees them, and notices them, and goes to take them. When one group transgresses, the True Lord the Most High sends to them another group to set them right so that the elements of goodness remain in existence, in case someone comes to take one of them and applies it to his life; and people of goodness only come because of God's mercy upon mankind. The True Lord the Most High then says:

تِلْكَ ءَايَٰتُ ٱللَّهِ نَتْلُوهَا عَلَيْكَ بِٱلْحَقِّ ۚ وَإِنَّكَ لَمِنَ ٱلْمُرْسَلِينَ ﴿٢٥٢﴾

These are the revelations of God which We recite to you [Muhammad] with the truth, and you truly are one of the messengers [252] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 252)

We know that the word 'these' is a sign which God addresses to His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him indicating the verses which came before, and which showed the magnificence and sustaining power of the True Lord. The True Lord the Most High said previously: Did you not see [consider] those who left their homes in their thousands, fearing death? God said to them, 'Die' then He restored them to life. And God is full of bounty to the people, but most of the people do not show gratitude (al-Baqara: 243). Their asking to fight and for God to send them a king, His sending them a king, and His sending them the ark which contained inner peace – were these not all signs as well? And after this, the True Lord the Most High willing the killing of Goliath the giant, to come at the hand of David peace be upon him the young lad – was this not a sign? And another sign was that a small group – as they themselves affirmed when they said, '…How often has a small company overcome a large company by permission of God and God is with the patient' (al-Baqara: 249), that this small group entered the battle and defeated the larger group; was this not a sign?

Did the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him know about these signs which came before his own mission? No, but he was informed of them by God, as all attest to, especially those who disbelieve in Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; since he did not read, write, or sit with a teacher, and no one ever told him anything about those things. Even on the journeys which he undertook for trade, he was accompanied by others; and if they had seen him sitting with anyone to teach him something, they would have made it known that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had sat with so-and-so, and learned from him such-and-such. But no one ever said this because it never happened. Because of this, the fact that He peace and blessings be upon him was able to tell them things which they knew themselves was one of the secrets of his miracle; he knew about events of the past even though he never read, wrote, or took knowledge from anyone. One of the idolaters stubbornly disputed, claiming that the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him had sat with a youth in Marwa who had taught him these things, so the true words of God the Most High came to refute this fabrication stating categorically that God indeed knows that they say that it is only a human being who teaches him; the tongue of the one they maliciously refer to is foreign, and the Quran is in a clear Arabic tongue (an-Nahl: 103).

The True Lord the Most High affirms that this was a spurious argument and a false claim on their part since the one they claimed had taught the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him was a non-Arab. The True Lord the Most High says to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, 'These are the verses of God which We recite to you [O Muhammad], in truth….' The phrase 'the verses of God' means wondrous things, and 'We recite to you' means God set them down word by word; the Arabic verb yatlu (recite) is derived from the word wala which means for one thing to follow another without interruption. '…We recite to you [O Muhammad], in truth….' The truth is that which is fixed in place so that it cannot change, and can never contradict itself.

Suppose an accident takes place in front of you, and then you are asked about it a thousand times throughout your life. You will find that your answer never changes because you are relating an actual event which you witnessed. But if the story is a lie, the way you tell it the second time will change because you do not remember what you said the first time i.e. as you are not relating something real which took hold of you so that you can stick to it. In this way, the truth never changes, or contradicts itself, or conflicts with itself.

'These are the verses of God which We recite to you [O Muhammad], in truth.' Since the True Lord the Most High is the One relating them, He will relate them to you truthfully, whereupon the others will know that you have come to know the things which they keep secret in their books and tell to one another; upon this, they will know that you are truly one of those entrusted with a message. This is why we find expressions such as 'you were not there' in the Quran, as when God the Most High tells His Messenger that he was not present repeatedly when He tells him of past events. One instance is God's telling the prophet that he was not present at the western side of Mount Sinai when He revealed the command to Moses, and he was not among those who witnessed that (al-Qasas: 44).

That is, you were not, O Muhammad, present with Moses on the western side of the mountain when God made the covenant of the message with him, and you were not a contemporary of Moses, and you did you witness him delivering the message; so how could your people deny you when you convey to them the stories of those who came before? Another example of this is God the Most High telling His Messenger that He reveals to him news from things that are beyond the reach of his perception; for he was not with the elders when they drew lots as to which of them should be Mary's guardian, and he was not with them when they contended about it with one another (Al-'Imran: 44).

The great stories related to you by the Quran, O Muhammad, of those whom God elected, are from the matters of the Unseen which God has revealed to you. And you were not present with them when they drew straws to determine who would take care of Mary peace be upon her, and you were not with them when they argued over who would be granted this great honour. Another example of this is God the Most High telling His Messenger that he was not at the side of the mount when God called Moses but that he was sent as a mercy from his Lord to warn a people to whom no warner had come before him that they might be reminded (al-Qasas: 46). That is, you were not, O Messenger, present on Mount Sinai when We called Moses when the appointed time came, and His Lord spoke to him and engaged in intimate discourse with him, but God has informed you of this by revelation out of mercy for you and for your community, and in order that you can tell it to those to whom no messenger came before you, so that they might take heed and have faith.

Another example of this is God the Most High telling His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him that He has revealed to him a life-giving message, coming at God's behest. Before this message came to him, he did not know what revelation is, nor what faith implies; but God has made this message to be a light, whereby He guides whom He wills of His servants; and, surely, the Messenger, too, guides to the Straight Way (ash-Shura: 52).

The Quran is revelation sent down from God, which shows the believers the light of guidance and the commands of the True Lord the Most High and guides those who choose guidance; and you, O Muhammad, call by this Quran to a Straight Path. Every statement saying 'you were not' in the Noble Quran is an indication that everything which Gabriel peace be upon him tells you as a messenger from God to you, and a bearer of revelation from God, is the truth; so you know it, O Muhammad, by a special means and in a special way even though you never read a book, or sat with a teacher. And the signs of which you tell them are in agreement with the information they have, and they should therefore have said that the One Who taught you this was God the Most High, and they should have acknowledged and testified that you are one of those who have been entrusted with a message.

After this, the True Lord the Most High says:

تِلْكَ ٱلرُّسُلُ فَضَّلْنَا بَعْضَهُمْ عَلَىٰ بَعْضٍ مِّنْهُم مَّن كَلَّمَ ٱللَّهُ ۖ وَرَفَعَ بَعْضَهُمْ دَرَجَٰتٍ ۚ
وَءَاتَيْنَا عِيسَى ٱبْنَ مَرْيَمَ ٱلْبَيِّنَٰتِ وَأَيَّدْنَٰهُ بِرُوحِ ٱلْقُدُسِ ۗ وَلَوْ شَآءَ ٱللَّهُ مَا
ٱقْتَتَلَ ٱلَّذِينَ مِنۢ بَعْدِهِم مِّنۢ بَعْدِ مَا جَآءَتْهُمُ ٱلْبَيِّنَٰتُ وَلَٰكِنِ ٱخْتَلَفُوا۟ فَمِنْهُم مَّنْ
ءَامَنَ وَمِنْهُم مَّن كَفَرَ ۚ وَلَوْ شَآءَ ٱللَّهُ مَا ٱقْتَتَلُوا۟ وَلَٰكِنَّ ٱللَّهَ يَفْعَلُ مَا يُرِيدُ ﴿٢٥٣﴾

We favoured some of these messengers above others. God spoke to some; others He raised in rank; We gave Jesus, son of Mary, Our clear signs and strengthened him with the holy spirit. If God had so willed, their successors would not have fought each other after they had been brought clear signs. But they disagreed: some believed and some disbelieved. If God had so willed, they would not have fought each other, but God does what He will [253] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 253)

The True Lord the Most High refers to the Messengers by saying, '…Those Messengers…' (tilka ar-rusul). The word rusul is the plural of (rasool), which means the one who is sent to deliver a message, which is a collection of words bearing a meaning which leads to a goal. Since rusul refers to a group, why then did the True Lord the Most High use the word tilka (which literally means 'that' used for singular nouns) instead of ha'ula'i ('these')? This is how the Noble Quran tells you that no matter how the messengers differ, they were all sent by the same One God with the same guidance. As we know, the word tilka is a demonstrative pronoun which is used with something distant ('that'). When we indicate something close, we say in Arabic dha, and if we are speaking directly to someone we say dhak; or if we are indicating a feminine noun, we say ti, and if we are speaking directly to someone and referring to a feminine noun, we say tilka; and the letter (l) here, as we know, refers to something distant, or something with a lofty status.

God's words '…Those Messengers…' refer to the messengers known to our master Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, or the messengers who have previously been mentioned in the Quranic text; and the Quranic text which came before spoke about Moses, Jesus peace be upon them, and about ulu al-'azm (those of firm resolve) from amongst the Messengers.

If you wish to consider the Quranic order here, it refers to what has been mentioned in this chapter; if you wish to consider the order of revelation, it refers to those previous messengers known to the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. The occasion here is that the True Lord the Most High concluded the previous verse by saying, '…And indeed, you are from among the messengers' (al-Baqara: 252), and since this statement indicates the Prophet's membership of a general plurality, it is as though God is saying: Beware of thinking that just because they are united in being message-bearers, or being messengers of God, they are all of equal rank; no; rather, each one of them has his own general level of value as well as his specific level of preference. They are all messengers from God, but the True Lord the Most High gives each one of them a specific level of preference.

Since God's statement '…And indeed, you are from among the messengers' confirms for us that our master the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him is one of the messengers, do not infer from this that all the messengers are equal in rank and say that they are all equally preferred; no; God the Most High has preferred some of them over others. What does it mean to prefer? It means that you go to someone and give him some kind of distinction; and when you give him a distinction over other people, someone might say to you: 'This is favouritism.' So, we say to those who say this: Be more precise, and know that to prefer someone, is to give them a distinction based on wisdom, whilst favouritism means to give someone a distinction based on individual whims and desires. For example, if we want to choose someone for an important job, we choose a number of people who might fit the bill and say, 'This one is suitable, and this one is suitable, and this one is suitable,' and 'this one has distinctions over this one,' and so on. If we look at them and appraise them with wisdom and aptness, this is preference. But if we choose someone because he is a relative or an in-law of ours, and the like, this is caprice and favouritism.

Preference means to single out and give a distinction but with wisdom; as for favouritism, it is to single out and give a distinction due to a caprice in your soul. For example, suppose that you bought a steam-boat and went in it for a voyage with your young son, along with a steam-boat driver, and your young son wanted to steer the boat, sat in the place of the driver, and began to steer; but then, tall waves started to come, and the sea became rough; you would quickly get up, take your son out of the way and tell the driver to steer. The boy might cry here; but is this favouritism on your part for the driver? No; for if there was any favouritism, it would be for your son; you preferred the driver for a wise reason based on your knowledge that he knows how to steer better than the young boy. So if you look at the circumstances of the choice and the selection using wisdom, this is preference; whilst favouritism is when caprice is in charge.

Every action of the True Lord the Most High is based on wisdom because He has no caprice or desire, and we are all the same to Him; so, when He the Most High gives a distinction, or a blessing, or a favour, there is a wise reason for this.

When the True Lord the Most High said, '…And indeed, you are from among the messengers' (al-Baqara: 252), He then, followed this by saying, 'Those messengers - some of them We have endowed more highly than others….', and He gives us an example of this preference by saying, '…Among them were those to whom God spoke….' When you hear the words '…Among them were those to whom God spoke…', what comes directly to mind is Moses peace be upon him; and apart from him, God the Most High also spoke to the angels.

After this, the True Lord the Most High says, '…and He raised some of them in degree…', and then He says, '…And We gave Jesus, the Son of Mary, clear proofs….' He the Exalted first specified Moses peace be upon him with the predominant attribute, saying, 'to whom God spoke,' and He also specified our master Jesus peace be upon him by saying that He gave him signs and proofs; and between Moses and Jesus peace be upon them He said, '…and He raised some of them in degree….' These verses are addressed to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, so here, we have words about others directed to someone, namely Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Sometimes a person is mentioned by name or by his predominant attribute so that the intended person has been specified; but other times, a person is mentioned by his attribute, and then, it is left to the intelligence of the listener to connect the attribute to its possessor; so, it is as though it is understood that God's words '…and He raised some of them in degree…' cannot rightfully be applied to anyone but Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him alone.

God the Most High placed him in between Moses and Jesus peace be upon them even though the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him did not come between them chronologically, but rather came as the Final Prophet; but you find that His way is the middle way. The Jews went too far with materialism at the expense of spirituality, and the Christians went too far with spirituality at the expense of materialism; but the world needs a middle way between materialism and spirituality, so, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came. It is as though Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the axis of equilibrium in the affairs of existence.

If we want to know the aspects of this preference, we find that there were messengers whom God the Most High sent to their villages, such as our master Lot peace be upon him, for example, and some messengers were limited in the scope or the life-span of their message; but there is one messenger to whom it was said: You are sent to man and jinn-kind, and to all who will exist of man and jinn-kind until the end of time. This was Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

And if the preference is based on actions, it is also for our master Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; and if we consider the miracles which God sent to His messengers to prove to the people that they were truly sent by their Lord, we find that all the miracles were miracles of nature, i.e. tangible, physical miracles which are believed by those who see them; for those who saw the staff of Moses peace be upon him strike the sea and part it, this was a physical miracle in which the people of Moses peace be upon him believed; and those who saw Jesus peace be upon him heal the blind and the leprous witnessed the physical miracle and believed in it. But do these miracles still have any existence now, except in the form of reports of them? No, they no longer exist.

But when God the Most High wanted to give Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him a miracle, He did not send him a miracle in a material form(1) which happens once and then ends. He the Exalted sent Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with a Message to remain until the end of time. His message is not limited. Therefore, His miracle had to be based not on matter, but rather on the intellect, for the intellect is something which everyone shares; and therefore, his miracle was the Quran, and everyone is now able to say, ‘Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the Messenger of God, and this is his miracle.’ The miracle of our Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is something which exists to be seen.

(1) This said, the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him also performed many great physical miracles; see Ibn Taimiya's Al-Furqan.

As to the aspect of application of teachings, we find that the messengers did not come to establish laws themselves, but rather, they would deliver laws from God, and they did not have the right to legislate themselves. As for the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, he is the only Messenger whose commands and prohibitions God the Most High ordered the believers to obey in commanding them to accept whatever the Messenger gives them and refrain from anything that he forbids them (al-Hashr: 7).

So, He peace and blessings be upon him was singled out by God with the right to legislate too; is this not a special distinction? The purpose of the Way of Heaven is to establish laws, which govern the lives of God’s vicegerents on earth. And these laws are of two kinds: One kind comes from God, and in this we find that all the messengers are equal; and the second type of laws are those which God the Most High left the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him to legislate as he saw fit, and this was a special preference for the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him.

So, when God the Most High says, ‘…and He raised some of them in degree…’, this can only mean our master Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, and this says more than simply mentioning his name could. I will give an example of this – and God is beyond compare: You give one of your sons an ordinary pencil, and you give your second son an expensive pen, and you give your third son a watch, and for your fourth son you buy a very expensive gift. Then you go to the boys and say, ‘I bought so-and-so a pencil and so-and-so an ink pen and I bought so-and-so a watch, and for someone I bought an expensive gift.’ By ‘someone’, it is understood that you mean the fourth son whose name you did not mention, and he has been specified and identified.

‘Those messengers - some of them We have endowed more highly than others. Among them were those to whom God spoke….’ When you say that God the Most High speaks, do not be unmindful of a universal matter which applies to every attribute of God which can also be applied to humans. I speak, and God speaks, but is His speech like mine? If you think that my being is like His Being, then, make my speech like His speech; and if my being is not like His Being, how could my speech be like His speech?

Someone might say that ‘speech’ is comprised of a voice, and vocal chords, and so on. To him we say: No; you should not understand anything related to God except in the light of the rule that there is nothing like unto Him (ash-Shura: 11); and we take every attribute ascribed to God according to what God says, and we do not come up with attributes on our own; and after this we do not compare Him to a human in attribute. God has life, and you have life, but are any of our lives like His life? No; for His life is intrinsic, whilst all of our lives are given to us and taken from us, so, they are not like His life.

The True Lord the Most High says that it is He Who created the heavens and the earth and whatever is between them in six days; then, He established (istawa) Himself above the Throne. Then, He addresses mankind saying that they have not besides Him any protector or any intercessor; so, will they not be reminded? (as-Sajda: 4).

Is the ‘sitting’ of the True Lord the Most High like the sitting of man? Or is the Chair of the Creator like the chair of the creature? Of course not. We believers take every attribute of God according to the principle of tanzih (the declaration of God’s absolute dissimilarity to all contingent being). Glory be to God, there is nothing like Him; the establishment (istiwa’) of God is not like the establishment of humans, and the sitting of the True Lord the Most High is not like the sitting of man.

Let us give this example – and God the Most High is beyond compare: Imagine that a friend of yours invites you to eat at his home, and then one of the leaders of the community invites you to eat at his home. You will certainly find that there is a difference in the quality and variety of the food between the tables of those who have invited you. If there are different degrees between the attributes of human beings themselves according to their situations, abilities, and resources, and if you follow the rising level of attributes to the Creator of all things, you will see with certainty that He the Exalted is far beyond everything other than Himself, and that there is nothing like Him.

So, the expression 'to whom God spoke' means that He informed his messenger via any means of passing information. '…Among them were those to whom God spoke, and He raised some of them in degree. And We gave Jesus, the Son of Mary, clear proofs, and We supported him with the Holy Spirit….' The True Lord the Most High always confirms, when speaking about our master Jesus peace be upon him, that Jesus son of Mary peace be upon them was aided by the Holy Spirit; for the things to which our master Jesus peace be upon him was exposed, required that the Holy Spirit was always with him, which is why the True Lord the Most High states his supplication that peace be upon him on the day when he was born, and on the day of his death, and on the day when he shall be raised to life (Maryam: 33).

Upon the occasion of his birth, our master Jesus peace be upon him was exposed to a problem because he was born in an unconventional way, and his mother was accused because of this; and the Quran absolved her, declared her innocence, and put things in their proper place. Again, he faced a problem in the matter of his death, when they wanted to kill him.

When we look at the messengers, we find that the cause for God the Most High sending messengers to the world was that He the Exalted did not create mankind in a state of compulsion to act, and nor to be forced as all other creatures in the universe are forced; and directly after man comes animals which are lacking in intelligence; and after animals comes the genus of plants which are lacking in sensation and motion; and after this comes minerals which are lower than vegetables; and these are the genera of existence. Mastery was given to man in that all the other genera are bound to serve him, not by free choice, but by compulsion and subdual.

The sun has never come along and said, 'Creatures no longer please me, so I will not rise on them today.' And the wind never refused to blow, nor did the rain refuse to fall, nor did the earth refuse to give plants their means of sustenance. A man mounts a riding animal, a horse for example, and steers it as he likes and pleases, and nothing ever refuses to obey man. You, O men, are the one species to whom God has given the free choice as to whether to fulfil your purpose in existence; if you wish, you can do this, and if you wish you can do that.

But God the Most High did not leave you like this completely, but rather, there are certain things which occur despite your wishes, and you are compelled as far as they are concerned. You cannot, for example, decide the day you are born, or the day you die, nor the external things which will befall you, nor the activities which take place inside your body; in all of these matters, you are compelled, and you cannot escape the grasp of your Lord; but you have the freedom of choice in other matters.

We know that He the Exalted compelled certain genera to be as He wanted, and as He liked; and this is the attribute of Omnipotence, for the attribute of compulsion implies control. If He left one genus to decide whether or not to believe, and, if it believes, to decide whether or not to obey, this proves the love for God the Most High of the one who chooses and favours obedience to God over disobedience.

We know that compulsion subdues the body, but it does not subdue the heart. You can threaten someone with a gun and say, ‘Prostrate before me,’ and he will do so; but you cannot say to him at gunpoint, ‘Love me.’ The True Lord the Most High leaves it for us to choose faith, and leaves it for us to choose obedience or disobedience, so He knows who comes to Him in love, and who comes to Him in compulsion.

The whole world comes to God the Most High in compulsion, and in your own body, O man, there are things in which you are compelled. In this way, God’s Omnipotence is confirmed, yet love for Him is yet to be confirmed; the righteous servant is the one who obeys Him out of love. We have given the example before – and God is beyond compare – and said that a man might have two servants, one named Sa‘d and the other named Sa‘id. Sa‘d’s master ties him with a rope and pulls him along, saying: ‘Come along, Sa‘d!’ Does Sa‘d have the option not to come? No; but the master leaves Sa‘id to be free, and when he calls him, he comes.

So, which one of them loves his master, the one who comes by the rope, or the one who comes because of love? It is part of the honour of man that he confirms for God the attribute of love if he believes in Him; for had He the Exalted willed to guide all people, none of them would have been able to disbelieve in Him; and had He willed to be obeyed always, no one could ever have disobeyed Him. This is why we said that Satan had knowledge when he said before God the Most High that he swears by God's Might that he will most certainly beguile mankind all into grievous error (Sad: 82).

Satan swore to God by His Might the Exalted over His creatures; it is as though he said: O Lord, if You needed Your servants, I would not be able to take them; but since You have Might over them, if they want to believe, they will believe, and if they do not want to believe, they will not believe; and this is the door from which I will enter. This is why Satan then, excluded some of the servants from this because he would not be able to find any way to reach them with his insinuations: They are those that are truly God's servants (Sad: 83).

That is, for those whom God willed to make pure for Himself, Satan will not be able to get near them. So Satan is not engaged in a battle with God, but rather, he is engaged in a battle with us; the True Lord the Most High made this clear when he reported Satan in the Quran as saying that he swears by God's Might that he will most certainly beguile mankind all into grievous error, except for those that are truly God's servants (Sad: 82-83).

So, if God the Most High wanted us all to be obedient, could anyone disobey? They could not. And if He wanted us all to believe, could anyone disbelieve? They could not. Rather, God wanted to leave certain matters and actions open to your free choice because He wants to know who will come to Him willingly, and that the servant remains between fear and hope. This is why the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him said, 'If the believer knows the chastisement God has, no one would hope for His paradise; and if the disbeliever knew the Mercy God has, no one would despair of His paradise.'(1)

This is why the requirement of higher faith and higher certainty is that you love God for God's own sake: He the Exalted sends whatever events to you that He wills, and you continue to love Him so that God shows you off to the angels and the angels would say, 'Lord, he loves You because You have blessed him,' so, He says to them, 'I shall take away My blessings and he will continue to love Me;' and then the True Lord the Most High takes away the blessings, but the servant continues to love Him, for he loves God, not His blessings because He the Exalted is deserving of being loved for Himself, without considering the blessings He gives us.

(1) Narrated by Muslim on the authority of Abu Hurayra God be pleased with him

So, the True Lord the Most High sent the messengers to bear the way of God to those who wish to announce their love to God, to be true vicegerents on earth, and to maintain the soundness of the universe, not corrupt it. We know that maintaining the soundness of something has two degrees: either you leave the sound thing as it is without corrupting it, or you make it even better; so, you do not come to a spring of water which flows forth for the people and block it up, but rather, you leave it in its sound state, if you are not able to improve it. You might be able to improve a spring of water so that instead of people having to wear themselves out by going to the spring and carrying water from it, you might make for them a high pump with a tank to which the water is raised, and lay pipes so that the water is carried to their houses. In this way, you make the sound thing even sounder, and this is the role of vicegerency and cultivation in existence. If you are unable to make a sound thing sounder, spare us the evil of your corruption and leave it as it is, and sit back, as you are a burden on the universe.

If man were honest with the universe, he would ask himself: 'Who was it who was guided to make the bread which we now eat?' He would realise that it took the experiences of all people since Adam peace be upon him to arrive at the production of this bread: one person farmed wheat, and another was guided by God to grind this wheat, and He the Exalted guided man to make a sieve to separate flour from chaff, and then, He guided him to make the flour into dough until he found a better taste from it. There is no doubt that it so happened one time, that he left a piece of dough and then was distracted from it in some way, and then, returned to find the dough had risen, and then when he baked it, the bread came out tasting even nicer. He the Exalted apportioned and guided; otherwise how could this long process have occurred?

Another example: When a person cleans his clothes, and if he considers the actions of all those who came before him in this regard since the time of Adam peace be upon him, he would realise that everyone who existed before him contributed a beneficial stage until they arrived to the electric washing machine which washes for him without much effort on his part. All of these things came to him through acts of guidance from God.

I said once: Why do people cook zucchinis, not cucumbers? This shows that man underwent many experiences in order for him to see that zucchini cooks better than cucumber; in the same way, people cook mallow but not mint even though mint is better than it; this happened because there were accumulated experiences which showed us that mint does not taste nice when it is cooked.

If you look at anything from which you draw benefit today, and appraise the actions which it has gone through from the day it was first made, you will find that the True Lord allotted to every person a task and an area, and they continue to serve you. As long as you have been served by all of these people from the time of Adam peace be upon him until this day, you must look and see what you will do for those who will come after you; do not be lazy in life, taking the good of everyone else in existence and giving nothing in return, but rather, you must also give something. Just as you have taken from your environment, you must give something to this environment; and were this not the case, life would never have advanced because the meaning of advancement of life is that one person takes the experience of those who came before him and tries to improve on them, that is, to reap more benefits from less work.

If the people were to appraise the effort of the one who invented the wheel, for example, upon which cars now move, they would have to pray for God's mercy for him for the comfort he gave them; for after man had carried on his shoulders the most he could carry, the one who invented the wheel relieved him of his toil and strain, and allowed him to carry larger quantities and transport them with less effort.

So, you must look at the blessings which you enjoy now, and see all the stages which they went through, and think whether people made it just as it is, or whether they toiled, strained and struggled from the beginning of their existence on earth, and generation after generation, man came to know how to develop these things; and there might have been mistakes at certain stages, so, they had to begin correcting it and improving it, and so on. When you find that the world has given all these products to you, you must ask yourself what you will give to this world; and in this way, the human chain will continue to advance and remain connected.

The True Lord the Most High sends the Messengers and establishes the way of ‘Do’ and ‘Do not’ so that people’s lives will be upright on this earth; but people are overwhelmed by heedlessness of this way which is why corruptions appear in existence according to the level of this heedlessness. When corruption increases, the True Lord the Most High sends a new messenger to remind them of the way of God once again; and when the new messenger comes, some people believe in him and fight with him, and the Messenger is given victory and God’s principles become established on earth. Then time passes, and heedlessness comes and divergence occurs; for there are people who adhere to God’s way and people who neglect this way; so, divergence occurs and conflicts break out.

If the True Lord the Most High wanted the universe to be free of battles between truth and falsehood, He would have made truth ascendant by compulsion. But God gave us free will, and gave us a choice which is why we find that some grow up to be believers, whilst others grow up to be disbelievers, and we find that some are obedient and others disobedient; this is one group, and this is another. Do not understand that the existence of disbelievers or disobedient people on the earth means that they are outside of God’s power; no; God is the One Who gave them this choice, and if God had willed to make the people one community, no one would have been able to escape God’s will.

In the verse which we are currently examining, the True Lord the Most High mentioned the men of great resolve from amongst the messengers: Our master Moses peace be upon him, the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him, and our master Jesus peace be upon him; and after this He says, ‘…If God had willed, those [generations] succeeding them would not have fought each other after the clear proofs had come to them. But they differed, and some of them believed and some others disbelieved. And if God had willed, they would not have fought each other, but God does what He wills.’

So, what made the people contend amongst themselves? It was the divergent views of them: they differed, so they contended. But was it not possible for them to differ without contending? Had this happened, it would have been unanimous assent on corruption to occur. The True Lord the Most High does not want this unanimous assent on corruption to occur. If goodness does not govern the affairs of man, at least the constituents of goodness will remain in existence, and someone will come and find the constituents of goodness, and will make them grow.

In times of falsehood, The True Lord the Most High does not eliminate the traces of goodness and righteous actions, but rather, He the Most High preserves them so that any person who wants goodness can go to them. Goodness might be weak, but God does not eliminate it; for He uses it to give a new incentive for new believers to raise the banner of the truth even if they are weak at the onset. This is why we find that the Noble Messenger peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Were it not for servants of God who bow in obeisance, and babies who suckle, and animals which graze, suffering would be poured forth upon you.'(1)

The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is alerting us here not to see weak people as a burden and see ourselves as strong just because they are living in our care; rather, they might be the conduit for Divine tenderness and mercy, as the above Hadith indicates.

God the Most High withholds suffering from us because of the weak ones among us because there is a kind of goodness in weakness; an element of goodness remains in existence so that if people want to return to guidance, they will find goodness to guide them. So were it not for this contention, corruption would be absolute, and that would mean utter destruction for humanity; but people differed: some of them believed whilst others disbelieved, '…And if God had willed, they would not have fought each other….' That is, they would have remained on one way of disbelief or corruption, '…but God does what He wills.' In contention, as we know, there are self-sacrifices, and sacrifices for the sake of the continuation of heavenly values on earth.

Sacrifice requires that a person gives either his life, or his wealth, which is why it is appropriate here for us to speak about spending which means to give up one’s wealth. In the past, the warrior was the one who equipped himself with the necessary supplies for battle, such as his horse, his spear, his sword, and his arrows; so, he had to spend. The True Lord the Most High speaks about this because it is included in the matter of the preservation of the element of faith depicted in the heavenly way which the messengers brought in order that this way remains on earth so that people can return to it when they encounter evil or falsehood. He the Exalted says:

---

(1) Narrated by At-Tabarani in Al-Kabir and Al-Bayhaqi in As-Sunnan Al-kubra

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوٓاْ أَنفِقُواْ مِمَّا رَزَقۡنَٰكُم مِّن قَبۡلِ أَن يَأۡتِيَ يَوۡمٞ لَّا بَيۡعٞ
فِيهِ وَلَا خُلَّةٞ وَلَا شَفَٰعَةٞۗ وَٱلۡكَٰفِرُونَ هُمُ ٱلظَّٰلِمُونَ ٢٥٤

You who believe, give from what We have provided for you, before the Day comes when there is no bargaining, no friendship, and no intercession. It is the disbelievers who are wrong [254] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 254)

We know that every call from the True Lord the Most High beginning with His words ‘O you who have believed…’ indicates that what will come after this will be a command of moral responsibility for those who believe in God, not a command to all people, since God the Most High does not issue commands to those who do not believe in Him, but only to those who do believe in Him. And those who traverse this barrier and come to have the certainty of faith thereby become worthy of being directly addressed by God; and it is as though they find in this Divine utterance a call them, saying: O you who believe in Me as a Wise, All-Powerful God Who legislates for you: I want you to do this.

So, faith in God the Most High is the basis of every ruling; so, why do you do something? Do not say it is because the wisdom behind it is such-and-such, but rather say, ‘It is because God, in whom I believe, has commanded me to do these things,’ whether you understand the wisdom behind them or not; indeed, for you to obey God’s command to you without understanding the wisdom behind it might be a stronger act of faith than for you to obey the command whilst knowing the wisdom behind it.

If a doctor says to someone, ‘The alcohol you are drinking is damaging your liver and doing such-and-such to you,’ and then, he quits drinking, an act which happens to have the appearance of obedience to God, but did he quit because God said so? No; he did not quit because God said so, but rather, because the doctor said so; so, his faith in the doctor is greater than his faith in the Lord of the doctor. As for the believer, he says, 'I will not drink alcohol because God has forbidden it; and why would I wait for the doctor to tell me that my liver is being damaged by my drinking?' The true mercy is that the disease never comes .

The True Lord the Most High says, 'O you who have believed, spend from that which We have provided for you….' That is: I do not ask you to spend on Me, but rather to spend from what I have granted you as sustenance; for sustenance comes from a person's work, and a person's work requires the power to act on something or some material, and this action comes after a process of thought, and this thought was arranged by the One Who created it; and the limbs which act, and the hand which moves, and the foot which walks, were created by God, and the material upon which you work was created by God. Let us take the farmer as a model: we find that the earth, in which the components exist, was created by God. So a man works with the mind which God created, and acts with the limbs which God created to give him the power to work on the material which God created to give man its goodness; so, which part of this belongs to man then?

Despite this, if man gains any good from all this, He the Exalted does not say: It is Mine; but rather, He says: I give it to you, man, but give Me my right from it; and I shall not take My right for Myself, but rather, it is for your needy brother. The True Lord the Most High says that He does not want from Jinn and mankind to give Him provision, or to feed Him (adh-Dhariyat: 57).

Be careful not to say: What do I have to do with the needy person? You must know that poverty is a contingent, and it is possible for any contingent to befall you yourself. Do not consider yourself to be always giving, but rather consider that something might happen to you that will make you need to take, not to give. The True Lord the Most High tells you to give to the poor when you are rich because He tells other people to give to you when you become poor. Respect God's command when it is asked of you so that it will protect you when it is asked of others for you; in this way, there is balance.

Although He is the One Who provides sustenance, He wants you, O servants, to cooperate and love one another so that rancour is wiped from your hearts; for the weak person – one who is naturally weak, not one who deliberately appears weak in order to beg and swindle out of laziness, but rather, one who is unable to work – is the responsibility of the believers, and He the Most High makes the strong responsible for aiding you when you are weak.

When you – as a weak and incapacitated person – see that the strong and able have not forgotten you, and that they have remembered to share with you what they have, you realise that you are in a supporting environment which loves goodness for you; and if you see a blessing come to you when you are incapacitated, you will never envy it, and you will not resent the one who gives it to you, but rather, you will hope, as a result of the sweetness of it in your soul – having it come to you in your hour of need –that God will make you able to repay it; and in this way, society will be united in solidarity and cohesion.

When God the Most High says, '…spend from that which We have provided for you…', you are not doing God Himself a favour, but rather, you are spending from what He has provided for you; and out of His grace upon you, God respected the fruit of your labours and ascribed it to you so that even when your brother is in need, He the Exalted says: Who is it that will lend to God a goodly loan? He will multiply it for him many times over. And it is God who withholds and grants abundance, and to Him you will be returned (al-Baqara: 245)

The True Lord the Most High considers spending in God's cause to be a loan from the servant to the Lord, Creator, and Giver of all sustenance. In order for us to understand the meaning of spending, I say: We said before that the Arabic word for spending (anfaqa) is derived from the root stem (n-f-q), which literally means for a market to finish quickly and for the wares to be sold for their set prices. We know that trade means the exchange of goods for prices, and goods can be directly benefited from where as prices cannot.

When you are hungry, will it avail you to have a mountain of gold? You cannot benefit directly from this mountain of gold while your benefit from a slice of bread is direct; likewise, you benefit directly from a cup filled with water, and the clothes you wear. So the thing you benefit from directly is called a 'good' whilst the thing you do not benefit from directly is called a 'price.' This is why the True Lord the Most High says to us as a warning and admonition for us not to seek pride in wealth: 'O you who have believed, spend from that which We have provided for you before there comes a Day in which there is no exchange and no friendship and no intercession. And the infidels are indeed the wrongdoers.'

The True Lord the Most High urges us to spend from what He grants us as sustenance before the coming of the Last Day, in which there shall be no bargaining, that is, no opportunity to exchange prices for goods or vice versa; and also on that day, there will be no 'friendship' (khulla), which means sincere love, the relationship which exists between two people so that each one is connected by love to the other; for each of you will be separated from the other even if there was an emotional link between you, and in the Hereafter every person will be concerned solely with the matter of his own soul.

On the Last Day, there will be no selling, or buying, and no friendship, and no intercession; and these are the means of escape which a person can usually resort to. You will not possess any price with which to buy, nor will anyone else have any good to offer in the Hereafter, so, this door will be closed. Likewise, there will be no friendship or intercession; yet, intercession here is permitted if it is from those to whom God has allowed to intercede, so, the matter is in God's Hand. The meaning of 'intercessor' (shafi') is derived from the word (shaf'), which means 'even', as in 'odd and even'; something odd is basically singular whilst something even is basically dual. It is as though the intercessor adds his voice to my voice because of my deficiency and need before someone. People seek intercession from those who have a high rank in the sight of the one to whom they intercede so that he will do as they ask. But in the Hereafter, these means will not be available, and there will be no bargaining, friendship, or intercession; and if you spend in God's Way you will protect yourselves from that day, so, take the opportunity now before the day comes when there will be no bargaining, no friendship and no intercession.

These are the gateways to salvation that people think they have, which will be closed on this mighty day; it is as though the True Lord the Most High were saying: I did not make a chance pass by My creatures; it is My creatures who have wronged themselves and put themselves in this position, and I have not wronged them. This is why the True Lord the Most High concludes the verse by saying, '…And the infidels are indeed the wrongdoers.'

After speaking about the messengers, the divergence, the fighting to uphold the Way of the True Lord the Most High, and the spending in His cause, God the Most High clarifies for us the correct image of faith in whose light, all of these things came; for the entire succession of Divine messages came for the sake of this way. He the Exalted says:

ٱللَّهُ لَآ إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَ ٱلْحَىُّ ٱلْقَيُّومُ ۚ لَا تَأْخُذُهُۥ سِنَةٌ وَلَا نَوْمٌ ۚ لَّهُۥ مَا فِى
ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَمَا فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ ۗ مَن ذَا ٱلَّذِى يَشْفَعُ عِندَهُۥٓ إِلَّا بِإِذْنِهِۦ ۚ يَعْلَمُ مَا بَيْنَ
أَيْدِيهِمْ وَمَا خَلْفَهُمْ ۖ وَلَا يُحِيطُونَ بِشَىْءٍ مِّنْ عِلْمِهِۦٓ إِلَّا بِمَا شَآءَ ۚ وَسِعَ
كُرْسِيُّهُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضَ ۖ وَلَا يَـُٔودُهُۥ حِفْظُهُمَا ۚ وَهُوَ ٱلْعَلِىُّ ٱلْعَظِيمُ ﴿٢٥٥﴾

God - there is no god but Him, the Ever Living, the Ever Watchful. Neither slumber nor sleep overtakes Him. All that is in the heavens and in the earth belongs to Him. Who is there that can intercede with Him except by His leave? He knows what is before them and what is behind them, but they do not comprehend any of His knowledge except what He wills. His throne extends over the heavens and the earth; it does not weary Him to preserve them both. He is the Most High, the Tremendous [255] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 255)

We shall pause here to reflect on His words: 'God – there is no deity except Him….' The word Allah ('God') is a proper noun for the Necessary Being, and when you say 'God', the mind goes directly to the Necessary Being.

What does the 'Necessary Being' mean? Being is of two kinds: The necessary and the possible. The necessary kind of being is that which necessarily must exist – it is inconceivable that he does not exist. When the True Lord the Most High told us of His Name 'Allah' He gave us the idea that by this name 'Allah,' He the Exalted challenges anyone but Him to be named by it. Were we all believers, our respect for this challenge would arise from our faith; but there are those who do not believe in God, and there are rebels and atheists who say that 'God is a superstition;' yet, does any one of these people dare to call himself 'Allah'?

No one has done this because God has made this challenge and no one dared to expose himself to this experiment. The fact that the disbelievers and atheists do not dare to undergo this experiment proves that their disbelief is not firmly implanted in their souls; were their disbelief sound, they would say, ‘We will take this name and see what happens;’ but this has not happened.

So the word ‘Allah’ is the proper noun for the Necessary Being, to whom are ascribed all the attributes of perfection. After this there comes the fundamental matter, which is: ‘…there is no deity except Him….’ Here we find negation and then affirmation; the negation is ‘there is no deity’ and the affirmation is ‘except Him’. The negation is an act of clearing, and the affirmation is an act of adorning (and clearing of irregularities comes before the affirming of beauty): He the Exalted clears for us His existence of any partner to Him, and then affirms to us His Oneness. The expression ‘…There is no deity except Him…’ means nothing has the right to be worshipped except God. We know that some people, during periods of heedlessness, worshipped idols and celestial bodies; but were they true deities, or false ones? They were false deities, and the proof of this matter, which is that ‘there is no deity except God’, i.e. there is nothing which can be worshipped except God, is that none of these other ‘deities’ has objected to the truth of this; so, this statement is right and true.

If anyone claims the contrary, we say to him: God has told us that there is nothing which can rightfully be worshipped but Him because He is the One Who created and provided, and said: I am the One Who created; if this is correct, then, He is truthful in what He says and we must not worship anyone but Him; and if this is not correct, and it was someone else who created this universe, then, where is this one who created and then left another who did not create this universe to say, ‘I am the One Who created the universe’? It is one of two things: the first is that there is no deity besides Him, in which case the matter is settled; the other is that if there were other deities, and then one came and said ‘I am the Deity, and there is no other deity besides Me,’ then, where are these other deities? Do they not know that this has happened?

If they do not know about it, then, they are not worthy of being deities; and if they do know about it, why have they not said, ‘We are deities, and this is a lie’? Just as God sent messengers with miracles, they, too, should have sent messengers with miracles. If a person makes a claim and there is no one to dispute it, the claim stands until it is challenged.

So, the expression ‘there is no deity except God’ has with it the evidence of its truth; for either this statement is right and true, and that is the end of it, or else if it is not true, where is the deity who created, and who should be worshipped, after he heard someone else come and take this matter from him? And after this we do not hear or sense anything from him, and he does not speak, and we know nothing about him; so, what is the matter with him? Either he does not know, or he does not have power, in which case he is not fit to be a deity because if he did know but did not respond, this would mean he had no power. For this reason, our Lord the Most High approaches this matter from another angle, commanding His Messenger to proclaim that if there were – as some people say – other deities with Him, surely, they would have to strive to find a way to Him Who is enthroned on His Almightiness. Limitless is He in His Glory, and sublimely, immeasurably exalted above anything that people may say about Him (al-Isra’: 42-43).

If these supposed deities had any kind of power, they would have gone to God the Most High and denied His Divinity; and if there were any other deity than God, there would be a battle between the two deities, but this has not happened. The statement ‘there is no deity except God’ is true in its essence even for those who deny it. The evidence of this is the lack of existence of any challenger to this claim. If there is no challenger, then this confirms that there is no deity except God the Most High. If a challenger does exist, then, where is he?

I will give an example to illustrate this – and God is beyond compare: Imagine that we are in a meeting, and then we find a wallet and we present it to the attendees, but we do not find its owner. Then someone, who had been with us and left, comes back and says, ‘Everyone, when I was sitting with you, I lost my wallet.’ Since no one among us claimed it for himself, it must be his wallet.

So, ‘there is no deity except God’ is something filled with integrity and truth, and God is the Divine Being to whom worship must be directed; and worship is obedience, and a worshipper is one who obeys. Every act of obedience requires a command and a prohibition, and since worship requires commands and prohibitions, the one to whom these commands and prohibitions are directed must be able to either obey or disobey. So when we say to him, ‘Do this as a way of faith,’ he must be able to refrain from doing it, and when we say to him, ‘Do not do this,’ he must have the ability to do it anyway. If not, and if he were not able to refuse, would He say to him, ‘Do this’? No, He would not say it to him. And if he were unable to comply, would He say to him, ‘Do not do this’? This would not be possible.

A worshipper must be able to do this deed or that and refrain from doing it; if not, commands and prohibitions would be a waste of time and pointless. This is why when they wanted to restrict Islam to the principal canonical acts of worship, namely the dual testimony that there is no god but God, and that Muhammad is the Messenger of God, prayer, fasting, the poor-due, and pilgrimage, asking whether this is all that Islam is about, implying that it is a religion which depends on outward actions only, we said to them: No; Islam is concerned with every action in life which befits man’s role as vicegerent on earth; God the Most High was the One Who brought people into being out of the earth, and gave them dwelling therein (Hud: 61).

The expression ‘made them dwell therein’ means that He instructed them to fill the earth with life; so, every action in life which leads to the earth being filled with life is an act of worship. Do not think that worship is only fasting and prayer because fasting, prayer, and so on are the pillars upon which the motions of life stand, upon which Islam is built. So if you make Islam equal to these pillars alone, you have thereby made Islam a foundation with no building atop it, for these are only the pillars upon which Islam is built. So Islam is everything which befits man’s vicegerency on earth; and this is shown and confirmed by God’s statement that He brought people into being out of the earth, and made them dwell therein (Hud: 61).

Some people come to us and say, ‘We need only to worship, and not work.’ We say to any of them: How much of your day does prayer take up? It takes One hour perhaps. And how often is the poor-due taken from you? Once a year; and how much time does fasting take from you? It takes the daylight hours of one month. And does the obligation of the pilgrimage take more from you than one single journey in a lifetime? By God, what will you do with the rest of your life apart from this, which is so much? You need no more than one hour a day to pray and no more than one day a year to pay the poor-due; you spend one month fasting during the daylight hours, and you perform the pilgrimage once in your lifetime. So what will you do with the rest of the time? You eat, and wear clothes; you will ask for bread to eat, and who will make it for you? This bread goes through many stages before it becomes a morsel which you eat, and it requires more than one science , more than one action and more than one power.

The shop which only sells bread, but does not bake it, requires a window made of glass or the like, and there must be someone working there who goes with his van to the bakery to fetch the bread and take it to the store to sell it. And if you consider the bakery, you will find many stages, from the delivery and receipt of the flour, then, the making of the dough, then, the fire which is fuelled with oil; and this is done by workers who require someone to organise them. And before all this, the flour was just seeds, and then, it was milled into flour; and there were engineers who managed the machines which do this milling, and worked to keep them functioning. And after this, there is the land in which the wheat grew, and how it was ploughed, prepared for farming, irrigated, fertilized, planted, and harvested, and how the ears and the husks were threshed, and then, how it was fanned to spate the grain from the straw, and how the grains were then packed, and so on.

Look at how much effort was required to make the slice of bread you eat, and all the energy, and how many men were required to do it. How could you feel right to let it be made for you, whilst you just sit to pray and fast? No; you must not take the work of others without any effort on your part.

Another example: You wear a robe, but think how much work did this robe require, of spinning, weaving, and stitching? So, do not sit and benefit from the effort of those who work for a living, and say, ‘I have been created to worship alone.’ This is not worship; worship is to obey God in all that He has commanded, and refrain from all that He has prohibited, according to His statement that He brought people into being out of the earth, and made them dwell therein (Hud: 61). Every work is considered an act of worship; otherwise, you will be a burden to others. True faith requires that you benefit from your own work, and not rely on the work of others.

The True Lord the Most High made us His vicegerents on earth in order that we thrive upon it, and it is part of good worship that we do all our works well; and in this way, we will not only maintain the pillars of Islam, but we will maintain the pillars and the building too, and we will have fulfilled the responsibility of faith, and all of our actions will have adhered to our testimony that 'there is no god but God.'

We know that the word 'God' (Allah) is a proper noun for the Necessary Being, and this is the Name which God chose for Himself and then, informed us of; and God has many Names, as was narrated to us in the Hadith of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him when He asked God the Most High by every Name of His which He revealed in His Book, or which He taught to any of His creatures – that is, taught them exclusively – or which He kept to Himself as part of His knowledge of the Unseen. So do not think that the Names of God the Most High amount only to all those Names which are known to us, but rather, these are the Names which God the Most High allowed us to know.

It is possible – and from the words of the Hadith we know it to be the case – that God the Most High teaches some people some of His Names, and keeps other Names of His to Himself, which we will come to know on the Day of Resurrection when we meet Him. When we speak about the other Names, we find that they are actually adjectives, but they have become names because they are absolute attributes; so, if you say the word qadir ('capable'), you notice that we use this word to describe people; but when we say 'Al-Qadir', we refer to the fully Capable, namely God. The same is the case with 'The All-Hearing,' 'The All-Seeing,' and 'The All Knowing.'

We find that some of the Names of God the Most High have opposites, whilst other Beautiful Names of God do not have opposites. If you say 'The One Who grants life,' there is also 'The One Who causes death;' and there is 'The Exalter' and 'The Humiliator.' This is because they are attributes whose effects can be seen on others: He causes death to others, and exalts others, and humiliates others. As for the attributes which have no opposites, we term them 'attributes of the Essence': He is the Living, and there is no opposite to this; but for 'The One Who grants life' we can give the opposite, which is 'The One Who causes death,' for the Name drawn from this is the attribute of action. God the Most High can be described by the attributes of action and also by their opposites because they apply to others; but as for the attributes of the Essence, He only is described by them.

When the True Lord the Most High said ‘Allah,’ He wanted to give us some of the manifestations of God in His Names so, He said, ‘God– there is no deity except Him…’ in order to affirm for us the attribute of Oneness. We must understand that the word ‘except’ here is not a particle of exclusion because if it were a particle of exclusion, it would be as though you are denying that there are any deities, and then, God is included in the deities which you are denying, and this is incorrect. Rather, what it means is that there was never any deity other than God, and He is One without associate, and nothing is worthy of worship but Him; so, the word ‘except’ here does not imply exclusion, but rather, it means ‘other than’, as in ‘there is no deity other than God.’

We know that this assertion has its evidence with it; otherwise, if there were another deity, it would have declared to us that it existed. But there is no deity except Him the Exalted who told us, ‘God– there is no deity except Him….’ I liked what Dr 'Abd Al-Wahhab ‘Azzam God rest his soul said; he was an admirer of the Pakistani poet Iqbal, who used to write poems in the style called mathani, which means to give two lines of verse on one subject, and then, to give another two lines on another subject. Most of Iqbal’s poetry was concerned with Islamic philosophy and thought, and Dr. 'Abd Al-Wahhab ‘Azzam admired Iqbal’s poetry, so, he wrote a kind of mathani couplet for him, in which he imitated the style of Iqbal, saying:

Monotheism is nothing but positive and negative,
And in these two for the soul are energy and light.

His statement ‘monotheism is nothing but positive and negative’ alludes to electricity; he says that monotheism is nothing but positive and negative, in which are energy and light for the soul: when you say ‘there is no deity,’ the words ‘there is no’ are for negation, and when you complete your words by saying ‘but God,’ the word ‘but’ is for affirmation; and Dr. ‘Azzam completed his words by saying that ‘There is no’ and ‘But’ are an overwhelming power; they are the two electric polarities of the heart, as though electricity comes when you make a negative and a positive, the positive is ‘but’ and the negative is ‘there is no’ and as long as there is positive and negative, there is an electrical charge.

‘God – there is no deity except Him, the Ever-Living, the Sustainer of [all] existence…’ must be the first attribute of this Deity because capability comes after life, and knowledge comes after life. So every other attribute must come after it in terms of the order they are mentioned; otherwise, no one of God’s attributes is preeminent to, or ahead of, any other, for they are all pre-eternal with no first; for had it ever not existed, how could attributes apply to something non-existent? When we hear the word ‘Ever-Living’, we say, what does ‘living’ mean? The philosophers were uncertain about the explanation of this – one of them saying that a living being is one who has the attribute of being able to perceive if there is something to be perceived.

The philosopher who said this meant by ‘life’, our life, as though beings other than us do not have any perception. We say to the one who has this opinion: No; if you mean life with its comprehensive, exact definition, you must say that life means that a being has an attribute which preserves its ability to fulfil its function; this is what the definition must be. So, a living being is something which has an attribute which preserves its ability to fulfil its function. An example of this is plant; as long as you find it growing, this means it has life which preserves its ability to fulfil its function; if it is cut, this ability ends; another example is man: when he dies, he is no longer in a sound state to fulfil his purpose. When inanimate elements come into contact with one another, they react; this reaction is a branch of the existence of life, but it is a life appropriate to these elements, not like our life.

When you see smooth, slippery pebbles, are they all the same size? No; their forms are different, and this indicates that there are several stages for a single stone of them; and if these stones remained in their natural environment, the large ones would certainly break apart one day and become small, and then become large once again; but when man uses these stones to put, for example, between the rails of train tracks, the stones have been taken from their natural environment. It is out of God’s wisdom that nothing ever loses its usefulness, but rather, He the Exalted prepares for everything another function.

Every being has an attribute which preserves its ability to fulfil its function and it has a life which is appropriate to this function. We have not devised these words of our own accord, but rather, we are saying this because we read the Quran with attentiveness and reflection; and we ask: What does the Quran mention as the opposite of life? It is perishing, as can be understood from God's words: That he who would perish might perish in clear evidence of the truth, and that he who would remain alive might live in clear evidence of the truth (al-Anfal: 42). The opposite of life is perishing (halak), and 'living' means 'not perishing;' and something which has perished cannot be alive. God the Most High says about the Hereafter that everything is bound to perish, except His eternal Self (al-Qasas: 88).

This means that all genera, from the highest to the lowest, whether man, angel, animal, or vegetable, all will perish. As long as all will perish on the Last Day, it is as though they were not perishing before this, and everything had a life appropriate for it. Is a stone not a thing, and will it not be one of those who perish on the Last Day? So, before this it is not perished; but we humans cannot grasp this, and we understand life to mean only sensation and external movement although scientists have confirmed that even atoms contain within them rotation and have life. When you look through a microscope at a plant leaf, and see all the verdure and the cells on it, and see all the processes taking place on it, you say, 'This life is more advanced than our own life, and more intricate!'

So, everything has life; and do not think that you are the one who causes them to perish. When you take a stone and break it up and put it in an oven to make plaster, do not say that you have taken from the stone its appropriate form of life; you have only changed its function from being hard stone, and it now has a new function. The chain continues until everything in existence has a life which is appropriate for the function which is right for it.

Consider the Life of the True Lord the Most High: what is its form? It is the Higher Life, and He is the Most High Living Being, such that life can never be taken from Him because no one gave Him life, but rather, His life is intrinsic; and this is the Living Being in its absolute sense.

So, the Living Being in its absolute sense is God, and the True Lord the Most High says, ‘God – there is no deity except Him, the Ever-Living…’, and the effect of this attribute is present in all the other attributes. He then says, ‘…the Sustainer of [all] existence (al-Qayyoum)....’ The Arabic word Qayyum is an intensive adjectival form of the word qa’im, which means ‘one who preserves and takes care of something.’ This is like when we say that God is Ghafour (‘the Much-Forgiving’), which is the intensive form of ghafir (‘forgiving’). Do we not have the simple adjective form ghafir? We do, but ghafour is the intensive adjectival form.

Someone might say, ‘Are some of God’s attributes strong, and others weak?’ We say: No; God’s attributes cannot be described as having strength or weakness, for God’s attributes are a single unified system. In order for us to understand this, let us give an example – and God the Most High is beyond compare: We all eat in order to stay alive, so, we are all ‘eaters’, which in Arabic is akil. But if you describe someone with the emphatic form akoul, this means that he has taken the attribute of eating, in which we all share, and increased it so that we can describe him with the emphatic forms akkal or akoul.

What is the nature of this increase? It might be that you normally eat one slice of bread, whilst he eats two or three so that on the occasion of eating, he consumes a lot, so, we call him akoul. Or, he might eat a single slice of bread as you do in one meal, but he eats five meals a day instead of three, and in this case, he is also akoul. So the emphatic form akoul either refers to an emphasis of the action itself, or else a repetition of the action.

We consider God’s attributes and say that they are not subject to strength and weakness in the action itself, but rather in the repetition of the action with respect to all mankind. God the Most High is forgiving (ghafir) to this one, and to that one, and to every sinner who repents; so, the action is repeated, and He is the Much-Forgiving (al-Ghafour) and the All-Forgiving (al-Ghaffar). This solves difficulties for us in many situations; when God the Most High says that He is never unfair to His servants, He the Exalted uses the term zhallam, the emphatic form of zhalim, (‘unfair’) (Fussilat: 46). Here we find a linguistic rule which says that when you use an emphatic adjectival form, and affirm it, the simple adjective form of the same word is also a priori affirmed. For example, if you say that someone is 'allam or 'alim (both meaning 'knowledgeable'), as long as you affirm the stronger adjective, the weaker form is also included. But if you negate the emphatic form, the ordinary form might still apply: he may not be 'allama ('extremely knowledgeable'), but he might still be 'allam or 'alim, ('knowledgeable'). If you say that someone is extremely knowledgeable, you thereby also affirm the lower forms of the adjective, so, he is also a priori knowledgeable in the forms 'allam and 'alim. However, if you deny that he is very knowledgeable, have you denied the rest? No; so, the negation of the greater does not necessarily negate the lesser.

But if you affirm the greater, the lesser is also affirmed, and if you negate the greater the lesser is not automatically negated. If you say that God is not zhallam ('extremely unfair') to His servants, you have negated the greater: it is true that He is not emphatic in wronging them, but could He possibly be zhalim ('unfair') and do them a lesser wrong, according to what we said about the negation of the greater not necessarily negating the lesser? We say: No; because we must consider the principle matter here in light of the fact that the emphasis of an action and a deed sometimes refers to the action itself, and sometimes refers to the repetition of the action. If the True Lord the Most High wanted to wrong this person, and that person, the action would be repeated, so, He would be – Far from it! i.e. zhallam; this is why He did not say 'extremely unfair to His servant,' but rather said 'extremely unfair to His servants.'

So, one person may be wronged, and then, another, and then, another; and when someone wrongs them all, he is zhallam; this is why God the Most High negated this by saying that He is never unfair to His servants (Fussilat: 46).

The True Lord the Most High says here, '…the Sustainer of [all] existence…' (al-Qayama) which is an intensive adjectival form of the word qa'im, which literally means 'stander, one who stands' or 'one who manages and takes care of something,' as in the one who takes care of the affairs of his house, of his dependants, of a school's affairs, or takes care of management, meaning that he handles its affairs. It is as though caring and being in charge of something is a sign of being in a supervisory position; we do not say in Arabic that someone is the qa'id ('sitter, one who sits') of the affairs of something. And when you say Qayyum, this means an even greater level of sustaining, caring and supervision; how so? Because the one who is qa'im might be dependent on someone else; but when He is self-subsistent so that others draw their subsistence from Him, this means that He sustains and manages every other being. God the Most High puts forth the question as to whom it is that is standing over every soul in what it earns. Yet, the idolaters set up associates with God. Then, God commands His Messenger to tell them to give their associates' names. Or, would they inform God of something that He does not know on earth? Or, is it just outward speech? But their fraudulent speech appeared embellished to the disbelievers, and they were turned away from the path; and He whom God lets go astray, no guide will be there for him (al-Ra'd: 33).

The idolaters arrived to the level of stupidity in their obstinacy, ascribing associates to God in their worship. Yet, can anyone reach that high level, the level of the creation of the world and the sustenance of everything in it, whether large or small? He is the Protector and Overseer of every being, and the world with all that is open and hidden within it, and these idols bring neither harm nor benefit; so, how could you doubt, O you who ascribe partners to God, that the True Lord the Most High is glorified above this by the fact that He sustains every being and all of creation? But the people of error are deluded by their error, and they have no guide without God.

The True Lord the Most High is Self-Subsistent, and He sustains others; if anyone else is subsistent, they only draw their subsistence from Him. So He must be '…the Sustainer of [all] existence...' and part of His subsistence is that '…Neither drowsiness overtakes Him nor sleep….' In the traditional books of scholars, it is narrated that the children of Israel asked Moses peace be upon him, 'Does our Lord sleep?'

God inspired him to take two bottles and place them in a man's hand and then let him go to sleep, and he will see the answer. When they put the bottles in his hand and then he slept, the bottles smashed, and then he said, 'This is it.' That is, He sustains the affairs of the sky and the earth, and if drowsiness and sleep were to overtake Him, the world would be destroyed.

So '…Neither drowsiness overtakes Him nor sleep….' The word 'drowsiness' (sina) is the first stage of slumber, i.e. light sleep. One of us might be sitting, and then, might doze off. But 'sleep' (nawm) means deep sleep; so, when God said ‘…Neither drowsiness overtakes Him nor sleep…’, they might have said, ‘He can overcome light sleep, but can He fight off deep sleep?’ The True Lord the Most High said of Himself, ‘…Neither drowsiness overtakes Him nor sleep….’ We know that slumber is the dozing which comes at the onset of sleep, the signs of which begin with the eyes and the eyelids. When a person begins to fall asleep, this shows first in his eyes, which is why they say that the eye is the body part which allows you to see a person’s states; and in our modern times, they have discovered that the state of the arteries can only be known accurately from the eye. The listlessness which first comes to the eye is slumber, or the beginnings of sleep which we also call ‘drowsiness.’

‘…Neither drowsiness overtakes Him nor sleep….’ Would you want a greater reassurance from the Deity you worship, the God the Most High you adore, and the Creator of all creatures, than His saying to the created worshipper: ‘Sleep as much as you need, and relax; for your Lord does not sleep;’ what more would you want? He the Exalted knows that He created you, and that you need to sleep, and whilst you are asleep the mechanisms of your body continue to work. When you sleep, does your heart stop? When you sleep, does your breathing stop? When you sleep, does your stomach cease to perform its digestive functions? When you sleep, do your intestines stop absorbing nutrients? No; rather, everything in your machinery continues to do its job. Who would supervise these processes if your Lord were to sleep?

So, you sleep, and He does not sleep; by God, is this servitude which degrades us, or one that exalts us? It is a servitude which exalts us, for the One whom we worship says: Sleep, all of you, for neither drowsiness nor sleep overtakes Me. Do not think that although neither sleep nor drowsiness overtake Him, anything in His universe can escape His will; no; everything in the heavens and the earth belongs to Him, and nothing, and nobody can escape His Omnipotent power; for this reason, the True Lord the Most High says, ‘…To Him belongs whatever is in the heavens and whatever is on the earth….’

He the Exalted then says, ‘…Who is it that can intercede with Him except by His permission?…’ He the Exalted is clarifying things: I gave you relaxation in this worldly life, and I even allowed the disbeliever to enjoy My favours, and I did not make the means scanty for him, and as long as he strived with those means, I gave to him, which showed that I have no bias. I said to the means: O means, he, who uses you well, shall take you even if he is a disbeliever in Me. But on the Day of Resurrection, the disbeliever will have nothing but suffering because as long as he worked in his worldly life, and worked well, he took his reward. Beware of thinking, as the idolaters who thought that their idols are their intercessors with God. The True Lord the Most High said of them that they worship, as partners with God, things or beings that can neither harm nor benefit them, saying that these are their intercessors with God. Then He the Exalted commands His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to ask them if they think that they are informing God of anything in the heavens or on earth that He does not know. Limitless is He in His glory, and sublimely exalted above anything to which men may ascribe as partners with Him (Yunus: 18).

These people, who lied against God by associating partners with Him, and by adopting false idols which could neither bring them harm nor benefit, say of these idols that they will intercede for them before God in the Hereafter; and the True Lord the Most High commanded His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to tell the idolaters, ‘Say to them, O Muhammad: Do you tell God of an associate of whose existence God does not know, neither in heavens nor on earth, whilst He is the Creator of everything in the heavens and the earth, and He the Exalted is far above having any associate in His dominion?’

They wanted to annul the notion of monotheism, and ascribe associates to God and say, ‘These associates are the ones who will intercede for us before God.’ So, the True Lord the Most High says: No one can intercede before Me unless I have given them leave to intercede. Intercession is not anyone’s right, but rather, it is a gift from God, which is why He says, ‘…Who is it that can intercede with Him except by His permission?…’

The True Lord the Most High says, ‘…He knows what is [presently] before them and what will be after them….’ When the scholars turn their attention to the expression ‘…what is [presently] before them and what will be after them…’, they explain to us that what is presently before them (literally ‘between the hands’) is that which is in front of one, and what will be after them (literally ‘behind’) is that which lies behind one; and what is in front of a person is directed towards the organ of visual perception, the eye; so it means that which is witnessed. That which is behind one is unseen, and one cannot see it; it is as though the meaning of ‘what is between the hands’ is that which can be seen, and ‘that which is behind’ is that which is unseen; so, the expression ‘…what is [presently] before them and what will be after them…’ means that He knows their seen and their unseen affairs. The phrase ‘what is presently before them’ can also mean something else: we might ask whether what lies open before you is heading towards you, or away from you; if there are people in front of you, are they coming to you or going away from you?

If they are going away from you, they are ahead of you and you are following behind them, and those who are behind you will come after you. That is, the True Lord the Most High is telling us that He knows the past and the future. The True Lord the Most High knows what is open before them, that is, the visible world they call the ‘World of Dominion’ (‘alam al-mulk), and also what is hidden from them, that is, the Unseen, which they call the ‘World of Sovereignty’ (‘alam al-malakoot). He knows what they can see, and what is hidden from them. As the True Lord the Most High says that with Him are the keys to the things that are beyond the reach of a created being’s perception: none knows them but He. And He knows all that is on land and in the sea; and not a leaf falls but He knows it; and neither is there a grain in the earth’s deep darkness, nor anything living or dead, but is recorded in His clear decree (al-An‘am: 59).

God the Most High has knowledge of all the Unseen, and His knowledge encompasses everything, and nothing escapes His ken; it encompasses things from all sides. ‘…He knows what is [presently] before them and what will be after them, and they encompass not a thing of His knowledge except for what He wills….’ The True Lord knows all there is to be known; and the fact that the True Lord the Most High knows does not mean that no one else could know, but the knowledge of human beings is a gift from the Creator to His servants.

When someone says, ‘I compose poetry’, does this statement prevent anyone else from composing their own poetry? No; he did not say, ‘No one composes poetry except me.’ God the Most High says, ‘…and they encompass not a thing of His knowledge except for what He wills…' and 'knowledge' is the attribute which knows things for what they truly are; this is knowledge. God's attribute and His knowledge are too mighty to be encompassed because if they were encompassed they would be limited, and God's perfections cannot be limited. For example, when you see something that amazes you, you say, 'This is God's Power!' Is it God's Power, or something decreed by God's Power? It is decreed by God's Power, i.e. it is the effect of God's Power. And when He says, '…and they encompass not a thing of His knowledge…', this means 'that which He knows.'

The word 'encompass' is very precise rhetorical usage because you might be aware of a fact from one side, but be ignorant of it from other sides. He the Exalted clarifies: You cannot encompass the knowledge or Power of God because the meaning of encompassing (ihata) is to know everything, like the circumference (muhit) of a circle; but this does not prevent us from knowing certain partial things, and we can come to know these by means of the laws of deduction which God has given us: there are premises from which we deduce conclusions. For example, does the student who solves an algebra problem or a geometry exercise have knowledge of the Unseen? No; he takes premises given to him in order to arrive at a conclusion previously known to his teacher. You cannot encompass the knowledge of anything but that which God wills you to encompass: '…and they encompass not a thing of His knowledge except for what He wills….'

God's statement 'except for what He wills' is an allowance from Him the Exalted that He will grace His creatures by willing for them to know something of that which He knows; this knowledge was hidden and concealed from them in the secrets of the universe, and then God gave the secret permission to reveal itself. Everything which has been revealed to the human mind was hidden in the knowledge of the Unseen, and was one of God's secrets, and then God gave the secret permission to reveal itself, so, we came to know it by His will. Every secret in the universe has a birth, just like a man has, i.e. it has an appointed time in which to appear, and this appointed time is called the 'birth' of the secret. This secret already existed, and the world was benefitting from it without knowing it. For example, we were benefitting from the law of gravity before we knew the law of gravity, and likewise we benefitted from relativity without knowing what it was. This is what the True Lord the Most High explains to us in another place in the Noble Quran, when He says that He shall make people see His signs in the horizons and within themselves so that it will become clear to them that this revelation (the Quran) is indeed the truth. Is it not enough for them to know that your Lord is Witness to everything? (Fussilat: 53).

When He the Exalted said that He shall make people see, this means that He the Exalted will cause new secrets to be born for us, and this birth is not a bringing into existence, but rather a revealing. This is why people say about scientific secrets, that they are 'new discoveries.' When they say this, they show good manners in dealing with the secrets of the universe, even though many of them are not religious: they say, 'We have discovered such-and-such,' meaning that what they discovered was already present. It is not their intention to have good manners when they say this, but this is simply the way it is. As for the believers, they say, 'God gave permission for this secret to be born.'

His words '…and they encompass not a thing of His knowledge except for what He wills…' imply a clear challenge; even if all of mankind came together, they could not encompass anything without His leave, and this is a challenge to all. When He the Exalted wills to make a secret of existence come to light, this secret is born; and the revealing of the secret might be adjacent to the investigations of man, such as the scientist who sits in his laboratory and conducts experiments on elements and reactions, and is thereby led to such-and-such a result. He works hard to know a particular secret, and we do not know anything about his hard work and exertion until the day his secret is uncovered.

He took the preliminary indications which God placed in the universe so that if we pursue them we will reach His secret, just as if we want to have a child we get married so that it will come. And on many occasions, God the Most High gave permission for the secret to be born without man's occupying himself with its preliminary indications; the time for the secret to be born came without the scientists having worked on its preliminaries, so, God the Most High caused it to come to any inventor as a result of a mistake which he made in one of his experiments.

When we study the history of discoveries, we find that most of them occurred in this way; they came about unexpectedly. There was a scientist studying something, and another fact was revealed to him which had been hidden from us all. The time came for it to be born without any investigation by man, so, God the Most High brought it to light in a different way altogether. And sometimes, God gives a scientist who researches the preliminary indications success, and allows him to discover the secret which he is looking for.

So, '…and they encompass not a thing of His knowledge except for what He wills…' means that man might come upon the secret by researching it, and sometimes the secret is uncovered in the process of an investigation into something else altogether. God does not withhold the discovery of the secret even if they were not looking for it so that we call it an 'accident'. Everything that takes place in the universe does so according to a fixed decree, and this is what gives us the difference between knowledge of the Unseen which already existed and had preliminary indications in God's universe by means of which we could arrive to it, and something which is concealed by God and has no preliminary indications; if He the Exalted wills, He gives it from His grace, out of generosity, not as the result of any effort from man; He the Exalted gives it as an 'accident' in one case, and gives it for things which have no preliminaries to some of His creatures whom He elects, in order that all people know that God gives graces to some of His servants whom He has chosen for His love, His illuminations, and His manifestations.

But does this mean that we can know all of the Unseen? No, because the Unseen is of two kinds: The first is the Unseen for which God places preliminary indications in His universe, which if we follow, will lead us to it, such as is the case with many discoveries; and if God wills for a secret to be born without our having searched for it, He gives it to us 'accidentally' from His generous grace, not through our efforts. There is another kind of Unseen which has no preliminary indications, and this is what God the Most High has kept within His own knowledge, although He might divulge it to some of His creatures, as He says that He alone knows the Unseen, and He discloses nothing of this Unseen except to a messenger whom He has been pleased to elect; and then, He sends forth a guard to watch over him in whatever lies open before him and in what is before him (al-Jinn: 26-27).

God the Most High is the Knower of the Unseen, and He does not allow any of His creatures to know His Unseen save those human beings whom He elects and chooses. For this reason, no one can learn this kind of Unseen, and so no one ever opened up a shop for knowledge of the Unseen, where people could go to ask them about unseen matters. The True Lord the Most High says that with Him are the keys to the things that are beyond the reach of a created being's perception: none knows them but He. And He knows all that is on land and in the sea; and not a leaf falls but He knows it; and neither is there a grain in the earth's deep darkness, nor anything living or dead, but is recorded in His clear decree (al-An'am: 59).

He the Exalted does not give this key to any of His creatures. God the Most High might want to grant a favour to someone, so, He puts words into their mouth which they might not understand themselves, whereupon the one who hears these words and benefits from them says, 'So-and-so said this to me, how incredible!' This is a grace from God to His servant so that God the Most High can show us that He provides His support to these righteous servants.

When God the Most High says, '…and they encompass not a thing…' we know that the word 'a thing' means the slightest amount. And His words '…of His knowledge except for what He wills. His Kursi (Seat) extends over the heavens and the earth…' teach us about those things which the True Lord the Most High ascribes to Himself and are also possessed by His creatures in their own way, such as existence – He the Exalted exists, and you exist, and like wealth – He is Rich, and you are rich, and like knowledge – He knows, and you know; but do we say that the attribute for God the Most High is like the attribute for us? No. Likewise, everything mentioned about the Unseen in connection with God, whether as an attribution or a description, must not be understood according to how it applies to yourself, but rather must be taken according to the rule that there is nothing like Him (ash-Shura: 11).

So, if it is said that God the Most High has a 'Hand', He has a Hand just as He has existence; and just as His existence is not like my existence, His Hand is not like my hand, but rather, I understand it according to 'there is nothing like Him.' So, when He says 'His seat extends…' we say: He said this, and as long as He said it we will understand these words according to 'There is nothing like Him'. Do not say that He has a chair, and He will sit upon it like we do. Do not say so. We have found people who say, 'Where is God? When did He come into being?', and we said and still say: 'When' and 'where' do not apply to God, but rather, they apply to you. Why? That is because 'when' refers to time, and 'where' to place, and time and place are settings for contingent actions, so, only contingent beings have time and place. For example, if I say, 'I drank', as long as the drinking occurred, it had a time and place; but suppose that I did not drink: would there be any time and place? No. So as long as God is not contingent, neither time nor place applies to Him; for time and place came into existence when God created and made this universe. Do not say 'when' because 'when' was created by Him; and do not say 'where' because 'where' was created by Him, and as 'when' and 'where' are adverbial circumstances, one for time and the other for place, and as time and place are aspects of contingent actions; then, when an action occurs, you can speak of time and place.

So, as long as God the Most High is not contingent, beware of saying about Him 'when' or 'where' because 'when' and 'where' indicate products of contingent action. We must take God's words '…His *Kurs*i (Seat) extends…' as we said, according to 'There is nothing like Him'. Linguistically, the Arabic word for 'seat' (kursi) is derived from the word kirs which means 'to come together', from which also is derived the word kurrasa which means 'booklet', a number of pages brought together. The word kursi can be used lexically to mean the foundation upon which something is built. So the root of kursi, the letters (k-r-s), indicate the notions of coming together and the foundation upon which things are laid firmly; you can tell someone to build a foundational (kursi) wall, it means a wall which will be a base to be built upon. The word can also be used to mean the knowledgeable people who resolve problematic circumstances; an Arab poet said, 'They are the karasi when misfortunes descend,' meaning that their help is sought out when difficult matters occur.

When any of this is ascribed to the True Lord the Most High, the early Muslim scholars had one way of dealing with it, whilst the later scholars had another way. The early scholars would say, 'We understand it just as God said it, but we place the 'how' of it and the envisaging of it in the light of '…There is nothing like Him…' (ash-Shura: 11). And some of them said, 'We should interpret it according to one of God's affirmed attributes,' like the manner they affirm the Omnipotent Power of the True Lord the Most High with respect to His expression: '…the Hand of God is over their hands…' (al-Fath: 10), that is, His Power is above their power, and as He the Exalted said about His own Power of creation that it is He Who has built the sky with His Hands; and, surely, it is He Who is steadily expanding it (adh-Dhariyat: 47).

The perfection of God's Omnipotent Power governed the creation of the sky, and the True Lord the Most High is sanctified and glorified far beyond any created being's envisaging the word 'Hand' with relation to God. We say that God said this, and we accept it from God because He knows best about His own Essence and His own Self, and we understand it according to the principle that He could have no likeness or counterpart, just as we affirm that God possesses many attributes the like of which are also possessed by God's creatures, and yet, we say that His knowledge is not like our knowledge, and His sight is not like our sight; so, why should His seat be like our seat? The whole thing is covered by the rule '…there is nothing like Him…' (ash-Shura: 11).

Scholars say the seat is that which is used for support: so, could the 'seat' here mean His knowledge? Yes. And could it mean His Authority and His Power? Yes, it could because the word 'seat' indicates that it is sat upon; and a person does not sit down from standing unless things are being done and settled for him, which is why they speak of the 'throne (kursi) of sovereignty;' this is because when things require standing and work, it means that you cannot sit on a chair, and when you sit on a chair, this means that things are settled and being done for you; and so for God, it means authority, control, supremacy and power.

Or, we could say that since He said, '…His seat extends over the heavens and the earth…' for something to 'extend over' something else means that it is well able to handle it and deal with it; and we understand that the 'heavens and the earth' are enormous beings from our perspective. He the Exalted says that greater indeed than the creation of man is the creation of the heavens and the earth; yet, most people do not understand (Ghafir: 57).

So, when He says that the seat overspreads the heavens and the earth, this means that it is greater than the heavens and the earth, that is, they are included in its vastness. In relation to this, Abu Dharr Al-Ghifari God be pleased with him relates: ‘I asked the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him about the Seat, and he said, ‘O Abu Dharr, the seven heavens and the seven earths are naught, next to the Seat, but as a ring cast into an open expanse; and the superiority of the Throne over the Seat is like the superiority of the expanse over that ring.’(1)

After all the scientific advances which mankind has attained, they have only reached the moon, which is nothing but a satellite of the earth, mere light-seconds away from us. In our lives, we have become used to using units of miles and kilometres to measure large lengths and distances, but we discovered that single units are no use for measuring the distance between the stars; for we know, for example, that the sun is 93 million miles away from the earth, but if we want to measure the distance between us and another star, we will be forced to use a number followed by many zeros, and this makes the expression impractical. For this reason, scientists gave celestial bodies an appropriate unit to measure the distance between stars, which we call light years. We know that the speed of light is around three hundred thousand kilometres a second, so, measuring the distance between us and any star in the sky requires very precise calculations and the study of several sciences.

Between the sun and us there are 93 million miles, and its light takes eight and one-third minutes to reach us. In addition, the light of Sirius, the brightest star in the sky, takes nine light years to reach us. So a light year is a unit for measuring the distances of celestial bodies, and we are amazed when we find that the light of some stars takes fifty light years to reach us. All of this, yet we have not even reached the limit of this planet’s sky; so, what about the other skies? The limits of God’s dominion are beyond our envisaging; and so we can recognise the honour granted by the True Lord the Most High to the believers when He the Exalted tells of the immensity of paradise by commanding the believers to vie with one another in seeking to attain their Lord’s forgiveness and to a paradise as broad as the heavens and the earth, which has been readied for those who have believed in God and His messengers; such is the bounty of God which He grants to whomever He wills – for God’s bounty is immense (al-Hadid: 21).

(1) A noble Hadith narrated by Ibn Jarir and Abu Ash-Sheikh in Al-‘Azama

This is paradise which God the Most High has prepared for the believers in God and His messengers who race to seek God's forgiveness. If the breadth of paradise is as vast as the heavens and the earth, then what about how vast its length is. What are its dimensions? As we know, breadth is the shorter of the two dimensions.

So, we must understand that there are other worlds besides the sky and the earth, but our eyes can only see what part of the sky and the earth which the True Lord the Most High wants us to see. This is why when we hear the True Lord's words '…His seat extends over the heavens and the earth…' we can imagine the magnificence of the seat of Him who is full of Bounty and Majesty.

The True Lord the Most High says, '…His seat extends over the heavens and the earth, and their preservation tires Him not….' If something tires one, this means it is heavy for him; in order for us to understand this, imagine that a man can lift ten kilograms: if we increase his load to twenty kilograms, it will be too heavy for him, and he will have to bend his back in order to bear this weight. If we increase the load any more, the man might fall to the ground because of the excessive heaviness of the load.

So, the meaning of '…and their preservation tires Him not…' is that it is not heavy for God to uphold the heavens and the earth. The sky and the earth, which cannot even be seen by mankind, are overspread by the Divine Seat; some of the exegetes say: If it is not difficult for the seat to uphold the heavens and the earth, then what about the Lord of the seat?

The True Lord the Most High gives us an assurance saying that indeed He holds fast the heavens and the earth lest they cease to function properly; and if they cease to function properly, no one could be able to hold them back but He; He is ever Clement, Forgiving (Fatir: 41).

The True Lord the Most High Alone is the One Who upholds the heavens and the earth in an amazing and remarkable balance; and were they destined to fall, no one could uphold them if God did not, that is, no one would be able to grasp them; for they are upheld by the power of the Invincible One, and if God wanted them to fall, no one would be able to grasp them and stop them from falling.

If these huge things are of God's creation and He is above them, when He describes Himself as being Exalted and Great, this is something natural; so, the True Lord the Most High then, gives us a logical conclusion which is suggested by everything mentioned in this verse, the verse of the Seat (Ayat Al-Kursi), saying, '…And He is the Most High, the Most Great.' The word 'High' ('aliyy) is in Arabic an intensive adjectival form of the attribute ('uluw) which means 'height.' The 'Most High' is then, the One above whom there is nothing higher, so, everything is lower than He is.

The noble verse which we are currently examining is known to us as Ayat Al-Kursi ('the Verse of the Seat') because the word Kursi ('seat') stands out in it; and the word 'seat' here means authority, control, power and sovereignty, all of which are attributes of the True Lord the Most High. There is no deity except Him, and He is the Ever-Living, and the Sustainer of All being, and He is the One Who neither sleep and nor drowsiness overtakes. To intercede with Him is permitted only by His Will alone, not by the will of any other; And He is the All Knowing of everything whose seat extends over the heavens and the earth; and He is the Exalted, so, there is no one higher than Him, and He is The Most Great, with absolute might. All of these attributes come together to place before us the essentials of the envisagement of faithful doctrine. Many Hadiths have been narrated about this verse from which we can gather that it is a verse with a special rank and status with God. It is narrated that Abu Hurayra God be pleased with him related: 'The Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him charged me with the job of looking after the zakat (alms) collected in Ramadan. Someone came and began to take from the food, so, I took hold of him and said, 'By God, I will take you to the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him!' He said, 'I am needy, I have dependants, and I am in dire need.' So, I let him go, and the next day the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said to me, 'O Abu Hurayra, what did your captive do yesterday?' I said, 'O Messenger of God, he complained of being in dire need and having dependants, so, I had mercy on him and let him go his way.' He said, 'Yet he lied to you, and will be back.' I knew that he would come back because the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him had said he would, so, I kept my eye out for him, and he came and started taking from the food. I took hold of him and said, 'I will take you to the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him!' He said, 'Leave me, for I am needy, and have dependants, and I will not come back again.' So, I had mercy on him and let him go his way, and the next day the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said to me. 'O Abu Hurayra, what did your captive do?' I said, 'O Messenger of God, he complained of being in dire need and having dependants, so, I had mercy on him and let him go his way.' He said: 'Yet he lied to you, and he will be back.' So I kept my eye out for him a third time, and he did come and started taking from the food again. I took hold of him and said, 'I will take you to the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him! This is the third and final time you will claim not to return!' He said, 'Let me teach you some words by means of which God will benefit you.' I said, 'What are they?' He said, 'When you go to bed, read the Verse of the Seat, 'God – there is no deity except Him, the Ever-Living, the Sustainer of [all] existence….' until you finish the verse; for it will remain as a protector for you from God, and no demon will approach you until you wake the next morning.' So, I let him go, and the next day the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him asked me, 'What did your captive do yesterday?' I said, 'O Messenger of God, he claimed he would teach me words by means of which God would benefit me, so, I let him go his way.' He said: 'What were they?' I said: 'He said to me: "When you go to bed, read the verse of the Seat from the beginning to the end, 'God – there is no deity except Him, the Ever-Living, the Sustainer of [all] existence….'" and he said: "It will remain as a protector for you from God, and no demon will approach you until you wake the next morning."' (The Prophet's Companions were extremely eager to learn good things.) The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said then, 'Indeed he has told you the truth, though he is usually a liar; do you know to whom you have been speaking these last three nights, O Abu Hurayra?' He said, 'No.' He peace and blessings be upon him said, 'It was Satan.'(1)

Abu Hurayra God be pleased with him also narrated that the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him said, 'The chapter of al-Baqara contains a verse which is the mistress of the verses of the Quran; if it is recited in a house which lodges a demon, it will certainly go out of it: the verse of the Seat.'(2)

(1) Narrated in Al-Bukhari's Sahih, in Kitab Fada'il Al-Quran), and in Kitab Al-Wikala, and in Sifat Iblis

(2) Narrated by Abu 'Abdullah Al-Hakim in his Mustadrak

And Abu Umama God be pleased with him narrated that the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Whoever recites the verse of the Seat after every prayer, there is nothing between him and his entrance into paradise except death.’(1)

And Imam 'Ali God be pleased with him narrated that the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Whoever recites it (the Verse of the Seat) when he goes to bed, God Almighty will protect his household, and the household of his neighbour, and the people of the households around him.’(2)

All of these things have been related about the merits of this noble verse; and scholars have devoted much time to studying the secret of this matter, and one of them said: Look at the Names of God which are found in it.

And indeed one of the scholars counted all the Beautiful Names of God in it, and found that there are sixteen Names of God in it. Another said that there are seventeen Beautiful Names of God in it, and another said that there are twenty-one Names of God in it. All this was in order for them to derive things from the verse, and know the many virtues of this noble verse. Those who said that it contains sixteen Names of God explained this thus:

It contains the proper noun for the Necessary Being: ‘God’; and the pronoun ‘Him’ in ‘…there is no deity except Him…’ is the second Name; and ‘The Ever-Living’ is the third Name; and ‘…the Sustainer of [all] existence…’ is the fourth Name; and when we look at the True Lord’s words ‘…Neither drowsiness overtakes Him nor sleep…’ we find that the pronoun in ‘overtakes Him’ refers to God Himself the Exalted; and ‘…To Him belongs whatever is in the heavens and whatever is on the earth…’ also contains a pronoun referring to Him the Exalted. Likewise, the pronouns in His words ‘with Him’, ‘His permission’, ‘He knows’, ‘His knowledge’, ‘He wills’, and ‘His seat’ all refer to Him the Exalted; and ‘…their preservation tires Him not…’ also contains a pronoun referring to Him; and the pronoun ‘He’ in His words ‘…And He is the Most High, the Most Great’ is also one of His Names; and ‘Most High’ is one of His Names; and ‘Most Great’ is also one of His Names.

---

(1) Narrated by An-Nasa’i in Alf-Yawm wa Al-layla and by Ibn Hibban in his Sahih

(2) Narrated by Al-Bayhaqi in Shu‘ab Al-Iman

But another scholar said that there are seventeen Names of God here because in the previous enumeration you did not count the pronoun implied in the gerund from which a verb can be derived when He says ‘their preservation’: the pronoun ‘their’ refers to the heavens and the earth, and ‘preservation’ is a gerund; who is it that preserves the heavens and the earth? It is God the Most High. In this way, there are seventeen Beautiful Names of God in the verse of the Seat. A third scholar said: No; you have left out other Names because in the noble verse, there are obvious Names of the True Lord the Most High, and there are also names derived from verbs. For example: ‘God – there is no deity except Him, the Ever-Living (is He), the Sustainer of [all] existence (is He)… Most High (is He), Most Great (is He).’

But other scholars answered this by saying: It is true that these are names derived from verbs, but they have become proper nouns. What is important is that in the verse of the Seat, there are sixteen Divine Names, and if we also count the elided pronoun in ‘their preservation’ there are seventeen, and if we also count the pronouns implied by the names derived from verbs thus: ‘…the Ever-Living (is He), the Sustainer of [all] existence (is He)… Most High (is He), Most Great (is He)’ this means that the Beautiful Names of God found in this noble verse are twenty-one in number. So this verse has gathered a large number of Divine Names, and this is the source of its greatness.

This noble verse explains and elucidates the fundamentals of the concept of faith, and it produced a complete doctrine, such that the believer can be proud that it is his doctrine. In essence, the verse contains the frame work of faith: As long as there is no deity except God, and as long as He is the Ever-Living, Sustainer of all existence and all the affairs of the heavens and earth, and everything is in His Hand, and He is the Most High and Most Great, all of which are reasons for us to believe in Him the Exalted, and to exult in that we hold to these doctrines; and they are a reason for the believer to be proud of this religion in which the matter of Absolute Divinity is so clear and plain.

Because of this, it is natural that the True Lord the Most High would not coerce anyone to believe in Him unwillingly; for the one who coerces someone to believe in a doctrine is the first one who is certain that were it not for this coercion, no one would believe this doctrine. In our daily lives, we find that those who hold to false principles are those who hold whips to force people to act according to these principles. All of those who promulgate these false principles know fully well that were they to leave aside the whip and the coercion, no one would follow these false principles. If any one of these promulgators of false principles truly believed that they were sound, he would say: I will present these principles up to the people, and leave the decision for them; because in this case, he would be sure of his principles. As for the one who forces people with the whip, or sovereign power to believe in something, he is the first one who doubts this belief, and the first one who knows that it is false. We see that when such people become too weak to use the whip, or sovereign power, their principles collapse and disintegrate.

After this, the True Lord the Most High says:

لَآ إِكۡرَاهَ فِي ٱلدِّينِۖ قَد تَّبَيَّنَ ٱلرُّشۡدُ مِنَ ٱلۡغَيِّۚ فَمَن يَكۡفُرۡ بِٱلطَّٰغُوتِ وَيُؤۡمِنۢ
بِٱللَّهِ فَقَدِ ٱسۡتَمۡسَكَ بِٱلۡعُرۡوَةِ ٱلۡوُثۡقَىٰ لَا ٱنفِصَامَ لَهَاۗ وَٱللَّهُ سَمِيعٌ عَلِيمٌ ٢٥٦

There is no compulsion in religion: true guidance has become distinct from error, so whoever rejects false gods and believes in God has grasped the firmest hand-hold, one that will never break. God is all hearing and all knowing [256]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 256)

The True Lord the Most High clarifies for us, believing servants and for all mankind, that 'There shall be no compulsion in [acceptance of] the religion….' Compulsion means to force someone to do something which he does not think it would be good to do; that is, the coerced person does not see any good in the act which would motivate him to do it.

But there are things which we might do with those around us for their own good, such as making children revise their studies, which is something good for the children, or such as forcing sick children to take medicine. These things are not samples of compulsion, but rather, they are ways in which we do what is best for those around us because no one wants to remain ill.

Compulsion, rather, means to force someone to do something, which they do not believe to be good based on the reasoning of their sound mind. For this reason, the True Lord the Most High says, ‘There shall be no compulsion in [acceptance of] the religion….’ The meaning of this verse is that God did not compel His creatures – and He is their Creator – to have religion; and it was possible for God to compel the free human being just as He compelled the heavens, the earth, the animals, the plants and the minerals, and then no one would have been able to disobey His commands, as He the Exalted says that had He so willed, He would indeed have guided all mankind aright (ar-Ra'd: 31).

But the True Lord the Most High wants to know who will come to Him freely out of love, not out of compulsion. For them to come to Him out of compulsion would affirm His compelling power, but not that He is Beloved; but if someone goes to Him willingly whilst able to choose not to, this proves that there is love. He therefore, says, ‘There shall be no compulsion in [acceptance of] the religion…’, that is: I have not established the principle of compulsion in dealing with My servants; and had I willed, everyone on earth would have believed. Were the messengers whom He sent, meant to coerce the people? No; the messengers came to deliver God’s Message not to coerce the people. He the Exalted gave man free will; otherwise, had He coerced them, He would not have sent messengers to them. This is why the Lord the Most High addressed His Messenger saying that had the Lord so willed, all those who live on earth would surely have believed, all of them; would he then, think that he could compel people to believe (Yunus: 99).

The mission of the messenger is to deliver God’s message because God does not want His creatures to be coerced into following religion; so, the one who delivers God’s message does not force His creatures to follow the religion. But there is a subtle point here: there is a difference between compelling someone to embrace a religion and enforcing the requirements of a religion; and this is where the difference occurs.

You ask a Muslim why he does not pray, and he replies, ‘There shall be no compulsion in … religion…’, and in this, he supposes that he is cultured and quotes this verse to you to silence you. So say to him: No. you have misunderstood the verse. ‘There shall be no compulsion in [acceptance of] the religion…’ means that there is no compulsion concerning doctrine and belief, but once you believe and declare that you believe in God, and you are a Muslim alongside us, you must know that if you break any of the laws of Islam, we have the right to ask you to adhere to it. You are free to believe or not to believe, but once you believe, you have a responsibility to fulfil the requirements of faith; otherwise, your behaviour will be presumed by others to be the behaviour of Islam. If you drink wine, you are free to do so because you are a disbeliever, for example; but will you believe and then drink wine?! No. If you do so, you thereby break one of God’s laws, and you must be penalized.

And since you know, as a sane adult, the requirements of Islam, you must fulfil these requirements. This is why God does not hold a person morally responsible until his mind matures when he reaches adulthood so that it could not be said that God has held someone accountable for faith and charged him with it before his mind has fully developed. Rather, He left moral responsibility until a person has matured and fully developed so that once he enters the sphere of moral responsibility he knows its requirements; and he is free to enter faith or not to do so, but once he enters, he will be held accountable.

No one should say when they hear one of the rulings of this religion, ‘There shall be no compulsion in… religion…’ because this verse was revealed concerning the fundamental matter of doctrine; once you accept this doctrine, it is binding upon you that you fulfil its requirements.

The enemies of Islam wanted to escalate this matter, so they said deceitfully and untruthfully that ‘Islam was spread by the sword.’ We say to them: God the Most High willed Islam to develop in a state of weakness, and for the early adherents to it to be oppressed with all manners of oppression, tortured, and banished from their homelands, their wealth, and their families, and for them to be unable to do anything; so the period of weakness which Islam first underwent was intended by Providence. We say to them also: Who was it that forced and compelled the first one ever to raise a sword to do so? The Muslims were weak and overpowered, unable to defend themselves. You are guilty of contradictions when you say that Islam was spread by the sword, and then you speak about the non-Muslim poll-tax negatively. We say: And what is this poll-tax which Islam takes from the non-Muslims in exchange for defending them? The Muslims would collect the poll-tax in the countries which were conquered by Islam, which shows that some people kept their old religions. As long as there were people who kept their old religions, this proves that Islam was not forced upon anyone.

The reason behind God's words 'There shall be no compulsion in [acceptance of] the religion…' is that the right way is clearly distinct from error; as long as the matter is distinct, there will be no coercion because coercion comes at moments of ambiguity, and there is no ambiguity. This is why the True Lord the Most High says, '…The right course has become clear from the wrong….' As long as the right way is distinct from error, there is no coercion. Rather, God the Most High gives you proofs, and with your reason, O man, you can decide so that you know that if you enter the religion you must adhere to it, and you will be held accountable for your having entered the religion; so, do not enter it unless you believe and you are sure that it is the truth because part of accepting it is to accept the rulings to which the religion holds you.

'There shall be no compulsion in [acceptance of] the religion: The right course has become clear from the wrong….' The 'right course' means the way of salvation, and 'wrong' means the way of damnation. The True Lord the Most High says in another verse of the Noble Quran, by way of clarifying the right way and the way of error, that he will cause to turn away from His signs all those who, without any right, behave haughtily on earth, and when they see any sign of the truth, they do not believe in it, and when they see the path of rectitude, they do not choose to follow it, and when they see the path of error, they take it for their own; this is because they have given the lie to God's signs and have remained heedless of them (al-A'raf: 146).

The True Lord the Most High tells us that those who are unjustly arrogant on earth will not be able to find success in seeing God's signs and the proofs of His power; and even if they see the right way, they will not follow it, whilst if they see the way of error, they will follow it because they give the lie to the signs of the Most Merciful, and are heedless of them.

Error (ghayy) also means to lose the way, so, when a person is travelling in the desert and loses the way, it is said that he has 'erred' (ghawa), that is, he has lost the right direction in which to travel, and he might therefore be exposed to all kinds of dangers such as encountering wild beasts and so on. The True Lord the Most High also explains the right way to us in a different direction in another verse, reporting the saying of the jinn that they do not know whether evil fortune is intended for those who live on earth, or whether it is their Lord's will to give them knowledge of what is right (al-Jinn: 10).

The jinn thought, as some men did, that God would not raise anyone after death, and would not send any messengers from amongst men to guide the world. The jinn attempted to reach the sky and found there angelic guards and burning flames; and the jinn did not know the secret of the guarding of the sky, and whether this meant evil for mankind or whether God wanted goodness and guidance for them. So both the words rushd, ('the right course') and rashad, ('consciousness of what is right') clarify the way which leads to salvation; and the opposite of the right course is error.

The True Lord the Most High then says, '…So whoever disbelieves in Taghoot (the force of evil) and believes in God has indeed grasped the most trustworthy handhold….' First of all, we notice here that the True Lord the Most High mentions first the rejection of evil powers, and then mentions belief in God; this is because what is required is purification first, and then adornment second. A person must first purify himself from the powers of evil so that he does not enter the faith, whilst in a state where he believes in God the Most High, but also has the powers of evil in his heart. Before we iron clothes, we wash them and clean them: purification before adornment.

What is 'the force of evil' (At-taghoot)? The word is derived from the root tagha, and the word taghoot is an intensive adjective form of (tughyan) which means 'tyranny'; He did not say taghi which is the ordinary adjectival form, but rather said taghoot which is an intensive form like jabaroot which means extreme power. The 'force of evil' may refer either to Satan, or to those who give themselves the right to make laws, who declare others to be disbelievers and ascribe faith to whomever they desire according to their caprices, and give things away by the temporal power they possess; and it may also refer to sorcerers and impostors, and also to all who transgress and go to extremes in any way. The word taghoot is an intensive adjectival form, and this intensiveness might take many forms; sometimes the evil force might be a demon, other times a priest, other times a sorcerer, or impostor, and still other times a ruler.

The form of taghoot indicates that the one described by this word goes further in his tyranny when he is obeyed; when he tries you out with something small and you obey him, this obedience makes him increase his tyranny over you. The True Lord the Most High says about Pharaoh that he incited his people to levity and they obeyed him; surely, they were a depraved people (az-Zukhruf: 54).

He goes further in this way until he becomes a tyrant. No one ever starts right away with high tyranny, but rather, they start off one step at a time, like any despotic dictatorial regime: it starts off with something slight, and if the people accept this, the regime becomes harder and harder until it becomes tyrannical (taghoot). So a taghoot is someone whose tyranny increases the more he is obeyed. It can refer to Satan because he is the origin of evil, and to those who speak in the name of religion in order to gain temporal power (whether they are priests or others), and to those who practise sorcery and trickery because they use their knowledge for evil ends, and they use things to wear down people. The word here is in the intensive adjectival form because it incorporates all these meanings; and if we examine the use of the word in the Quran, we find that the word taghoot is sometimes in the masculine Arabic form, and is given in the feminine form in one single verse of the Quran where God the Most High speaks of those who shun the force of evil lest they be drawn to worship her, and turn unto God instead, theirs is the glad tiding. Give, then, the glad tidings to My servants (az-Zumar: 17).

This verse explains that they abandon all forms and types of evil; that is, those who avoid all the different kinds of evil are those who direct their worship solely to God, and glad tidings are theirs. '…So whoever disbelieves in Taghoot (the force of evil) and believes in God has indeed grasped the most trustworthy handhold…' The word 'grasped' is not the same as 'to hold' because 'to grasp' indicates that there is a strong effort made to hold. The religious person needs to make great effort to hold to his religion because Satan will not leave him; so, it is not enough to just hold on, but rather, you must actively grasp. Every time Satan whispers something to you, you must grasp your religion; and this shows us that there is a strong effort and a firm grasping.

In the expression '…has indeed grasped the most trustworthy handhold…' the word 'urwa, (rendered here as 'handhold'), literally means a hanging rope, like that of a bucket in a well which you hold onto, and it is usually made from a tightly-coiled rope; and 'most trustworthy*'* (wuthqa) means that which you trust will hold firm; so, His words '…has indeed grasped the most trustworthy handhold…' may be an allegory based on the rope of a well because one uses a well to bring water, which is life for the body, and religion is life for values.

When we hear the word 'urwa ('handhold') in '…has indeed grasped the most trustworthy handhold…' we immediately think of a pail which brings water which is life for the body. So this conveys to us a clear image: '…has indeed grasped the most trustworthy handhold….' As long as it is a 'most trustworthy handhold' – which means the religion and faith in God – as long as it is the religion, and the rope of God, this is indeed most trustworthy; and as long as it is 'most trustworthy,' this means it will never give way. We should be aware that in Arabic there is the word infisam, which means to 'be broken', and the word inqisam.

Infisam means for something to be disjointed on the inside, like when the bones of an arm break, but it remains attached to the body; and inqisam means that one part is separated from the other, so, there is a clean break. The True Lord's words '…that shall not be broken; and God is All-Hearing, All Knowing' indicate that the actions of the powers of evil will always take the form of whispered insinuations meaning a voice which tempts with enticing words, which is why the term 'whispers of Satan' (waswasat ash-Shaytan) is taken in Arabic from the word meaning the jingling sound of jewellery and gold, a tempting rustling sound just like the whispers of Satan; and God is All Knowing concerning the matter.

The True Lord the Most High then says:

ٱللَّهُ وَلِيُّ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ يُخۡرِجُهُم مِّنَ ٱلظُّلُمَٰتِ إِلَى ٱلنُّورِۖ وَٱلَّذِينَ
كَفَرُوٓاْ أَوۡلِيَآؤُهُمُ ٱلطَّٰغُوتُ يُخۡرِجُونَهُم مِّنَ ٱلنُّورِ إِلَى ٱلظُّلُمَٰتِۗ
أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ أَصۡحَٰبُ ٱلنَّارِۖ هُمۡ فِيهَا خَٰلِدُونَ ﴿٢٥٧﴾

God is the ally of those who believe. He brings them out of the depths of darkness and into the light. As for the disbelievers, their allies are false gods who take them from the light into the depths of darkness, they are the inhabitants of the Fire, and there they will remain [257] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 257)

God the Most High is the Protecting Guardian of those who believe as long as they go by the ruling that '…whoever disbelieves in Taghoot (the force of evil) and believes in God has indeed grasped the most trustworthy handhold….' It is as though the True Lord the Most High is explaining those words with this verse, and as long as the servant is connected with the most trustworthy handhold, and takes hold of it, and it will never give way, his protection by God is assured. The word waliyy (rendered here as 'Protecting guardian') is derived from the verb waliya which means for one thing to follow another successively, without any gap in between them. As long as it follows it without any gap, this means it is the nearest thing to it; and since it is the nearest thing to it, it will be the first one to come to its aid. If someone is walking with me and I lose my footing, I will call upon him because he is the nearest one to me, and he will be the one to help me.

So, there is no gap, and since there is no gap, he will be the first one you call and the first one who will come to your aid even if you do not call him; for you do not need to tell the one who is with you to take your hand; he will take your hand himself automatically. So if you consider the words 'God is the Protecting Guardian of those who believe…' you will find that they are also in harmony with '…and God is All-Hearing, All Knowing' (al-Baqara: 256); He does not need you to call Him – for there are those who you call upon to save you, but He does not need to be called upon because He is All-Hearing and All-Seeing: 'God is the Protecting Guardian of those who believe….'

The word waliyy is also related to the words mawla in italics (meaning 'protecting master'), and wali (meaning 'one who is in charge of certain affairs'): '…the Protecting Guardian of those who believe…' that is, He will take care of their affairs and concerns; it is like when you say, 'The governor who takes care of the affairs of the subjects.' Also, the word mawla can sometimes mean a master, and other times mean the master's servant, which is why a poet said:

O my mawla, your mawla has a request!

That is: 'Your slave, o master, has a request.' So, it is used with meanings which are related; as we said, waliyy means 'near', and if the slave is in need of something, who is the first person who can help him? His master is. when the master calls, who is the first person to answer him? His servant does. So the word can mean both the master and the slave, and it can also mean the one who takes care of things. 'God is the Protecting Guardian of those who believe….' God's words 'those who believe' mean a group of people which includes many individuals, as though He wants those who have faith to make their faith one single thing, not many different things. Or, it may mean that God's nearness to each individual is as His nearness to all the believers, and as long as they are believers, there is no conflict of allegiances because they are all based in and acting upon a single faith, a single way, a single word, a single deed and a single movement.

How is it that 'God is the Protecting Guardian of those who believe…'? He is near to them, that is, He is the One who supports them, loves them, answers them and aids them; He is near to them by the signs which lead to faith that He made clear to them; and is there any love greater than this? Did He leave us to search for the signs, or did He show them to us?

This is one aspect of God's nearness. Before we believed, He made signs for us; and once we believed, He manifested His nearness by aiding us, and if we fight enemies He is with us; and after this, His nearness to us continues until He gives us the ultimate reward in the Hereafter. He is near to us through all the stages: with the signs before faith He is near, and once faith is attained, He accompanies us and is our support against our enemies and His enemies, and in the Hereafter, He is near to us with love and bestowal, and He gives to us without limits; His nearness is infinite.

'God is the Protecting Guardian of those who believe. He brings them out from the depths of darkness into light….' He the Exalted takes them from the deep darkness of ignorance into the light of faith because darkness usually conceals all that can be seen; for you cannot see anything unless some light comes to you from the object, i.e. rays of light reflecting from it reach you, and if there is darkness, this means that no rays of light will come from anything so, you will not see them; then, when light emerges, you can see and make things out. This is on the material level, and the same is true on the moral level. '…He brings them out from the depths of darkness into light. And those who disbelieve – their patrons are *Taghoo*t (false deities); they bring them out of light into the depths of darkness….'

Had they been in the light in the first place, O Lord? In fact, we can understand this as a reference to the apostates, to whom Satan whispered and so took them into the deep darkness of unbelief after they had been believers. Alternatively, the sentence '…they bring them out of light into the depths of darkness…' may mean that they bar them from the light, preventing them from reaching it i.e preventing them from believing. The Arabic word used here (akhraja) means literally to 'bring out,' but it can be understood to mean 'to bar or prevent,' as we find in the following illustration: Someone might say, 'My father has excluded (akhraja 'taken out') me from his inheritance?' This does not mean that he was really in the inheritance and was taken out; but rather means that he had the right to inherit, and his father disinherited him; and this applies to those who left faith and preferred darkness.

The Quran elucidates the concept of coming out of darkness into the light and from disbelief to faith in many places, such as the account we have in the story of our master Joseph peace be upon him and the two young men who happened to be with him in prison. One of them said that he saw himself in a dream pressing wine. The other said that he saw himself in a dream carrying bread on his head, and birds were eating from it. They asked Joseph to tell them the real interpretation of this, as they saw that he is one of the righteous. Joseph answered them that they would not receive food that is provided to them except that he would inform them of its interpretation before it comes to them; and that is from what his Lord had taught him; indeed, he had left the religion of a people who do not believe in God, and who were also disbelievers in the Hereafter (Yusuf: 36-37). The question here is: Was our master Joseph peace be upon him ever a follower of the ways of the disbelievers, and then left them? No; he never followed the ways of those who disbelieve in God to begin with; these ways were present for him to see, but he rejected them and refused to follow them, and he held fast to the way of Abraham peace be upon him; and this expression contains an affirmation of man's free will to choose.

There is also another verse, in which the True Lord the Most High addresses all mankind saying that He has created them, and in time will cause them to die; and many a one of them is reduced in old age to a most abject state, ceasing to know anything of what he once knew so well. Indeed, God is all knowing, infinite in His power (an-Nahl: 70). The meaning of the verse is that God created us all, and destined a time for all of us to die so that some die young whilst others reach an abject state of old age, becoming once again weak and lacking in energy, not knowing what they used to know. The verse does not mean that a person reaches old age and then becomes a child again.

When the True Lord the Most High says, '…And those who disbelieve – their patrons are Taghoot (false deities); they bring them out of light into the depths of darkness…', He refers to the powers of evil in the plural when He calls them 'patrons' (awliya'), which means literally 'those who are near,' because, as we said, there are many forms of evil powers: Satan is an evil power, swindlers are evil powers, sorcerers are evil powers; and the True Lord the Most High uses the singular word taghoot in conjunction with the plural word awliya', and describes what these powers of evil do to those to whom they are near by saying that they '…bring them out of light into the depths of darkness…', with the verb 'bring out' in the Arabic plural form.

God the Most High gives the word taghoot ('patrons, false deities') in the Arabic singular form, and then, gives those whom the false deities lead into darkness in the plural form. So why did God not use the Arabic plural tawaghit for 'false deities' instead of the singular taghoot? The word taghoot here is used in the same way in which we can use, in Arabic, a word like 'adl, 'just/justice', as an adjective to describe both a single man, two men, or a group of men, without changing its form. This is the same way the word taghoot is being used here. Satan, the swindler, the priest, the sorcerer, and the ruler who disregards God's commandments, are all false deities and powers of evil, and the verse uses the singular masculine form of the word. The word taghoot can be singular, dual, or plural; that is, those who are taken from the light into the darkness are the near allies of the powers of evil, or those who take the powers of evil as near allies, and they shall abide in hell forever. Both the powers of evil and their followers will enter hell, as the True Lord the Most High says in His Book that on the Day of Judgement, the worshippers of false deities will be told that they and all that they worshipped instead of God are but the fuel of hell: that is what they are destined for (al-Anbiya': 98).

The followers of the false deities, and the forces of evil themselves, are destined for the fire of hell- may God the Most High save us, and you, from its torment. The True Lord the Most High wants to give us a real-life image of His words 'God is the Protecting Guardian of those who believe…'; for He is the Protector, and He is the Helper. He the Exalted therefore says:

أَلَمْ تَرَ إِلَى ٱلَّذِى حَآجَّ إِبْرَٰهِـۧمَ فِى رَبِّهِۦٓ أَنْ ءَاتَىٰهُ ٱللَّهُ ٱلْمُلْكَ إِذْ قَالَ إِبْرَٰهِـۧمُ رَبِّىَ
ٱلَّذِى يُحْىِۦ وَيُمِيتُ قَالَ أَنَا۠ أُحْىِۦ وَأُمِيتُ ۖ قَالَ إِبْرَٰهِـۧمُ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ يَأْتِى بِٱلشَّمْسِ مِنَ
ٱلْمَشْرِقِ فَأْتِ بِهَا مِنَ ٱلْمَغْرِبِ فَبُهِتَ ٱلَّذِى كَفَرَ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ لَا يَهْدِى ٱلْقَوْمَ ٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ ﴿٢٥٨﴾

[Prophet], have you not thought about the man who disputed with Abraham about his Lord, because God had given him power to rule? When Abraham said, 'It is my Lord who gives life and death,' he said, 'I too give life and death.' So Abraham said, 'God brings the sun from the east; so bring it from the west.' The disbeliever was dumbfounded: God does not guide those who do evil [258] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 258)

When you hear the words 'Did you not see' you know that it is composed of the words 'Did', and the negative particle 'not' and the verb which it negates, namely 'see.' The use of the Arabic particle (hamza), which is used to indicate the interrogative, and is rendered here as 'Did', here implies denial, and denial means to negate in order to reproach; but it does not refer to a verb in the affirmative so that it could be said to have denied the verb which comes after it, as is the case when you say to your son, 'Would you hit your father?' The 'would' here, which is expressed in Arabic by the particle (hamza), is not meant to be a question, but is rather meant to repudiate this kind of action because the verb which comes after it is in the affirmative, namely ‘hit’, and the word ‘would’ comes before it. In Arabic this is called the (hamza) of reproachful denial, and is used for reproof. So denial means to negate something by way of reproof when it is used with a verb which is also negated.

As long as denial is a negation, and the verb which comes after it is also negated, it is as though you have negated a negative, which means you have affirmed something. It is as though when the True Lord the Most High says to the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him, ‘Did you not see,’ it really means ‘You did see.’ So, why did He not say to him, ‘Did you see’? It came in this negative form so that it would be even more affirmed. It is possible to make the affirmation come from the responsible party: if a friend says to you, ‘You have not asked about me, and you have been neglecting me,’ you might reply reminding him by saying, ‘Did I not help you when you were weak? Did I not take your hand when you were sick?’

You have already done these favours for your friend, but you want to deny the negation which he is saying; and in this way we know that two negatives make an affirmative, which is why we can consider God’s words ‘Did you not see’ as meaning, ‘You did see.’ Seeing is done with the eye; and did the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him – and he is the principal one who is addressed by the Noble Quran from his Lord – did the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him see this incident from the days of Abraham peace be upon him? Of course not, so it is as though ‘Did you not see’ here means ‘Do you not know.’

And why did He say ‘Did you not see’ here? He said it so that we would know that when God the Most High says ‘Do you not know,’ it is as though you can see the thing which He tells you about, and you must consider it to be as true as if you saw it with your own eyes. The eye is one of your senses, and senses might deceive you, but your Lord does not deceive. So, ‘Did you not see’ means ‘Do you not know with complete certainty,’ as though you indeed saw the event that God the Most High is telling you about. This is why He put the question to the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him whether he did not see how his Lord dealt with the Army of the Elephant (al-Fil: 1). The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him was born in the Year of the Elephant, so, he did not see this incident; and it is as though God the Most High is telling him of it, and saying to him: ‘Do you not know’, as though He is saying to him: ‘Know it with certainty as if you can see it, because your Lord is more trustworthy than your own eyes.’ When it is said, ‘Did you not see’, it is usually followed directly by the doer of the action referred to, so, you say, ‘Did you not see such-and-such?’ Yet when the True Lord the Most High says ‘Did you not see the one who argued with Abraham about his Lord…’, He used the particle ila, which means ‘to’, after the verb ‘see’; and the use of the particle ila here indicates that a wondrous thing took place; sometimes in Arabic we speak in this way, saying literally, ‘Did you not see ‘to’ (ila) Zaid and what he was doing?’

This means that what Zaid was doing was something amazing. Herein, it is as though God the Most High is alluding to the final end of the matter since the word ‘to’ implies the idea of arriving to a goal; it is as though it was something which reached the utmost end of wonder – so, do not only take it as though you saw it, but look at the final outcome of what had taken place.

The True Lord the Most High here says, ‘Did you not see the one who argued with Abraham about his Lord….’ The use of the particle ila here in Arabic indicates that it was a matter which reached the utmost limit of wonder. The True Lord the Most High did not tell us who this person was who argued with Abraham peace be upon him about his Lord because his identity does not concern us, whether it was Nimrud or someone else.

If some exegetes stated that it was a king named Nimrud, we say to them: Thank you for your effort, but had God the Most High wanted the man’s name to be specified He would have specified it for us. What matters to us is that someone went to God’s Messenger Abraham peace be upon him and argued with him on this subject, and his identity is not significant. When the True Lord the Most High wants to make an event applicable and relevant to all times and places, He does not specify names. Any person, in any place, might argue with any believer, but this is not the case when a person is named and identified.

Another instance of this is about those people who seek to know more about the story of the People of the Cave, wondering where, and when, and how many of them there were, and who they were. We say: If any one of these things were discovered, the story would be ruined because if we specified its time, someone would come and say, ‘At the time when the story took place, such a thing was possible;’ and if we specified the place, someone else would say, ‘The place allowed the event to occur;’ and if we specified the identities of the people and their names, a third person would say, ‘It is possible that these personalities could have acted in this way, but how could we have the strength of faith that they had?’

The True Lord the Most High did not specify the place, time, or personalities, leaving them ambiguous to show us that any group of youths, in any time and in any place could have said what they said; and had He specified any of these things, the lesson to be derived from as an example, would have been spoiled. Let us consider the precision of the True Lord the Most High when he gives an example to the disbelievers of the wife of Noah peace be upon him and the wife of Lot peace be upon him, when He the Exalted puts forth for those who disbelieve the example of Noah’s wife and Lot’s wife: they were wedded to two of God’s righteous servants, and each one betrayed her husband; and neither of the two husbands will be of any avail to these two women before God when they are told on Judgment Day to enter the Fire with all those who are doomed to enter it (at-Tahrim: 10).

He did not specify for us the names of these two women, but rather mentioned only the important thing which is that each of them was the wife of a noble messenger, yet, both of them insisted on disbelief and so entered hell. But when He the Exalted wanted to make the story specific to one particular person and to a specific event, that would not be repeated in any time or place, He the Exalted said that He puts forth as another example for those who believe: Mary Daughter of ‘Imran peace be upon her who guarded her chastity, and God breathed of His Spirit into her, and she accepted the truth of her Lord’s words and of His Books, and was one of the truly devout (at-Tahrim: 12).

What was the reason for the True Lord’s specification of Mary peace be upon her in this the event? It was because the event would not be repeated for any other woman. Specification here is necessary because a virgin birth would be granted to no other woman. If the event can be repeated in any time or place, He the Exalted describes it in general terms; and an example of this is the words of the True Lord the Most High: ‘Did you not see the one who argued with Abraham about his Lord….’ He did not tell us who this man was. The Arabic verb for ‘argued’ (hajja) has originally the form of hajaja, in the same morphological form as the verbs qatala and sharaka, for example; however, when the final two letters are the same, we join them together to make it easier in pronunciation, so, it becomes hajja; and this verbal form follows the morphological pattern of fa‘ala, which indicates mutual interaction; and in order to understand what is meant by this, consider the following example:

We may say, ‘Zaid fought ‘Amr,’ or say, ‘Amr fought Zaid,’ and this means that each of them fought the other, and each of them was both subject (active, doer of the action) and object (passive, receiver of the action) at the same time, but in one sentence we consider one of them to have been more active and in the other to have been more passive, although both of them were active and passive.

Another example: If you say that Zaid shared something with ‘Amr, and ‘Amr shared something with Zaid, this means that cooperation came from both of them, and both are active and passive at the same time, but we usually attribute the more active role to the one who began, and the more passive role to the second, even though the second one is also active. This is why when the poet wanted to describe the state of a person who walks in a place where there are lots of snakes, and is wary that a snake may bite him, he said:

The snakes and his foot made peace with each other,
The serpent and the strong thick adder.

The poet here describes for us a person who walks in a place full of snakes, and a person usually fears that a snake will bite him; but we find that the snakes were at peace with this man’s foot, i.e. they did not bite him because he did not attack them, and snakes usually do not bite unless they are first attacked. We find here that the snakes were active here because they left his foot alone; and we could also say that it was his foot that made peace with the snakes.

We have all studied, in the past, the Arabic linguistic phenomenon known as ‘substitution’ (badal), and a substituted word is subject to the same grammatical rules as the word for which it is a substitute: if the substituted word is in the nominative case, the substitute word will also be in the nominative case, and if the substituted word is in the accusative case, the substitute word will also be in the accusative case, and if the substituted word is in the genitive case, the substitute word will also be in the genitive case. In this verse of poetry, the word ‘snakes’ is in the nominative case, yet the word ‘serpents’ is in the accusative case even though it is a substitute for a nominative word, namely ‘snakes’; this is because the poet wanted to show that the noun is also a receiver of action, so, he gave it in the accusative case. Likewise, we can also read the first part of the verse as ‘his foot made peace with the snakes’ because they are both active and passive in a certain way.

Likewise, when we read the words of the True Lord the Most High ‘Did you not see the one who argued with Abraham about his Lord…’, we notice that the word ‘Abraham’ in the noble verse is marked by the Arabic accusative case marker, which implies that it is largely passive. So who was it that argued with Abraham peace be upon him? It was a certain person, and he was the active one because he started the argument, and this is what the noble verse indicates to us. The verse describes the man by saying that ‘…God had given him kingship…’, that is, God the Most High had granted this man kingship, and then this man argued with Abraham peace be upon him about his Lord, as though it was this man who began the argument by saying to Abraham peace be upon him, ‘Who is your Lord?

So Abraham peace be upon him said, ‘…“My Lord is the one who gives life and causes death ….”’ This is one of the distinctions of the Quran; in that it leaves certain things out, trusting that the listener will put everything in its proper place. God’s words ‘…Abraham said, “My Lord is the one who gives life and causes death,”’ indicate that the one who argued with Abraham peace be upon him said, ‘Who is your Lord,’ and Abraham peace be upon him said in reply, ‘…My Lord is the one who gives life and causes death.’

We can notice that this verse came after God’s words in the previous verse: ‘God is the Protecting Guardian of those who believe….’ Protecting guardianship means support, love and aid, so, He the Exalted wanted to show us how God the Most High aided Abraham peace be upon him against the one who argued with him.

Yet, the one who argued with Abraham peace be upon him began to use deceptive sophistic argumentation after he heard Abraham peace be upon him say '…My Lord is the one who gives life and causes death….' And the True Lord the Most High said 'gives life and causes death' because this is something which no one has claimed they do, and no one has claimed to be a part of doing; even if you ask the disbelievers, 'Who created?', they will say, 'God. 'So, this is something certain, except that the contender who argued with Abraham peace be upon him wanted to turn the argument into sophistry, and as we know this means speech which lengthens an argument so it never ends.

The man who was arguing with Abraham peace be upon him said, 'If your Lord grants life and causes death, then I also can grant life and deal death.' Abraham peace be upon him asked him, 'How do you grant life and deal death?' The man said, 'I could kill the prisoners I have, or not kill them; for the ones I do not kill, it is as though I have given them life, and for the ones I kill, I have dealt death.' Abraham peace be upon him did not say: Let us agree first: What is life? And what is death? This is because Abraham, the Friend of the Most Merciful the Exalted, did not want to lengthen this debate, so, he came up with something to silence the man completely and end the debate. He said to him, '…"Indeed, God brings up the sun from the east, so, bring it up from the west." The disbeliever was confounded….' In this way, our master Abraham peace be upon him ended this debate. It was possible for our master Abraham peace be upon him to have entered into further debate, saying: 'What is life?'

We know that life means giving an inanimate thing something which makes it move, feel, will and choose. As for death, it is removing the spirit from the body; what causes a man to die is for his spirit to leave his body. Killing is different from dying because death is for the spirit to leave the body without any wound, and without the body being destroyed, or by any action the person does to his own body, like suicide.

A person might be sitting in his place when suddenly his life term ends and he dies; and no one could have said to him before this, 'Die' so that he died. This is death; but to force the spirit out by a bodily wound or destroying the body is killing, not death. This is why God the Most High contrasted death with killing when He addressed the believers during the Messenger's life saying that Muhammad is only a messenger; all the other messengers have passed away before him: if, then, he dies or is killed, will they turn about on their heels? But he that turns about on his heels can in no way harm God; and God will reward all who are grateful to Him. And no human being can die except by God's leave, at a term pre-ordained. And if one desires the rewards of this world, God will grant him from it; and if one desires the rewards of the life to come, God will grant him from it; and He will reward those who are grateful to Him (Al-'Imran: 144-145).

God the Most High clarified for us the difference between dying and being killed, and placed each of them in contrast to the other; when news went around that the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him had been killed, some of the Muslims considered returning to disbelief, and God rebuked them by saying: Muhammad is a messenger sent from God, and other messengers have died before him; and if he dies or is killed, will you leave faith for disbelief? And whoever does this is only harming himself, and reward from God is for those who adhere firmly to God's Way and are grateful for His blessings. The True Lord the Most High clarified for us here that death can come to no one save by God's leave, and God has destined all deaths in a pre-ordained decree.

God the Most High wants to alert us and draw our attention to an important fact, which is that when the messengers argued with their people or those who conversed with them, the goal of this was not for the prophet to win a victory, but rather, the goal of the prophet or messenger was to reach the truth. This is why Abraham peace be upon him did not proceed with the man who argued with him about God, on the point of giving life and dealing death since he saw that the man's words were a kind of sophistry.

We must ponder upon the verses of the Quran according to the reflection of faith in order to understand the difference between causing death and killing. It is true that causing death and killing are alike in one thing, which is that the spirit comes out of the body; however, causing death is different from killing in that no one can do it except the Giver of life, who placed certain constituents in the human body so that the spirit could live within it, and He Alone is able to remove the spirit from it in an intangible way.

As for killing, it is for you to injure a person so he dies, or to destroy his body, for example by smashing his head. As for 'causing death' it is for you to take his life by merely commanding it, without coming near him: can any human being do this? No. So the one who argued with Abraham peace be upon him did not really give life to the one whom he left without punishing him; he did not kill him, but rather merely left the life which was already in him. We need to heed this if we want to get into a debate on this matter.

God the Most High contrasted killing with death; it is true that they both end with the absence of the spirit, but there is a difference between a spirit being taken without any of these means, and the spirit leaving the body because it has been destroyed. Beware of thinking that the spirit does not obey certain laws; the spirit can only reside in a particular substance, and if the special constituents of this substance cease to exist, the spirit cannot reside in it. Do not say that when he struck him on the head, he dealt death to him! No, he did not make the spirit come out, because simply by the body being destroyed, the spirit is concealed.

An example to clarify this: Suppose that there is a light in front of us: if you break the bulb, the light goes. But is the bulb the light itself? No, it is not, but the electricity can only become plain by means of this bulb. In the same way, the spirit can only exist in a body which has specific constituents. So the killer does not take the spirit out, he only destroys the body in a tangible way; for the unseen matter, namely the spirit, cannot dwell in a body which has been destroyed.

'Did you not see the one who argued with Abraham about his Lord [simply] because God had given him kingship?…' Look at the arrogance: Is being granted kingship, which is a blessing, a means for rebelling against the One Who blessed you? Do you show gratitude for the blessing by disobeying the One Who gave it? Who was it that made him so vain? Did he become so vain because God gave him kingship? How could God help someone who does not believe in Him? Sovereignty (mulk), meaning the right to command and prohibit, is only for those who are sent by God; as for the other sovereignty of kingship (mulk) which gives one man authority over a group, it is possible that this could be given to a believer, and it is possible that it could be given to a disbeliever.

God the Most High says, '…because God had given him kingship? When Abraham said, "My Lord is the one who gives life and causes death…."' This was the reply to the one who said, 'Who is your Lord?' to which Abraham's reply was, '…"My Lord is the one who gives life and causes death". He said, "I give life and cause death."…' We saw that this is mere sophistry; and Abraham peace be upon him did not reply to him, 'Do you really give life and cause death?', but rather, he moved on to something else, as though he were saying to him: 'Forget about the unseen matter of the spirit, and consider instead what can be plainly seen': '…Abraham said, "Indeed, God brings up the sun from the east, so bring it up from the west." The disbeliever was confounded….'

Because God the Most High is the Protecting Guardian of those who believe, He the Exalted did not inspire the arguer with any way to respond; he could have said, 'Make the One Who brings it from the east bring it from the west,' but he did not say this, which shows that he was a fool. Or, alternatively, he might have been clever, and said to himself, 'Perhaps the Lord who is with him in this way might actually do it!', and so he was afraid to say it. So 'God is the Protecting guardian of those who believe…' is the truth; and He the Exalted '…brings them out from the depths of darkness into light…' (al-Baqara: 257).

What does it mean to be 'confounded'? To be confounded takes three forms: The first form is astonishment; he took him from something which he could speak about petulantly to something which he could not speak about, even petulantly and argumentatively. He wanted to find some way of responding, as he did when he said, '…"I give life and cause death…"' but he could not. He was astonished, and the first thing to take him off guard was this astonishment, after which came confusion: he wanted to find any way out of this trap, but he could not; so, he was defeated, and this is the final stage of being confounded. So '…was confounded…' means that firstly, he was astonished, and secondly he was confused and unable to respond, and thirdly the result of this was that he was defeated. This is not something surprising because as long as he was a disbeliever, he had no one near to him to help him since those who were near to him were incapable: '…And those who disbelieve – their patrons are Taghoot (false deities)…' As for Abraham peace be upon him, the Friend of the Most Merciful the Exalted, God was near to him.

The True Lord the Most High concludes the verse by saying, '…and God does not guide the wrongdoing people.' He does not guide them to a proof, or an argument, or evidence since their patron is Satan, '…and God does not guide the wrongdoing people.'

The verse which comes after this deals all with life and death. And it is important that the verse deals with life and death so that we do not understand that Abraham peace be upon him left the argument with the one who argued with him about life and death, as a way of evading speaking about it; for this reason, God the Most High wants to conclusively deal with this matter by means of several stories, and the True Lord the Most High now expounds on the issue which Abraham peace be upon him avoided, namely death and life, saying:

أَوۡ كَٱلَّذِي مَرَّ عَلَىٰ قَرۡيَةٖ وَهِيَ خَاوِيَةٌ عَلَىٰ عُرُوشِهَا قَالَ أَنَّىٰ يُحۡيِۦ هَٰذِهِ ٱللَّهُ بَعۡدَ مَوۡتِهَاۖ
فَأَمَاتَهُ ٱللَّهُ مِاْئَةَ عَامٖ ثُمَّ بَعَثَهُۥۖ قَالَ كَمۡ لَبِثۡتَۖ قَالَ لَبِثۡتُ يَوۡمًا أَوۡ بَعۡضَ يَوۡمٖۖ قَالَ بَل
لَّبِثۡتَ مِاْئَةَ عَامٖ فَٱنظُرۡ إِلَىٰ طَعَامِكَ وَشَرَابِكَ لَمۡ يَتَسَنَّهۡۖ وَٱنظُرۡ إِلَىٰ حِمَارِكَ
وَلِنَجۡعَلَكَ ءَايَةٗ لِّلنَّاسِۖ وَٱنظُرۡ إِلَى ٱلۡعِظَامِ كَيۡفَ نُنشِزُهَا ثُمَّ
نَكۡسُوهَا لَحۡمٗاۚ فَلَمَّا تَبَيَّنَ لَهُۥ قَالَ أَعۡلَمُ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَيۡءٖ قَدِيرٞ ﴿٢٥٩﴾

Or take the one who passed by a ruined town. He said, 'How will God give this life when it has died?' So God made him die for a hundred years, and then raised him up, saying, 'How long did you stay like that?' He answered, 'A day, or part of a day.' God said, 'No, you stayed like that for a hundred years. Look at your food and drink: they have not gone bad. Look at your donkey – We will make you a sign for the people – look at the bones: see how We bring them together and clothe them with flesh.' When all became clear to him, he said, 'Now I know that God has power over everything' [259] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 259)

When we consider the beginning of this verse, we find that it begins with 'Or', and whatever comes after the word 'or' is connected to what came before it; so, it is as though the True Lord the Most High wants to say to us: Or 'Did you not see' the like of 'the one who passed by a village…'?

When you hear the word ‘village’, it indicates a group of people gathered together to live in a specific place; and we understand that the one who passed by this village was not one of its inhabitants, but rather that, he passed by it while on a journey or a voyage. We also notice that the True Lord the Most High did not want to give us the name of the village or the name of the one who passed by it.

Some people say that the man was Ermiya (Jeremiah) ibn Halqiya’, or that it was Al-Khidr, or ‘Uzair (Ezra); and we said before that if the True Lord the Most High left this ambiguous, this means that we should not try to specify it because such a thing could happen to anyone.

‘Or [consider such an example] as the one who passed by a village…’, and they said that the town was Jerusalem, ‘…which was deserted and had fallen into utter ruin….’ To understand how it could have been deserted (khawiya) and in utter ruin, we should know that in Arabic when one says, ‘I am famished (khooyan)’, what he is saying is that his stomach is empty (khawia), and that he is hungry. So the word khawiya here means that the town was empty of inhabitants; its structures might have still been standing, but it contained no inhabitants. The True Lord the Most High says of this town that it was ‘…deserted and had fallen into utter ruin…’, and the word ‘arsh means a tent and also a ceiling; so, when He says ‘…deserted and had fallen into utter ruin…’ (literally ‘empty on top of its roofs’), this means that first the roofs caved in, and then the walls fell on top of them; it is like what we say in our dialect: ‘He brought the top of it down on the bottom.’

When one passes by a village like this one, the sight of it will certainly be something which draws his attention. He said, ‘…“How will God bring this to life after its death?”’ It is as though he was asking about the village, and about causing the people who lived in it to die and then raising them to life. When the True Lord the Most High mentions a village in the Noble Quran, He is sometimes referring to its inhabitants, such as is the case when He tells about Joseph’s brothers protesting their truthfulness to their father telling him to ask the (people in the) village in which they were staying and the people of the caravan with whom they travelled, and that they were indeed telling the truth (Yusuf: 82).

When the sons of Jacob peace be upon him came back from Egypt and left their youngest brother with Joseph peace be upon him, they said to their father, ‘Send someone to bring a testimony from the people of Egypt, and ask those who were with us in the caravan for yourself, and they will tell you that we left our brother in Egypt.’ But the question of the one who passed by the town which was deserted and in utter ruin was about the town’s inhabitants: ‘…“How (Arabic Anna) will God bring this to life after its death?”….’ The Arabic word anna is sometimes used to mean ‘how’ and sometimes ‘whence’; and here the appropriate interpretation of the question is: ‘…How will God bring all this to life after its death?....’ The fact that he said this indicates that he was a believer, and he did not doubt that life is given by God, but he wanted to know how this could be. It is as though he believed that God gives life and causes death; and we shall see this later in the story of our master Abraham peace be upon him when he asked his Lord to show him how He brings the dead back to life (al-Baqara: 260).

He did not doubt that God the Most High gives life to the dead, but he wanted to see how this is done; for the one who wants to see how something is done must be amazed by the existence of this thing, so, he wonders how this thing could have been executed. For example, we see the pyramids, and we do not doubt that the pyramids are built in this form, but we merely wonder how they built them, and how they transported those huge stones to the top without any scaffolding or mechanical cranes. So we are merely amazed, and amazement is part of belief in the event.

Asking about how something was done means that one is absolutely convinced that it was indeed done, so, the traveller’s question reported in the Quran using anna should be understood to mean: How will God bring this town back to life after its death? It is as though the one who said this, did not doubt that God gives life, but he wanted to know how. Knowing how is not essential for faith, but God has not forbidden us from trying to know how things come to be; for He knows that we believe that He is able to bring this event into existence.

I will give an example for this – and God the Most High is beyond compare: when a designer of clothes makes a delicate and beautiful item of clothing, you see it and you are certain that he is the one who made it, but you are simply amazed by the delicacy of the product, so, you say to him, 'By God, how did you do that?' It is as though you have fallen in love with his product, and you long to know how it was made; so, what about the products of the True Lord the Most High? You are astounded and amazed to live in the shadow of the secret which runs from the Creator to the created, and you want to share these blessings.

Another example – and God the Most High is beyond compare before and after: You see a painting done by an artist, and you say to him, 'By God, how did you mix these colours?' You do not doubt that he mixed the colours, but you want to please yourself by knowing how he painted them. So the man's question, and the request of Abraham peace be upon him about giving life and causing death -which are yet to be mentioned- do not mean that he was not a believer, but rather that, he longed and yearned to know how this takes place, in order that he could live in the light of the beautiful and magnificent production of the One who made this thing.

We know that to bring the people back to life, would mean that the town would be brought to life, for people send out the motion which fills existence with life, and people have life and they have death; and a town, with its rubble, walls and roofs also has life and death. When the man asked this question, God the Most High wanted the answer to be in the form of an experience that the questioner would live through, which is why the Noble Quran then says, '…So God caused him to die for a hundred years….'

The one who asked the question wanted to know how, and his request was for faith based on evidence so that from thenceforth, his faith would be based on something he had witnessed. '…So God caused him to die for a hundred years….' God the Most High made the question and the experience apply to the questioner himself; and this is how God the Most High gives information. He caused him to die for a hundred years; and the word for 'year' used here is 'am, which means a full year; and they called it 'am because the sun 'swims' (ta'oom) through its entire celestial circuit in this time, and the verb 'ama means 'to swim' or 'float', as the True Lord the Most High says that all of the celestial bodies float through space (Ya Sin: 40). This is why we call a year 'am.

'…So God caused him to die for a hundred years; then He brought him back to life. He said, "How long have you remained?" The man said, "I have remained a day or part of a day."…' It is possible that God the Most High spoke directly to him as He spoke to Moses peace be upon him, or he might have heard a voice, or an angel, or it might be that someone present saw what happened to him and asked him; what is important is that there was a question and an answer, and the True Lord the Most High informs us of a dialogue which took place about this matter; the question was 'How long have you remained?' and the man answered, 'I have remained a day or part of a day.'

The man's answer shows that he had some doubt: he might have found that the day was close to ending or had ended and so answered in this way; or, it might have been that when he saw the sun still shining he gave this answer: 'I have remained a day or part of a day;' or he might have said this because he was unable to judge how much time had passed. Was he being honest in his words, or was he lying? He was being honest because he did not see anything that had changed so that he could have judged according to how it changed. Had he shaved his beard, for example, and then found after this that it had grown long, or had his hair had changed from black to grey as he slept, or had any other such changes occurred, he would have noticed them; but he did not find any change.

So, what was the answer of the True Lord the Most High? He said, '…Rather, you have remained one hundred years….' We are presented here with two sides, and the question is close to being a puzzle: On one side, we have the man saying, 'I have remained a day or part of a day,' and on the other side, the Lord the Most High says, '…Rather, you have remained one hundred years….' We wish to solve this puzzle: The statement of True Lord the Most High is beyond any doubt truthful and free of any error, whilst the believing servant is also speaking truthfully as best as he can based on what he sees his situation to be.

We need an evidence for this, and an evidence for that. We need an evidence that the servant is truthful in saying 'I have remained a day or part of a day' and we need from the True Lord the Most High an evidence to reassure us – not as a proof – that the man really died for one hundred years and then came back to life.

We say that in the story there is something to support the statement ‘I have remained a day or part of a day’ and also something which supports the statement ‘…Rather, you have remained one hundred years…’ for the man had with him his ass, and also his food and drink, of juice, grapes, and figs. The True Lord the Most High said, ‘…you have remained one hundred years…’ and He wanted to prove the truth of both matters together, so He said, ‘…Look at your food and your drink; it has not changed with time….’ The man looked at his food and drink and found that they had not changed, which is evidence that he had remained only a day or part of a day; this shows the truthfulness of the man, and there still remains the question of ‘…one hundred years….’

The True Lord the Most High then said, ‘…And look at your donkey; and We will make you a sign for the people….’ This shows that something amazing had occurred, and God wanted to show him this by having him look at the donkey to show that a hundred years truly had passed. So the man found that his donkey had become scattered bones, and this could not have happened in a short period of time; the donkey might have died in one day, but for its body to rot, and then its flesh to turn into dust so that only scattered bones remained required a long period of time not less than a hundred years. So it is as though, looking upon the donkey was evidence that a hundred years truly had passed, and looking upon the food was evidence of the truthfulness of ‘a day or part of a day.’

So, it was an amazing matter, how time was held back in the case of the food, and how time was let forth in the case of the donkey. He the Exalted shows us that He is the One Who holds back, and the One Who sends forth; He can hold back time for one thing and He can send forth time for another even if the two things are contemporaneous. Such an action could only be performed by an Omnipotent Power which is not subject to the natural laws of the universe, but which rather has dominion over these laws.

The True Lord the Most High said, ‘…and We will make you a sign for the people….’ Which men are they for whom God would make him a sign? There must have been other people in this story, but the town was deserted and in utter ruin, and there were neither people nor buildings in it; so, were they the people who had been in the town, or were they other people? Some exegetes say this, and others say that.

The thing which most applies to God's statement '…and We will make you a sign for the people….' is how He held back time for one thing and sent it forth for another. Most of the scholars affirm that it was Ezra who passed by the town; and Ezra was one of the four men who memorised the Torah, for no one memorised the Torah but four people: Moses, Jesus, Ezra, and Joshua peace be upon them, and God showed him how He puts bones together and then raises them so they come together, and then clothes them with flesh; that is, He showed him a direct vision of the act of raising the dead to life, and this was an answer to: '…How will God bring this to life after its death?....'

The True Lord the Most High says, '…And look at the bones [of this donkey] – how We raise them….' Ezra saw all the bones of his donkey rising from the ground, and witnessed each bone being put in its place, and once the skeletal structure of the donkey had been restored the bones began to be clothed in flesh, and then life came.

Ezra found an answer in his own self, and found an answer in the donkey, and after this he remembered his town from which he had come, and he wanted to return to it. When he returned, he found that it has changed as it would be expected to change over a hundred years. There was a slave-woman who lived in his family in the town, and she had gone blind and become infirm, and when he entered and said, 'I am Ezra', the slave-woman said, 'Ezra left a hundred years ago, and we know not where he went; nor did he ever return.' He said, 'I am Ezra,' so, she replied, 'Ezra has a sign, which is that his supplications are always answered;' and she did not forget herself, saying, 'If you are truly Ezra, then ask God to return my eyesight to me and to relieve me of my infirmity.' So, Ezra prayed to God and she was cured. When she was cured, she looked at him and saw that he truly was Ezra, so, she went to her people and announced that Ezra had returned. After this, Ezra went to his son and found that he was a man of over one hundred years of age, and Ezra was still young, at only fifty years of age.

A poet put it cryptically: 'Who was the son who saw his father when he was double his father's age?' The answer to this puzzle is Ezra whom God caused to die when he was fifty years of age, and then brought him back to life after one hundred years, upon which Ezra met his son, and the son said, 'I used to hear that my father had a mark between his shoulders, a birthmark', and when Ezra showed his shoulder to his son, he saw the birthmark there.

The people of the town confirmed the veracity of Ezra in still another way. When Nebuchadnezzar (Bakhtansar) came to Jerusalem and destroyed it, he burned the Torah; however, a man said that his father had buried a copy of the Torah somewhere; so, they brought forth the copy, and Ezra said, 'I have memorised it', so, Ezra recited the Torah just as it was in the copy, so, they believed that he truly was Ezra. The people were amazed to see a son who was over one hundred years old, whilst his father was only fifty, which is why the True Lord the Most High concludes the verse by saying, '…he said, 'I know that God has power over all things.' Had he not known before this that God has power over all things? Indeed he had known this by means of reasoning based on evidence, but now he knew it based on actual witnessing, and he had absolute knowledge since there is no doubt once you have seen with your own eyes.

So '…I know that God has power over all things' is an emphasis and an acknowledgement of God's power to set forth time and hold it back, and God's power to give life and cause death; he came to know with absolute certainty after having known before with sure certainty.

This matter explains what modern science now says about 'suspended animation', and the meaning of suspended animation is the thing which certain snakes do when they undergo winter hibernation, that is, during winter they curl up into themselves and show no movement, and they remain in this state until winter ends; and the time spent in winter hibernation is not counted as part of the snake's age, which is why it is said that this is a process of 'suspended animation.' This process might also explain what happened to the People of the Cave; for the People of the Cave also underwent the same process. God tells that He awakened them; and they began to ask one another as to what had happened to them. One of them asked how long they have remained and the others answered that they have remained a day or part of a day (Yusuf: 19) They did not see that they had changed in any way, yet, after this the True Lord the Most High says that they remained in their cave three hundred years and nine more years (Yusuf: 25).

God the Most High specified the length of time which they remained, whilst they themselves said that it had been a day or part of a day. The meaning of this is that when they slept this kind of sleep and then woke up, they found themselves in the very same state as they had been before they slept; so, God suspended their lives. We can observe that all of this process came here in the story of Ezra after Ayat Al-Kursi the (Verse of the Seat), in which the doctrine of faith is depicted: God – there is no deity except Him, the Ever-Living, the Sustainer of [all] existence. Neither drowsiness overtakes Him, nor does sleep. To Him belongs whatever is in the heavens and whatever is on the earth. Who is it that can intercede with Him except by His permission? He knows what is [presently] before them and what will be after them, and they encompass not a thing of His knowledge except for what He wills. His Kursi (Seat) extends over the heavens and the earth, and their preservation tires Him not. And He is the Most High, the Most Great (al-Baqara: 255).

And it depicts the matter of life and the matter of death; and we know that when the man argued with Abraham peace be upon him and said, '…I give life and cause death' (al-Baqara: 258), Abraham moved the debate onto the matter of night and day, and asked the man to reverse the sign of night and day, saying to him, '…"Indeed, God brings up the sun from the east, so bring it up from the west." So, the disbeliever was confounded, and God does not guide the wrongdoing people' (al-Baqara: 258).

In order that no one might think that Abraham peace be upon him left the matter of life and death because he wanted to escape having to debate it and so changed the subject to that of the sun, God wanted to bring the story of this man who passed by the deserted town whereupon there happened to him all that we have seen in order for the True Lord the Most High to affirm for us that the matters of life and death are in His Hand alone, and in order for the True Lord the Most High to take the matter of life and death away from the realm of debate based on sophistry; and we know the meaning of 'sophistry' from before when we discussed the statement of the one who argued with Abraham about his Lord when he said about two of his prisoners, that he could kill one of them and let the other live.

This is sophistry, for he did not give life but rather let life continue; and we know that giving life is the opposite of causing death because to cause death means to take the spirit out of the body without causing any injury or destroying the body, or doing anything else to the body. But if one does any of these things to another person, it is not said that he dealt them death, but rather that, he killed them; and as we know, being killed is not the same as dying.

After this, comes another story of Abraham after the incident when he changed the subject of the debate with the man to the sun so that the one who disbelieved was dumbfounded. Abraham peace be upon him was a believer in God's Power, but he wanted to know how it happened. Abraham peace be upon him did not have any doubt as the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him said: 'We have more right to doubt than Abraham did when he said, 'My Lord, show me how You give life to the dead.' [God] said, 'Have you not believed?' He said, 'Yes, but [I ask] only that my heart may be fully at ease.'(1)

And we Muslims do not doubt this matter, so, Abraham peace be upon him certainly did not doubt it, as is attested to by the words of the verse in which God the Most High said:

وَإِذْ قَالَ إِبْرَٰهِـۧمُ رَبِّ أَرِنِى كَيْفَ تُحْىِ ٱلْمَوْتَىٰ ۖ قَالَ أَوَلَمْ تُؤْمِن ۖ قَالَ بَلَىٰ وَلَـٰكِن
لِّيَطْمَئِنَّ قَلْبِى ۖ قَالَ فَخُذْ أَرْبَعَةً مِّنَ ٱلطَّيْرِ فَصُرْهُنَّ إِلَيْكَ ثُمَّ ٱجْعَلْ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ
جَبَلٍ مِّنْهُنَّ جُزْءًا ثُمَّ ٱدْعُهُنَّ يَأْتِينَكَ سَعْيًا ۚ وَٱعْلَمْ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ عَزِيزٌ حَكِيمٌ ﴿٢٦٠﴾

And when Abraham said, 'My Lord, show me how You give life to the dead,' He said, 'Do you not believe, then?' 'Yes,' said Abraham, 'but just to put my heart at rest.' So God said, 'Take four birds and train them to come back to you. Then place them on separate hill- tops, call them back, and they will come flying to you: know that God is all powerful and wise' [260] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 260)

Abraham peace be upon him asked, 'Show me how You give life to the dead.' That is, he asked to know what the state of the action of raising to life is. Abraham peace be upon him is not speaking about raising to life, and his doubt was only regarding as to whether God the Most High would answer his request by showing him and letting him see how He gives life to the dead. Let us give an example to illustrate this – and God is beyond compare before and after, and the example is only meant to make the matter easier for minds to understand since God is far exalted above any comparison:

---

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in Kitab Al-Anbiya'

One of us might say to an architectural engineer, 'How did you build that house?' The one who asks this question is referring to an action, and to a product, namely the house which was built. Does knowing how have anything to do with doctrine? No.

We must understand first what 'doctrine' ('aqida) means. A doctrine means something tied fast (ma'qud); and if this is the case, then how could he have said, '…only that my heart may be fully at ease….' Does this indicate that before asking the question, and before it was asked, Abraham's heart was not at ease? No. Abraham was a believer, but he wanted to increase his heart's rest because he had begun to think about how the action of raising to life occurs, but he did not know what manner it takes.

So, his heart's rest was based on his will to know the specific mode, to take him out of the labyrinths of all the different modes he could depict and imagine; and this mode is not something which could be explained in words, but rather would need to be illustrated with a real practical experience: '…Take four birds and draw them to yourself....' This means: cause them to come to you, and hold them to yourself so that you can be sure of the identity of the birds and the form of each bird so that you will not wonder if it is another bird that comes back to you.

Exegetes say that the four birds were a raven, a peacock, a rooster, and a pigeon so that each bird had a different form.

'…Then [after slaughtering them] put on each hill a portion of them; then call them – they will come to you in haste….' Did our master Abraham peace be upon him actually do this, or was he satisfied with God's explaining the 'how' of it to him? The Quran does not mention this; so, either God told him how it was done, and if he wanted to confirm it, he could do so, or else, he may have been completely convinced without actually doing it. The Quran does not tell us whether our master Abraham peace be upon him actually did it or not. The True Lord says to Abraham about the stages of the experiment, '…then call them – they will come to you in haste…', yet it might be supposed that He would have said, 'They will come to you flying,' as the word used in the Arabic text (sa'iyan) implies hasty walking.

How do birds come walking in haste? Birds fly in the sky and in the air, but the True Lord the Most High wanted not to leave any room for confusion, so, He said 'in haste,' meaning that the birds would come running to him. The True Lord the Most High changed it from flying to walking in order that our master Abraham peace be upon him could be sure of them: In order that you can be sure, O Abraham, and so that your peace of heart can increase, We brought them forth from different kinds of birds, and you were the one who cut them, and you were the one who put a piece of them on each mountain, and then you were the one who called the birds and they all came to you in haste.

Here there is an illustration of God's Omnipotent Power, and the difference between the necessary power of the Necessary Being, namely the True Lord the Most High, and the power which is given by the Necessary Being, God, to the one who denies the Necessary Being, namely man. This One has Power, and that one has power; yet the Power of God is a necessary power, whilst the power of man is only a possible power; and no one can take God's power from Him, whilst God can take man's power from him; for a man is a human being, and the powers of human beings are different from one another so that while one of them has power another of them does not, i.e. he is powerless. The able-bodied human being is able to loan his power to the one who is powerless: the able person might carry a chair for the powerless one to sit in if he cannot carry it himself. But the power of the True Lord the Most High is different.

It is as though the True Lord is saying: 'I loan some of My power to those who are unable so that they become able; I say to the weak: Be able! And so he does.' This is what we understand from God's words to Abraham: '…then call them – they will come [flying] to you in haste….' Abraham, as a human being, was unable to know how the dead are raised to life, but the True Lord gave him the power to call the birds so that they would come running to him.

The True Lord gave to Abraham the power to call the birds so that they would come running to him, and this is the difference between Necessary Power and possible power. No one can give the power of a possible being to someone who lacks it, but the Power of the Necessary Being can be given to one who is unable and thereby make him able. This is the perspective of the wise words concerning the special characteristics of Jesus son of Mary peace be upon him who was sent as a messenger to the children of Israel to tell them that he has come to them with a message from their Lord. He will create for them out of clay, as it were, the figure of a bird, and then breathe into it so that it will become a bird by God's leave; and he will heal the blind and the leper, and bring the dead back to life by God's leave; and he will tell them what they eat and what they store up in their houses. Indeed, in all this, there is a message to them, if they are truly believers (Al-'Imran: 49).

The special characteristics of Jesus son of Mary only came about by the leave of God: the ability of Jesus peace be upon him to make birds from clay, which he then breathed into so that by God's leave, they became real birds, and likewise his healing of the blind and the leper and the raising of the dead to life – all of this was by leave of whom? It was by leave of God.

The same was the case for the experiment of Abraham, which is why the True Lord said to him, '…And know that God is Exalted in Might and Wise.' God is Almighty, meaning that no one can overcome Him; and He is Wise, meaning that He puts everything in its proper place.

In this way, the True Lord explained the story of life and the story of death with a physical experiment so that the heart of our master Abraham would be set at ease; and the story of life and death was mentioned because the doubt of those who lived at the time of the Muhammadan message was centred on the matter of the resurrection of the dead, and all of their words pointed to that, and they found far-fetched the notion that after they have died and become mere dust and bones, they will be raised from the dead (al-Mu'minun: 82).

And in another place the Quran tells about man who comes up with arguments about God and forgets how he himself was created. Man asks who could give life to bones that have crumbled to dust. God commands His Messenger to answer that it is He Who brought them into being in the first instance, will give them life once again: He has full knowledge of every act of creation (Ya Sin: 78-79).

The True Lord the Most High commanded Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to answer this: Say, O Muhammad, He who brought them into life in the first place will give them life, for He created them before out of nothing. This is the meaning we find in the statement of the True Lord the Most High that it is He who creates all life in the first instance and then brings it forth anew; and most easy is this for Him. His is the loftiest example in the heavens and on earth, and He is the Mighty, the Wise (ar-Rum: 27).

God the Most High is able to begin creation without any prototype, and then, to bring it back after death; and for Him to bring it back would be deemed easier for Him than to begin it, according to the standards of someone who believes that to start something anew is easier than beginning it for God has absolute Power over His creation, and He is the Master in His dominion, and He is All-Wise in His actions and His ordainment.

The one who brings something back only returns what already exists whilst the one who begins something, brings it out of non-being. So the easier task is to bring it back; as for beginning it, this means to begin it from nothing – and both modes are within the power of the True Lord the Most High. This matter only confirms the coming of the Last Day because faith in the Last Day is the balance of doctrine; if it settles in the heart and the person knows that he will be brought back to life and held accountable for his deeds in this life, he will direct his whole body towards the acts which are in accordance with the Way of God in order to gain the greatest reward.

When a person understands that there will be a reckoning, and there will be requital, and there will be a resurrection, he knows that he will not be left free in this world, and he will not escape from the One All-Dominant God. Man will return to life, and so we say to the one who is deluded by what God has given him: No, you will not escape from God's Hand, but rather, after you die, you will come back at the Resurrection. When this return settles in the minds of Muslims, everyone will base his prospects on this return.

After the matter of life and death was settled, the True Lord the Most High wanted to discuss something which is the fruit of life for living beings, and the first of the signs of life, namely sensation and movement. God wanted man to have movement in existence because He, the True Lord, wanted man to assume vicegerency on earth, and vicegerency on earth requires man to fill the earth with life, as God the Most High reports the teaching of the prophet Saleh peace be upon him to his tribe Thamud to worship God as they have no deity other than Him. He brought them into being out of the earth, and made them settle and thrive in it (Hud: 61).

Man's vicegerency on earth requires him to work and fill the earth with movement; and when God wanted us to work and fill the earth with life, there must be certain actions which give order to this work, and there must be various arts upon which this thriving is based; and God distributes the active abilities of these various arts and makes them intellectual and artistic talents for mankind. The True Lord did not make a single man embody all faculties, but rather, He the Exalted dispersed talents throughout mankind, and everybody took one talent or another.

Why? That was because God wanted the world to be integrative, not repetitive and integration gives rise to amalgamation. If you know something that is within your talents, whilst I do not know it, I therefore will need to be in contact with you; and I also might know something which you do not, so, you will need to be in contact with me; and this kind of contact is not one of superiority or condescension, but rather, it is contact based on essential coexistence.

But if everyone possessed all talents, they would not need any other human being, and everyone would live alone, and no one would need communal life. It is as though when God dispensed the means of good livelihood throughout mankind, He wanted them to integrate and be in contact with one another, not out of condescending relationship but out of essential coexistence; because one person wants that which another can offer him with his talents, and the other wants from someone else that which he is gifted with. Because of this, people are well off as long as they are distinct from one another because each of them needs the other.

This is why we find there is no progress in a society unless the talents in this society are diverse and in integrative collaboration. But when in a people, you find that everybody has the same talents as everybody else, they will inevitably compete and fight with one another. On the other hand, when everyone needs the talents of someone else, they will coexist because life can only proceed if it does so for everyone. This is why when a group of people have the same talents, they will inevitably annihilate one another because they will compete over means of livelihood, and each one of them, will want to claim them for themselves. But if talents are integrated, no one will say, ‘Why is so-and-so better than I?’ He will know that it is essential that there are engineers, doctors, as well as labourers. For this reason, you find that the world organises itself naturally in a way that produces a base and a peak – the small peak carried by the large base. If the pyramid were turned upside down, it would become problematic because in this case, it would be weighed down by many sides, and would have no fixed base, and would not be focused on anything. This is why it is wise that if you see that someone in society has arrived to the peak, you help him to stay at the top; do not fight him, or else you will all fall down. There must be comparison so that there can be integration.

The True Lord the Most High presents this issue to us here in a sociological and economic fashion in order to show us that the basis of existence must be formed on social and economic grounds. Why? Because man is busy first of all with preserving his life, and then, with preserving his species; the preservation of man is attained by sustenance and nourishment, and the preservation of his species is attained through marriage. The preservation of life by nourishment requires work in life, and the True Lord respects the fruit of this work; and when the True Lord wants to soften the heart of the worker towards his incapable brother, He treats charity towards the incapable as a loan to Himself asking, ‘Who is it that will lend to God a goodly loan …?’ (al-Baqara: 245).

We gave the example before – and God is beyond compare – saying that a man gives his children pocket-money, which each one of them puts in his money box. Suppose that one of the children needs something urgent like an operation. Upon this, the man goes to his children and says to them, ‘Lend me what is in your money boxes because your brother requires an operation, and I will pay you back with extra afterwards.’ The father does not take back his gift and say, ‘What is in the money-boxes belongs to me, and I will take it;’ no; rather he says, ‘It is your money, and I will take it as a loan from you.’

This is what God does with mankind, explaining: Some of you are unable and others are able; and I will look after those who are unable, and take a loan from those who are able. It is necessary that some of us are unable so that no one would think that power intrinsically belongs to the human being; no; power is a gift, and the One Who gave it can take it away. In order for the one who has power to know that this power is not intrinsically his, he finds next to him someone else who is powerless. However, this powerless person who shows the powerful one that this power is not intrinsically his: what has he done wrong?

God has made him a means of clarification in existence, as though the True Lord were saying: We will assure for you, incapable person, the appropriate standard of living by means of the fruits of the work of him who is able to work since it is from the fruits of the work of him who is able to work; does this mean that the one who is able to work should work as much as he needs to, or as much as he can? He must work as much as he can because if he only works as much as he needs to work, he will not have anything to give to those who are unable to work.

After having just affirmed the matters of the Resurrection and giving life and dealing death, the True Lord the Most High speaks about this important matter of the structure of society and economics so that these things are clear in our minds; and the True Lord the Most High then, moves on to clarify to us the nature of Islamic society and economics. He the Exalted says:

مَّثَلُ ٱلَّذِينَ يُنفِقُونَ أَمْوَٰلَهُمْ فِى سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ كَمَثَلِ حَبَّةٍ أَنۢبَتَتْ سَبْعَ سَنَابِلَ
فِى كُلِّ سُنۢبُلَةٍ مِّا۟ئَةُ حَبَّةٍ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ يُضَٰعِفُ لِمَن يَشَآءُ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ وَٰسِعٌ عَلِيمٌ ﴿٢٦١﴾

Those who spend their wealth in God's cause are like grains of corn that produce seven ears, each bearing a hundred grains. God gives multiple increase to whoever He wishes. He is limitless and All Knowing [261] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 261)

God ascribes wealth to those people who work because they have earned this wealth by means of their work. In another place in the Quran, the True Lord instructs the believers to give the needy from the wealth of God that He has given to them (an-Nur: 33).

All wealth belongs to God and man obtains it by working. God respects this work, and He respects man's law of benefit, and so He makes the wealth which remains from your work a possession of yours, but if God wants, He will take this wealth; and out of His grace upon man, when He the Exalted asks man for some of the wealth which remains from his work, He asks for it as a loan, and He repays it many times over afterwards.

Therefore, God returns what is spent in His Way many times over; and since God does this, it means that what is spent brings increase. Therefore, do not grieve, or fear for your wealth because you have given it to One Who is Omnipotent, fully Capable, Infinite, and All Knowing. He is the True Lord Who is able to give everyone whatever He wills; and He gives according to the intention of the servant, and the amount which he spends on others. This verse deals with the matter of the greed of the human soul; for a person might have something extraneous to his needs, and greedily covet it for himself and be miserly, fearing to spend it, and thus he might lose it.

Here, the perspective of faith says to you: Spend it because He the Exalted will give you more, and the True Lord will give to you just as He gives to you from the earth which you farm. You place a single grain in the soil: does it give you only a single grain in return? No; the grain of wheat produces a number of stems, and each stem contains an ear which contains many grains. If the earth, which is a creation of God, multiplies for you what you give to it, will not The One who created it also give to you many times over? If some of God's creations give to you many times over, what do you think of the giving of God the Most High?

The inanimate earth, with its constituents, gives to you; when you take a quantity of wheat from your stores to plant it in the earth, is it said that you have reduced your stores by this amount of wheat? No, because you will plant it; and you will see how many grains come from it; this is the inanimate earth which was created by God. If a creation of God can give you seven-hundred grains in return for one, will the One Who created this earth not give you much more than this?

He is bountiful in giving; and the True Lord the Most High ascribes to those who spend ownership of the wealth which they spend when He says, 'The example of those who spend their wealth in the Way of God….' The words 'in the Way of God' are general words, and they could mean the holy struggle (jihad), or spending on charity; for all of this is in the Way of God because when the weak person finds himself in a society of mutual solidarity, and finds that those who have strength lend the fruits of their strength and their work to him, will he bear a grudge towards those who have strength? No, because their good will come to him. We have a parable in the countryside: 'When a milk-producing animal is allowed to walk free in the neighbourhood, everyone will pray for her and say, 'May He protect you!' Why? Because her owner gives her milk, cheese and butter to everyone around him, so, they all pray for her; and her owner does not tie her up, or chain her, or worry about her, as the good which comes from her goes to everyone. When we find a society of this form in which the incapable person finds that strong people help him, the incapable person will feel that he is in a cooperative and integrated world.'

And if one person has strength and another suffers from weakness, the weak person will not be resentful but will rather say, 'The good of others will come to me.' Likewise, the one who gives will rest assured that if he becomes incapable one day, he will find those who will take care of him – for power is subject to vicissitudes, and since man is subject to vicissitudes, the one who is strong today, might become weak tomorrow.

So, the words of the True Lord the Most High 'The example of those who spend their wealth…' represent a law by which God wants to fight the greed of the human soul. He says to each one of us: Look sagaciously: the earth does not reduce your stores when you give it a measure of wheat; it is true that you remove a measure of wheat from your stores to farm with, but you expect to receive many multiples of it from the earth. Beware of thinking that you can put your trust in what you give to the earth, but that you cannot put your trust in what you give to God.

The example of those who spend their wealth in the Way of God is like a grain which produces seven ears; in each ear is a hundred grains. And God multiplies [His reward] for whom He wills. And God is All-Encompassing and All Knowing (al-Baqara: 261). The verse deals with greed and emphasises that charity does not reduce a person's wealth; rather, it gives him even more.

After this, He the Exalted says:

ٱلَّذِينَ يُنفِقُونَ أَمۡوَٰلَهُمۡ فِي سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ ثُمَّ لَا يُتۡبِعُونَ مَآ أَنفَقُواْ مَنّٗا وَلَآ
أَذٗىۙ لَّهُمۡ أَجۡرُهُمۡ عِندَ رَبِّهِمۡ وَلَا خَوۡفٌ عَلَيۡهِمۡ وَلَا هُمۡ يَحۡزَنُونَ ٢٦٢

Those who spend their wealth in God's cause, and do not follow their spending with reminders of their benevolence or hurtful words, will have their rewards with their Lord, no fear for them, nor will they grieve [262] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 262)

This is another aspect of charity that the True Lord clarifies here: When you spend your money in God's Way and in the hope of getting God's reward, beware of reminding the one whom you give of your benevolence or hurting his feelings. To stress one's benevolence means for someone to go to the one to whom he has treated kindly and indicate to him that he is indebted to him, and that he has done him a favour; as the poet says:

The one who does me a favour
And reminds me of it a single time is a true niggard!

This is why it is from the manners of faith for a person to forget that he has given, and forget that he has spent, and not to let any of his family see the good he did for a poor person, or the charity he gave him, especially youngsters who do not understand God's reasoning for things: when my son sees me giving something to my neighbour, he might tease the neighbour's son and remind him of our benevolence to him, and he might be so conceited that he insults him; and no one can properly appreciate this matter except someone who is morally responsible and knows the ruling in its context from God.

The True Lord explains to us: Beware of following up your spending on others by reminding them of your benevolence and hurting people's feelings; for if you do, what will the situation be? The one to whom you gave charity will hate it, and he will develop resentment, and hatred. This is why they say, 'Beware the evil of the one for whom you do good,' which they explained as meaning that the way to avoid the evil of this person is not to remind him of the good you did him; beware of reminding him of this good because this will cause him to develop resentment.

This is why you find that many people say something like, 'I did so many favours for so-and-so, this and that, and this and that, and then, they turned around on me and denied it!' I say to everyone who says this: As long as you remember what you did for them – and this means that you were dealing with them not with God, and you had them in mind and not God – it is justice from God that they deny it; if you had acted for the sake of God, they would not have denied it, and since you did not act for the sake of God, you were inviting disavowal of what you spent.

It is as though the True Lord the Most High wanted, with the first verse, to soften the heart of the one who spends so that he will spend willingly and generously, so He said, 'Those who spend their wealth in the Way of God and then do not follow up what they have spent with reminders [of it] or [other] injury will have their reward with their Lord, and there will be no fear concerning them, nor will they grieve.'

The True Lord the Most High reassured us in the first verse that charity and spending on others do not decrease wealth, but rather, they increase it, and the True Lord gave us the example for this of the earth which repays a single grain with seven hundred grains. Then, the True Lord explains to us that the bane of spending charity is to accompany it with reminding of one's benevolence, or by hurting the feelings of the needy because this will spoil the pure chain of mutual solidarity for the weak and the incapacitated, which is why the True Lord the Most High says, 'Those who spend their wealth in the Way of God and then, do not follow up what they have spent with reminders [of it] or [other] injury will have their reward with their Lord….'

Look at the syntactic/semantic precision of the noble expression: '…and then do not follow up what they have spent with reminders [of it] or [other] injury….' It would have been sufficient for the expression to be straight to say, 'They who spend their wealth in the Way of God and then, do not follow up what they have spent with reminders [of it] or [other] injury,' but the True Lord the Most High used the word 'then' because it makes an impression here: the one who spends his wealth on others, might not remind them of his benevolence at the time when he gives it, but he might do this later. It is as though the True Lord the Most High is alerting every believer: The act of spending on others must remain unaccompanied by reminding them of it, and the one who spends, must always avoid reminding of his benevolence; he must not only refrain from reminding of his benevolence at the time of giving, but must continue to do this after giving, no matter how much time passes.

The word ‘then’ is used in this way because of the necessity of refraining from reminding of benevolence; the True Lord the Most High forbids this mean practice whether immediate or delayed, not only at the time of the giving, but also after the giving. When the ‘Prince of Poets’ Ahmad Shawqi God rest his soul wrote verses about carrying heavy burdens, he composed several lines about psychological burdens:

Have you ever borne a debt, even once in your life?
Have you ever borne rancour in your heart?
Have you ever had to bear night and day, repeatedly?
The benevolent boasts of one who did you a favour?

And after enumerating various kinds of burdens of life, Shawqi then says:

This is life, and these are its burdens;
If iron were compared to them, it would come slight.

It is as though reminding of benevolence is a serious psychological burden. The True Lord the Most High assures those who spend their wealth in God’s Way without reminding of their charity or hurting the feelings of the needy that they will have a reward with their Lord. The word ‘reward’ – accompanied by the modification that it is with the Lord – is a reassurance that the matter has been turned over to One Who is sure to take care of it, and to One Who is able to do so. As for the one who reminds of his charity, or hurts the feelings of the needy, he takes his reward in this life by boasting of his benevolence, or hurting the feelings of the needy, and he has no reward with God; for the one who reminds of his charity, or hurts the feelings of the needy, has not kept in mind the Lord of the weak, but only the weak.

When the one who spends in God’s Way, keeps in mind the Lord of the weak, and that the Lord of the weak is the One Who called him into existence, and that He sent weakness upon him, he will believe that God is the One Who has undertaken to provide for the weak; and when the strong spends on the weak, he does this on behalf of God, which is why we find in the sayings of those who are near to God say: ‘We place charity into the Hand of God before we place it in the hand of the weak.’ Let us consider how our Lady Fatima God be pleased with her, the daughter of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon her, was polishing a coin and perfuming it, and when they asked her what she was doing, she said, ‘I am polishing and perfuming the coin because I intend to give it as charity.’ They said to her, ‘Why will you polish and perfume it if you want to give it as charity?’

Fatima Az-Zahra’ peace and blessings be upon her, daughter of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him, said, ‘Because I know that it will fall in God’s Hand before it falls into the hand of the needy person.’ The reward is with The One Who values it, and raises it, and increases its value, and He is the All-Giving Creator.

Let us reflect on God’s words ‘…and there will be no fear concerning them, nor will they grieve.’ Why did God not say, ‘No fear will they have’? Because the True Lord wants to explain to us by saying ‘…and there will be no fear concerning them…’ that a third element will become involved here, namely the involvement of a person who makes a show of love to the spender and give him false advice saying, ‘Save for the days to come, and save for your children.’

Because of this kind of element, the True Lord says, ‘…and there will be no fear concerning them…,’ that is: Beware, O you who have this kind of idea, of interfering in the name of love in order to ensure that your words are heeded; for the one who spends in God’s Way will only find bestowal and protection from God. So the one who spends in God’s Way has no need to fear; and not only this, but the True Lord also says of those who spend in God’s Way without reminding of their benevolence or hurting the feelings of the needy that: ‘…nor will they grieve.’ This means that the True Lord will treat them in such a way that they will rejoice in having given charity, either by its speedily being returned to them, or by their feeling contentment in their souls, or by passive provision; for the problem with people is that they always look for positive provision, that is, man measures his provision by that which is added to his wealth, and does not take passive provision into account; and passive provision is pure blessing.

Suppose that a person's income is fifty pounds, and then God relieves him of possible expenditure that might have reached one hundred pounds, for example by his coming home to find that his son is ill and has a fever; so, God provides the man's heart with tranquillity, and he asks the mother to prepare a cup of tea for the boy and he gives him a tablet of aspirin, and the illness goes and that is how similar matters come to pass.

Another man comes home and finds that his son is ill and has a fever, and the fever lasts for more than a day, so, God casts fear into his heart and all kinds of bad thoughts and worries about the illness come to the man's mind and he carries his son to the doctor and spends fifty, or one hundred pounds.

God healed the first man's son with a penny, whilst He healed the second man's son with numerous pounds. The provision of the first man was passive provision; just as God gives provision in a positive way, He also gives provision in a negative way, i.e. He relieves the need to spend and holds off misfortune. There is a man whose income is one hundred pounds; and God brings expenses to him which need two hundred; and there is another man whose income is fifty pounds, yet God relieves him from expenditure of more than one hundred pounds; so, which state is better?

It is the state of the man whom God relieves from having to spend more than his capability. So people should consider passive provision just as they consider positive provision; and God's words about those who spend in God's Way without reminding any of their benevolence or hurting the feelings of the needy that '…there will be no fear concerning them, nor will they grieve', indicate that God will bring, as a result of spending without reminding of charity or hurting feelings, that which will cause the heart of the believer to rejoice, either by the blessing of provision, or by relieving them of possible expenditure, so, the heart of the believer will say: This is the blessing of the charity I gave. He might give something in charity, so, God withholds and relieves him from something potentially harmful, and the believer's heart will rejoice.

After this, the True Lord the Most High alerts us to something important, which is that if you cannot do good with your wealth, O believer, then, at least do good with your speech; if you cannot accommodate people with your wealth, then, accommodate them with a kind treatment, as the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Ward off the Hellfire even with half a date; and if one finds not even this, then with a kind word.’[1] The True Lord the Most High spells out the issue in the following verse:

قَوۡلٞ مَّعۡرُوفٞ وَمَغۡفِرَةٌ خَيۡرٞ مِّن صَدَقَةٖ يَتۡبَعُهَآ أَذٗىۗ وَٱللَّهُ غَنِيٌّ حَلِيمٞ ٢٦٣

A kind word and forgiveness is better than a charitable deed followed by hurtful [words]. God is self-sufficient, forbearing [263] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 263)

What does ‘Kind speech’ mean here? Usually we find the word ma‘roof (rendered here as ‘kind’ and which literally means ‘known’), used to mean ‘conventionally acceptable’ and is often used in contrast with the word munkar, (‘bad/abominable,’ which literally means ‘rejected/denied/ unacknowledged’). It is as though goodness is something which is naturally acknowledged, and that the things which are naturally acknowledged are always based on beauty and goodness, whilst the things which the soul rejects are based on evil and ugliness, and because of this the True Lord the Most High says ‘kind (ma‘roof) speech’, as though it is the nature of beauty and goodness to be acknowledged, whilst the nature of their opposites is to be rejected. So ‘kind speech’ means to turn a beggar down in a nice way so that his soul does not fill with resentment against you, and that you do not censure him for having asked of you; and if the beggar glowers at you as a needy person does, then, forgive him for this. Why? It is because there are people who suffer greatly from need, and one of them might see that you are wealthy or well-off and hope to get some good from your charity and then, he might go a little too far when he speaks to you, and perhaps cross the line of polite speech with you; so you must bear with him.

And you, O servant of God, keep in mind that you commit sins which anger God, and yet, the True Lord treats you with forbearance and patience, forgives your misdeeds, and does not punish you; so, if someone treats you offensively in some way, be also a person of kindness, forgiveness and forbearance, as the True Lord the Most High puts the question to us: ‘…do you not desire that God forgive you?...’ (an-Nur: 22).

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in Kitab Az-Zakat

We all desire that God would forgive us, which is why we must forgive other people, especially the needy. When the True Lord says, '…And God is Free of need, Forbearing,' this is a warning to the capable person who refuses to give to the needy, as though He were saying to him: You have only denied yourself, O capable person, the reward of God. O capable person, when you deny the poor, you are the one who is really being denied because God is free of need to you; and He the Exalted tells the believers that they are called upon to spend freely in God's Way; but some of them are niggardly. And whoever acts niggardly is only niggardly towards his own self; for God is free of need, whereas they stand in need; and if they turn away, He will bring other people to take their place, and they will not be the likes of them (Muhammad: 38).

God is Free of need by His Omnipotent Power, and He is able to replace miserly people with people who give willingly in God's Way from the provisions which God has given to them. The one who refuses to give, is only thereby closing the door to mercy upon himself, which is why the True Lord says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ لَا تُبۡطِلُواْ صَدَقَٰتِكُم بِٱلۡمَنِّ وَٱلۡأَذَىٰ كَٱلَّذِى يُنفِقُ مَالَهُۥ رِئَآءَ ٱلنَّاسِ
وَلَا يُؤۡمِنُ بِٱللَّهِ وَٱلۡيَوۡمِ ٱلۡأٓخِرِۖ فَمَثَلُهُۥ كَمَثَلِ صَفۡوَانٍ عَلَيۡهِ تُرَابٞ فَأَصَابَهُۥ وَابِلٞ فَتَرَكَهُۥ
صَلۡدٗاۖ لَّا يَقۡدِرُونَ عَلَىٰ شَىۡءٖ مِّمَّا كَسَبُواْۗ وَٱللَّهُ لَا يَهۡدِى ٱلۡقَوۡمَ ٱلۡكَٰفِرِينَ ٢٦٤

You who believe, do not cancel out your charitable deeds with reminders and hurtful words, like someone who spends his wealth only to be seen by people, not believing in God and the Last Day. Such a person is like a rock with earth on it: heavy rain falls and leaves it completely bare. Such people get no rewards for their works: God does not guide the disbelievers [264] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 264)

The one who gives charity and then follows it by reminding of his benevolence and hurting the feelings of the needy only nullifies his charity, and his loss is really twofold: the first loss is that he actually decreases his wealth because God will not replace it for him since he nullified his charity by following it by reminding of his benevolence and hurting the feelings of the needy; and the second loss is that he is denied the reward. So the one who spends on others just so that people will say that he did so, should know that the True Lord explains to us that rewards are given on the premise that the reward is paid by the one for whom you did the deed.

With the limited nature of his power, man gives reward to those who do something for him; and the one who does an action so that people will say he did and he will take his reward from the limited power of man. For this reason, the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him told us that the one who does a good deed or gives charity so that it will be said of him that he did it, will come forth on the Day of Resurrection and find there is no reward for him. The Noble Hadith says: '… And (there will come) a man to whom God gave all manner of wealth, and he will be brought forth, and He will remind him of His blessings, and he will acknowledge them; then He will say, 'What did you do with them?' He will say, 'I left nothing which You loved for me to spend without spending on it for You.' He will say, 'You have lied; you only wanted it to be said that so-and-so is generous; and it indeed was said.' Then he will be ordered to be taken and dragged on his face until he is cast into Hellfire.'(1)

So, beware of saying, 'I spent on others, but God did not increase my provisions,' because God might be testing you and trying you. Do not give charity in order to gain more provisions because God does not give to the believer in this worldly life alone; God might not want to give to you in this ephemeral world, but rather to preserve His gift to you in the everlasting world, the Hereafter, which is better and more lasting.

The True Lord says, '…and does not believe in God and the Last Day. His example is like that of a [large] smooth stone upon which is a little dust of earth….' The word safwan means a smooth stone, which we call 'pebble'; and the word safwan can also be used to describe a bald man because his head is smooth like a pebble. A smooth rock means one which has no fissures or pores that you can see with the naked eye, but which you can only see by using a microscope. When something is smooth, soil might fall upon it, and then when it rains the soil washes off it and slides off the smooth surface. If the rock has some cracks in it, some of the soil will stick in between the cracks. So the one who spends his wealth only to be seen and praised by people is like a smooth stone upon which a little earth builds up, and then when rain falls onto the earth, it is all washed away so that '…They are unable [to keep] anything of what they have earned…' that is, they will lose the ability to possess anything because God will make all their actions like dust scattered in the wind.

(1) Part of a Hadith which Al-Hakim declared to be authentic according to the conditions of Al-Bukhari and Muslim; and indeed Muslim narrated it.

These people are like the smooth rock upon which there is a little earth which is then washed off by a rainstorm, that is, by heavy rain which leaves it bare; these are the attributes of those who spend their wealth only to be seen and praised by men so that God nullifies their reward, for God does not allow them to attain goodness and reward. God then gives their opposite, namely those who spend their wealth out of a longing to please God, saying:

وَمَثَلُ ٱلَّذِينَ يُنفِقُونَ أَمْوَٰلَهُمُ ٱبْتِغَآءَ مَرْضَاتِ ٱللَّهِ وَتَثْبِيتًا مِّنْ
أَنفُسِهِمْ كَمَثَلِ جَنَّةٍۭ بِرَبْوَةٍ أَصَابَهَا وَابِلٌ فَـَٔاتَتْ أُكُلَهَا
ضِعْفَيْنِ فَإِن لَّمْ يُصِبْهَا وَابِلٌ فَطَلٌّ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ بِمَا تَعْمَلُونَ بَصِيرٌ ﴿٢٦٥﴾

But those who spend their wealth in order to gain God's approval, and as an affirmation of their own faith, are like a garden on a hill: heavy rain falls and it produces double its normal yield; even if no heavy rain falls, it will still be watered by the dew. God sees all that you do [265]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 265)

Seeking God's pleasure in spending means removing any ostentation in the soul from the act of spending so that it is sincerely devoted to Him Alone. As for their own inner strength, it is also for themselves; it is as though the faithful part of the soul clashes with the libidinal part, and when the faithful part of the soul seeks anything, the libidinal part seeks to prevent it; and the faithful part of the soul overcomes the libidinal part and seeks to gain victory for God's sake.

The meaning of '…the strengthening of their souls…' is that the believer affirms that he loves his own self with a deep love, not a foolish love. The act of spending on others must first of all be spending in God's Way, and the believer strengthens his soul first of all by giving his blood, and secondly by giving his wealth; and in this way, inner strength is affirmed, so, the likeness of it is, as the noble verse depicted it: '…a garden on high ground which is hit by a downpour – so, it yields its fruits twofold. And [even] if it is not hit by a downpour, then, a drizzle [falls upon it]. And God, of what you do, is Seeing.'

As we know, the word 'garden' (janna) means the place in which there are thick green plants so that it conceals those who are within it; from the same root is derived the word jann which means 'cover', so, those who enter this garden are covered. The True Lord wants to give us a parable to illustrate the second group of those who spend in God's Way, out of a longing to please Him and to strengthen the faithful part of their souls against the libidinal part; one of them is like one who enters a garden of thick plants, and this garden is on high, fertile ground; and when a garden is on high fertile ground, this means that it is surrounded by areas which are lower-lying than it. So what will the rain do to the garden if it is on high fertile ground? The True Lord tells us what would happen to a garden like this before modern science developed and discovered the effects which ground water has on crops.

This garden on high ground does not suffer from what flat lands suffer from: on flat lands, ground water can go down to the roots of crops and cause them to rot by drowning them so that these roots cannot absorb the necessary nutrients, and thus the plants first become pale and then die. The garden which lies on high ground, accepts the water which falls upon it as rain, and it is surrounded by ditches which drain the water down to the low-lying lands around it; and this garden is irrigated by the most modern form of irrigation to which modern science has arrived: it takes water from above, i.e. from rain, and the water falls on the leaves to perform a primary function, which is to wash the leaves.

As we know, plant leaves are like lungs for people, and their function is to breathe, and when rainwater falls on them it washes the leaves to allow them to play their part in the process known today as photosynthesis. After this, the water reaches the roots in order to absorb the essential elements in the soil to give nutrition to the plants, and the roots take what they need of the nutrients absorbed in the water, and the extra water flows down the ditches to the lower ground. This is the most modern of all current farming techniques, and they have discovered that yields are doubled by it.

The True Lord is telling us that he who spends his wealth out of a desire to please God and to strengthen their inner souls are like this kind of garden, which is irrigated by Divine means so that if a downpour hits it, it takes what it needs from it and the rest of the rain flows off it; '…And [even] if it is not hit by a downpour, then a drizzle [falls upon it]….' Drizzle (tall) means light and soft rain, and this is enough for it to give its produce twofold (di'fayn, which literally means 'two doubles'). If a double means that which is equal to two times of something, then, two doubles are equal to four times of it.

God the Most High then gives us another example to clarify more the state of the person who spends his wealth ostentatiously; He asks His believing servants, and He knows them best, saying:

أَيَوَدُّ أَحَدُكُمْ أَن تَكُونَ لَهُۥ جَنَّةٌ مِّن نَّخِيلٍ وَأَعْنَابٍ تَجْرِى مِن تَحْتِهَا ٱلْأَنْهَٰرُ لَهُۥ
فِيهَا مِن كُلِّ ٱلثَّمَرَٰتِ وَأَصَابَهُ ٱلْكِبَرُ وَلَهُۥ ذُرِّيَّةٌ ضُعَفَآءُ فَأَصَابَهَآ إِعْصَارٌ فِيهِ نَارٌ
فَٱحْتَرَقَتْ ۗ كَذَٰلِكَ يُبَيِّنُ ٱللَّهُ لَكُمُ ٱلْءَايَٰتِ لَعَلَّكُمْ تَتَفَكَّرُونَ ﴿٢٦٦﴾

Would any of you like to have a garden of palm trees and vines, graced with flowing streams and all kinds of produce, which, when you are afflicted with old age and feeble offspring, is struck by a fiery whirl- wind and burnt down? In this way God makes His messages clear to you, so that you may reflect on them [266] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 266)

The True Lord the Most High includes us in the image, as though He wants us to take a clear picture from it. Would any of you like to have a garden of date palms and grape vines, through which running rivers flow, and have all kinds of fruit grow therein; and we know that dates and grapes were two of the most important fruits and products of the society in which the Noble Quran was first revealed; and we know that there are gardens in which there are date palms and grape vines, to which their owners add peach trees and other fruit trees, and this is similar to the situation that the True Lord describes about the owner of the two gardens, upon one of which God had bestowed two vineyards and surrounded them with date palms, and placed a field of grain in between. Each of the two gardens yielded its produce and never failed therein in any way, and God had made a stream to gush forth in the midst of each of them. And so the owner had fruit in abundance. One day he said to his friend, in conversation with him, ‘I have more wealth than you, and I am mightier in terms of followers.’ And having thus sinned against himself, he entered his garden, saying, ‘I do not think that this will ever perish; and neither do I think that the Last Hour will ever come. But even if it should come, and I am brought before my Lord, I will surely find something even better than this as my last resort’ (al-Kahf: 32-36).

The two gardens here contained many different things: they had grapevines, and in addition God gave to them both date-palms, and then grain; and in Arabic rhetoric this is called ‘adding the general to the specific, or adding the specific to the general,’ in order to mention the thing twice, once generally and once specifically for emphasis. When the True Lord the Most High speaks about the Garden/Paradise of the Hereafter, He says that God has readied for the believers who struggle in His Way gardens underneath which running rivers flow, therein to remain forever; this is the great triumph (at-Tawba: 89).

God has prepared for those who believe in Him, those who fight for the cause of His religion and for raising His word, gardens underneath which rivers flow, and this is the supreme triumph and bliss. And in another place, the True Lord speaks about the Garden/Paradise of the Hereafter by saying that He has prepared it for those who led the way, the first of the Muhajirun (Migrants from Mecca) and the Ansar (who supported the religion in Medina), and those who have followed them in their noble conduct, whom God is well pleased with them, and they with Him – He has made ready for them gardens under which the rivers flow, to abide therein forever: this is the great triumph (at-Tawba: 89).

The discourse about the rivers which flow underneath the gardens contains in one place the Arabic particle min, which literally means ‘from’, whilst in the other verse there is no use of this particle. When the discourse about these rivers which flow through the gardens uses the particle min, this implies that their flowing is intrinsically theirs, and that their liquid state belongs to them.

And when the discourse about these rivers which flow underneath the gardens does not use the particle min, this means that the flowing of these rivers is not intrinsically theirs, but rather that, they flow through them by the will of God; so, no one could dare to hold back the flow of the water from this garden which God has prepared for the believers.

Returning to the verse at hand, God includes us in the debate posing the question: ‘Would one of you like to have a garden of palm trees and grapevines underneath which rivers flow in which he has from every fruit, but he is afflicted with old age and has weak offspring, and it is hit by a whirlwind containing fire and is burned? Thus does God make clear to you [His] signs that you might give thought?’

The garden is in the condition which is described here, and it contains a great amount of goodness; but its owner has grown old, and he no longer has the health and vigour of youth. He is surrounded by goodness, and he needs this goodness more than ever because he has grown old and no longer has the energy to work. Because of this, his soul is attached to the produce of this garden, not only for himself, but also for his weak offspring. This is the quintessential image of the need for goodness, not only for oneself, but also for one’s weak offspring.

We are here presented with a man who is surrounded by three conditions:

The first condition is the garden which contains all kinds of goodness;

The second condition is old age, weakness and the inability to work;

The third condition is the children, who are weak.

Then a fiery whirlwind smites the garden and it is scorched; so, what will the scale of the loss be for this man? It will be a severe loss; and this is the loss of the one who does good deeds in order to be seen and praised by people. A whirlwind, as we know, is a strong wind accompanied by thunder, lighting and rain, and it might cause fires if electrical charges are caused by clashing clouds, or if the wind is carrying with it burning brands cast up by a blazing conflagration. This is the state of the one who spends on others in order to be seen and praised by people: a hopeful start, but a hopeless end.

So, every believing person must remember when he spends, this beginning which inspires desire, and this ending filled with despair. It is a severe disaster, which a poet described by saying:

When the night was done, I became as one
Who clutches onto water, which slips through his fingers.

And another said:

As though a cloud came over people desperate for rain,
But when they saw it, it dissolved and cleared.

The one who does things so that others will see and praise him thereby, ruins all his credits, and will have no gain from all that he has done.

The True Lord then says:

يَـٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوٓا۟ أَنفِقُوا۟ مِن طَيِّبَـٰتِ مَا كَسَبْتُمْ وَمِمَّآ
أَخْرَجْنَا لَكُم مِّنَ ٱلْأَرْضِ ۖ وَلَا تَيَمَّمُوا۟ ٱلْخَبِيثَ مِنْهُ تُنفِقُونَ وَلَسْتُم
بِـَٔاخِذِيهِ إِلَّآ أَن تُغْمِضُوا۟ فِيهِ ۚ وَٱعْلَمُوٓا۟ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ غَنِىٌّ حَمِيدٌ ﴿٢٦٧﴾

You who believe, give charitably from the good things you have acquired and that We have produced for you from the earth. Do not give away the bad things that you yourself would only accept with your eyes closed: remember that God is self-sufficient, worthy of all praise [267]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 267)

This verse depicts things which take place in human society, and these things were going on in Medina after the Messenger of God had established the Islamic state there. Some people used to take bunches of dates from date-palms and hang them in the mosque so that anyone who wanted could eat from them, and a bunch means a large branch of a date-palm containing many small stalks from which fresh dates hang. But some people would bring unripe bunches, or dates of inferior quality, and God wanted them to stop doing this so that they would not dedicate to God that which they themselves disliked; therefore He revealed these wise words: 'O you who have believed, spend from the good things which you have earned….'

Spending on others must be out of good, lawful possessions; do not obtain money from an unlawful source and spend it on good causes because God is Good and He accepts only that which is good, and spending on others should not be from base and ill-gotten wealth.

The True Lord the Most High specifies the means of spending from His provision, saying, '…and from that which We have brought forth for you from the earth…' and He reminds us always, when He says '…Spend from the good things which you have earned…', that we should not think that earning is the source of provision; no; earning is an act which is given to you by God. As a servant, you can only work because of the energy given to you by God, and the reasoning given to you by God, and upon the earth which God has subjugated for you. It is down to the many tools which God has specially bestowed upon you, none of which you possess intrinsically; but the True Lord respects man's work and effort to earn provision, so He says, '…Spend from the good things which you have earned….'

The True Lord the Most High warns us not to choose the defective and the inferior things of our labour's produce to spend in charity when He says, '…And do not seek the defective therefrom to spend [from that in charity]…' that is, it is not right and not appropriate that we take for ourselves the good things we earn and offer to God the base and bad things because none of us would be happy to feed himself, or his family on those bad things which are unsuitable for us to spend, or consume ourselves: '…while you would not take it [yourself] except with closed eyes. And know that God is Free of need and worthy of all praise.' That is, as a believing servant you would not be content to eat these bad things without averting your eyes in disdain or without its price being lowered for you, such as if the seller offers you something of middle or low quality for a lower price than that of the high quality produce.

The True Lord the Most High wanted to elucidate for us these depictions of the aspects of spending:

- Spending does not reduce wealth, but rather increases it seven hundred-fold;
- It is not right for a person to nullify his spending by reminding of his benevolence, or hurting the feelings of the needy;

- A kind word is better than a charitable deed which is followed by reminding of one's benevolence, or hurt;
- Spending must not be for the sake of gaining the praise of others, but rather must be done out of a desire to please God.

These noble verses deal with the things which spoil the act of spending in charity, whether greed, reminding of one's benevolence, hurting other's feelings, spending to show off in front of others, or spending from one's inferior possessions. After this, He the Exalted says:

ٱلشَّيۡطَٰنُ يَعِدُكُمُ ٱلۡفَقۡرَ وَيَأۡمُرُكُم بِٱلۡفَحۡشَآءِۖ وَٱللَّهُ يَعِدُكُم
مَّغۡفِرَةٗ مِّنۡهُ وَفَضۡلٗاۗ وَٱللَّهُ وَٰسِعٌ عَلِيمٞ ٢٦٨

Satan threatens you with the prospect of poverty and commands you to do foul deeds; God promises you His forgiveness and His abundance. God is limitless and All Knowing [268] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 268)

Satan might whisper to you that spending will make you poor, trying to prevent you from spending on good causes and tempt you into acts of sin and disobedience. When a rich person refuses to spend on the needy, the needy person's heart is filled with resentment; and if the heart of any society is filled with resentment, we will find that all manner of evil will spread therein. The True Lord treats this issue by stressing that the life of this world is but play and a passing delight; but if you believe in God and fear Him, He will grant you your recompense; and He does not demand of you to sacrifice in His Way all of your possessions as if He were to demand of you all of them, and urge you, you would niggardly cling to them, and so He would but bring out your moral failings (Muhammad: 36-37).

The True Lord the Most High does not ask you to return all the wealth He has given you, He only asks you to purify this wealth by spending some of it in God's Way in order that it grows and increases, and in order to remove resentment from society; for when resentment enters a society, the society will be overwhelmed by it, and this society will not awake from this resentment unless it is shaken by a strong blow which wakes it up to the need to expel resentment from itself. This is why God warns us not to listen to Satan: ‘Satan threatens you with poverty and orders you to immorality, while God promises you forgiveness from Him and bounty; and God is All-Encompassing, All Knowing.’

The one who listens to Satan’s words and promises and does not listen to God’s promises, will become as one who has supported God’s enemy against God – may God save us and you from such a position! Satan whispers to you that you will become poor if you spend; and man’s experience with Satan confirms to him that Satan is a misleading liar; and man’s experience with faith in God confirms to him that God is full of forgiveness, and He gives generously to His servants; and wisdom requires us to know which way to follow and adhere to.

After this, the True Lord says:

يُؤْتِي ٱلْحِكْمَةَ مَن يَشَآءُۚ وَمَن يُؤْتَ ٱلْحِكْمَةَ فَقَدْ أُوتِيَ خَيْرًا
كَثِيرًاۗ وَمَا يَذَّكَّرُ إِلَّآ أُوْلُواْ ٱلْأَلْبَٰبِ ﴿٢٦٩﴾

and He gives wisdom to whoever He will. Whoever is given wisdom has truly been given much good, but only those with insight bear this in mind [269] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 269)

Wisdom means to put things in their appropriate beneficial places. It is as though the True Lord is saying: Everything I have commanded you to do is wisdom itself because I want to safeguard your worldly lives for those weak offspring whom you will leave behind, and I want to safeguard felicity for you in the Hereafter. So if the believing servant does what God commands him to do, this is putting things in their rightful places, and he would have therefore attained wisdom.

The True Lord wanted to teach man by means of the emotion he feels for his children; for a person might go through times when his own self is of little importance to him, and he is concerned for nothing but his children’s affairs. He might go hungry so that his children can eat, and go unclothed in order to clothe them. We have a clear example in our master Abraham peace be upon him, the Friend of the Most Merciful: his Lord tested him at the beginning of his life by his being burnt in a fire; and because Abraham's faith was strong, God made the fire cool and peaceful.

Towards the end of his life, God tested him with a vision of the sacrifice of his son; and because Abraham's faith was great, he obeyed the commandment of the Most Merciful, Who ransomed Ishmael with a tremendous ram. When a person reaches later life, he becomes more attached to his children than to his own self; and in this way, God advanced His testing of our master Abraham peace be upon him, which is why God wanted to touch this sensitive spot of mankind, instructing those [executors and guardians] to fear [injustice] as if they [themselves] had left weak offspring behind and feared for them. So let them fear God and speak words of appropriate justice (an-Nisa': 9). The True Lord the Most High wants His servants to safeguard their children by doing good deeds and speaking in a just manner.

Another example on how the True Lord protects the wealth of orphans is: In the story of Moses peace be upon him with the righteous servant to whom God had granted special knowledge, we learn that the two went on, till when they came upon some village people, they asked them for food, but those people refused to give them hospitality. And they saw in that village a wall which was on the point of tumbling down, and he erected it, so, Moses protested that had he wished, he surely could have obtained some payment for it (al-Kahf: 77).

Moses peace be upon him did not know what the righteous servant knew that beneath the wall was a treasure belonging to two orphaned boys whose father had been a man of virtue whilst the people of this village were so mean that they refused to give some food to the righteous servant and Moses peace be upon him, which is why it was necessary to erect the wall so that the treasure would not be uncovered in this town of villains who would take it for themselves, preventing the orphans from inheriting the treasure of their father who was a righteous man. So, the True Lord the Most High teaches us to ensure the wellbeing of our children by means of performing righteous actions; and this is wisdom itself, which cannot be attained except by those who have minds capable of penetrating the depths of sound thought.

Our master Al-Hasan Al-Basri gives us an example of righteous action when he said to someone who came to him seeking help, 'Welcome to him who comes to carry my supply to the Hereafter free of charge!’ Our master Al-Hasan Al-Basri was given wisdom that made him view goodness not according to its time, but rather, according to what it would bring at a later time.

I gave the example before of the student who works hard and strives in his studies in order to succeed, while his brother loves to relax and laze around; then we find that the student who worked hard is the one who ascends in society whilst the one who was content to be lazy, becomes a wretch in the society.

After this, the True Lord the Most High says:

وَمَآ أَنفَقْتُم مِّن نَّفَقَةٍ أَوْ نَذَرْتُم مِّن نَّذْرٍ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ
يَعْلَمُهُۥ ۗ وَمَا لِلظَّٰلِمِينَ مِنْ أَنصَارٍ ﴿٢٧٠﴾

Whatever you may give, or vow to give, God knows it well, and those who do wrong will have no one to help them [270]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 270)

We know about spending from before, but what is a vow? A vow means that you bind yourself to undertake some supererogatory act of worship of a kind which God has ordained but which is above that which He has prescribed. If you vow to pray a given number of rak’as (cycles) of prayer every night, this is a vow to do something of a kind which God has ordained since God ordained prayer and made five prayers obligatory, and if you vow to do more than what God made obligatory, this is what a ‘vow’ means. It is said of someone who vows to do something of a kind which God has ordained, but which is above that which He has prescribed, that this is a sign that worship has become sweet for him, and he loves it and yearns for it, and it is a sign that he is close to acknowledging the true due of his Lord, and that his Lord deserves more from him than what He has obliged him to do; it is as though God was merciful with us in what He obliged us to do because had He obliged us to do all that He deserves, none of us would have been able to offer Him His due.

So, when you make a vow, O believing servant, you bind yourself to do something of a kind which God has ordained, but which is above that which He has imposed on you. You have the free choice as to whether to make a vow, or not, but once you have made a vow, it becomes binding. Why? Because you have bound yourself to it, which is why it is prudent for one not to overburden oneself by making numerous vows; for when the time comes to fulfil them, he might not be able to do them.

Close worshippers of God would say to the one who leaves off a vow after having made it: ‘Have you tried out your Lord and found that He is not worthy of your continued devotion?’ And there is not one of us who would dare to assert this – because God is worthy of the deepest devotion. This is why it is better for a person to consider carefully before he vows to do something.

Let us pause to consider the concluding part of this verse: ‘…And for the wrongdoers there are no helpers.’ The wrongdoers are those who wrong themselves because the True Lord tells us that a person’s wrongdoing only harms himself, asserting that God does not do the least wrong to men, but it is men who wrong themselves (Yunus: 44).

One of the most severe ways to wrong oneself is to spend on others in order to be seen and praised by people, or to spend on sinful things, or to fail to live up to a vow; and those who do these things shall have no helpers to defend them from God’s punishment in the Hereafter.

The True Lord then says:

إِن تُبۡدُواْ ٱلصَّدَقَٰتِ فَنِعِمَّا هِيَۖ وَإِن تُخۡفُوهَا وَتُؤۡتُوهَا ٱلۡفُقَرَآءَ فَهُوَ خَيۡرٞ
لَّكُمۡۚ وَيُكَفِّرُ عَنكُم مِّن سَيِّـَٔاتِكُمۡۗ وَٱللَّهُ بِمَا تَعۡمَلُونَ خَبِيرٞ ٢٧١

If you give charity openly, it is good, but if you keep it secret and give to the needy in private, that is better for you, and it will atone for some of your bad deeds. God is well aware of all that you do [271]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 271)

If you openly give charity, what you do is good, as you are thereby giving a good example for others, and you keep resentment away from society. And if you secretly give charity and give it to the poor, God will expiate some of your sins by means of it; and God is aware of the intention behind making charity public or making it secret; and the conclusion of this noble verse serves both the principle of giving charity openly and the principle of giving it secretly. The True Lord knows the intention of the one who gives charity openly; if one is rich, one should give charity openly in order to protect his honour from people casting aspersions on it; for when people know that someone is rich, they must also know how this rich person spends on others; otherwise they might count the wealth that God has given to him without counting how he spends in God's cause. Why? Because God wants to protects people's honour from other people's tongues.

As for it if a person is not known to be rich, it is better that he conceal his charitable acts; and if you give charity publicly in order that people follow your example, as I said, not in order that they see you and praise you, this is also desirable. The True Lord says, '…And God, with what you do, is fully Acquainted,' that is, God rewards according to the intention of the servant for giving openly or secretly.

By examining the verses which concern spending, we find that He the Exalted blocks for the human soul all the avenues to avarice, and cuts off for it all the pretexts it might use to be stingy with what God has given it; and the Creator Who gave the creature what He gave him, requires him to spend. If we consider the matter from the perspective of logic, we find that it is perfectly natural because God does not ask His creatures to spend from what they have created, but rather, He asks them to spend from what He has created for them.

In this existence, when man is asked as an act of faith to spend, this means that he must have something to spend; and he can only have something to spend if he owns that which is beyond his need and the need of his dependents, and this can only come through the fruits of labour. So God's command to the believer to spend, requires that He first commands him to work as best he can, not only as much as he needs to; if every person who could work only worked as much as they needed to, how could those who were unable to work, find the essentials of life? So, the True Lord wants us to work to our full capability in order to be able to support ourselves and those who are in our care, and if we have something more than this, we give it to those who are unable to work.

Someone might say, 'If God wanted to make the hearts of those who spend feel compassion for those who are incapable, why did He not just make the incapable people capable of working as well?' To the one who says this we say: When the True Lord created, He created a universe that is complementary and in harmony, and to which the means of life yielded; and it might happen that man becomes filled with feelings of intransigence and haughtiness by the way the means obey him, and he might believe that he is the originator of all things; when the earth responds to him when he ploughs and sows, and the water responds to him when he lowers his pail, and when all the means respond to him, he might believe that he is the essential element of the universe. So God's will is to make the power which acts upon the means to make them produce – His will is to make this power one of the contingencies of this universe, and not to make it one of man's essential elements; so, sometimes you find that he is capable, whilst at other times, he is incapable. Were man to be intrinsically capable, there would be no incapable people; so, the presence of people who are incapable of working in life alerts people to the fact that they are not essential elements in this universe, and that the One Who gave them ability, can take it from them and return it to others so that the one who was incapable yesterday, becomes capable today, and the one who was capable yesterday, becomes incapable today. In this way, man continues to be aware of the granting power which made him God's vicegerent on earth.

This is why the difference between the believer and the disbeliever in terms of work in life is that they are united in one thing, and then, the believer is unique in another: they are united in that both believers and disbelievers work with life's means in order to obtain sustenance for themselves and their dependants, and this is something shared by the believer and the disbeliever; and the disbeliever restricts himself to this means of work, working only for himself and his dependants.

But the believer shares this aspect with him, and then he goes further in that he works for something else, which is to earn something extra which he can offer to those who are unable to work, hoping for reward for this from God. For this reason, we said before that when the True Lord the Most High spoke about alms-giving, he spoke about it once as being required to be paid, and He spoke about it another time as something which is required as a goal; He describes spenders as those who are doers of alms deeds (al-Mu'minun: 4); He did not say 'those who pay the alms.' The believers do not work for the purpose of paying the alms, rather, they work as much as they can to support themselves and their dependants, and then to earn something extra with which they can pay the alms.

Of alms giving, the True Lord the Most High also said, ‘And perform prayer and give zakat (alms), and whatever good you put forward for yourselves, you shall find it with God. Indeed, God sees what you do’ (al-Baqara: 110). So, the upshot is that the poor-due is something which the believer has in mind when he begins any work, and by this Divine command the poor-due becomes required as a goal; and it is one of the Pillars of Islam by which the believer is distinguished from the disbeliever.

When the True Lord the Most High presented the sources of stinginess in the human soul, He explained that the first thing to which the human soul is exposed is that man fears to spend because it will decrease his possessions; and the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him warned against stinginess when he said, ‘Beware of injustice, for injustice will become darkness on the Day of Resurrection; and beware of stinginess, for stinginess destroyed those who were before you, driving them to the point where they shed their blood and violated their prohibitions.’(1) This is the case, but the True Lord the Most High explains to every believer that it might decrease what you have, but it will give you more from what God has; if it decreases the fruit of your labour, it completes it by what God then, does for you; and when it completes the fruit of your labour by what God does for you, you must stop and compare a power which is incapable and is created with a power which is creating and omnipotent.

He the Exalted draws our attention to one of His creations, the earth - the earth in which we place a single grain – that is, a single seed – from which it gives us in return seven ears, each ear containing a hundred grains. If one looks at first to what he puts into the earth when he ploughs and sows, as a reduction of his stores, he would have never sowed or planted, but he looked at the seven hundred grains which the earth gives him in return for his single grain; this is why he set about planting and ploughing without any reservations: it will give him back many times more than what he gave.If the earth which is a creature of God, gives this much, how much will the Creator of the earth give?

---

(1) Narrated by Muslim.

'The example of those who spend their wealth in the Way of God is like a grain which produces seven ears; in each ear is a hundred grains. And God multiplies [His reward] for whom He wills. And God is All-Encompassing and All Knowing' (al-Baqara: 261) So, by this example, the True Lord blocked one of the avenues for stinginess to the human soul. Something else which these verses touches upon is that a person might be disturbed in his society by a beggar who asks of him, and because of his desire to keep his wealth, he is reluctant to spend, yet, because of his desire to safeguard his reputation in the community, he is reluctant to refuse, and he therefore gives, but does so grudgingly; and perhaps his grumbling might cross the line into chiding and rebuking the one who asked of him; so, in order to treat this kind of situation, the True Lord the Most High said, 'Kind speech and forgiveness are better than charity followed by injury. And God is Free of need, Forbearing' (al-Baqara: 263).

God's words 'Kind speech and forgiveness…' (al-Baqara: 263) indicate that the one who is asked, must have been vexed by the beggar's request, and annoyed by the embarrassment it caused him, and the True Lord asks this person to forgive the one who asks him this offence, if he considers his request to be a misdeed: Kind speech and forgiveness are better than charity followed by injury. And God is Free of need, Forbearing (al-Baqara: 263).

After this, the True Lord turns to the matter of the spender reminding the receiver of his charity of his generosity towards him which spoils the act of giving because it puts the recipient in a position of degradation and humiliation, and the giver wants to assume the position of the pride of the giver and the haughty spender. So God tells the spender: If you do this, the benefit of your charity will go to the hands of the other so he will benefit, whilst you will be the loser because you will benefit nothing from this where the one who asks, will benefit from it. So for your own sake, do not follow up your acts of charity by reminding of your benevolence, or hurting the feelings of the recipient.

Then, the True Lord comes to treat another one of the avenues of stinginess to the human soul which is that a person might like to give, but when he stretches his hand out to give, he finds it difficult to spend from the good things he possesses, so, he keeps them for himself and then, takes the things which he would be glad to part with and gives them away as charity; and He the Exalted warns us against doing this by saying, '…And do not seek the defective therefrom to spend [from that in charity] while you would not take it [yourself] except with closed eyes…' (al-Baqara: 267).

That is, if such a thing were given to you, you would only accept it whilst averting your eyes and reluctantly tolerating to take it, as though you do not want to look at its flaws as you take it. If you would not accept something for yourself, it is not right that you should accept it for someone else.

Then, after speaking about the avenues for stinginess to the human soul, the Quran then showed us that the one who opens these avenues and maintains them is none other than Satan: 'Satan threatens you with poverty and orders you to immorality, while God promises you forgiveness from Him and bounty; and God is All-Encompassing, All Knowing' (al-Baqara: 268).

If you see Satan's threat as being equal to God's promise to you of goodly acceptance, this will be a great loss and a misfortune for you; so, revise your faith; and you need to see the threat of Satan as obliterated before God's promise to you of forgiveness and bounty.

After this, He spoke of the time of charity and the form of giving it – whether public or private – and the intention you have is the criterion for preferring one act to another: if you are a rich man, protect your honour from being called into disrepute by people, and give the prescribed alms charity publicly to safeguard your honour from people's gossiping; and if you want to give extra supererogatory charity, there is nothing to stop you from concealing it so that your left hand does not know what your right hand has given. It is related that Ibn Abbas God be pleased with them said, 'Giving voluntary acts of charity privately is seventy times better than giving it publicly; and giving prescribed charity publicly is twenty-five times better than giving it privately.'

It is as though God has opened the way of the human soul to all the avenues of giving, and blocked up all the avenues of stinginess. Consider, after this, how the True Lord protects the weak believers by placing them in the care of the strong believers. Know, as a believing servant, that when you receive a ruling from God, do not think that it will be required from you always; but rather, you must receive the ruling as though it might become required for your benefit due to the vicissitudes of time; if you are rich, do not think that God will always be asking of you, but rather bear in mind that if the vicissitudes of life make it so you become poor, the ruling will be required for your benefit. Consider that just as the ruling is required from you now because you are rich, it may well be required from others for your benefit if vicissitudes should befall you and make you poor.

So, legislation is both for you and upon you; do not think then that it is always upon you because if you consider that it is always upon you, you thereby detach yourself from the vicissitudes of life; and the vicissitudes of life are in motion, and no one can free himself from them. This is why He the Exalted commands the believer to look after his fellow believer.

Consider the ambitions for faith in the human soul, even in the case of those who do not share your faith. If you are required to give obligatory charity to your fellow believer, it is also required from you to give voluntarily to those who are not believers. This is a distinction of Islam which is not found in other religions, which is that it protects the non-believer; for this reason, the True Lord says:

لَّيْسَ عَلَيْكَ هُدَىٰهُمْ وَلَٰكِنَّ ٱللَّهَ يَهْدِى مَن يَشَآءُ ۗ وَمَا تُنفِقُوا۟
مِنْ خَيْرٍ فَلِأَنفُسِكُمْ ۚ وَمَا تُنفِقُونَ إِلَّا ٱبْتِغَآءَ وَجْهِ ٱللَّهِ ۚ وَمَا
تُنفِقُوا۟ مِنْ خَيْرٍ يُوَفَّ إِلَيْكُمْ وَأَنتُمْ لَا تُظْلَمُونَ ﴿٢٧٢﴾

It is not for you [Prophet] to guide them; it is God who guides whoever He will. Whatever charity you give benefits your own soul, provided you do it for the sake of God. Whatever you give will be repaid to you in full, and you will not be wronged [272] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 272)

What is the root of this matter? The root of this matter is that some of the first people to embrace Islam had relatives who had not done so, and these relatives were poor, and the Muslims would have liked to give these poor relatives some of their wealth, but they were reluctant to do so without first asking the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him about it, which they did.

Qutayla, mother of Asma' God be pleased with her daughter of Abu Bakr God be pleased with him, was still a disbeliever at the time, and Asma' God be pleased with her asked the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him for permission to give some of her wealth to her mother so that she could live and have sustenance. Upon this, the True Lord the Most High revealed His ruling: ‘Not upon you is [responsibility for] their guidance, but God guides whom He wills….’

It is narrated that Asma’ bint Abu Bakr God be pleased with them relates, ‘My mother came to me during the time of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him, and she was still a pagan, so, I asked the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him, ‘My mother has come to me pleading her need, so, can I keep ties with my mother?’ He replied, ‘Yes, keep ties with your mother.’(1) Some of the believers thought of refusing to give to their relatives who had not yet believed to push them to belief, but the Most Merciful and Dispenser of Mercy sent down the noble words: ‘Not upon you is [responsibility for] their guidance, but God guides whom He wills….’

It is the sublime religion, a religion which wants us to support the creatures on earth from Lordly bestowal even if they do not join with us in Divine bestowal; for Divine Bestowal is to command moral responsibility, whilst Lordly Bestowal is to provide and instruct.

Everyone on earth needs to be provided for and instructed because we know that no one in the whole world called himself into existence, but rather, his Creator called him forth; and as long as the Most Generous Creator is the One Who called forth His servant, whether believer or disbeliever, He has undertaken to provide for him. Provision is one thing, and belief in God is another, and therefore the True Lord says, ‘Not upon you is [responsibility for] their guidance, but God guides whom He wills….’

In an alternative interpretation of the verse at hand, we say that when the verse which encouraged spending was revealed, perhaps some people were hesitant, and perhaps some of the believers only gave away the less valuable of their possessions.

If Islam came to confront the human soul with all of its different states and notions, it is not surprising that it should attempt to cure them of this kind of behaviour and correct them if a notion came to them which adversely affected their conduct as believers. The Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him loved it when any command was sent down that the believers immediately accepted it keenly; and if he saw any reluctance or neglect in this regard, he would be saddened; so, God explained things to him: Your responsibility is to convey to them God's command to spend; after that, it is not your responsibility to make them obey. 'Not upon you is [responsibility for] their guidance, but God guides whom He wills….'

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim

Someone might say: 'As long as God is the One who guides, we must leave people as they are, whether they are believers or disbelievers, and all we have to do is convey the message.' We say to those who have this opinion: 'Pay attention to utterances of the Quran concerning one thing, which is the thing we are currently examining, namely guidance. Let us consider all the verses which mention this, and we will find that those who consider that guidance is only from God, and that He does not have the right to punish a sinner, have their point of view; and those who say that He the Exalted does have the right to punish them because He has given them free will, also have a point of view; so, what is the point of view which will allow us to understand both sides of this matter?

When the True Lord the Most High speaks in His Quran, His revealed Word, He asks us to meditate on it and try to understand it; and the meaning of tadabbur ('meditating'/'trying to understand') is that we do not just look at the face of the text, but we try to look at what lies behind the text – or read between the lines so to speak (tadabbur literally means 'to look at the back of something'); that is, do not just look at the face, but look at what lies opposite to the face, namely the back. We find this instruction in God's words encouraging people to meditate and try to understand this Quran (an-Nisa': 82).

Now, for the issue at hand: guidance: About the tribe of Thamud, the True Lord the Most High says that He guided them, but they chose blindness over guidance (Fussilat: 17).

How could it be that God guided them, and then, they preferred blindness to guidance? The expression 'He guided them' here means that He pointed to them the way of goodness; and in doing so, He left them the power to decide between alternatives, so, they had the ability to choose this or that.

And when God guided them and directed them, they preferred blindness to guidance. God speaks to His Messenger in two other places in the Noble Quran about this. In the first, He tells him that indeed he cannot guide aright everyone whom he loves (al-Qasas: 56), thus negating that He peace and blessings be upon him guides; yet, in the second verse, the True Lord affirms that the Messenger does guide where He says that he assuredly guides to the straight way (ash-Shura: 52).

How could it be that God affirms a single action for a single person and then negate the very same action for the very same person? We say to this: The Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him is obliged to direct people to the Way of God; but he is not obliged to force them to follow the Way of God because this is not his job. When God said that he cannot guide whom he loves, this means: You cannot force and compel those whom you love, but rather, he assuredly guides by giving direction only; it is for you to deliver the message, and for Us to deliver the Reckoning.

So, the words of the True Lord 'Not upon you is [responsibility for] their guidance, but God guides whom He wills….' do not constitute evidence for the compelled faith by which some of these morally dissolute people want to justify their psychological separation from God's way. We say to such people: There is a difference between the guidance of direction and the guidance of assistance; God guides both the believer and the disbeliever in that He points to them the right way, but He guides those who have faith in Him with the guidance of assistance, the guidance of providential support, and the guidance of making acts of obedience to Him seem easier to perform.

God says, 'Not upon you is [responsibility for] their guidance, but God guides whom He wills. And whatever good you [O believers] spend is for yourselves….' This is a way of dealing with stinginess logically; everything a person gives will bring benefit to him; the only one who gives and receives no benefit by giving, is God: He Alone does not benefit from what He gives to His creatures, since He the Exalted has possessed all the Attributes of Perfection from pre-eternity, from before He created all creation. What a person gives brings him benefit, and what our Lord gives brings benefit to us all.

This is why one of the early Muslims who possessed the insight of faith said, ‘I have never done any good for anyone.’ They said to him, ‘Do you say this, when you did such-and-such for so-and-so, and such-and-such for so-and-so, and such-and-such for so-and-so?’ He said, ‘I only did it for myself.’ It is as though he saw, when he did things for others, that he was really doing it for himself. We said before, that Al-Hasan AL-Basri – who had insightful knowledge of God – used, when someone would come begging from him, to smile and greet them warmly, saying: ‘Welcome to him who comes to carry my supplies to the Hereafter free of charge!’

So, he considered that they were giving to him even as they took from him. The True Lord the Most High discusses this matter by saying, ‘…And whatever good you [O believers] spend is for yourselves…’, that is, beware of thinking that I ask you to give to others; I have asked you to spend in order that I shall increase you in spending and giving. Then He says, ‘…And whatever you spend of good – it will be fully repaid to you….’ The word yuwaffa used in the verse means to repay in full. Do not think that you are spending on one who might be ungrateful for the good you have done; for whatever good you spend, God knows of it. So spend upon those who are ungrateful, not those who praise you in return; because by doing this, you take your reward from the one who praises you, and you will have no reward with God.

I always used to say to those who complain of people being ungrateful for favours and forgetting acts of kindness: You deserve this because you had them on your minds when you spent on them; if you had kept God in mind, this would never have happened. Then God says, ‘…And whatever good you [O believers] spend is for yourselves, and you do not spend except seeking the Face of God….’ Is this verse meant to praise the deeds of the believers, or it is a command in the form of a statement?

It is both at the same time and it means, ‘Spend seeking the Face of God,’ ‘…And whatever good you [O believers] spend is for yourselves, and you do not spend except seeking the Face of God. And whatever you spend of good – it will be fully repaid to you, and you will not be wronged.’ You shall not be wronged by creatures, nor shall you be wronged by the Creator; as for the creatures, you will have exonerated your religion and your honour by giving up God’s rights from your wealth, so, no one will be able to say anything offensive about you; and as for God, He the Exalted will repay what you have spent in goodness many times over.

After this, the True Lord the Most High speaks about one of the ways of spending on others which was in the early days of Islam:

لِلْفُقَرَآءِ ٱلَّذِينَ أُحْصِرُوا۟ فِى سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ لَا يَسْتَطِيعُونَ ضَرْبًا فِى
ٱلْأَرْضِ يَحْسَبُهُمُ ٱلْجَاهِلُ أَغْنِيَآءَ مِنَ ٱلتَّعَفُّفِ تَعْرِفُهُم بِسِيمَٰهُمْ لَا
يَسْـَٔلُونَ ٱلنَّاسَ إِلْحَافًا ۗ وَمَا تُنفِقُوا۟ مِنْ خَيْرٍ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ بِهِۦ عَلِيمٌ ﴿٢٧٣﴾

[Give] to those needy who are wholly occupied in God’s way and cannot travel in the land [for trade]. The unknowing might think them rich because of their self- restraint, but you will recognize them by their characteristic of not begging persistently. God is well aware of any good you give [273]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 273)

When we hear a noble verse beginning with a preposition and its object, we know that something must be linked to this. So what does the phrase ‘for the poor’ stand for? Here, it stands for charity, i.e. spending upon the needy who are wholly restricted in the way of God. If we ask what ‘restricted’ (’uhsiru) means, we find that in Arabic we have the words hasar and ahsar, both of which imply preventing or hindering, except that sometimes hindering comes in a form which you are unable to deal with, whilst at other times, it comes in a form you are able to deal with.

If someone is ill, for example, and is therefore held back from travelling about the land, does he have the ability to do so? No; but if someone wants to travel about the land, but a human being like him stops him from doing so, he is thereby prevented. So in both cases, there is hindering, and it might be within the person himself, or it might be the result of the action of someone else. They were ‘restricted in the Way of God’ and held back because the disbelievers restricted the means of living for them; or they wrapped themselves up in struggling in God’s cause and did not want to occupy themselves with anything else because Islam was still in need of people to struggle. These were the ‘People of the Ledge’, ‘…the poor who have been restricted in the Way of God, unable to move about in the land [in search of livelihood]….’ And their inability to do so, stemmed from something which was out of their control, or else from something which they intended, namely to be prepared for struggling in God’s Way; both explanations are possible.

The Helpers (Medinan Muslims/Al-ansar) would bring dates and leave them on their stalks, and hang them on ropes suspended from the pillars of the mosque, and whenever one of the People of the Ledge was hungry, he would take his staff and strike the date stalk so that some dates would fall down for him to eat. Some people would bring poor quality dates and put them there, and this is what God referred to when He said, ‘…And do not seek the defective therefrom to spend [from that in charity] while you would not take it [yourself] except with closed eyes…’ (al-Baqara: 267).

If we consider the words of the True Lord ‘…unable to move about in the land [in search of livelihood]…’ we notice that the word in the verse that means ‘move about’ is darb, which ordinarily means ‘to strike something firmly’; so what does it mean to ‘(darb) about in the land?’ The True Lord wants to make it clear to us that struggling in life must be done with one’s utmost strength; and when you go about the earth, you must strike it with the plough, and strike it with the seeds; do not do things half-heartedly and feebly. For this reason, the True Lord says that He it is Who has made the earth easy to live upon; and He instructs us to go about, then, in all its regions, and eat of the sustenance which He provides; but to always bear in mind that to Him we shall be resurrected (al-Mulk: 15).

The earth has been subjugated by the True Lord the Most High for man so that he can travel upon it and consume the provision God gives him from it. About those who, being restricted in the Way of God, are unable to move about in the land, God the Most High says that ‘…An ignorant [person] would think them self-sufficient because of their restraint and modesty….’ This means that the one who is ignorant of their state might imagine them to be rich, and the reason he might think this is that they refrain from begging; and since this means that they abstain from begging, God then says, ‘…you will know them by their [characteristic] mark: They do not ask people with importunity [or at all]….’ A characteristic mark is a distinguishing sign that shows the state of the one marked by it. It is as though you will find them to be humble, meek, and of lowly appearance even if they do not beg or ask for anything, but you will know from their condition that they deserve to be spent upon. They abstain from begging; and God then says, '…They do not ask people with importunity [or at all]….' It is as though He allowed begging, but did not allow begging accompanied by harassment and importunity; if they simply asked without any harassment and importunity, would this not be a sign that they were not wealthy? Yes; but He said, '…An ignorant [person] would think them self-sufficient because of their restraint and modesty….' So, there is no begging – no begging at all; so, there is the more reason that there is no importunity in begging, which is proved by the fact that God says, '…you will know them by their [characteristic] mark….' If they begged, we would recognise them by their begging. The verse shows us that the thing which is negated here is begging in itself. As for the word 'importunity,' it is used here to give a particular meaning which is intended by the inimitable rhetorical style of the Quran. What is it?

A 'characteristic mark' (sima), as we said, is a distinguishing sign that shows the state of the one marked by it, so, it is as though you will find them to be humble, meek, and of lowly appearance even if they do not beg. That is, you will recognise them from their poor condition.

If the person were to actually beg after all this, his begging would be considered importune because his state alone should be enough to indicate his need; and as long as his state indicates his need, it is most likely that he will find someone who will alleviate him of the need to beg; so, if he merely asks, it will be as though he has been persistent and importune in his request.

Furthermore, the True Lord wants the believer to have a penetrating insight with respect to his brother so that he can determine his state just by looking at him and thereby save him the need to beg; for if you recognise the 'characteristic mark,' you must be insightful and discerning, but if you do not recognise the 'characteristic mark' and wait for him to speak to you and ask of you, you suffer from a deficiency of perception. He the Exalted wants the believer to be perceptive so that he can discern from the look of his fellow believers and see which of them displays the anxiety of need and which of them shows the concerns of want; and if he recognises this, he will have the insightful perception of faith.

We can learn from a true story of relevance to our topic: Someone knocked on the door of a God-loving man; he answered then, went back inside and brought out something and gave it to him; then, he went back in, weeping. His wife asked him, ‘Why do you weep?’ He said, ‘So-and-so knocked on my door.’ She said, ‘And you gave him something, so, why do you weep?’ He replied, ‘Because I left him until he had to ask of me.’

This Knower of God wept because he felt the responsibility of what he should have known by his insight, and that he should have been aware of the affairs of his brethren. This is why God ordained the gatherings on Friday so that a person can be aware of the absence of any of his brethren – ‘Why did he not come? Is he ill? Has something bad befallen him?’ – and in order that he does not have to leave them until they humiliate themselves and ask of him; and when he does this, he possesses the insightful perception of faith.

‘…And whatever you spend of good – indeed, God is Knowing of it….’ You must know that before you gave, God knew that you would give, and He has the whole matter recorded in a balance, and all of the actions of His creatures are in accordance with His predestination, and what He destined in pre-eternity will inevitably come to pass; and He the Exalted destined it because He knew that His servant would do it, and indeed he did. Every action has a time in which to occur and a form in which to occur, and the time is either by night, or by day.

Then, the True Lord the Most High says by way of clarifying the different forms of spending and the times in which they occur:

ٱلَّذِينَ يُنفِقُونَ أَمْوَٰلَهُم بِٱلَّيْلِ وَٱلنَّهَارِ سِرًّا وَعَلَانِيَةً فَلَهُمْ
أَجْرُهُمْ عِندَ رَبِّهِمْ وَلَا خَوْفٌ عَلَيْهِمْ وَلَا هُمْ يَحْزَنُونَ ﴿٢٧٤﴾

Those who give, out of their own possessions, by night and by day, in private and in public, will have their reward with their Lord: no fear for them, nor will they grieve [274]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 274)

The act of spending will necessarily take one of two forms: either in private or in public; and the time will be either by night or by day. God confined the time and state to two things. With respect to time, it is night or day; so, do not hold back something which you want to give and say, ‘I will give it by day or by night because this is better,’ thereby giving yourself an excuse for tardiness in giving it. The True Lord wants you to spend on the needy person whether by night or by day. With respect to mode, it is either private, or public. The question of whether the time is night or day, or of whether the mode is private, or public, has nothing to do with the sincerity of intention in the act of giving.

God says, ‘Those who spend their wealth [in charity] by night and by day, in private and in public – they will have their reward with their Lord….’ Did the verse say ‘Those who spend their possessions by night, or by day’? No; we are all asked to make our spending both by night and by day, and it said ‘in private and in public’; so, spend by night, and spend by day, and spend in private, and spend in public; do not limit spending to night, or to day, nor to any particular time, mode, or state.

The True Lord the Most High broadened the time of spending to encompass both night and day, and also broadened the mode of spending to include both private and public, in order that spending will take place at all times and in all forms; and here, the True Lord the Most High says that those who do so ‘…will have their reward with their Lord….’ These words refer to all of those who spend, whether by night or by day, and whether privately or publicly.

Nevertheless, some scholars say that these words were revealed concerning a specific event, which was that Imam Ali God be pleased with him had four dirhams, and he gave one of them in charity by day, another by night, another in private, and another in public, and this verse was revealed about this act; though the words ‘will have their’ refer to the general meaning, not the particular cause; it is as though the reward which God the Most High associates with this act applies universally to all who do it.

When God says, ‘…they will have their reward with their Lord…’, we find the word ‘reward’ (ajr) here gives us an image of the position of the believer regarding all acts of spending, since a reward is only given for a deed: a thing has its price, and a deed has its reward. When you give someone a reward, this means they have made some effort for you, and this effort might have produced something of value. God’s words ‘…they will have their reward with their

Lord…' indicate that the believer must consider everything which he gains from his work as something which God wants him to spend from.

God does not give him the price of what he spends, but rather, God gives him the reward for his deed. Why? Because the believer who goes about the earth, plans with his mind, and the mind was created by God, and he implements the plan which he makes with his mind by means of his energy and his limbs, which were also created by God; and he acts with the material on which he works, which was also all created by God. So what part of all this belongs to the person? Not the mind with which he plans, neither the energy with which he acts, nor the material upon which he works, for they all belong to God. So you only have the reward for you work because you use a mind which was created by God, with energy created by God, on materials created by God; and if anything is produced from all this which God wants to take from you and give to your needy, incapacitated brother, He will give you the reward of your work, not the price of your work. Yet, if the one who is equal to you in creation, namely your fellow man, takes from you the fruit of your labour, he gives you the price of that which he takes from you. So from the equal creature, it is a 'price', and from the Most High Creator it is a 'reward' because you do not own any part of all this.

After this, He says, '…And no fear will there be on them, nor will they grieve.' Fear means the apprehension of something which may come; so, who fears here? And what is feared? And what is feared for? And from whom do they need not have fear?

It might be that '…no fear will there be on them…' means fear of their own selves, for a student might fear for himself that he will fail, in which case it is the same person that fears and is also feared for; it is fearful now, and feared for later. When the student fears that he will fail, it is not said that the one who fears is the same as the thing which is feared because they are each in a different state.

Or alternatively, '…no fear will there be on them…' might mean fear of someone else because many rich people may be surrounded by fools who, when they see these rich people sharing their wealth generously with others, encourage them to hold back out of fear that they will become poor, perhaps by saying to them, 'Prepare for the future because your children will live on after you.' But good people do not listen to such fools. So, '…no fear will there be on them…' either from themselves or from the fools around them; and the True Lord continues: '…nor will they grieve….' That is, they need have no fear now, nor shall they grieve when they come face to face with the realities of the goodness which God the Most High held in store for them; rather, they will rejoice.

After this, the True Lord speaks about one of the most critical issues of our times, which the Quran needed to deal with since it speaks about spending and charity, and there is no doubt that this necessitates one who spends, and one who is spent upon because he is incapable of working. Suppose that the people are all stingy and they do not spend; what will this incapable person do if he finds nothing? His position will be one of two things: he will go and take a loan, and if he finds no one to lend him anything, he will take an interest-bearing loan; otherwise, how will he live?

So, the verses which we are currently examining deal with the economic structure of a generous Islamic community, or a miserly Islamic community. Why? Because the One Who created man made a precise account for man so that if you calculate what those who are well-off are obliged to pay for the poor-due, and you calculate the needs of all those who are naturally unable to work, you will find that the incapable people need exactly what the capable people are obliged to give, no more, no less. If not, there would be a mistake – God forbid – in the reckoning of the Creator, and this could never be the case.

When we look at the makeup of societies, we find that a rich person may feel that he can no longer remain in a particular place, and so he moves to a new place, and the people are amazed, wondering why he left the place when he had ease, comfort and wealth. Were he poor, we would say that he went to seek wealth; but why did he leave this place when he already had wealth, and he had such an easy life? They do not realise that when God created the creation, He managed His universe by subjugating and directing the thoughts which occur to people's minds; you find that he felt he could no longer remain in his place, and his soul was filled with worry, so he decided to go somewhere else.

If we had a precise instrument of calculation, and we counted the needy people in the area from which this person moved, we would find that there was an amount of wealth which was extraneous to the needs of those who lived in this area; therefore, God directed him to another place which required precisely this amount. In this way, we find that the exchange is controlled. So if you see a needy person, or a person who wants to deal in usury, know that there is a deficiency in the implementation of God’s specified and clear rights (the rights of the needy that God prescribed as zakat in the money of the wealthy) – and I do not say God’s unspecified rights (charity beyond the prescribed zakat) – that is, the wealthy person has selfishly withheld that which he is obliged to spend on the needy.

When the Quran addresses this issue, it addresses it in a way which shows the ugliness of usurious transactions in a way that makes the well-formed human soul repulsed by it. He the Exalted says:

ٱلَّذِينَ يَأۡكُلُونَ ٱلرِّبَوٰاْ لَا يَقُومُونَ إِلَّا كَمَا يَقُومُ ٱلَّذِى يَتَخَبَّطُهُ ٱلشَّيۡطَٰنُ
مِنَ ٱلۡمَسِّۚ ذَٰلِكَ بِأَنَّهُمۡ قَالُوٓاْ إِنَّمَا ٱلۡبَيۡعُ مِثۡلُ ٱلرِّبَوٰاْۗ وَأَحَلَّ ٱللَّهُ ٱلۡبَيۡعَ وَحَرَّمَ
ٱلرِّبَوٰاْۚ فَمَن جَآءَهُۥ مَوۡعِظَةٞ مِّن رَّبِّهِۦ فَٱنتَهَىٰ فَلَهُۥ مَا سَلَفَ وَأَمۡرُهُۥٓ إِلَى ٱللَّهِۖ وَمَنۡ
عَادَ فَأُوْلَٰٓئِكَ أَصۡحَٰبُ ٱلنَّارِۖ هُمۡ فِيهَا خَٰلِدُونَ ٢٧٥

But those who take usury will rise up on the Day of Resurrection like someone tormented by Satan’s touch. That is because they say, ‘Trade and usury are the same,’ but God has allowed trade and forbidden usury. Whoever, on receiving God’s warning, stops taking usury may keep his past gains – God will be his judge – but whoever goes back to usury will be an inhabitant of the Fire, there to remain [275]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 275)

Look at the word ‘consume.’ Are all the needs of life about eating? No; the needs of life are many, and eating is just one of them, but it is the most important of them because it is the means of preserving life. ‘Usury’ means that which is extraneous, and as long as it is extraneous, this means that it does not need to be consumed, so, this is a way of censuring it. The True Lord wants to show the ugliness of this matter, so, He says that such people have a characteristic mark; the scholars speculate as to whether this mark is something in the Hereafter which marks them out at the Resurrection, as the True Lord says that all who were lost in sin shall by their marks be known (ar-Rahman: 41).

Those who did not pray will have a special mark, and those who did not pay the poor-due will have a different special mark so that when you see them, you will know them by their marks, and know which type of sinners they are. It is as though when they arise on the Day of Resurrection, they will arise in a demented state like the one whom Satan confounds with his touch and thereby makes him demented or, alternatively, it might be that this will happen to them even in this world. Let us look into this matter: 'Those who consume usury cannot stand [on the Day of Resurrection] except as one stands who is being confounded and touched by Satan into insanity….' We want to know about the words 'confounded,' 'Satan,' and 'touch.' To be confounded (takhabbut) means to walk unsteadily and erratically, and you say 'So-and-so is confounded' when his movements are not coherent, and not logical, but rather are movements without any order; this is to be confounded. 'Satan' is a species of God's creation, because God told us that He created man and jinn kind; some of the jinn are devils, whilst others are just jinn, and Satan is the sinner of the jinn. We have not seen Satan, but we know of him because the True Lord, in whom we believe, has told us of him saying: I have hidden creatures, which is why I called them 'jinn' – since the word jann means 'concealed,' and the word majnoon ('insane') means someone whose mind is covered – and the sinner from amongst these creatures is named Satan.

So, our belief in him is not based on sensation, but rather, on our faith in the unseen things of which He in whom we believe has told us. When we speak about something called 'belief,' we must be aware that it is concerned with things which cannot be tangibly sensed; for you are not asked to 'believe' in tangible things since you can see them for yourself. I do not say, 'I believe that the light is turned on now,' and I do not 'believe' that we are all gathered in the mosque now; I do not say this because it is something we can tangibly sense and witness. So matters of belief are connected to the Unseen such as belief in the existence of angels. Since we believe in the Unseen, we find that the True Lord the Most High gives us an image of Satan, but when He gives us an image of Satan or of Satan's head which identifies him just as our heads identify us, He the Exalted speaks of the tree of 'Zaqqum,' saying that it is a tree that grows in the very heart of the blazing fire of hell; its fruit looks like satans' heads (as-Saffat: 64-65).

The tree of Zaqqum is in the Hereafter in Hell, so, we cannot see it, and we cannot see the heads of the devils; then why would God compare what we have not seen to something else we have not seen, comparing something unknown to something else unknown? We say: Yes, and this is an intentional aspect of the inimitable nature of the Quran; the image of Satan is ugly when imagined, which is borne out by the fact that if you asked the world's cartoonists to draw a picture of Satan, without giving them any particular guidelines, they would all draw the ugliest image they could imagine, each one depicting him from a certain perspective of ugliness so that if you collected all the pictures, no two of them would be alike. Each artist would make the picture he drew ugly; and when we give the prize for the best depiction of Satan, will we give it to the most beautiful picture, or the ugliest? We will give the prize to whoever drew the ugliest picture. So the representative image of Satan is a vile and ugly image; and if there were only a single image of this ugliness, perhaps people might differ about it; perhaps it would be ugly for you, but not ugly for someone else. But when God frees people's imaginations to envisage this ugliness, it will be subjective and clear for every person, which will make the image more perfect and complete; the way to perfection and completion is for the archetype of ugliness to be present in every image.

The True Lord says '…who is being confounded and touched by Satan into insanity....' We said that Satan is the sinful jinn, and we said that our Lord the Most High told us many times that devils have connections and links with many human beings and that certain kinds of humans would seek refuge with certain kinds of jinn: but these only increased their confusion (al-Jinn: 6).

They '…cannot stand [on the Day of Resurrection] except as one stands who is being confounded and touched by Satan into insanity….' It is as though Satan has touched the human constitution in such a way as to disrupt the balance of his dispositions; for the dispositions of human constitution are balanced with one another, and each motion they make has its balance, and if Satan touches him, the equilibrium of his dispositions is disturbed; the psychological dispositions are unbalanced and inharmonious with one another, so, his actions are disorderly and illogical. What does this image have to do with usurious transactions? If we consider that it is a mark in the Hereafter, it means that if you see someone confounded in the Hereafter, it means that he was one of those who dealt in usury; and in this world too, you find that his actions are illogical and hysterical. How so?

Look at the world today. God created the world in a state of integration; one person enjoys certain abilities and talents, whilst another person has abilities and talents of another kind so that the one who has these abilities, requires the one who has those abilities, and existence is therefore perfected. If every person was simply a repeated unit, everyone would be independent of everyone else; and if everyone had equal talents, people would not need one other. But talents are different because if you are good at one of life's arts, another person will be good at another art which you require; and if they need you for what you excel in, you need them for what they excel in; and in this way, the world is integrated. Likewise, God created the world with hot areas, and cold areas, and mineral-bearing areas, and arable areas so that the world would have to integrate, and everyone in the world would have to live with one another; for this reason, the True Lord says in the chapter of ar-Rahman that He had spread out the earth for all human beings (ar-Rahman: 10).

He spread it out – for whom? And the earth – which earth? And which human beings? 'The earth' means all the planet earth, and 'human beings' means all human beings; so, if it is restricted by barriers, it will be spoiled. Preventing man from moving from one place to another spoils man's motions in the world; a person might want to move to a virgin land to thrive thereupon, but the inhabitants of this land refuse this; yet, if the earth, all the earth, was for human beings, all human beings, if there was no work to be found in one place, you could go somewhere else without any restrictions – these restrictions which have come from temporal powers which seek to claim places for themselves; and this is what spoils the world. There are areas which suffer from food shortages, and areas which suffer from labour shortages so that good arable land is not worked; if all of the earth was for all human creatures, there would be no deficits.

We notice what they speak of 'overpopulation' or 'population explosions,' whilst there are other places which are in need of inhabitants, and there are people in need of places to live comfortably. So why does this lack of equilibrium occur? This lack of equilibrium is the result of the fact that human behaviour is illogical in this universe. The universe in which we live has seen all kinds of intellectual advances, and innovative ambitions have risen to the celestial bodies and invaded outer space, and in every house, there are devices of luxury; does logic not dictate that the world should be living in happiness and comfort?

Logic dictates that the world should be living in comfort and ease because everyday it invents things which allow it to produce more with less effort and in less time; what more do we want? But is the world in which we live in logical line with this reality? No, but rather, we find that even in the wealthiest and most economically powerful nation in the world, the people suffer from anxiety, and it is filled with conflict, and perversion is widespread throughout it, and it suffers from a high level of mental illness in its population.

So, the world is not logical, and this confusion affirms what the True Lord says, '…except as one stands who is being confounded and touched by Satan into insanity….' This hysterical activity in the world shows that the world is not comfortable, and not in harmony with its ambitions and innovations.

Should it not have been incumbent on the world, considering its intellectual advances, to search for the reason for this, and to know why we undergo all this suffering when we have these innovative ambitions? They should indeed have searched; for the affliction is general, and it does not affect underdeveloped and developing nations alone, but rather, it is also present in developed nations. Intellectuals should have held conferences to look into this concern; and since the problem is universal and affects all nations, both developed and developing, we must look for a shared cause, not look for a cause which might be true of some people but not of others. If we had searched, we would have said: It exists in this environment, and also exists in all other environments, so, there must be a common factor.

The kinds of provision which exists in this universe are two: there is provision which is directly benefitted from, and provision which is the means of attaining that which is directly benefitted from. I eat a slice of bread, and this is direct provision; and I drink a cup of water, and this is direct provision; and I wear clothes, and this is also direct provision; and I live in a house, and this fourth thing is also direct provision; and I turn on the light, and this is direct provision. But money brings direct provision, and cannot serve in the stead of direct provision. If I have a mountain of gold and I am hungry, what good is it to me? So, bread is better than it. This is direct provision; with money or gold I can buy this and that, but it cannot replace them for me.

A time has come when people think that money is everything so that it has become a goal, and people have become attached to it. Yet, the truth is that money is not a goal, and it is no good making it into a goal; rather, it is a means. If its nature as a means is lost, and it becomes a goal, it will inevitably corrupt the world; the cause of the entire world's corruption, with respect to the common factor, is money now that it has become a goal instead of a means.

The True Lord the Most High wants to purify people's economic life in a way which conserves the majority of that which they eat, drink and wear so that their actions will issue from cells which are faithful, pure and clean; since that which issues forth from a cell which is faithful, pure, and clean, can only lead to that which is good.

It is amazing that we find that the people who invented the usurious banking system for us now are trying their utmost to be rid of it – not because they see that getting rid of it, will be a religious purification, but because they see that all of life's evils are the result of this usury. This cry is not something new occurring for the first time in our current times, but is rather old: in 1950, the global economist Schacht, having seen the imbalance of the system in his native country Germany and throughout the world, made a report saying that all of this corruption, was caused by the usurious banking system, and that this system assured that the rich would get richer; and as long as this system assured that the rich would get richer, from where would their extra riches come? Without doubt, they would become richer to the detriment of the poor. So this would lead to a situation where all wealth would end up in the hands of a minority in the world, which would determine everything about the world's future, especially its moral future. Why? Because the ones who love to invest money, consider nothing but financial benefit, and then, manage projects which will achieve financial gains for them. Another economist named Keynes, a leader of the 'free-market' theory of world economics, made his famous statement that wealth will not perform its function in life unless interest rates are lowered to zero which would mean that there would be no usury.

If we look at the procedure of a usurious contract in itself, we find that it is a false contract; for every contract is only made in order to protect the two contracting parties, and usurious contracts only protect the lending party. There is also another moral issue, which is that a person can only give usury if he possesses wealth which is extraneous to his needs.

Yet, a person only takes an interest-bearing loan if he is in need, so, look at the moral degeneracy of the world: the poor needy person who does not have enough to satiate his hunger and his need, is forced to take a loan, and yet, this poor needy person must then repay the principal and more besides to the one who is rich and free of need.

This is a moral degeneracy which will create resentment in society, and create bitterness in society, and it will spell the end of kindness and devalue it among people, and compassion in society will disappear. Whenever a poor person sees a rich person who has wealth, and the rich person stipulates to the poor needy person that he must repay what he takes from him and more besides, what will this do to the feelings and emotions of the poor person? It would have been enough for the rich person to give to the poor person and then, to take back later, what he gave him; but the usurious rich person wants the poor person to repay what he took and more besides. Some people are used to making excuses and say: The Quranic text only talks about usury which demands repayments which are doubled and redoubled, so, if we limit it so that it does not reach the level of redoubling, it will not be unlawful!

That is, they wanted to justify giving a poor person money and then, making him pay back only double, not many doubles so that this level of repayment would not be unlawful. To these people, we say: Those who say this are trying to manipulate the Quranic text, as though God would leave the text in such a way that they could manipulate it and steal from it what they want without placing anything in the text which prevents such manipulation. They should have noticed that God says, at the end of the matter, that if usurious lenders repent, then, they will be entitled to the return of their principal; they will do no wrong, and neither will they be wronged (al-Baqara: 279). This decisive statement clarifies that God did not make exception for either a single doubling, or many. So when God commands the believers not to consume usury, doubling and re-doubling it – but to fear God so that they might attain success (Al-'Imran: 130), these wise words only came to show the reality of the situation in which they were living, and God did not make exception for either single doubling, or any redoubling; for the True Lord made the starting-point of repentance: that a person takes back his principal only; God does not allow anyone to take an additional half, or double, or two doubles; He does not allow any doubling, or redoubling.

Similar people with usurious state of mind and intentions, also used to make the excuse that if two parties are both in agreement on anything this constitutes an agreement and a contract. This might well have been the case were it not for the fact that there is a Lawgiver higher than all men who has authority over this agreement and the right to control it – every time two parties agree on something, does it automatically become lawful?

If this were the case, fornication would be lawful because both parties agree on it. This matter – the agreement of both parties – only applies to those things for which there is no specific legislation from the Most High Lawgiver, namely God, the Ever-Living, the Sustainer of All existence.

God has stipulated something which abrogates any agreement that might exist between you and me; for He has ultimate authority, and He is the One Who has passed judgement on the matter; and there can be no valid agreement between us about something which contravenes what God has legislated or what He has decreed. If we look at this matter in another way, we find that the agreement which they claim exists is to be rejected; it is a false 'agreement' when subjected to careful scrutiny and logical examination. Why? Because we say that an agreement between two people is only fair if what they have agreed upon does not affect anyone else; if what they agree on affects someone else besides them, it is a false agreement.

Suppose that a person has nothing, and another person has a thousand; the one who has a thousand possesses it, and puts it to work in some way; and when the one who owns the thousand does this work, he requires the payment for his work in order to live from this payment. As for the one who has nothing, who if he wants to do the same thing the one who owned a thousand did, he goes to someone and takes a thousand from him in order to put it to work as the owner of the thousand did; and the one who gives him this thousand stipulates that he must pay an extra hundred when he pays it back, then in this case, the one who borrowed the thousand not only requires a return for his labour like the owner of the thousand did, but also requires the extra hundred which the one who gave him the interest-bearing loan requires. Where will the one who borrowed the thousand get this hundred from? Even if his wares are the same value as the wares of the other man, he will lose out; and if his wares are of a lower value than those of the other, they will sell badly and fail.

So, he will have no option but to utilise a deceitful ruse, which is to make his wares superficially seem to resemble those of the other, whilst reducing the active elements of the production of his wares, taking from them that which is equal to the extra one hundred he has to pay to the creditor as usury. So who will pay for this? The consumer will. So, the consumer is harmed by this agreement and he is the one who will suffer because he will end up paying the value of the merchant's loan through his wares, as well as the value of the usurious amount which the creditor stipulated. So the usurious contract between the debtor and the creditor – even according to their understanding – is an invalid contract despite the fact that they – the debtor and the creditor – both agree on it.

the True Lord the Most High wants mercy and compassion to spread amongst people, and mutual affection to spread amongst people. The True Lord, the Owner of all blessings wanted to spread through the people the concept that everyone who is granted favours in this world, must share these favours with others; and when the needy person sees these favours, he will know that he will benefit from them, and since he will benefit from them, he will not look at them with bitterness, nor with envy, nor will he hope for them to end because he will get something out of them.

But if the general practice is that the possessor of favours in this world wants to take advantage of everyone who benefits from his favours, and does not look after the right of God in the purpose of these favours, and does not share these favours with others, and when the needy person sees this, he will hope for these favours to go away from their possessor, and he will look at them with envy, and so bitterness will spread along with resentment, and corruption will find the perfect opportunity to spread through the whole of society.

The True Lord the Most High wants three elements to regulate the economy: The first element is support and pure giving so that the poor needy person finds a rich person to give to him; not in the form of the True Lord's law of the known poor-due (prescribed zakat), but in the form of the True Lord's law of (unlimited) charity; and this is support. The second element is the right to that which is obligatory, namely the prescribed poor-due or zakat. The third element is the right to borrow, which is debt.

So, there are three things which govern Islamic economics: either voluntary charity, or paying the obligatory poor-due, or giving a goodly loan; this is what the Islamic economic system is built upon. Let us consider the words of the True Lord the Most High when He presents this matter and shows the ugliness of the state of those who consume usury by saying that they do not stand except as one might stand whom Satan has confounded and befuddled with his touch. Why? Because, as the True Lord says of them, '…"Trade is [just] like usury."' What is being discussed here – usury, or trade? It is usury which is being discussed here. It might have been more logical to say, 'Usury is just like trading'; so what made them turn things around? The Quranic text here alludes to how they are confounded even when it comes to the thing which they want to argue for. It is as though they said, 'As long as you want to forbid usury, trading is like usury, so, you must also forbid trade. 'The context should have made them say, 'Usury is like trading,' but the True Lord the Most High wanted to show us how they were confounded, so, He placed into their mouths the words 'Trading is just like usury, so if you have forbidden usury then forbid trading; and if you have allowed trading then allow usury.' They want them either to stay both or be eliminated both.

So, giving the decisive verdict, God said, '…But God has permitted trade and has forbidden usury. So whoever has received an admonition from his Lord and desists….' Ibn Mas'ud God be pleased with him is narrated to have said, 'The Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him cursed the one who consumes usury and the one who gives it.'(1)

(1) Narrated by Muslim; the narrations of At-Tirmidhi and others add: 'And its two witnesses and the one who records it in writing'

An admonition from God has come; and if an admonition comes from someone who does not stand to benefit from it, it is logical that it be accepted; on the other hand, the admonition that is doubtful is the one in which he who gives it, stands to get some benefit from it. If the admonition comes from someone who does not stand to benefit from this admonition, this is a reason to accept it. '…So whoever has received an admonition from his Lord and desists….' Let us consider the word 'his Lord': when it comes here, it means the True Lord, Who has undertaken your sustenance and instruction, and Who takes care of sustenance through creation by bringing into being that which preserves life, and that which preserves the species, and who protects everything by subjugating everything to you, O man; so, as a human being, you must be respectful before your Lord, and not put yourself in a position where you accuse the Lord and Creator of any suspicion of benefiting from this admonition – God forbid. Why? Because the Creator is Sustainer and Educator, and since He is Lord, this means He undertakes your sustenance and instruction; so, beware, O man, of rebelling against the admonition of the Lord and Educator. '…So whoever has received an admonition from his Lord and desists may have what is past….' This means that the command was not retroactive, so, it did not apply to what had taken place before it was ordained because it was taken before the prohibition had been revealed; and this is mercy. Why? Because it might have been the case that a usurious creditor had managed his life by means of the usury he had been receiving before the prohibition was revealed; and if this was the case, the True Lord the Most High pardoned all that had gone before; and the usurious creditor had to begin his life afresh according to the new economic model.

This is the greatness of the Divine law: '…and desists may have what is past, and his affair rests with God….' That is, he will be allowed to keep his past gains from before usury was prohibited; and the words '…his affair rests with God…' indicate that when God the Most High forgives what has gone before, He has the absolute right to legislate what He wills, so, you should always attach yourself to the continuation of grace from God; '…his affair rests with God….' Such a person might say, 'I will be financially destroyed, and my position will be toppled, and I will become such-and-such.' No; place your trust in God, for God can replace any loss, and He the Exalted does not want to put people's positions in jeopardy, but rather wants to say to them: If I take away any of your favours, then, place yourselves in the care of He Who gives all favours.'

As long as you have placed yourself in the care of the One Who gives all blessings, the blessing itself is nothing because the One Who gives all blessings, will replace this blessing. Usury is one of the seven deadly destructive sins that the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him commanded us to avoid when he said, 'Avoid the seven deadly sins.' His Companions asked, 'O Messenger of God, what are they?' He answered, 'Associating partners with God; sorcery; killing a soul that God made inviolable, save for a just reason; consuming usury; consuming the wealth of an orphan; turning back from a military advance; and defaming unwitting chaste, believing women.'(1)

The verse says, '…and his affair rests with God. But whoever returns to [dealing in usury]…,' that is, return to it after the admonition: what will be their case? The answer is: '…those are the inmates of the Fire; they will abide eternally therein.' It would have been enough to say of them that '…those are the inmates of the Fire…;' for perhaps one of them might be a believer, and yet still return to sinful ways, and thus be required to spend time in hell. Yet, His words '…they will abide eternally therein' indicate that they have thereby left the realm of faith altogether; and in order to understand these final words, you must understand the preceding words very well; for there are two matters here: there is usury which God has forbidden, and there are people who wish to make usury lawful by saying '…"Trade is [just] like usury …"'; if you return to usury, whilst nevertheless believing it to be forbidden, you are a sinful believer, who will enter the hellfire. Yet, if you return to your old ways of debating its unlawfulness, saying '…Trade is [just] like usury…', and you argue against the unlawfulness of usury and seek to make it lawful like trading, you are thereby leaving the religion of Islam; and by leaving the religion of Islam, you thereby condemn yourself to eternity in hell.

With this in mind, we must alert those who argue for usury, and tell them to at least say, 'Usury is unlawful, but we are unable to bring ourselves to annul it and leave it,' and tell them that they must struggle against themselves to stop doing it so that they do not expose themselves to war from God and His Messenger. If they believe that usury is unlawful, they will only be sinners; yet, if they attempt to justify usury and make it lawful, they will fall into something even more evil than this, which is disbelief – and we seek refuge with God.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim

We know that Adam peace be upon him disobeyed his Lord, and ate from the tree, and Satan also disobeyed his Lord; yet, when Adam received certain words from his Lord, He turned to him in forgiveness whilst God cast Satan out. So why did He cast Satan out and make him an object of curse? It is because Adam admitted the sin, and acknowledged that they had sinned against themselves (al-A'raf: 23). Adam acknowledged: 'Your judgement, O Lord is the judgement of truth, but I sinned against myself.' But Satan protested and objected, wondering to his Lord whether it will be right for him to prostrate himself before one whom the Lord has created of clay (al-Isra': 61). So it is as though he threw the command back at the One Who issued it.

After this, and after God made clear the ruling concerning usury, and stated that whosever desists would be allowed to keep his past gains; what about those who return to it? '…But whoever returns to [dealing in usury]…' which is the contrast, '…those are the inmates of the Fire; they will abide eternally therein.' He the Exalted wants to say: Beware of allowing the word riba ('usury') to deceive you, for words can deceive people; for you called it riba which literally means 'increase' out of a superficial understanding that usury is an increase, whilst the poor-due is a decrease; usury will turn one hundred into one hundred and ten, for example, depending on the rate of interest, whilst the poor-due turns one hundred into 97.5 with respect to money and merchandise – with some difference in the case of agricultural and other concerns. On the surface, it seems that usury brings gain, whilst the poor-due brings a loss, but this decrease and this increase are only according to your definitions and your conventions. Yet, the True Lord the Most High deprives this increase of any blessing ,whilst He causes this loss to bring growth; so He the Exalted says:

يَمۡحَقُ ٱللَّهُ ٱلرِّبَوٰاْ وَيُرۡبِي ٱلصَّدَقَٰتِۗ وَٱللَّهُ لَا يُحِبُّ كُلَّ كَفَّارٍ أَثِيمٍ ﴿٢٧٦﴾

God blights usury, but blesses charitable deeds with multiple increase. He does not love the ungrateful sinner [276] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 276)

The word yamhaq (rendered here as ‘destroys’) comes from the word mahq which means to be wasted gradually; that is, not to be destroyed in one strike, but rather to be lost gradually without being noticed; from this root is derived the word mihaq which means the waning of the moon. ‘…God destroys usury…’ thus means that He makes it seemly to its possessor, and then, ruin gradually comes to him without him noticing it.

If we perhaps carefully scrutinise the environments around us, we will find the corroboration of this. How many people have dealt in usury, and we have seen them and known them, and after this we saw how their lives ended up. ‘God destroys usury and gives increase for charities….’ In another verse, God says that whatever you may give out in usury so that it might increase through people’s money will bring no increase in the sight of God (ar-Rum: 39).

So, beware of thinking that you are deceiving God by doing this; and what is the contrasting side? In the same verse cited above, God states that whatever you give out in charity, seeking God’s Face, it is they, they that shall have their recompense multiplied (ar-Rum: 39). They are those who thereby make the thing multiply many times over.

When the True Lord says, ‘God destroys usury…’, do not underestimate the fact that the action is ascribed to God. When an action is ascribed to its doer, it must take its mode from the self of the doer. If you are told that so-and-so who is weak, will punch you, or that so-and-so the boxer will punch you, you will certainly judge this blow according to the one who delivers it. If God is the One Who says ‘God destroys usury…,’ could there be any destruction above this? No, there could not.

Also, when God says, ‘God destroys usury and gives increase for charities…’ in the Quran – which is recited by Muslims everywhere, and which is inimitable and preserved, and which challenges by being preserved, this is something which is absolutely guaranteed. ‘God destroys usury and gives increase for charities…’ because the One who said it is God, in His Preserved Book, which is recited as an act of worship; that is, the matter is on the lips of everyone, and in the hearts of all the believers. Would God say something, which would then, be preserved in this way, if a time could ever come to disprove it? No; this is not possible. A person only preserves the documents which he will rely on to help him; I only keep hold of the bill of exchange which concerns me. As long as He preserves it, and He asserts that it was He Who sent the ‘Warning’ and that He is its Guardian (al-Hijr: 9). This means that He the Exalted will mention certain issues in it, and these issues are what He has vowed to preserve; and He would not have vowed to preserve them unless they would be a proof of His veracity in saying them, since if something does not prove anything we do not preserve it.

For example, He the Exalted asserts that His soldiers will be the victorious ones (as-Saffat: 173). This is a matter of the Quran which God vowed to preserve, so, the reality of life must surely come to support it; for if the reality of life did not support it, what would the situation be? Would we disbelieve the Quran – and far be it for us to disbelieve the Quran – which is the speech of the True Lord, other than whom there is no deity to manage His universe besides Him?

‘God destroys usury and gives increase for charities; and God does not like every sinning disbeliever.’ Why did God use the intensive form kaffar (stubbornly disbelieving) instead of just kafir (disbeliever), and why did He use the intensive form atheem (persistent in sinful ways) instead of just athim (sinful)? It is because such a person wants to throw God’s ruling back at Him; and in doing this, he has disbelieved twice: once in that he did not acknowledge this, and once in that he threw God’s ruling back at Him. And he is a ‘persistent sinner’ (atheem) rather than just a ‘sinner’ (athim); and we can infer from this use of the intensive adjectival form that the issue which we are currently examining is a universal issue related to civilisation and society, and if it is not as God wants it to be, all the pillars of society will be shaken.

After having explained the bitterness of such a situation to us by using repeated intensive forms – kaffar (stubbornly disbelieving) and atheem (persistent in sin) – the True Lord presents to us the contrasting view so that we can taste the sweetness of the contrast. This is like the words of the poet:

The face is as white as the dawn,
And the hair is as black as night:
Two opposites which are beautiful when drawn together;
For the opposite shows the beauty of its opposite.

It is as though, after speaking about the stubborn disbeliever and the persistent sinner, God wants to bring us back to the sweetness of faith, saying:

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ وَعَمِلُوا۟ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ وَأَقَامُوا۟ ٱلصَّلَوٰةَ وَءَاتَوُا۟ ٱلزَّكَوٰةَ
لَهُمْ أَجْرُهُمْ عِندَ رَبِّهِمْ وَلَا خَوْفٌ عَلَيْهِمْ وَلَا هُمْ يَحْزَنُونَ ﴿٢٧٧﴾

Those who believe, do good deeds, keep up the prayer, and pay the prescribed alms will have their reward with their Lord: no fear for them, nor will they grieve [277]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 277)

We said that the word 'reward' (ajr) implies that no created being owns any product, but rather, we are all hired workers. Why? Because we use the brain which God created, work by the energy which God created, on the material which God created; so, what do you possess, apart from your work, O man? As long as you possess nothing but your work, you will have a reward: '…will have their reward with their Lord….' The expression 'with their Lord' here attracts our attention because when you are given a reward by your equal, he might bilk you; whilst the reward you take from your Lord Who has undertaken your sustenance, will never be lost.

The True Lord then says, '…and there will be no fear on them…,' no fear from themselves for themselves, nor any fear of their loved ones for them; '…nor will they grieve' because if any good had passed them by, they will find it there in front of them. After this, the True Lord says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ ٱتَّقُواْ ٱللَّهَ وَذَرُواْ مَا بَقِيَ مِنَ
ٱلرِّبَوٰٓاْ إِن كُنتُم مُّؤۡمِنِينَ ٢٧٨

You who believe, beware of God, give up any outstanding dues from usury, if you are true believers [278] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 278)

When the True Lord says, ‘O you who have believed…,’ we know that the call to the faithful indicates that a command of moral responsibility will follow. When the True Lord calls with the words ‘O you who have believed…,’ this means: O you who believe in Me as a Wise, All-Powerful God Who is free of need of you and has control of everything; your disobedience does not harm Me, and your obedience does not benefit Me; so, if you believe in Me, and I am a Wise, All-Powerful God, listen to Me as I give you the rulings I have chosen for you.

So every call of ‘O you who have believed…’ in the Quran, lays the ground for every ruling which comes after it; you do as God commands you, and if anyone asks you, ‘Why did you do this?’, say to him, ‘I did it because I am a believer, and the One Who commanded me to do it, is the One in whose wisdom and power I believe.’ You do not enter into the labyrinth of attempting to find reasons for these rulings because you believe that God is a Wise, All-Powerful God Who sent down these responsibilities to you. Beware of entering the labyrinth of attempting to find reasons for rulings; why? Because there are some things whose reasons might elude you: will you put them off until you know the reason for them?

Did we postpone the ruling of the unlawfulness of pork until it was recently proven by analysis that it is harmful? No; if it was proven recently by analysis that it is harmful, this increases our trust in every ruling with which God has commanded us whose reason we have not yet been guided to. The True Lord says, ‘O you who have believed, fear God….’ One of the wonders of the command ‘fear God’ is that it is used for things which seem to be contradictory when actually they are related. ‘O you who have believed, fear God….’ He did not say here, ‘fear the Fire,’ as He indeed did say in another verse, ‘fear the Fire.’ So, why would He say, ‘fear God’ and also ‘fear the Fire’? It is because the word ‘fear’ (ittaqu) means, ‘Place a shield (wiqaya) between yourself and your Lord.’

How can we place a shield between ourselves and our Lord when our faith requires us to adhere to God’s Way in order that we be always in the company of God? We say that God the Most High possesses Attributes of Majesty such as the All-Dominant, and the Lord of Retribution, and the All-Compeller, and the Lord of Might, and the Lord of Stern Punishment; and He asks his believing servant to place a shield between himself and the Attributes of Majesty; and the hellfire is one of the hosts of the Attributes of Majesty. When He the Exalted says, ‘fear God,’ this means, ‘place a shield between yourselves and the Attributes of Majesty, one of the hosts of which is the Hellfire.’ So, ‘fear God’ is akin to ‘fear the Fire,’ that is, place a shield between yourselves and the fire.

The True Lord goes on: ‘…and give up what remains [due to you] of usury, if you are believers.’ The command ‘give up’ means leave, forsake, and abandon, and seek goodness from God, as far as all outstanding gains from usury are concerned, if you are truly believers in God. It is as though God wanted to make this a complete purification, after which the believer would be reborn in a pure and clean state.

This is a command from the True Lord, saying: Leave the usury which you have not yet collected; for that which you have already collected is covered by the words ‘past gains’, whilst you must leave that which you have not yet collected. This is God’s command: ‘…fear God and give up what remains [due to you] of usury, if you are believers.’ If you say that the contracts were agreed upon before the prohibition, and the contracts therefore give you the right to take this, remember that you have not yet claimed this right, so, it is not in your hand; do not say, ‘My economic life is based on it’ because the basis of your economic life did not arise from agreeing to this usury, but rather, it arises by your collecting it – and you did not collect it. The True Lord continues:

فَإِن لَّمْ تَفْعَلُوا۟ فَأْذَنُوا۟ بِحَرْبٍ مِّنَ ٱللَّهِ وَرَسُولِهِۦ ۖ وَإِن تُبْتُمْ فَلَكُمْ
رُءُوسُ أَمْوَٰلِكُمْ لَا تَظْلِمُونَ وَلَا تُظْلَمُونَ ﴿٢٧٩﴾

If you do not, then be warned of war from God and His Messenger. You shall have your capital if you repent, and with- out suffering loss or causing others to suffer loss [279]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 279)

This verse presents a universal matter which many people ignore. A system came to protect one sector of people from the oppression of another sector, and this system only came after there emerged the sector of usurious profiteers who oppressed the sector of the weak and needy. Sufficient was for those weak people who were exploited by the usurious profiteers that the Quran gave them justice and brought an end to usury in such a way that it allowed those who dealt in usury, to keep what they had gained before since they had based their lives on it.

The verse warns the usurers: '…then be informed of a war [against you]….' The word 'be informed' here (fa'dhanu) is derived from the root ('-dh-n), from which are derived the words idhn ('permission') and udhun ('ear'); the basis of this root is the concept of informing; for a person is not automatically assumed to be able to read, and he cannot read unless he first hears, and therefore the passing of information can only arise through hearing. When the True Lord the Most High spoke about the means by which a person attains knowledge, He tells us that it was He Who has brought us forth from our mothers' wombs knowing nothing – but He has endowed us with hearing, sight and minds so that we might have cause to be grateful (an-Nahl: 78).

This is why when the science of physiology came to study this matter, they found that it followed the same principle that God had described for them. If someone puts their finger right up to the eye of a new-born baby, it does not so much as blink because its eyes are not yet performing their function; but if you shout next to its ear, it will react.

We have discovered that the first sensory organ of a new-born child to perform its function is the ear, which is also the organ that performs its function for a person whether he is awake or asleep. The eye closes during sleep, so, it cannot see, yet, the ear remains alert at all times, so, it can hear because it is the organ of reception. So the root of the words adhan, ('call to prayer'), and udhun, ('ear'), revolves around the concept of hearing. God the Most High says that at the end of time, the earth will hear and obey the command of its Lord to split asunder, as in truth, it must (al-Inshiqaq: 5).

What does adhinat (hear and obey) mean? When you hear something from someone who is equal to you, you might obey, or you might not, but when you hear it from an All-Powerful God, you have no option but to obey. It is as though God is saying: The earth will be split asunder when it hears My command for it to split. Simply by the earth's hearing the command from the True Lord, it will do as bidden; and it is right for it to do so: it obeys (adhinat) the command of God, that is, it yields to it because the One Who uttered the command was God. So, all the meanings of this lexical root come from the word udhun ('ear') which is why God says to those who do not obey His command concerning usury, 'And if you do not, then be informed of a war [against you] from God and His Messenger….' As for the war with God, we only say of it what God said: No one can know the soldiers and forces of the Lord but He (al-Muddaththir: 31).

And no one can take precautions against them. As for the war with the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him, this is the manifest matter. It is as though God will unleash against usurious profiteers a terrible host of His forces which no one knows but Him, whilst in the war of the Messenger of God, the forces are those who believe in the Messenger, who must wage war against every manifestation of corruption in the universe in order to purify their lives from the taint of usury.

In this way, God set a limit to the modes of transactions so that wealth can be cleansed from this usury. When the True Lord said, '…you may have your principal – [thus] you do no wrong, nor are you wronged,' this means that He the Exalted is showing us by these words that there is no right for usurious profiteers to claim one double or two, nor any further multiples; and in this way 'you do no wrong' to those from whom you took usury in the past, by taking more from them than your principal.

But what is the meaning of 'nor are you wronged' and who is it that would wrong them? The weak person who was wronged by them before, might wrong them by taking some of their principal under the pretence that they exploited him before by taking back more than their principal. The Lawgiver wants to prevent the former wrongdoer by forbidding his wrong, and to mollify the one who was wronged by giving him his right; He the Exalted does not want to direct injustice so that the one who was wronged before, utilises it to wrong the one who wronged him first. Rather, by this ruling He the Exalted wanted to bring a complete end to this kind of injustice, and make everyone benefit equally from the advantages of the ruling.

Many of the theories which come to change the system in a society are biased against the side that was in the wrong; they do not only put an end to their injustice, but they allow the one who was wronged to exact revenge on the one who wronged him. This is the bias of society, and this is what people need to be very aware of; for God has given you justice, O you who was wronged, and prevented the one who wronged you from doing so; and now you must respect His ruling when He says that the usurious lender '…may have what is past…,' and with this statement the matter is settled.

God the Most High renews the matter with a new and fair balance which brings you and him together on a level footing, without any injustice from you, O you who was wronged before, on the pretext that the lender has wronged you for so long. When societies live according to this system of '…you do no wrong, nor are you wronged…,' they live on a basis of fairness, not directed injustice.

We criticise one sector of people for having wronged others, then we bring another sector and allow them to wrong others in their turn! No; everyone must be on an equal footing from now on.

The corruption of any system in society comes from the directing of injustice from a new sector to an old sector because in this case, the injustice continues to exist. One sector was unjust, and then, the sector which was wronged comes to do injustice to the sector which was unjust before. We say to them: this is directed injustice, and we want fairness to be institutionalised and spread to every member of society so that everyone can claim what is rightfully his: We prevent the one who was unjust at an earlier time before the revelation of God’s rulings from doing any further wrong, and we give justice to the one who was oppressed before, and in this way everyone becomes on a level footing so that society can proceed in a way that is fair, and governed by a principle of faith. We can only respond to those who disobey God in our regard by obeying God in their regard.

After this, the Quran comes to open a new door of hope for those who have been wronged, and to set a limit for those who were unjust before and who were allowed to claim their principal and forbade from taking anything more than that; so, it softened their hearts towards those people, and told them, ‘It is not absolutely necessary to take your principal now, but rather, you should wait and allow the debtor some time if he is in straitened circumstances; and if you grow in maturity of faithful certainty, and you are pleased to accept God above anything else that you might lose, then forgo and give up even your principal, which God has allowed you to claim in order that you may rise in rank by means of it, and give it to those who are unable to pay.’ So, the True Lord says:

وَإِن كَانَ ذُو عُسۡرَةٖ فَنَظِرَةٌ إِلَىٰ مَيۡسَرَةٖۚ وَأَن تَصَدَّقُواْ
خَيۡرٞ لَّكُمۡۖ إِن كُنتُمۡ تَعۡلَمُونَ ٢٨٠

If the debtor is in difficulty, then delay things until matters become easier for him; still, if you were to write it off as an act of charity, that would be better for you, if only you knew [280] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 280)

‘If someone is in hardship….’ The ruling was given to allow the creditor to claim his principal; but suppose the debtor is in straitened circumstances. There is an issue here which is raised by some of the orientalists who claim to have studied Arabic, yet have studied it in a mechanical way without acquiring the deep natural feeling for it; for language is not only about mechanics; language is also about nature, and language is about disposition, and language is about feelings. They say that the Quran breaches some of the rules of its own language, and they use this verse as an example of this: ‘And if someone is in hardship, then [let there be] postponement until [a time of] ease. But if you give [from your right as] charity, then it is better for you, if you only knew.’

Some orientalists say, ‘We want to ask Quran scholars about the predicate of the verb ‘is’ (kana) here in God’s words ‘And if someone is in hardship….’ It is true that there is no predicate for the verb kana here, but the one who asks this does not possess an intrinsic disposition for Arabic because since he has studied Arabic, he must know that kana requires a subject and a predicate, and that the subject is in the nominative case, whilst the predicate is in the accusative case, and in this case, the verb kana is called ‘defective’ (naqisa); he should also have been aware that the verb kana can also come in a form known as ‘complete’ (tamma), meaning that it does not have a predicate, in which case there is only a subject in the nominative case; and this requires a simple explanation.

Every verb indicates an action and a time, and when you hear the word ‘is’ (kana), it indicates existence and a general action and does not indicate the specific condition of its subject, for example: Is he hard-working? Is he lazy? So, it indicates the general existence of something, but not its state; this means that the verb ‘is’ (kana) indicates the general time of existence, that is, the bare unfinished concept; and the purpose of something general can only be shown when it is specified: if you want to indicate the existence of something specific to clarify the meaning and show it, you must add to it a predicate; for example, by saying, ‘Zaid is hard-working’; this indicates something specific, namely the hard work of Zaid. So in this case, the verb ‘is’ is defective because it requires a predicate to complete it and to give it a specific existence. If this is not the case, and we wish to state the existence alone, the verb ‘is’ (kana) is complete, not defective, i.e. it is enough to give its subject alone, for example by saying, ‘The one who had been away came home, so, there was joy’, that is, joy existed; or ‘The sun came up, so, there was light.’ A poet said:

It was, and the dawn therein was not white,
And it passed, and the night therein was not black.

Therefore, the expression ‘…And if someone is in hardship…’ means ‘if there exists one who is in hardship,’ that is, if there is a person who is unable to pay the loan back, let the creditor grant him ‘…postponement until [a time of] ease…,’ that is, until things are easier for him; and in this case the principal will be a ‘goodly (non-usurious) loan,’ and for every moment in which the creditor is patient concerning it, God will give him a reward.

We should be aware that the reward for a goodly loan is more than the reward for charity because when you give charity, you have no further hope regarding it, and you do not think about it, and you earn your reward for this all at once; yet, when you give a loan, your heart remains attached to it, and every time the attachment to it is severe and the love of wealth rouses you yet you have patience, you thereby earn reward. This is why you must be sure to ascertain that the loan is a goodly loan, and the one who takes the loan is excused rightfully – for there is a difference between being excused rightfully and being excused wrongfully: the one who is excused rightfully, is the one who tries his utmost to repay the debt, but circumstances stand in his way and prevent him from doing so; whilst the one who is excused wrongfully has enough to repay his debt, but he delays doing so, and keeps the money and uses it – and in doing so, he is a wrongdoer.

For this reason, test yourself and you will find that for every debt which disturbs your heart, know that the debtor is able to pay it back, but he has not; and for every debt where you feel that your heart is at ease, cool and tranquil, know that the debtor is rightfully excused and is unable to pay it back; and you might be shy to pass him by out of fear that you will embarrass him, and he will feel ashamed just by seeing you. Such people as this do not remain in debt for a long time because the Messenger announced a judgement on this matter, saying: 'Whosoever takes people's money with the intention of paying it back, God will see that it is paid back for him; and whosoever takes people's money intending to waste it, God will lay waste to him.'(1)

As long as the debtor's intention when he takes it, is to pay it back, God will make it easy for him to pay it back; and if he takes it with the intention of wasting it, God will not make it easy for him to repay it because he will not be able to leave aside any money with which his debts might be repaid. There was an incident in the life of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him which explains this Hadith for us, which is that a man died whilst in debt, and when the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him was told that he was in debt, he said to his Companions: 'Pray (the funeral prayer) for your brother.'

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Ahmad on the authority of Abu Hurayra God be pleased with him

So, he did not pray it himself, but rather, he asked his Companions to do so. Why did he not pray? Because he had said before: ‘Whosoever takes people’s money with the intention of paying it back, God will see that it is paid back for him.’ As long as the man died without having paid it back, his intention must have been to put off repaying it; but the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him did not prevent his Companions from praying the funeral prayer for the man.

And the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him dealt with the one who is in hardship with the munificence of faith, saying, ‘Whoever gives more time to one who is straitened, or forgoes his debt, God will cover them with His shade on a day when there is no shade but His.’(1) The meaning of ‘gives more time’ is to delay and put off the deadline for the collection of the debt, and not to follow it up, and not to imprison him for his debt and chase him up; and if the creditor rises even higher in his certitude of faith, he would say to him, ‘Go, may God give recompense for both me and you,’ and that would be the end of it. This is why the True Lord says, ‘…But if you give [from your right as] charity, then it is better for you, if you only knew,’ and the fruit of this is the best of rewards from God. You may either delay and give more time, or else remit part, or all of the debt by way of charity, and you are free to do as you choose. Look at the precision of the treatment of the True Lord in how He put an end to this economic problem which was a major concern of the environment of the pre-Islamic times of ignorance.

From what has preceded, we know that Islam bases economic activity on munificence and giving, and the True Lord the Most High spoke about it in the verses of spending which began with His words: ‘…The example of those who spend their wealth in the Way of God is like a grain…’ and He spoke at length about spending; and ‘spending’ includes both that which is obligatory upon you such as the zakat (poor-due), and that which you give voluntarily. When someone gives something voluntarily, above and beyond that which God obliges him to give, God the Most High considers this as the right of the needy person, but an ‘unspecified’ right. To have a good understanding of this matter we need to have a close look at God’s statements in the following verses: God states that the God-fearing will be amid gardens and springs, enjoying all that their Lord will have granted them because, assuredly, they were muhsinin ('doers of good/seeking perfection in worship') in the past (worldly life); they would not sleep but for a short time during the night (adh-Dhariyat: 15-17).

(1) Narrated by Ahmad and Muslim on the authority of Abu Al-Yusr

Does Islam require us to only sleep for a short time of the night? No; the Muslim has the right to offer the 'Isha ('night') Prayer and then sleep, and then rise to offer the Fajr ('dawn') Prayer, and this is what Islam requires. But here, the True Lord the Most High is speaking about the muhsinin (seekers of perfection in worship), the doers of good who have entered the status of excellence (ihsan) with God.

Furthermore, the God-conscious will find themselves amid gardens and springs, enjoying all that their Lord will have granted them because, assuredly, they were muhsinin in their worldly life; they would not sleep but for a short time during the night, and would pray for pardon in the pre-dawn hours (adh-Dhariyat: 15-18). Does Islam oblige the believer to rise in the late hours of the night to pray for forgiveness? No; the Muslim has only to perform the obligations; but if he wants to enter the status of ihsan ('excellence'), he must know that the way to this is praying for forgiveness in the late hours of the night. The discourse here concerns the status of excellence. And the True Lord adds about those who have attained this status that in their wealth is a share to the needy beggars and to the deprived (adh-Dhariyat: 15).

God the Most High assigned, from the wealth of those who have attained the status of excellence, a due share for the beggar and the deprived, but He did not specify the value or form of this due share, and whether it is something known, or unknown. But when God speaks about the general believers, He the Exalted describes them as those in whose possessions there is a specific due share for those who ask for help and for the deprived (al-Ma'arij: 24-25).

So, we see that from the wealth of the one who has attained the status of excellence, there is an unspecified share for the beggar and the deprived, but from the wealth of the ordinary believer there is a specified due share, namely the poor-due. The status of excellence is above that of general faith because the due share of the believer's wealth is known, whereas in the case of ihsan ('the status of excellence') part of their wealth is a due share to be given to the needy, even though it is unspecified, i.e. unlimited.

We have seen that some jurists say that since the poor-due is the right of the needy person from the wealthy person, if the wealthy person refuses to give him this right, he should be considered to be stealing from the needy person; and if the amount is equal to the minimum value considered by the legal definition of stealing, he should be subjected to the legal punishment of stealing: amputation, and the minimum value considered by the legal definition of stealing is a quarter of a gold dinar. Islam then bases its social issues either on supererogatory spending, or obligatory spending. If people's souls are miserly, and they are unable to give anything more than what is prescribed for them, and the love of wealth settles in their hearts so firmly that they cannot be separated from it, God the Most High says to every one of them: You refuse to be separated from your wealth, and I have forbidden usury; so, how can we meet in order to set a sound foundation for society? We will preserve your wealth for you, and prevent you from gaining any usury; and in this way we will meet in the middle of the road: We will not take your wealth, and you will not take from others anything extra on top of this wealth

And the True Lord the Most High revealed the verse of credit to explain this; and this verse is the longest verse in the whole of the Quran. Why so? Because upon this credit, the economic issues of society are based for those who do not have an income allowing them to live easily. When the True Lord revealed the verse of credit, He did not issue it as a rigid and dry piece of legislation, but rather phrased it in an emotive way; that is, He combined legislation with emotion, and the True Lord combined the rigidity of the law with the spirit of Islam, and did not do it in a dry style.

When human lawmakers legislate, they issue laws in a dry spiritless fashion; for example, 'Whoever kills must be killed', and so on. But the True Lord the Most High does not speak in this way, even with respect to the most violent of disputes, namely disputes of blood: He the Exalted says, '…But whoever overlooks from his brother anything, then there should be a suitable follow-up and payment to him with good conduct. This is an alleviation from your Lord and a mercy. But whoever transgresses after that will have a painful punishment' (al-Baqara: 178).

And before issuing the verse of credit, the True Lord the Most High says:

وَٱتَّقُواْ يَوۡمٗا تُرۡجَعُونَ فِيهِ إِلَى ٱللَّهِۖ ثُمَّ تُوَفَّىٰ كُلُّ نَفۡسٖ مَّا كَسَبَتۡ وَهُمۡ لَا يُظۡلَمُونَ ﴿٢٨١﴾

Beware of a Day when you will be returned to God, every soul will be paid in full for what it has earned, and no one will be wronged [281] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 281)

We clarified before that fear of God necessitates that we perform the actions that will protect us from God's Attributes of Majesty, and we made it clear that when God says, '…fear the Fire…,' it means that we must do that which will place a shield between us and Hellfire, and that hellfire is one of the manifestations of the Attributes of Majesty. And here, the True Lord the Most High says to us, 'And fear the Day….' Should we fear the Day itself, or fear what will happen on that Day? A day is a period of time; and times are not feared in themselves, but rather, one has fears of what occurs in those times.

If everything in a certain period of time is frightening, then fear is ascribed to the entire period / day because it is a day of terror in which everything is shocking and frightening – may God save us and you from all the terror of it!

Consider the extreme accuracy of the Quranic expression in God's words: '…you will be returned to God….' The return on this day will not be by the choice of the servants, but rather by the Will of God. On the other hand, when He the Exalted speaks about the believers who do good deeds, He says of their return to God on the Day of Resurrection: 'And seek help in steadfast patience and prayer; and this, indeed, is a hard thing for all but the humble in spirit, who know that they shall meet their Lord and that they shall return to Him' (al-Baqara: 45-46). This means that the believing servant longs to return to God because he desires to achieve success.

As for the non-believers, the True Lord says that on the Day of Judgement, they will be harshly thrust into the fire (at-Tur: 13). The return of the non-believers will be a forced, unwilling return. And the True Lord says that on this day, '…Then every soul will be paid in full that which it has earned, and they will not be treated unjustly.' After this, the True Lord the Most High passes the laws of credit, saying:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوٓاْ إِذَا تَدَايَنتُم بِدَيۡنٍ إِلَىٰٓ أَجَلٖ مُّسَمّٗى فَٱكۡتُبُوهُۚ وَلۡيَكۡتُب بَّيۡنَكُمۡ

You who believe, when you contract a debt for a stated term, put it down in writing: have a scribe write it down justly between you. No scribe should refuse to write: let him write as God has taught him, let the debtor dictate, and let him fear God, his Lord, and not diminish [the debt] at all. If the debtor is feeble-minded, weak, or unable to dictate, then let his guardian dictate justly. Call in two men as witnesses. If two men are not there, then call one man and two women out of those you approve as witnesses, so that if one of the two women should forget the other can remind her. Let the witnesses not refuse when they are summoned. Do not disdain to write the debt down, be it small or large, along with the time it falls due: this way is more equitable in God's eyes, more reliable as testimony, and more likely to prevent doubts arising between you. But if the merchandise is there and you hand it over, there is no blame on you if you do not write it down. Have witnesses present whenever you trade with one another, and let no harm be done to either scribe or witness, for if you did cause them harm, it would be a crime on your part. Be mindful of God, and He will teach you: He has full knowledge of everything [282] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 282)

This is the longest verse in the Quran, and God begins it by saying, 'O you who have believed....' As we know, this beginning indicates that whatever ruling which will follow, the grounds of this ruling will be having faith: as long as you believe in God, you implement whatever He commands you with, since God does not hold disbelievers morally responsible, and man – as we said before – is free either to accept faith in God, or not.

If a man does accept faith, let him respond to every ruling of God by adhering to it. We will give an example of this – and God is beyond compare: If a person is ill, he is free either to go the doctor, or not; but once he goes to the doctor and he writes him a prescription, the patient does not ask the doctor – who is a created being like him – 'Why did you prescribe this treatment?' The doctor could reply, 'You were free to choose whether to come to me, or not, but now, that you have come, listen to my words and follow them.' The doctor does not explain all the chemical interactions and equations, but rather, he diagnoses the complaint and prescribes the treatment.

what is the case when we accept to have faith in the Most High Creator? We obey all His commands; and God only commands the believer based on wisdom, and the effects of this wisdom might become clear to the believer later on so that his trust in his faith in God increases. The True Lord says, 'O you who have believed, when you contract a debt for a specified term, write it down….' If we reflect on the True Lord's words 'contract a debt' (tadayantum), we find that there is the word dayn ('credit'); and we have the word din ('religion'); one of the meanings of (din) is 'requital,' and another meaning of din is religion, the Way of Heaven; as for dayn, it means borrowing something for an appointed term for its return. So we have three clear meanings: there is din meaning 'requital', and din meaning the Way of Heaven ('religion'), and dayn meaning borrowing money ('credit').

With His words 'contract a debt' (tadayantum bi-dayn) God wants to remove any possible ambiguity of two possible meanings so that there would only be one possible meaning, so, He added the word 'debt (bi-dayn); the transaction here, therefore, is one of credit, not requital or religion. And the True Lord specifies that credit be for a stated term, and God used the word 'specified' to give further specification; for there is a difference between a term based on a specific time and a term based on a specific event which will occur: if you say, 'I set the term to be the moment when the pilgrims arrive,' this is an event in time, and no one can guarantee the exact moment when the pilgrims will arrive, since the plane might be delayed, or one of the pilgrims might be ill so that the rest have to be kept in the quarantine. But if you specify the term as being two or three months, this means that the term is the time itself. So it is not right for someone to set the term for his credit based on some event that is supposed to take place at a future time because it is possible that the event might not happen at the expected time. Therefore, contracting a debt for a specified term requires that the time be stated.

The True Lord specifies for us: '…when you contract a debt for a specified term, write it down….' The words 'write it down' are a means of lifting embarrassment and inconvenience between loved ones. This is Divine legislation, so no one should be lax and say to his friend, 'We are friends;' it is a Divine Legislation which says to you, 'Set down credit in writing.' And do not say, 'We are friends,' for one of you might die, and if you have not set the credit in writing as a matter of necessity, then what will the sons do, and the widow, and the heirs?

So, the True Lord's insistence on setting credit in writing is a command from God which removes difficult inconvenience between loved ones. Many people think that by setting down credit in writing, God wants to protect the interest of the creditor; no; the intention of this is to protect the debtor because if the debtor knows that the debt is recorded, he will try his utmost to work and repay his debt; as for if the credit is not recorded, he might become indolent in working to repay the debt, and because of this, he and his family will only obtain their need a single time after which wealthy society will forsake poor society and refuse to lend to them, and take the inability of this person to repay as an excuse for doing this; and this person who did not repay his debt will bear the cumulative responsibility for this because his actions have served to close the door on goodly loans.

God wants the mechanism of economic life to function for those who are without wealth; because those who possess wealth are able to manage their own lives whilst those who do not possess wealth are in need. For this reason, there is a proverb in the Egyptian countryside which says, 'If someone takes and gives back, all wealth becomes his.' He borrows and then pays back, so, everybody trusts him and sees him as trustworthy, diligent, and faithful, and they know of him that when he takes, he gives back; so, all wealth becomes his wealth.

So, by ordaining the setting down in writing of credit, God the Most High wants to protect the motions of life for the one who does not possess wealth because the one who possesses wealth, does not need to borrow. For this reason, the command came from the True Lord the Most High: '…when you contract a debt for a specified term, write it down….' But who is it that should write down the credit transaction?

Look at the accuracy in the expression: it is not you, the creditor, who will write it down, nor you, the debtor; but rather, there must be a scribe apart from these two, who does not stand to gain any benefit from the credit transaction: '…And let a scribe write [it] between you in justice. Let no scribe refuse to write as God has taught him….' This contains a clarification that if someone who knows how to write is asked to write down a credit record, he should not refuse to do so. Why? Because the verse – the verse of credit – was revealed at a time when literacy amongst the Arabs was rare, and only a few people knew how to write, so, there was an intense demand for those who knew how to write. But if none of those who know how to write are asked to write down the credit transaction, what should they do? The True Lord commands those who know how to write to volunteer, and the plain command comes to state this: 'and let a scribe write'; for if there is something which a person is required to do, but circumstance does not allow any prior experimentation, the Sacred Law obliges that he put himself forward for this task.

Suppose you are on a ship and a violent storm comes, and the one steering the ship is drowned, or is unable to steer. At this point, someone who knows how to steer a ship must come forward and appoint himself to do this task, for there is no time for any experimentation as known when the True Lord the Most High told us of the drought in the story of our master Joseph: Joseph told the king's messenger how to weather the drought. They will sow for seven years as usual; but they should let all the grains that they harvest remain untouched in their ears, excepting only a little, from which they may eat. After that period of seven good years there will come seven hard years which will consume all that they will have laid up for them, excepting only a little of that which they shall have kept in store (Yusuf: 47-48). Then our master Joseph told the king to put him in charge of the store-houses of the land as he is a good and knowing keeper (Yusuf: 55).

It was a drought, so, there was no time for experimentation; and he was qualified for this mission and possessed the talents of preservation and know-how, so, he put himself forward for the task. Likewise here '…Let no scribe refuse to write as God has taught him…' if he is asked; and if he is not asked and appointed, then '…let him write….'

This is the reason for the two commands here; and as long as the purpose of writing is to record the credit transaction, who is the weak party? It is the debtor, and the written record will be evidence against him for the creditor. For this reason, God specified that the one who dictates, should be the one who contracts the debt, that is, he should dictate the wording of the document which will be an evidence against him: '…and let the one who has the obligation dictate….' Why is it not the creditor who dictates? Because the debtor is usually the weaker party, and perhaps when the time comes to write the date of repayment, the creditor might try to make this date too soon, and the debtor might be too shy to speak up about this and remain silent because he is the weaker party. God chooses the weaker party to be the one to dictate the wording of the credit record; he can dictate it at his own comfort, and thus it is assured that he will not be disadvantaged by his need at any point.

But what do we do when the one who contracts the debt is weak of mind or body, or is unable to dictate? The True Lord sets the rules in this case: '…But if the one who has the obligation is of limited understanding, or weak or unable to dictate himself, then let his guardian dictate in justice….' The weak-minded person is the one who has reached manhood, but does not possess the aptitude to act on his own behalf, and the weak person is the one who does not possess the power to make him mentally mature enough to make transactions, such as if he is a young child, or an old man who has reached such old age that he has forgotten what he used to know, or someone who is unable to dictate because he is mute. In such a case, the guardian, or custodian, or advisor, must dictate in their stead.

Then, further documentation comes with God's words: '…And bring to witness two witnesses from among your men. And if there are not two men [available], then a man and two women from those whom you accept as witnesses – so that if one of the women errs, then the other can remind her….'

Look at the accuracy of the documentation in the instruction of the True Lord: '…And bring to witness two witnesses….' We call upon witnesses and we set it down in writing because God wants, by this documentation, to safeguard the economic life of the one who has not; for when needs are secured for those who have not, the mechanism operates smoothly and the motions of economic life proceed because those who have are in the minority, and those who have not are in the majority, and every good and beneficial project needs a hundred people to implement the plan.

The one who provides finance for the project may need a hundred people to carry it out, and for this reason the majority of people are have-nots, and this is so that the system of life can proceed; for God does not want the system of life to be a matter of some people doing voluntary favours for others, but rather, God wants the system of life to be an essential system; for the worker who does not have a family to support might not bother going out to work, which is why God links his going out to work with his need. He needs food and supplies for himself and his family, so, he is forced by necessity to go out to work, and the repeated experience makes him feel affection for his work, and when he feels affection for his work, he loves it for its own sake.

In this way, he moves from a position of needing to work to a position of loving work for its own sake; and when he loves work for its own sake, the wheel of life moves forward. The True Lord the Most High identifies the witnesses by saying, '…And bring to witness two witnesses….'

Why did He use the emphatic form of the word shaheedayn ('witnesses'), and not shahidayn ('witnesses/onlookers')? Because a mere onlooker might be false, so, the True Lord used the Arabic emphatic adjectival form, as though this means a witness who is known for the fairness of his testimony so that he is considered a 'trustworthy witness' (shahid). He is someone who has repeatedly given just testimony, and people trust him to do this, and this shows that he is a suitable witness. And if there are not two men to be witnesses, the True Lord specifies for us: '…then a man and two women from those whom you accept as witnesses….'

The True Lord peace and blessings be upon him asked us to do our best, that is, to choose witnesses from those whom we find acceptable; and He gave the reason why two women are called upon in place of one man by saying, '…so that if one of the women errs, then, the other can remind her….' This is because to give testimony implies being in close contact with society in order to bear witness to it and know what is going on therein, and women are generally far from this.

The general situation of women is that they have very little to do with these affairs, and they have no involvement in these transactions; so, if the situation calls for a woman's witnessing, the witnessing should be done by a man and two women because generally woman's thoughts are not occupied with the economic society which surrounds them, and one of them might make a mistake or forget, in which case the other can remind her, and they can both carefully study the matter together; for it is not the obligation of women to be closely involved with the affairs of the wide society, especially where labour is concerned.

After this, the True Lord says, '…And let not the witnesses refuse when they are called upon….' Just as the True Lord said that the scribe must not refuse to write up the credit transaction, the same is the case for being witness to the transaction. And what is the mode of the witnessing: is it concerned with the contraction of the debt, or the repaying of it? There are two stages: contracting, and repaying.

When we ask someone to come and bear witness to a credit transaction, he is not allowed to refuse; and this is the contraction. And after we have gone ahead with the loan, and we ask this witness to come before the judge and testify before him, this is the repayment stage. In this way, the witnesses must not refuse when they are called both at the stage of contraction, and the stage of repayment.

But the True Lord the Most High knows that every human being has his area of working in life, so, no one action should transgress against any other action. When the witness is called forth for either the stage of contraction first or repayment later, his own interests must not be impeded. His interests should not be impeded because he is just, and he is a witness; and so God ordained a ruling in this regard, saying, '…Let no scribe be harmed or any witness….'

So, the act of witnessing here requires us to respect the circumstances of the witness: if the witness has work, or an exam, or a deal to attend to, or something else, we may say to the witness: ‘You must be appointed this at the stage of contraction since there is no one else who can be trusted and viewed with confidence; as for the stage of repayment, you are compelled to attend.’ The witness can go to take care of the important things he has to attend to since no action should be allowed to transgress against any other action; for this reason, we must look for a witness who has the ability to control his work schedule to a certain extent; and if we do not find anyone else, what do we do? The True Lord said, ‘…Let no scribe be harmed or any witness….’ So, we must find some sort of payment for him to compensate for what he loses out on; we must not force him to neglect his own work, otherwise his honesty will be a source of harm for him because every person who is asked to be a witness, will have his work and interests hampered, and God does not protect the creditor and debtor by harming the scribe or the witness.

God uses of the word ‘harmed’ (yudarr) and this word can have two possible lexical meanings: in one meaning, it can be that the harm comes from the scribe, or the witness, and in the other, it means that the harm falls upon the scribe, or the witness. The word is the same, but since the final two root letters of the verb are combined, by taking them apart we can see what the meaning is. We may vocalise the verb thus: /yudarri/, with the vowel –/i/ at the end, and in this case it means that the harm comes from the scribe, by his falsifying what he writes, or the harm comes from the witness, by his testifying dishonestly.

And if we say ‘…Let no scribe be harmed or any witness….’ with the vocalisation /yudarra, with the vowel –/a/ at the end, what is being prohibited is that any harm should fall upon the scribe or witness from those for whom the writing is being done, and those for whom the witnessing is obliged, in order for the creditor to be assured of the money he lends, and to be certain that he will definitely get it back.

The scribe and the witness are two people who have their own lives, and each has a job which he does to obtain his livelihood; and if it is known that a scribe or witness is honest, he will therefore be called forth all the time by those who have an interest in contracting credit, and because of this, the interests of the scribe or witness might be hampered.

God wants to ensure, for this scribe or witness, that his interests will be preserved, which is why the laws set down in the Noble Quran address this principle, which is that if a witness is called from somewhere to be witness over a case, the travel expenses he incurs going to and from the case, must be paid for him, and if he is required to spend the night, he has the right to spend the night so that he does not incur harm by bearing witness, and so that the witness does not have to neglect his work, or pay his costs from his own pocket. The True Lord the Most High also wants to secure the interests of everyone, not the interest of one group at the expense of another.

The True Lord then, says of this 'harm', '…For if you do so, indeed, it is [grave] disobedience in you….' That is, if you do harm in either this way, or that, it will be sinful conduct on your part. He the Exalted warns us against any harm coming from the scribe or witness, or against any harm falling upon the scribe, or witness. To do harm is considered sinful, that is, disobedience.

The root word of 'disobedience' (fusooq) is fisq, which originally means for a ripe date to break free of its shell. When a fresh, hard date becomes soft, the shell breaks away from the root of the date and the fruit comes out of the shell, and this is call fisq in Arabic; from this root was derived the meaning of fusooq 'disobedience,' which means to break away from the obedience of God in all that He commands.

The True Lord the Most High then says, 'And fear God'; and we learnt before the meaning of 'fear of God,' when God says 'fear God,' or He the Exalted says, 'fear the Fire,' or He says, 'And fear a day when you will be returned to God…' (al-Baqara: 281). All of these concepts are based on the concept of a shield (wiqaya) from God's Attributes of Majesty, His Might, and His Overwhelming Power. When we say 'fear the Fire,' the fire of hell is one of the forces of God's Attributes of Overwhelming Power; so, 'fear God' is exactly akin to 'fear the Fire,' which is exactly akin to '…fear a day when you will be returned to God….' The True Lord the Most High also says, '…And fear God. And God teaches you….' And here there is a principle of faith which we must take from all of God's instructions of moral responsibility. If instructions come from one human being to another, you only obey a human being's instruction if he convinces you of its wisdom and purpose because the instruction is coming from one who is equal to you, and no one's intellect is greater than the other. You might say to the one who gives you instruction, 'Why should I do as you say when you do not do as I say? If you want to instruct me to do something, and you are my equal in humanity and fallibility, then, you had better convince me of the wisdom of your instruction.'

But if the instruction comes from a Higher Power, the True Lord the Most High, the God in whose Power, Knowledge, Wisdom, and lack of selfish desire, we have faith, then, in this situation the believer accepts the command before searching for any wisdom behind it because the wisdom behind this command is that it comes from God. And when the believer obeys the instruction which comes from God, he will come to know the secret of this wisdom later on; for the secrets of God's wisdoms come to the believer after he accepts to carry out his religious responsibilities.

For example, the True Lord the Most High does not convince His servant of the secrets of fasting; but if the believing servant fasts as God told him to, upon fasting, the believer will find the effect of the wisdom of fasting in his soul in a way that could not possibly have convinced him before he experienced it. When the believer carries out his religious responsibilities, God the Most High teaches him the wisdom of these responsibilities. We have a clear evidence for this from God's words to the believers that if they fear God, He will provide them with a standard by which to discern the true from the false, will efface their misdeeds, and will forgive them their sins; and God is limitless in His great favour (al-Anfal: 29).

God the Most High promises His believing servants that if they fear Him, He will grant them indicators to tell the true from the false, and he will blot out their misdeeds, and forgive them. Why? Because God Who teaches us is the True Lord the Most High, the Knower of all things, and God's Knowledge is intrinsic; as for human knowledge, it might be the result of the pressure of events on him, in a way that he thinks of ways to legislate to remove the evils that afflict him; but the knowledge of the Most High and All Knowing precedes this because it is intrinsic knowledge.

We saw before that God the Most High gave the issue of credit this much attention in order to secure the purity and soundness of life's motions; for the one who has no wealth has no way to move in life except by three things: either donations, that is voluntary gifts from benevolent people by which he can gain help in moving around in his life; the second is the zakat (poor-due) which God has made obligatory; and the third means is borrowing, in the manner that God has ordained.

When a poor believer finds no one to donate anything to him, or cannot get any zakat money, what can he do? He has to take a loan. So borrowing is the third resort for the economic life of those who have no wealth. We have learnt that God rewards loan with a greater reward than that He gives for charity because when you give charity, it leaves your soul right away, so, you do not think of it again; yet, in the case of a loan, your soul remains attached to it because you still remain the owner of the money; and every time you have patience for it, you earn more reward from God for every act of patience you extend to the debtor.

We know also that the True Lord the Most High made assurances for the credit process which we must understand from two angles: The first angle is that He thereby preserved the fruit of a man's labour in life, which is that he, by his labour, produces and possesses money. If we do not protect the fruits of his labour in life for him, he will not take work seriously; and if he does not take work seriously, many interests will be wasted because a person's work in life benefits many people whether he intends this, or not; we gave the example for this of someone who possesses wealth and wants to build an apartment building; so, God directs an inspiration in the form of a notion in the mind to him; and God says that no one can know the forces and the soldiers of the Lord but He (al-Muddaththir: 31).

So, the man says: Why should I hoard this wealth? Why should I not build an apartment building so that I can benefit from the rents? In this way, the money will not decrease, but will increase. And the man does not have any thoughts of benefitting others; he is concerned only with his own benefit; yet, even if he does not intend to benefit others, his action will benefit others nonetheless: the one who digs the ground, will be paid for this, and the one who lays the bricks, will be paid for this, and everyone who participates in the making of this building, either by construction, or installation of electricity and water, or decoration – every one of these people will be paid for this. So everyone benefits even if the investor does not have this in mind.

So, the True Lord wants to protect a person's work in life; for if God did not protect the fruit of his labour in life, the worker would suffice himself with enough to sustain himself and his dependants; and as for the weak person, who would support him? So, we must protect the wealth of the worker so that he will be encouraged to work. When God, the One Who gave people their provisions, asks the strong worker to give his weak, needy brother a loan, He does not say, 'Give a loan to the needy,' but rather, He the Exalted says, 'Who is it that would lend to God a goodly loan?' (al-Baqara: 245).

God the Most High respected the work of the working person in life, and considered wealth to be of the possession of the worker; so, God does not say to the worker: Give the needy person from the wealth which I gave to you; no; the wealth belongs to the worker, so, God says to him: Give Me a loan, for your brother is in need of it. We can only say – to illustrate, not to compare, for God is beyond compare – suppose you take something from your son's money box to help his brother, and you promise the son from whom you took the money that you will give him a lot in return. The money which you have taken from your son's savings as a loan, is the money which you gave to him in the first place.

So, God wants to protect life's motions; and if life's motions are not protected, no person will feel secure about his labour's fruits, and all life will be corrupted, and bitterness and resentment will become prevalent; and this is why God the Most High tells the believers that He does not demand of them to sacrifice in His Way all of their possessions because if He were to demand of them all of their possessions, and urge them, they would niggardly cling to them, and so He would but bring out their moral failings (Muhammad: 36-37).

When resentment spreads through society, there can never be any good in this society. So when the True Lord ordains the documentation of the debt contract, He wants to protect the work of the worker; for people differ among themselves in the ambition of their actions, and not all people have ambitious actions, but only some of them have. So let us make use of the ambitious actions that some people have because they will thereby benefit society, whether they intend to or not.

Furthermore, the True Lord the Most High wants also to protect man from himself; because when the debtor knows that the debt which he owes is contractually bound, and he has no way of denying it, he will try his best to work in life to pay it back; and when a person works to pay back his debt, this increases the amount of work in life, and the benefit thus increases.

In this way, we see that God wanted, by ordaining documentation of debts, to protect the debtor from his own self; for circumstances might come upon the debtor which would induce him to be lax in repaying his debt, and if he is lax, the loss will not be for him alone, but he will become an example for everyone else, and all those who have wealth would say, 'I will not give anyone any loan, because so-and-so, who was wealthy like me, gave to so-and-so the needy person, and he was lax with the money and used it all up.' At this point, the motions of life will come to a standstill. But if the credit is well documented and set in writing, the debtor will be eager to pay it back. God wants to preserve the motions of life in a way which is permanent, honest, noble and pure, which is why we find that in the verse of credit the word 'writing' and other words derived from its Arabic root (k-t-b) are repeated more than once – indeed many times: 'O you who have believed, when you contract a debt for a specified term, write it down. And let a scribe write [it] between you in justice. Let no scribe refuse to write as God has taught him. So let him write and let the one who has the obligation dictate. And let him fear God, his Lord, and not leave anything out of it. But if the one who has the obligation is of limited understanding or weak or unable to dictate himself, then let his guardian dictate in justice. And bring to witness two witnesses from among your men. And if there are not two men [available], then a man and two women from those whom you accept as witnesses – so that if one of the women errs, then the other can remind her. And let not the witnesses refuse when they are called upon. And do not be averse to write it, whether it is small or large, for its [specified] term. That is more equitable in the sight of God and stronger as evidence and more likely to prevent doubt between you, except when it is an immediate transaction which you conduct among yourselves. For [then] there is no blame upon you if you do not write it. And take witnesses when you conclude a contract. Let no scribe be harmed or any witness. For if you do so, indeed, it is [grave] disobedience in you. And fear God. And God teaches you. And God is Knowing of all things.'

This repetition in this verse of mentioning the action of writing gives the basis of relations between people; for writing is the basis of the contract, and it does not cheat because if you record something on paper, the paper will not come and deny what you wrote on it; but in the case of witnessing, things might be different, as it is possible that the witness might bend to someone's influence and deny the truth. For this reason, the True Lord presents to us a new matter of faith when He says, '…to write as God has taught him….' This means that the scribe should write according to how God has taught him the skills of writing; or, alternatively '…as God has taught him…' might mean that God was good to him by teaching him to write – something that not many others are skilled at – so, just as God was good to him, he must be good to others, and pass onto them the benefits of his writing.

It is not only a matter of writing, as this includes and incorporates every gift and talent by which God has distinguished any person from among the talents which God gives to His creatures; the believer is the one who acts in a way which passes on the effects of his blessing and talent to others, and you must pass on the effects which the talents of others have on you so that other people can benefit from them too. In this way, goodness and benefit will spread everywhere; for if you have a talent, you have a single talent which will suffice you in a single area of your life, and when you pass it on to everyone else and transfer it to them, so, everyone will use their communal talents for your benefit; and which of these is the greater benefit?

When you pass on and transfer your talent to other people, you are the one who benefits the most because everyone will pass on and transfer their talents to you. And if you work well for others, the work which you have to offer is one work, and when you do it well, God controls the notions which come to those who work for you and inspires them to do a good job for you, just as you did a good job for others. After this, the True Lord the Most High stresses to us the extreme importance of documentation and the written contract, saying:

وَإِن كُنتُمْ عَلَىٰ سَفَرٍ وَلَمْ تَجِدُوا۟ كَاتِبًا فَرِهَٰنٌ مَّقْبُوضَةٌ ۖ فَإِنْ أَمِنَ بَعْضُكُم
بَعْضًا فَلْيُؤَدِّ ٱلَّذِى ٱؤْتُمِنَ أَمَٰنَتَهُۥ وَلْيَتَّقِ ٱللَّهَ رَبَّهُۥ ۗ وَلَا تَكْتُمُوا۟ ٱلشَّهَٰدَةَ ۚ
وَمَن يَكْتُمْهَا فَإِنَّهُۥٓ ءَاثِمٌ قَلْبُهُۥ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ بِمَا تَعْمَلُونَ عَلِيمٌ ﴿٢٨٣﴾

If you are on a journey, and cannot find a scribe, something should be handed over as security, but if you decide to trust one another, then let the one who is trusted fulfil his trust; let him be mindful of God, his Lord. Do not conceal evidence: anyone who does so has a sinful heart, and God is fully aware of everything you do [283]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 283)

As we know, a ‘journey’ entails leaving the routine of life in one’s home; and the routine of life in one’s home makes one completely aware of the constituents of his life whilst journeying takes a person out of his life’s routine so that he cannot do many of the things he does when he is at home. Suppose you are travelling, and you are forced to take a loan, yet you cannot find a scribe, or a witness: what do you do?

The True Lord gives us the answer: ‘…then a pledge [should be] taken….’ So God did not leave aside the matter of credit even when one is on a journey; He legislated not only for cases when one is resident, but also for cases of travel: ‘…then a pledge [should be] taken….’ So, when one is resident, there is writing and witnessing, and when one is on a travel, there is a pledge in hand, the purpose of which is to protect a person from the various pressures of society.

But does the True Lord the Most High prevent aspirations of altruism? Does the True Lord the Most High prevent chivalry in transactions? Does the True Lord the Most High prevent the ideals of valour from pervading dealings of people? No. The True Lord the Most High says, ‘…And if one of you entrusts another, then let him who is entrusted discharge his trust [faithfully]….’ This is the aspiration of faith; and God did not block the way for valour or altruism in transactions. The writing of the debt, the witnessing, and the pledge are not obligatory since God says, ‘…And if one of you entrusts another, then let him who is entrusted discharge his trust [faithfully]….’

Also, you might understand that the one who is trusted is the debtor, to which we say: No; the matter is subject to change; there is a pledge, and this means that there are two matters here: the first is the ‘debt’ and the second is the ‘pledge,’ which is equivalent to the debt since one person is entrusted with regard to the pledge in his hand, whilst the other is entrusted with regard to the debt. For this reason, the wise words of the verse here refer to the one who takes the pledge and the one who takes the debt, which means that the one who takes the pledge, must fulfil his trust, and the other must fulfil his debt. And when we rise to this level of transactions, the thing which keeps a man in check is not the binding contract which is outside him, but rather, it is the binding of faith within his soul; but can we be certain that this binding of faith exists within all people?

Can we be certain of the circumstances? We cannot; for the trustworthiness of faith might exist at the time the debt is contracted and taken, but we cannot be sure that the trustworthiness of faith, will still exist when the time of repayment comes since someone might come to you and say, ‘I have one hundred pounds; I want you to keep it as a trust for me with you.’ The meaning of a ‘trust’ is that there is no contract and no witnesses, and it is all based on honesty and trust: if you wish, you can admit to the hundred pounds, and if you wish you can deny it. The man who does this with you, asks you to guarantee the hundred pounds with your faithful sense of honesty, and it is possible that you could say to him when he does this with you, ‘Yes, I will keep the hundred pounds with the utmost trust,’ with the intention of giving it back to him the moment he asks for it; but you cannot be sure of the circumstances of life for you, since as a human being you are subject to the vicissitudes of fate. It is possible that life might put such pressure on you that you are lax in returning the trust to him, or that you deny it, saying to the one who trusted you, ‘Get away from me, I cannot control myself now at the time of repayment even if I could control myself at the time I took it.’

Trust, in its general meaning, is a universal matter of existence, but the verse at hand deals with it from a specific angle. The True Lord the Most High deals with it in its general sense in all existence when He the Exalted says that indeed He did offer the trust [of reason and volition] to the heavens and the earth and the mountains, but they refused to bear it because they were afraid of it. Yet, man took it up – for, indeed, he has always been prone to be most wicked, most foolish (al-Ahzab: 72).

The entire universe feared for itself from bearing the burden of trust which meant that trust would be a matter of volition and free will, and no being in the universe was sure that it would be able to deliver when the time of implementation came. All these beings announced their decision, and refused to bear the burden of trust, as though they said: O Lord, we want to be subjugated and compelled with no free will. For this reason, we find that everything in the universe fulfils its purpose as God the Most High planned, except for man; that is, he was the one who accepted, with his intelligence and deliberation, to bear the trust of free will, and either by state or word he said: I am able to bear this trust because I am able to choose between alternatives.

Here, we remind man: You might be strong at the moment of assuming the responsibility, but what will be your condition when the time to fulfil it comes? This is why God said that man took up the trust – for indeed, he has always been prone to be most wicked, most foolish. Man wronged himself when he assumed the burden of trust yet did not discharge it properly, so, he is wicked; and he is foolish because he took the time of assumption into consideration, but not the time of fulfilment; or he did consider it, but then he broke the promise he had made himself to fulfil it.

So, even if man was sure he would fulfil the trust, he is subject to vicissitudes, which is why the True Lord the Most High says, '…And do not be averse to write it, whether it is small or large, for its [specified] term. That is more equitable in the sight of God…' (al-Baqara: 282). Writing the transaction down is an opportunity for a person to protect himself from weakness when the time of repayment comes, for God the Most High wants the matter to be guaranteed by contract so that you do not only rely on your own faithful honesty, but you are also subject to the binding contract which is exterior to your faithfulness; and this is achieved by writing down the debt transaction whether it is small, or big, together with the time at which it falls due.

The True Lord the Most High says, '…And do not hide testimony….' The command 'do not hide' is extremely expressive since the word 'testimony' implies ‘that which you have seen’; and since you saw it, this means it is a reality, and realities can never change. For this reason, the person who tells a true story, will never change the way he tells this story even if he tells it a thousand times because he is invoking a reality. On the other hand, the liar invokes something which is not real, which is why he says one thing and then, forgets the lie he told before, and so tells a different lie because he is not invoking something real. The word ‘witnessed’ means something which was actually seen; and as long as it was really seen and witnessed, it urges the one who saw it to tell it. So beware of hiding it because ‘to hide’ means that something wants to come out and you try to prevent it from doing so. This is why God the Most High says, ‘…And do not hide testimony….’ It is as though the natural disposition of faith urges the one who possesses it to speak of what he has witnessed because it is real. Because of this, the command comes from the True Lord: ‘…And do not hide testimony, for whoever hides it – his heart is indeed sinful….’ One might ask, ‘Is concealment here an attribute of the heart, or of the person who did not speak of what he witnessed?’ A poet said:

Speech lies in the heart,
The tongue is but the heart’s interpreter.

Whenever God emphasises something, he mentions the body part which is related to this matter. You say, ‘I saw it with my eyes; and I heard it with my ears; and I gave it with my hand; and I walked to it on my feet’: you mention the body part which plays a part in this matter.

When the True Lord says, ‘…for whoever hides it – his heart is indeed sinful…,’ know that all the body parts are subject to the heart; ‘…and God is Knowing of what you do.’ That is, your concealment of the truth does not change the reality of God’s knowledge in the slightest. And when the transaction of credit and its contraction and conditions are settled, whether it is at home, or on a journey, God preserves, for the man who works in life, a work which is noble and pure.

If this is not the case, all interests in the society will be in jeopardy and will be brought to a standstill; and what will the one who is unable to work do for a living? His heart will fill with resentment towards the wealthy, and he will hate the blessings that they enjoy; and when the needy person hates the blessings of his wealthy brother, the blessing itself will hate to go to the one who hates it for his brother. These are matters which the True Lord the Most High has planned to be connected with one another.

The blessing loves the blessed one more than the blessed one loves the blessing, and it goes to the one to whom God sends it lovingly; so, if someone hates to see the blessing go to the blessed one, the blessing will refuse to go to him, as though it is saying to him: You will not get any good from me. If anyone wants to know about this, let him try it for himself.

Love the blessings that others enjoy, and you will find that everyone's blessings are at your service. If you love the blessings that others have, they will come to you to serve you. Moreover, the believer must know that some blessings are not born of effort and striving, but blessing might be simply out of the grace of God which He grants to some of His creatures; and when you hate to see them with the one blessed by them, you are thereby objecting to God's decree of blessing; and when you object to God's decree of blessing, the True Lord the Most High will not allow you to benefit anything from them.

If you see someone withholding his blessings from his relatives, know that they hate to see him with these blessings; if they loved them, the blessings would rush to them. The Divine way wants to make people a single, cooperative, and self-completing entity so that if I see that you have obtained a blessing, I love to see it with you; and when I love to see the blessing with you, this blessing will in turn be given to me, and you will find no difference between the haves and the have-nots; you only find differences between haves and have-nots in societies which pay no regard to God's Law.

We said this in connection with the situation when a person is forced to take a usurious loan because he finds no one to give him a goodly loan, and finds no one to fulfil God's obligation upon them of the poor-due in order to meet his need, so, he is forced to take a usurious loan. In this way, the usurious society enters into a war with God; and does anyone have the strength to enter into a war with God? No. And the usurious society also enters into a war with the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him.

The Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him forbade usury, and said in his sermon in the Farewell Pilgrimage, ‘All usury is hereby annulled, yet you are entitled to your principal; and you will do no wrong, nor will you be wronged. God decreed that there is to be no usury, and the usury of ‘Abbas ibn ‘Abd Al-Muttalib is all annulled.’ The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him started with annulling the usury of his uncle.

This is the loftiness of Divine legislation; those who make human legislation seek to protect their relatives from the law, yet, Divine legislation imposes its application on the relatives before anyone else. The example of this is ‘Umar ibn Al-Khattab God be pleased with him: when ‘Umar wanted to enforce a law, he would first command his family and relatives to obey it, saying, ‘I will do (such-and-such), and by God in whose hand is my soul, if anyone of you disobeys me in this I will make an example of him to the Muslims.’ And ‘Umar God be pleased with him would announce this to all people; and why would he announce this? Because many people tend to make allowances for rulers (by being lenient with their relatives) when the rulers themselves might not be aware of this; we might find someone going to a group of people and, on the strength of his family name, getting what he wants from the people against their wishes by intimidating them; and the ruler might not be aware that this behaviour is going on.

But when the ruler announces to the people and to his relatives that there will be no distinction where the implementation of his law is concerned, and that the law applies to himself and his family, whoever uses the ruler’s name, or tries anything like this, will face the consequences for his actions; and in this way, things will be upright. But if, after the period of reign of the rulers has come to an end, facts come to light of their relative’s abuses, we will say: Why we know all this from the start? And where were these facts when they actually occurred?

The Muslim ruler must announce to his subjects that laws must be applied to him first of all, and to his dependants. Because of this, the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him said at the Farewell Pilgrimage, ‘The usury of al-Jahiliya (the pre-Islamic times) is hereby annulled, and the first usury I annul is our usury: the usury of ‘Abbas ibn ‘Abd Al-Muttalib, which is hereby all annulled.’(1)

(1) Narrated by Muslim in Khutbat Al-Wada‘ fi Hujjat Al-Wada‘

And at the battle of Badr, the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him brought out the people of his own family to fight; If no one from his family come out to fight, someone from the disbelievers would have said: He is protecting his own family; and if the reward of martyrdom is paradise, why does he send those who are unrelated to him instead of sending his loved ones to fight?

Yet, the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him sent forward his relatives and loved ones, and he was well-informed by his Lord about the matter of martyrdom, and how it shortens for a person the toils of life and causes him to enter paradise. In this way, the favouritism at the onset of Islam was based on that which lasts forever, not like the favouritism of fools which is based on that which is ephemeral.

When the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him teaches us this and strikes the hands of those who deal in usury, this is the war which has to be waged: the war of God, the Sovereign, the All-Powerful; as for those who are weak and cannot fight, they do not wage this war because they stand before their Creator and Conqueror, and they cannot wage war against Him. This is why the state must pay attention to these kinds of matters, and establish Islamic laws; and after this, if the obligatory poor-due is not enough to meet the requirements of the needy, the state could impose what it chooses in order to meet the needs of the needy.

After clarifying the matter of doctrine with His words ‘God – there is no deity except Him, the Ever-Living, the Sustainer of [all] existence…’ (al-Baqara: 255), and the matter of the law concerning the doctrine with His words ‘There shall be no compulsion in [acceptance of] the religion…’ (al-Baqara: 256), and protecting the doctrine by commanding the believers to fight in order to ensure the ascendancy of God’s word, and then speaking about the economic motions of spending first of all on God’s cause, and then spending on the needy, the True Lord the Most High then says:

لِّلَّهِ مَا فِي ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَمَا فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِۗ وَإِن تُبۡدُواْ مَا فِيٓ أَنفُسِكُمۡ أَوۡ تُخۡفُوهُ يُحَاسِبۡكُم
بِهِ ٱللَّهُۖ فَيَغۡفِرُ لِمَن يَشَآءُ وَيُعَذِّبُ مَن يَشَآءُۗ وَٱللَّهُ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَيۡءٖ قَدِيرٌ ﴿٢٨٤﴾

Whatever is in the heavens and in the earth belongs to God and, whether you reveal or conceal your thoughts, God will call you to account for them. He will forgive whoever He will and punish whoever He will: He has power over all things [284]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 284)

The verse opens with the prepositional phrase ‘To God’ before the main idea of the sentence: ‘…belongs whatever is in the heavens and whatever is in the earth…’ and the True Lord the Most High says, ‘To God belongs whatever is in the heavens and whatever is in the earth….’ This is the realm in which all creatures exist and no one has ever claimed that the heavens and earth belong to him, but there may be things within the heavens or the earth of which creatures claim ownership. If we look at the good things of this earth, we find that they are sometimes in the ownership of people who have been given ownership of them by God; those human beings who flew up into space and placed all their satellites and space stations, are able to claim their ownership of these satellites and space stations.

The True Lord the Most High draws our attention with His words here ‘To God belongs whatever is in the heavens and whatever is in the earth…,’ clarifying for us that although it appears that God has given ownership of means of living to His creatures, He only gave this ownership temporarily, and it will be taken from them later: either they will leave it by dying, or else it will leave them and be taken from them by sale, gift, appropriation, or theft.

The phrase ‘To God’ – coming at the beginning of the sentence – implies exclusivity and restrictedness; everything in existence belongs to God; and no one can claim, because of the causality of what God has given him, that he really possesses anything. Why? Because no human owner can ensure that his own life will continue.

We have never seen anyone who was not subject to vicissitudes; and since vicissitudes affect everyone, we should be aware that God wants His creatures to feel for one another, and complete one another, and He wants His creatures to cooperate. The True Lord does not do this because the matter is out of His hand – God forbid – no; God is telling us: I possess everything in the heavens and everything in the earth, and I can make it so that things pass around from person to person. For this reason, we say to those who reach high levels of wealth, prestige, or anything else: Beware when a blessing is completed for you. Why? Because if the blessing is completed for you in status, wealth, health, and offspring, you are subject to vicissitudes, and since it has been completed and reached its limit and you are certainly subject to vicissitudes, the blessing will inevitably start to decline. If a person reaches the summit, he must at some point come down from this summit, which is why the poet said:

When something is completed, it begins to diminish:
Expect to see it fade when it is said to be completed.

History has preserved for us the story of the Arab woman who went to see the caliph and said to him, ‘May God complete His blessings for you.’ The people sitting around the caliph heard this and were pleased, and expressed their pleasure; but the caliph said to them, ‘By God, you have not understood what she said. She said, may God complete His blessings for you; and if they are complete they will begin to fade because vicissitudes pursue men.’ This is how the caliph understood the woman’s intention.

A poet said:

My own soul, which owns these things, will depart:
So how can I mourn for anything that it loses?

The soul which possesses things will itself be lost, so, how can one be sad about anything he loses?

The True Lord the Most High requires us to always keep this in mind: that all the universe belongs to God, and all human beings, with their selves and their souls and all that they reveal and conceal, do not escape God’s knowledge; and the True Lord the Most High does not only hold us to account according to what He knows, but also according to what has been recorded against us.

Everyone will read his own record for himself, as God the Exalted says that He has fastened for every human being his fate to his neck; and on the Day of Resurrection, God will bring forth for him a record which he will find wide open; and he will be told to read his record. Sufficient is his own soul on that day to make out his account (al-Isra': 13-14).

The Reckoning means that every person has an account of all that is for him and all that is against him; and the True Lord the Most High explains to us what 'for and against' means by speaking of weighing, as we are familiar with weighing things; He the Exalted says that true will be the weighing on that Day: and those whose weight of good deeds is heavy in the balance – it is they, they who shall be successful; whereas those whose weight is light in the balance – it is they who will have wasted their own selves by their wilful wrongdoing (al-A'raf: 8-9).

The Reckoning of the True Lord is precise and just: those people, whose scale of good deeds is heavy, are those who will gain the victory of paradise, whilst those who sold themselves to Satan and their soul's caprice, will see that the scale of their ill deeds is heavy, and will thus become the inmates of hell.

So, we are faced with two kinds of people: those whose scale of good deeds is heavier in the balance of the Reckoning, and those whose scale of bad deeds and evils is heavier in the balance of the Reckoning. So what about those whose two scales of deeds are evenly balanced so that their good and ill deeds are equal? They are the people of al-A'raf ('the Heights'), who will eventually obtain forgiveness from God because God's forgiveness – and He is the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy – outstrips His wrath. If the case of the people of the Heights was not mentioned in the Quran, someone might have said: God told us about those whose good deeds are heavy, and those whose good deeds are light, but He did not tell us about those whose evils are equal to their good deeds.

But the Forbearing and All Knowing Lord clarified everything for us, and explained that His forgiveness outstrips His wrath; therefore, God the Most High does not let it be sufficient with His knowledge when it comes to the Reckoning, but rather He makes a clear precise record, which is why the True Lord the Most High reassures us by saying that excepted from torment, however, will be those who repent and believe and do righteous deeds; for it is they whose previous bad deeds God will transform into good ones – seeing that God is indeed All-Forgiving, All-Merciful (al-Furqan: 70).

The True Lord the Most High reassures us that we will find all the good that we do in the scale of the balance, and He also assures us that He the Exalted will compensate us for the evil which evil people inflict upon us, and that we will take from their good deeds and add them to our balance. So the reassurance comes from two sides: The True Lord assures us that the good we do will not be left out of our account; and He also assures us concerning the evil which people do to us, and tells us that the True Lord will take from their good deeds and transfer them to us.

In observing events in life, we find that God might love many people because of an attribute of goodness which they possess, and this good attribute might be hidden so that other people cannot see it; but God Whose knowledge misses nothing, sees this person's attribute and loves him because of it; and the True Lord sees that this person's good deeds are scant, so, He makes some other people touch this man with their evil and their bad deeds so that He can take from the good deeds of these evil people and add them to this man's good deeds.

The meaning of '…you reveal what is within your souls…' is that you manifest your feelings in the form of practical expressions; but does 'conceal it' mean not to manifest your psychological feelings in the form of practical expressions? No; because not everything has a practical expression. Take love, for example: a person might love, but not find the power of expression to proclaim that he is in love. Likewise, the one who feels hatred, might not have the power of expression to proclaim this resentment. So there are actions which settle in the hearts; but does God hold us to account for what settles in our souls?

This delicate matter requires absolute precision in discussion, and we find that some of the Companions of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him took a position in this matter which caused some of them to weep out of fear for themselves. When 'Abdullah ibn 'Umar God be pleased with them heard this verse, he said: 'If God is to take us up for that which we conceal in our souls, we would perish!' And he wept until his sobs could be heard. Ibn 'Abbas God be pleased with them heard about this, and he said, 'May God have mercy on Abu 'Abd Ar-Rahman, his fellow Muslims have found the same in this verse as he found.’ God then, revealed the words that He does not charge any soul with more than it is well able to bear (al-Baqara: 286) and the following verse till the end of the chapter.

We should be aware that the inclinations of the soul are many; there is something called a ‘notion or a passing idea,’ and something called an ‘idea,’ and something called a ‘conscious inclination,’ and there is ‘deliberation,’ and ‘resolve.’ These are five states, and the first four of these states are plain; it is the fifth state, where the intention is clear, which we must pay attention to. Let us consider each state in some detail.

A notion is a thought which occurs at once out of a sudden while an idea creeps into the mind little by little; in conscious inclination, the soul is always vacillating; deliberation is to gather all the means and debate about each of the means by which one can attain his desire; as for resolve, or intention, it is to arrive at the conclusion and begin to act upon it. t is resolve or intention which is meant by God the Most High when He says, ‘…Whether you reveal what is within your souls or conceal it, God will bring you to account for it….’ And we find that many scholars have pondered over these words, and some scholars have wondered whether, the verse which comes after this saying that He does not charge any soul with more than it is well able to bear (al-Baqara: 286) thereby abrogates this verse or not.

But when we realise that this verse is a statement of fact, and that it is not statements of fact which can be abrogated, but rather, only rulings, this calls us to conclude that it is intention and resolve which are being referred to when God the Most High says, ‘…Whether you reveal what is within your souls or conceal it, God will bring you to account for it….’ This is what God will hold us accountable for. When the True Lord the Most High says, ‘…Then He will forgive whom He wills….’ Who are these? God has made it clear that those whom He wills to forgive are those who repent, and those who turn back to God, of whom the True Lord said that excepted from torment will be those who repent and believe and do righteous deeds; for it is they whose previous bad deeds God will transform into good ones – seeing that God is indeed All-Forgiving, All-Merciful (al-Furqan: 70).

Replacing evil deeds with good deeds is something which the person whom God holds morally responsible, must pause to reflect on in order to see God’s grace; for when someone does an evil deed and it then pains him, whenever it pains him that he has done an evil deed and he laments it, God records a good deed for him. But the one who has not done an evil deed is not bothered by this; a sage once said, ‘An ill deed which breeds humility and contrition, is better than a good deed which breeds pride and arrogance.’

You can find that much of the goodness in the world comes from those who sinned against themselves in some way, and then, repented of it, but it still continues to give them anguish. One of those might be strong in everything, but he is weak in one matter; and his weakness in it causes him to fall into disobedience, whilst he tries his utmost in those things where he is not weak to do as much good as he can so that God will efface and wipe out this with that. The goodness in the world might well come from people who commit ill deeds and sin against themselves in one thing, so, God the Most High wills to make them directed towards many areas of goodness and they would think: Perhaps this will make up for that.

But for the one who continues routinely in this way so that his sin does not disturb him, these matters might remain lukewarm in his soul. For this reason, we must not look at those who sin against themselves from a single perspective, but rather, we must look from multiple perspectives, and we must have good manners with them, and pray that God would forgive them the deeds that we know of them, and bless them for what they have offered, and that God will relieve them from the burden of what they have done of misdeeds.

Some scholars say that God’s words ‘…Then He will forgive whom He wills and punish whom He wills…’ mean that God has made forgiveness dependent on the servant: if you want God to forgive you, then, do many good deeds so that God will turn your sins into good deeds; and if you want to be chastised – and no one wants this – then don not do any good deeds.

This matter lets us know that when the True Lord the Most High asks us to believe in Him, he gives the reins to us; and simply by believing in Him, we take from Him the reins of free will. The evidence for this is clear from the Sacred Hadith in which Abu Hurayra God be pleased with him related that the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him said: 'God the Glorious and Exalted says: I am as My servant thinks of me, and I am with him when he remembers Me: if he remembers Me to himself, I remember him to Myself; if he remembers Me in an assembly, I remember him in a better assembly; and if he draws nearer to Me by a hand-span, I draw nearer to him by an arm's length; and if he draws nearer to Me by an arm's length, I draw nearer to him by a fathom's length; and if he comes to Me walking, I go to him at speed.'(1)

Simply by having faith, God gives you the reins; if you want God to draw an arm's-length nearer to you, draw a hand's-span nearer to Him; and if you want God to draw a fathom's-length nearer to you, draw an arm's-length nearer to Him. And if you want your Lord to come to you at speed – running – then go to Him walking. Simply by seeing you approaching Him and turning to Him, God will draw nearer to you; it is as though He says to you: No, you relax; I am the One Who will come to you.

This is why we said before when we spoke about prayer that when you believe in God, and then the mue'dhdhin calls for the prayer, you go to the prayer; it is true that you go to the obligatory prayer, but has God prevented you from standing before Him at any time? God asked you to stand before Him five times a day, and after this He left the door open for you, O believer; God does not lose interest until the servant loses interest.

In a person's ordinary life – and God is beyond compare – if he wants to meet an important person, he requests a meeting, and the important person either agrees to meet with the one who requests the meeting, or he declines. If this important person agrees to the meeting, the important person is the one who specifies the time and the place, and he might also request to know the purpose and subject of the meeting. But God leaves the door open for the believing servant; God will meet His servant for any reason, at any time, in any place, and at any moment.

It is enough honour for me that I am a servant
Whose Lord meets with him without an appointment;

---

(1) Narrated by Muslim on the authority of Abu Hurayra God be pleased with him in Kitab Ad-Dhikr

Despite His Holy Sanctity,
I can meet with Him wherever and whenever I like.

So, whose hand holds the reins? The reins are in the hand of the believing servant; so, when they say that '…Then He will forgive whom He wills…' means that it is in the hands of men as to whether they are to be forgiven, this means that if they want God to forgive them, they do things which merit this forgiveness, and repent to God, and do many good deeds; and if someone wants to be chastised, let him continue to recklessly do evil deeds.

After this, God the Glorious and Exalted says:

ءَامَنَ ٱلرَّسُولُ بِمَآ أُنزِلَ إِلَيۡهِ مِن رَّبِّهِۦ وَٱلۡمُؤۡمِنُونَۚ كُلٌّ ءَامَنَ بِٱللَّهِ
وَمَلَٰٓئِكَتِهِۦ وَكُتُبِهِۦ وَرُسُلِهِۦ لَا نُفَرِّقُ بَيۡنَ أَحَدٖ مِّن رُّسُلِهِۦۚ
وَقَالُواْ سَمِعۡنَا وَأَطَعۡنَاۖ غُفۡرَانَكَ رَبَّنَا وَإِلَيۡكَ ٱلۡمَصِيرُ ﴿٢٨٥﴾

The Messenger believes in what has been sent down to him from his Lord, as do the faithful. They all believe in God, His angels, His scriptures, and His messengers. 'We make no distinction between any of His messengers,' they say, 'We hear and obey. Grant us Your forgiveness, our Lord. To You we all return!' [285] (The Quran, al-Baqara: 285)

When we reflect on this noble verse, we find that the first instance of belief mentioned is the belief of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him: 'The Messenger has believed in what was sent down to him from his Lord….' After this comes the belief of those to whom the Messenger delivered the call: '…and [so have] the believers….' After this, the belief of the Messenger becomes intermixed with the belief of the believers: '…Each one of them has believed in God and His angels and His books and His messengers, [saying], "We make no distinction between any of His messengers." And they say, "We hear and we obey. [We seek] Your forgiveness, our Lord, and to You is the [final] destination."'

That is, both the Messenger and the believers believe in God. The first belief is that of the Messenger of God, and then, also the belief of those who believed in the Message which the Messenger brought, since the verb ‘believe’ refers to both the Messenger and the believers. And after this, God brings them together – the Messenger and the believers – in a single belief; and this is something natural, since the Messenger of God believed in God first, after which He delivered the Message to us, and we believed in God; and then, the faith became common, and our faith became the faith of the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him, and the faith of the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him became our faith; and this is illustrated in God’s words: ‘…Each one of them has believed in God.’

So, in the first stage, the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him was the first to believe in God; and when the Messenger believed in God, he was required to believe that he was the Messenger of God; the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him did say, ‘And I testify that Muhammad is the Messenger of God.’ And when something in his own life pleased him, he peace and blessings be upon him would say, ‘I testify that I am the Messenger of God,’ and he would say it joyfully.

An example of this is the story narrated by Jabir ibn ‘Abdullah God be pleased with him, who said: There was a Jew in Medina who used to give me a loan of dates which I would repay at harvest time – and Jabir owned the land which lay on the road to Rooma – and one year the harvest failed,(1) and when the Jew came to me at harvest-time, I had nothing for him; so, I began to ask him for a year’s extension, and he refused. The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was informed of this, so, he said to his Companions: ‘Let us go and ask the Jew to give Jabir more time.’ They came to me at my orchard, and the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him began to speak to the Jew, who said, ‘O Abd Al-Qasim, I will not give him more time.’ When the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him saw this, he stood up and walked around the palms, and then came back and spoke to him again, and he refused. I brought a few soft dates and placed them before the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him, and he ate, then he said: ‘Where is your hut, Jabir?’ I told him where it was, and he said, ‘Spread out a blanket there for me.’ I did so, and he went in and took a nap; and when he woke up I brought him some more dates, and he ate them. Then he got up and spoke to the Jew again, and he refused. So he got up and walked around the fresh date palms a second time, then said, ‘O Jabir, harvest, and pay (your debt),’ and he stood in the harvesting area, and I picked from the trees enough to pay my debt and more besides. I went out to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and told him the good news of this, and he said: ‘I testify that I am the Messenger of God!’(1)

(1) In another narration, he said, ‘One year the harvest was different from usual.’

And the True Lord the Most High testifies that there is no deity but Him: God Himself gives evidence – and so do the angels and all who are endowed with knowledge – that there is no deity save Him, the Upholder of Equity: there is no deity save Him, the Almighty, the Truly Wise (Al-‘Imran: 18).

So, God testifies that there is no deity but Him, and the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him testifies that there is no deity but God, and he also testifies that he is the Messenger of God, who passes all of this on to the believers so that the formation of belief is completed. This is why the True Lord says of this, ‘…Each one of them has believed in God and His angels and His books and His messengers….’ And the True Lord uses the word ‘Each’ (kull) in the Arabic indefinite form to mean both the Messenger and the believers.

God then, lists for us the components of faith: ‘…Each one of them has believed in God and His angels and His books and His messengers, [saying], ‘We make no distinction between any of His messengers.’ And they say, ‘We hear and we obey. [We seek] Your forgiveness, our Lord, and to You is the [final] destination.’ We know that belief in God, and everything connected with belief, must be a matter of the unseen, and there can be no such thing as faith in tangible things. Faith is not concerned with tangible things, since they can be seen. The components of belief in this verse are as follows:

Belief in God Who is Unseen; and belief in the angels, who are unseen creations of God, and had God not informed us that He has creations called angels, we would not have known about them. God told us that He created the angels, and they do not disobey God in what He commands them, and they do as they are bid, and they are unseen; if not for this, we would not know about the angels.

Then there is belief in the Books and the messengers. Someone might say, ‘Are the messengers unseen? And are the Divine Revelations unseen? The messengers are human beings, and the scriptures can be seen.’ To answer this, we say: No; none of us have ever witnessed revelation being sent down to a messenger, and this means that the matter of the revelation of scripture to a messenger is a matter of the Unseen, which God knows and in which we believers believe. And how can we believe in all the messengers and not make any difference between them? We say that the messengers sent by God only deliver a way of guidance from God which contains doctrines that do not change with the passage of time, and rulings which change with the passage of time according to the circumstances connected with them.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in Al-At‘ima, and by Muslim in Al-Iman

So, the doctrinal essence of every message remains the same, but the required practical applications in life differ because life’s circumstances differ; and when life’s circumstances differ, the True Lord sends down the appropriate legislation. But the essence is the same, which is sent to us by the Creator besides whom there is no deity. For this reason, the wise words come: ‘…We make no distinction between any of His messengers….’ We make no distinction between the messengers in that they deliver to us from God what all the different forms of revelation agree on in terms of doctrinal matters, and what they differ upon in terms of rulings which are appropriate for the conditions of their time.

After this, the True Lord says, ‘…We hear and we obey….’ Hearing means that the call is delivered, and obeying means that its requirements are implemented, and that the believer obeys the commands and prohibitions in everything connected with the motions of life. Those who wish to separate religion from the motions of life say, ‘Religion is concerned with acts of worship such as prayer, fasting, the poor-due and the pilgrimage’; and beyond this, they seek to separate the motions of life from religion.

To these people, we say: You are speaking about what you have heard about a religion which did not come to regulate the motions of life, but rather came to restore the element which was absent from the Jews, namely the element of spirituality; but the Islamic religion came as a seal of all the religions to regulate the motions of life; for every matter of life and every motion within it are contained within the limits of obedience. When we read the Noble Quran, we find the wise words where God addresses the believers saying that when the call to prayer is sounded on the day of congregation (Friday), they should hasten to the remembrance of God, and leave all worldly commerce: this is for their own good, if they but knew it (al-Jumu'a: 9).

So, the True Lord the Most High commands the believers and takes them from one of the motions of life to a different motion, He does not take them arbitrarily, but rather, He calls them to announce their communal loyalty, which is an announcement from every believer of servitude before God in front of all other creatures. And after the believers finish praying, what does the True Lord the Most High say to them? He tells them that when the prayer is ended, to disperse freely on earth and seek to obtain something of God's bounty, but to remember God often so that they might attain success (al-Jumu'a: 10).

So, dispersing freely on earth is a motion of life, just as the call to hasten to God's remembrance was. In this way, every motion of life is included within the realm of obedience; so '…We hear, and we obey…' means, we have heard all of the teaching. But when we hear the teaching and when we obey, do we have the ability to obey all the teachings of the Way, or will we make mistakes?

Since no one is able to be completely obedient, and we make mistakes, God's words then come: '…[We seek] Your forgiveness, our Lord, and to You is the [final] destination.' The final destination all goes back to You, and You are the True God; so, we servants ask You for forgiveness so that when we meet You, we will be sure that Your mercy outstrips Your wrath. The True Lord the Most High then says:

لَا يُكَلِّفُ ٱللَّهُ نَفۡسًا إِلَّا وُسۡعَهَاۚ لَهَا مَا كَسَبَتۡ وَعَلَيۡهَا مَا ٱكۡتَسَبَتۡۗ رَبَّنَا لَا
تُؤَاخِذۡنَآ إِن نَّسِينَآ أَوۡ أَخۡطَأۡنَاۚ رَبَّنَا وَلَا تَحۡمِلۡ عَلَيۡنَآ إِصۡرٗا كَمَا حَمَلۡتَهُۥ
عَلَى ٱلَّذِينَ مِن قَبۡلِنَاۚ رَبَّنَا وَلَا تُحَمِّلۡنَا مَا لَا طَاقَةَ لَنَا بِهِۦۖ وَٱعۡفُ عَنَّا وَٱغۡفِرۡ
لَنَا وَٱرۡحَمۡنَآۚ أَنتَ مَوۡلَىٰنَا فَٱنصُرۡنَا عَلَى ٱلۡقَوۡمِ ٱلۡكَٰفِرِينَ ٢٨٦

God does not burden any soul with more than it can bear:
each gains whatever good it has done, and suffers its bad –
'Lord, do not take us to task if we forget or make mistakes.
Lord, do not burden us as You burdened those before us.

Lord, do not burden us with more than we have strength to bear. Pardon us, forgive us, and have mercy on us. You are our Protector, so help us against the disbelievers' [286]
(The Quran, al-Baqara: 286)

'God does not charge a soul except [with that within] its capacity….' He the Exalted only burdens you with what you can bear; why? Because with respect to the capacity of the human soul, there are three kinds of actions: the first kind is of those which we have no power over, and these are far removed from what God charges us with. The second kind relates to those which we have power over, but with great difficulty so that we have to exert our powers somewhat. The third kind is related to those things which we are well able to bear. So 'God does not charge a soul except [with that within] its capacity…' This means that the True Lord the Most High only charges the soul with responsibilities which are within the confines of its ability. The True Lord the Most High held every Muslim responsible for praying five obligatory prayers a day, and our times are filled with prayer; and it could have been ten prayers since there are people who are able to offer supererogatory prayers. And He the Exalted held every Muslim responsible for fasting one month; yet, are there not some people who fast three months? The same can be said of the zakat (poor-due) since there have been people who give all of their wealth for God's sake, not only the poor-due which they are obliged to give.

So, we are well able to bear this, and even to do more. There are, then, three kinds of things: things which are beyond our ability so that they do not enter the realm of responsibility; and things which we are able to do, but only with difficulty; and things which we are well able to bear. When the True Lord the Most High gives us responsibilities, He gives us things which we are well able to do; and as long as He gives us things which we are well able to do, if you willingly do anything extra this is another matter: '…And he who of his own accord volunteers a good work, shall derive good from it: and good shall it be for you to fast if you know it' (al-Baqara: 184), as long as you offer something extra which is of the same kind as that which He made obligatory.

So moral responsibilities are within our ability to bear; otherwise, if you were not well able to bear them, you would not voluntarily offer anything more. He the Exalted says, ‘God does not charge a soul except [with that within] its capacity…’ and after this He teaches us how to supplicate by saying, ‘…“Our Lord, and do not lay upon us a burden like that which You laid upon those before us. Our Lord, and do not burden us with that which we have no ability to bear….”’ And He has already told us that ‘God does not charge a soul except [with that within] its capacity…;’ so He the Exalted holds us responsible only for that which we are able to do.

It is related that when God heard His Messenger and the believers saying, ‘…Our Lord, and do not lay upon us a burden like that which You laid upon those before us…,’ He the Exalted said, ‘I assent.’ And when they said, ‘…Our Lord, and do not burden us with that which we have no ability to bear…,’ He the Exalted said, ‘I assent.’ And He the Exalted did not burden us with more than we are well able to bear which means the lowest common denominator of all the believers. There are people whose aspirations are higher than those of others; and in the case of those whose aspirations are high, they may perform additional acts of worship voluntarily; and in the case of those whose aspiration is not so high, they only do that which is obligatory for them. And if anything happens to a person to make the ruling beyond what he is well able to bear, God lightens the burden: the Sacred Law says to the traveller: You have left your habitual life, and gone to places in which you are not settled, so the True Lord lightens your burdens for you; thus you may forgo fasting in Ramadan, and you may shorten your prayers.

The True Lord the Most High knows that what is within our capacity might sometimes be diminished, which is why He the Glorious and Exalted lightens some of the rulings of religious charges and gives dispensations when they cannot be borne. An example of this is found in God’s ruling concerning fighting when He reassured the believers in one of the battles that He has lightened their burden, for He knows that they suffer from weakness; and so if there is one hundred of them who are patient in adversity, they should be able to overcome two hundred (al-Anfal: 66).

Before this verse was revealed, the proportion in battle was one to ten (that is if the believers face an enemy force that was ten times their number, they should persist and fight), and then the True Lord the Most High lightened it and made it one to two (that if they face an enemy force that was only double their number) because there was weakness. In this way we see that He the Exalted will lighten the burden of responsibility whenever it goes beyond what we are well able to bear.

Many people interpret this in the wrong way, saying that some moral responsibilities are beyond their capacity. To these people, we say: No, it is not for you to determine what you are well able to bear and then, to measure the responsibility by this standard. Rather, consider whether He charged you with it, or not. If the True Lord held you responsible for it, you must judge that He burdened you with that which you are well able to bear, and all of the responsibilities with which the Most Merciful burdens us are things which we are well able to bear. 'God does not charge a soul except [with that within] its capacity. It will have [the consequence of] what [good] it has gained, and it will bear [the consequence of] what [evil] it has earned….'

The expression 'it will have' implies possession and distinction, and it means that which benefits and gains reward for the soul; and 'it will bear' implies having committed a misdeed. We notice that the expression 'it will have' is always used with the Arabic verb form kasab (rendered here as 'gained') (in a positive context), whilst the expression 'it will bear' always goes with the Arabic verb from iktasab (rendered as 'earned' with a negative connotation, sinning), except in one single verse, when the True Lord the Most High says, 'Yea! Whoever earns evil and by his sin is engulfed, these are the inmates of the Fire, therein to abide for ever' (al-Baqara: 81). (Here the verb form kasab is used)

There is an observation to be made here about style, since the form kasab means that there is a difference in the mode of action between this form and iktasab: the form iktasab is on the morphological pattern ifta'al which suggests affectation and the performance of an action which requires manipulation. As for kasab, it means doing something natural and in harmony with the soul's original inclination. So kasab is not the same as iktasab, and all good deeds are done by kasab, not iktasab.

For example, when a man looks at his wife and sees her beauty, does he have to employ any artifice, or is this something natural? It is natural; yet, when he looks at a woman who is not his wife or kin, he looks around to see if anyone saw him looking, and if he will be mocked or jeered because of what he did. Why? It was so because he has committed an unnatural act.

Another example: when a person eats food bought with his own money, or his father's money, he eats in a natural way; but when someone enters an orchard to steal from it, he employs artifice and trickery when doing so, and tries to hide himself. The evildoer employs artifice, whilst the actions of the one who does good are simple, with no artifice. Evil is that which requires artifice and affectation.

The greatest misfortune is when evildoing requires no artifice because the one who does it, must have reached the point where his faithful sensitivity has become blunted, and evil deeds become a simple (and natural) matter for him because he has become used to doing them so much. The True Lord says, 'Yea! Whoever earns evil and by his sin is engulfed…' (al-Baqara: 81). Sinfulness surrounds them from all sides, and there is no longer any way out, and he does not employ any artifice since he has developed and acquired a predisposition for evil. For example, when a thief first begins his act of stealing, he is nervous and watchful, but once stealing becomes like his vocation, he carries all the stratagems of theft and his sensitivity becomes blunted.

In the first stage of evil, evildoers are ashamed of their evil deeds, which shows that their consciences and hearts still have some good in them; but when they consider evil to be a vocation and a talent, this is the disaster; and their sinfulness engulfs them and overwhelms them, and leaves them no way to escape to God and repent. The one who plays gambling games, or is ensnared by the sin of licentiousness, might say happily, 'Last night was fantastic!' Yet, the one who commits the sin for the first time says, 'Last night was horrible; I wish it had never happened,' and he continues to chastise and reproach himself because he has hurt and exhausted himself by committing sin.

So, the True Lord's words '…It will have [the consequence of] what [good] it has gained, and it will bear [the consequence of] what [evil] it has earned…' explain to us that it is evildoing which requires effort; and if the matter changes from iktasab to kasab, this is the great disaster, and it means that one's sinfulness has engulfed him. And every evil deed a person does will be counted against him, so, the intelligent and wise person is the one who does much that would be counted in, not against, his favour; for the One Who says this is the All Knowing, All-Dominant True Lord, with Whom is all destination, so, there is no way of evading this issue. After this, the True Lord states the supplication of His believing servants: '…Our Lord, do not impose blame upon us if we have forgotten or erred….'

Someone might say, 'The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him assured us: "My community has been excused mistakes, forgetfulness, and that which they are forced to do."(1) So, why would the Quran bring up something for which the Islamic community has already been excused, and have people call upon their Lord to pardon them for it?'

We reply to this: Did anyone tell you that the excusing of mistakes, forgetfulness and coerced acts existed from the beginning? Perhaps the excusing happened after the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him and the early believers had prayed for it. As long as they were 'excused,' this means that they must have been counted before that. So no one should say, 'How can you supplicate about something which does not exist?' Or, alternatively, we can say that this indicates the height of faithful purity; that is, God the Most High should not be disobeyed in any way except accidentally or in forgetfulness, and that it is not right that God be disobeyed deliberately; for the one who knows God's true worth, would never disobey God except accidentally or in forgetfulness because the Creator is the One Who gave us all blessings, and after this held us responsible, so, it is important that we not commit any disobedience intentionally. This is why the True Lord the Most High called what Adam did an act of disobedience even though He tells that He gave Adam a command before, but he forgot; and God found no firmness of purpose in him (Ta Ha: 115).

And God called the forgetfulness of Adam disobedience, when He said that Adam disobeyed his Lord, and thus did he fell into grievous error (Ta Ha: 121). So forgetfulness was originally considered an act of disobedience; but God was kind to the community of Muhammad excusing their forgetfulness. Concerning the matter of Adam, there is something which we need to be aware of:

---

(1) Narrated by At-Tabarani in Al-Mu'jam Al-Kabir on the authority of Thawban

Adam was created by the Hand of God whilst we are created by the law of reproduction; and Adam received his charges from God directly without any messenger, and was given a single command: not to eat from the tree.

If Adam was created directly by God, and given his charges directly by God, and was only held responsible for a single thing, which was not to approach the tree, and did not have many responsibilities, what did he forget? And what did he remember? It was an act of disobedience; therefore: for Adam, forgetfulness was disobedience because he was created by the Hand of God. And this is what we understand from God's address to Satan when He chided him for not prostrating himself before what God created with His own Hands (Sad: 75).

For this reason, it was not appropriate or right for him to forget this single responsibility. Perhaps our master Adam was made to forget for a wise reason known to God which may have been to allow him to live upon the earth where God had made him His vicegerent. As for the community of Muhammad, when we say, '…Our Lord, do not impose blame upon us if we have forgotten or erred…,' it is as though we are saying: Lord, we recognise Your true merit, and we would never dare to disobey you intentionally; and if we disobey, it is only through our forgetfulness or error – and this is an acknowledgement of the merit of the True Lord.

But what is forgetfulness? And what is a mistake (khata') First of all, there are the verbs akhta' and khati'a; and the word khit' can only mean a sin, since it means to deliberately do something wrong, so, you know the rule yet, you break it. Yet, the one who makes a mistake (akhta') might not know the rule, so, you correct his mistake for him because he has fallen short of what is correct.

An example of this is as follows: When you learn in school that the subject of a sentence is in the nominative case, whilst the object is in the accusative, and during the middle of the year, when you make a mistake, the teacher will correct the rule for you until it settles in your mind; however, when the examinations come, does the teacher correct you, or take you to task? He takes you to task because you studied this rule all through the year. So there is khati'a and akhta'; and akhta' can sometimes be unintentional because there is no rule which I have broken, or I did not know the rule, but rather, I simply misspoke because they had not yet told it to me, or they told me once, but I did not remember, or the matter had not yet, become natural to me; for the student makes mistakes with the subject and the object for a long time, and after this, he matures and the language becomes an innate faculty for him if he is diligent in retaining it.

At first, the student speaks his Arabic sentences without any inflectional endings, but rather leaves the ends of the words without any case ending; and then, when he remembers the rule, he properly assigns the nominative and accusative case endings. Why? Because three rulings cross his mind: this is a subject and subjects take the nominative case, so, it must be nominative; and this is the object…. So he goes through a mental process; but after he goes through this process, he is able to say it correctly even if he does not remember the rule because it has become an innate talent of language for him which we describe as being 'automatic.'

An example of this is the child who learns how to sew. Look at how long it takes him to learn how to take the thread and pass it through the eye of the needle, and his teacher might need to discipline him more than once before he learns it; and the tip of the thread splits into two because it is long, so, he shortens it, but then, it will not go into the eye, so he twists it so it will go in. He takes such a long time, and then he begins to stitch and it does not come out neatly. He remains like this for a while, and then, he becomes able to do all this automatically, whilst conversing with someone because these actions have become innate for him, i.e. automatic.

When someone becomes accustomed by practice to a mental activity, according to limited rules such as learning a language, we call this a 'faculty'; as for physical activities such as threading a needle, we call it a 'mechanism.'

An example of a mental activity is: when you ask as student of Al-Azhar University a question of jurisprudence, he might need some time to familiarise himself with the chapter which contains the answer; yet, if you pose the same question to an experienced scholar, as soon as you ask the question, he will give you the ruling and the chapter where the ruling can be found; jurisprudence has become an innate faculty for the scholar.

The True Lord then states the supplication of the believers: '…Our Lord, and do not lay upon us a burden like that which You laid upon those before us….' A burden is something heavy which is difficult for a person to carry. An example of this burden is that which was sent down to the Jews: If you want to repent, kill yourselves, or give in charity one quarter of your possessions. But God does not deal with us as He dealt with the nations who came before us; and when we say, '…Our Lord, and do not burden us with that which we have no ability to bear…,' we believe what the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him said, 'God said, "Yes."'(1) The meaning of God's word 'Yes' is that He the Exalted answered the supplication by lifting hardship from this community.

That is, God will not make us bear burdens which we have no strength to bear. And when we say, 'And pardon us,' we turn to God and beseech Him: You, the True Lord, know that however great the faithful consciousness and pious vigilance we are granted might be, we will not be able to give You your full due; so, we can only approach You by asking You to pardon us and efface our sins.

The meaning of the word 'afw here is to efface sins, just like when someone walks in the desert and leaves tracks and the wind comes and removes them. It is as though there is a sin, and the sin left a trace, and you ask God to blot out this sin. And when you say, '…and forgive us…,' you know that one of the elements of the human constitution is the intention which desires to turn resolution into action and implementation; and this requires practice from you. For example, when someone sins against you, you have the right to take retribution for this sin; and you have the right to hold back your anger so that the anger still exists, but you keep it hidden; or you have the right to forgive.

But what about such a thing in the case of the Creator Who has Absolute Power? God might not punish the sinful slave, but still be angry with him; and who amongst us could bear the anger of the Lord? For this reason, we ask His forgiveness, and say, '…and forgive us; and have mercy upon us….' We ask Him the Exalted not to let us fall into sin which would incur His wrath – God forbid – upon us. The effacement of sin means that we commit sin and then ask God to forgive us, but mercy is to ask Him not to let us sin to begin with.

(1) Narrated by Imam Muslim in his Sahih on the authority of Abu Hurayra

And when the noble verse says, '…You are our Protector, so give us victory over the disbelieving people,' this is a recognition of our servitude to Him, and that He is the True Lord, our Creator, our Lord, and our Protector. As long as the True Lord is our Protector, He is our Protector against the people who disbelieve. So the end of the chapter of al-Baqara is in line with its beginning, when He said, 'Alif. Lam. Mim. This Book: there is no doubt about it; it is a guidance to the God-fearing who believe in the Unseen, who observe prayer, and out of what God has bestowed on them, expend for God' (al-Baqara: 1-3).

At the beginning of the chapter, God gave illustrations of the disbelievers and hypocrites, and at the end of it He taught a supplication by the believers: '…give us victory over the disbelieving people.' These words indicate the lasting battle between faith and disbelief, and that the believer always takes God's rulings in order to combat disbelief wherever he finds it, and the believer has absolute trust that God is his Protector because God is the Supreme Lord of those who believe, whilst the disbelievers have no true lord. And if God is the Supreme Lord of the believer, whilst the disbeliever has no true lord, this means that the battle will continue to rage between the believer and the disbeliever, in that whenever the believer sees a violation of Islam in any form, let him trust that God is his Helper and Supporter, and trust that God is with him; and let the believer trust that God only asks him to respond to His judgement and His aid of support because He is the One Who is always victorious; and He the Glorious and Exalted commanded the believers to fight against the infidels who attack them and God will chastise them by their hands (at-Tawba: 14).

As a believer, you must always be alert to the actions of disbelief in all their forms; for with its machinations, this disbelief endeavours to spoil the motions of life and to exhaust the world, and to give supremacy to man-made laws. It is also essential for you, as a believer, to be one of the God-fearing people with whose mention God started the chapter of al-Baqara, and after this, you must ask God to help you always against the infidels, and this is the crowning touch of the chapter of al-Baqara: '…give us victory over the disbelieving people.'

Concluding the chapter of al-Baqara with these words indicates that if someone has faith, he must try to share his faith in his Lord with all mankind so that the motions of life can be mutually supportive, avoiding any clash between the guided motions in life of the believer and the misguided motions of life of the disbeliever; for such a conflict will prove to be a burden for the human soul, and an impediment to the power and talents which God has granted to man, for whom He subjugated the entire universe. It is therefore not possible for man, to whom God gave authority and honour above all other creatures, to live without security, tranquillity, peace and a motion of cooperation and self-support so that the society in which you live has a cultural awakening which confirms for man that he truly is God's vicegerent on earth.

It is not sufficient for us that one of us has belief and then, leads a life that separates him from the rest of the world; for in this case, he will lose out on the motions of life in this worldly life and the infidels will have the upper hand in it. Rather, God wants the believer to make the world serve him as God willed for it to serve. When the believer passes on his faith to others, he will benefit from the good of others, whilst if he keeps his faith to himself alone and leaves others in error, others will benefit from his good, whilst he will suffer the harm and damage of the disbeliever.

So, it is for his own good if all people are believers, and he must try to pass on this faith to others. But other people might be gaining benefit from misguidance because it helps them with their tyranny; and at this point, the battle begins in which the goal of all who engage in it is to gain victory. God teaches us to seek victory from Him over the disbelievers; for victory over the disbelievers is not considered a real victory unless the attributes of goodness are thereby made to take root in all existence; and when the attributes of goodness take root in all of existence, the believer has truly gained victory.

When God instructs us to ask Him to grant us victory, we must do what God requires us to do in the battle, by being true soldiers of faith. We know that when the believers enter a battle with others, they can ascertain their level of faith by looking at the result of the battle: if the battle ends with their victory and success, they know that they are God's soldiers; and if they are vanquished and defeated, they must have a closer look at themselves; for God laid this out as a matter of faith in His Book – which He vowed to preserve – saying that His soldiers will assuredly be the victorious ones (as-Saffat: 173).

If we do not succeed, then, we must look within ourselves: what essential duty of those who represent God's force did we fail to fulfil? When the True Lord teaches us to supplicate '…give us victory over the disbelieving people,' this means that after we utilise the means of our existence from the materials of the earth which was created for us, with the mind which God created, working with it by use of the power which God created, in this case, we will be worthy of receiving support from God because the True Lord the Most High extended to us the means of support. He commanded the believers to prepare for the enemies whatever force and war mounts they are able to muster so that they might deter thereby the enemies of God – who are their enemies as well – and others besides them of whom they may be unaware, but of whom God has knowledge (al-Anfal: 60).

At this point, you will not fear anyone because God has forces which you cannot see; yet God does not send forth the forces which we cannot see unless we first utilise the means which God extended to us.

When the True Lord the Glorious and Exalted concludes the chapter of al-Baqara which is the first glowing chapter of the Quran, which is then, followed by the second glowing chapter, the chapter of Al-'Imran, we find that this is the order of the verses and chapters of the Quran as we know it now, but it is not the order in which the verses and chapters of the Quran were originally revealed or sent down. The Quran has two sequential arrangements. The first follows the chronological order of revelation, when the verses were sent down to deal with events which happened to the Muslim community in their struggle against those who disbelieved in their Lord, and its education for their souls. So each verse came down to deal with an event; and the events of the world only occur by the hands of men; so, it does not make sense that verses of the Quran would come down to deal with other events which had no connection to what was going on in the Islamic society, or in the world, at that time.

So, the events had to happen first, and then the Quranic passages came to deal with these events. But once the religion had been completed, as God stated that He has perfected the religious law for the believers, and has bestowed upon them the full measure of His blessings, and that He was satisfied with Islam (submission to Him) as their religion (al-Ma'ida: 3); it was time for the texts to be re-arranged in a holistic way because they had already been dealt with before in a partial way. When we say that a chapter was sent down after such-and-such event, or that a verse in it was revealed after such-and-such event, and we find that this is all different from the chronological order, we realise that God has in his Book two different sequential arrangements:

The first is the chronological order of revelation; and the second is that which we observe in the Quran now by which God's words were completed for the sake of guidance; and this arrangement is also from God.

The Chapter of

Al-‘Imran

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter we will now examine – the chapter of Al-'Imran – is contextually appropriate to follow the chapter of al-Baqara. This is because the chapter of al-Baqara provided us with information about the first human existence: it spoke about the creation of Adam, his vicegerency on earth, and his being taught the names of all things. It then spoke about some of the messengers who were sent to the creature who was made a vicegerent on earth, and presented some issues related to events connected with specific times which the Quran mentioned, and arranged in a precise sequence. It is appropriate, therefore, that after the chapter of al-Baqara would come the chapter of Al-'Imran because this chapter speaks about another kind of creation distinct from the first although it has its origin in it. This is because the chapter informs us of the creation of Jesus who was created according to a different mode from that of Adam's. Just as Adam was created without a father or mother, it stands to reason that another creation might come without a father.

God the Most High opened the chapter of al-Baqara with the names of three letters of the alphabet: 'Alif Lam Mim'. We spent a lot of time examining this issue at the start of the chapter of al-Baqara, and focussed on the wisdom behind the occurrence of certain letters. We saw that every letter has both a 'sound' and a 'name' so that, for example, in reading the word qara'a ('read'), when you pronounce the letter qa, you pronounce a letter which is connected with the other letters, this being the 'sound' of the letter, whereas the 'name' of the letter is qaf.

So every letter has both a name and a sound. When we speak, we use the sound of the letter; whether we are illiterate or educated, we can all pronounce the sounds 'r-e-a-d'; but the names of the letters are not known except by those who are literate, as they have been taught 'this is qaf', etc. This is the name of the letter.

So from education, we learn the letters (names of the sounds), and in speech both the illiterate and literate use the sounds.

We know that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was illiterate, and he did not sit with a teacher and did not study; so who taught him the names of the letters that no one knows except the educated? These letters are read differently in different places in the Quran, sometimes pronounced as sounds in connection, and sometimes as names of letters pronounced separately. At the beginning of the chapter of al-Baqara, 'Alif Lam Mim' (al-Baqara: 1) are names of letters. But as we have mentioned, when we see them at the beginning of the chapter of al-Fil, we read them as Alam tara 'did you not see…' as three sounds forming a question word 'did you not see…' (al-Fil: 1), and we do not read the names of the letters, but rather their sounds, and so we read 'alam'. Who is it, then, who differentiates for us between 'Alif Lam Mim' in one place and 'alam' in another place – and they are written the same in both cases? Without doubt, it is instituted by God. Truly, God has ordained that in one place it is 'alam', and in another 'Alif Lam Mim'.

The True Lord leads us to the realisation that this Quran is not from the creation of a human being for there is no human fabrication before the revelation of the Quran that pronounces the names of the letters except certain letters called 'articles of attention' such as ha- used to call someone's attention. Why? It is because the speaker is free to speak, and to choose when to speak, but the one who hears, has no idea of what the speaker will say. The speaker can choose the time to speak what he likes, unlike the one who hears who does so only after the speaker speaks without having any choice. Because of this, they used to use some letters as a way of attracting the attention of the listener. So before speaking, they would use the letter ha to draw the listener's attention as though they were saying 'pay attention, I wish to speak to you and I want you not to miss anything that I say.' Some of these letters are called 'articles of opening' such as how ala was used in the well-known ancient Arabic verse to call a waiter before saying, 'give us a drink' in order to alert the listener so they are not distracted from what the speaker wants to say, and so miss the point.

So every expression that uses the names of letters or other words for alerting attention are used purely to prepare the mind of the listener. What prevents us, then, from assuming that these letters, too, are intended to alert the listener to the importance of being mindful of what is to come? One of the proofs that these ordained letters make an impression on the human soul is that none of the people who opposed the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him in his mission took exception to them, although they were people of eloquence and language skills.

Have we ever heard that any of them said, 'Look at Muhammad! How can he come up with senseless words and expressions with no purpose or meaning, and then claim he is the most eloquent of the Arabs?!' Did any of them say this? They did not; rather, they accepted them, and did not take exception to them, and never said, 'What is this "Alif Lam Mim" that Muhammad has brought?' This proves that the letters had impressed them when they heard them, as God intended, for they did not find fault in the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him because of them, and they did not use them as a criticism against him. We say that this is one of the secrets of these letters.

God stressed certain particular meanings by repeating them more than once; that was because the Message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came at a time when prophethood had been absent for a long time: there was no address from heaven. The meanings that God wanted to stress and clarify are repeated several times until they settle in the minds of those who receive them. For this reason, the first word of God the Most High in the chapter of Al-'Imran is:

الٓمٓ ١

Alif. Lam. Mim. [1] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 1)

This also appears in other chapters which are the chapters of al-'Ankabut, ar-Rum, Luqman, and as-Sajda. The letters appear with an additional ra in some chapters, and with sad in others, i.e. 'Alif Lam Mim Ra' and 'Alif Lam Mim Sad'. They come as a confirmation of the meaning, or secret that God has placed within these letters although we may not understand that secret.

A person can benefit from secrets within things which were placed there by the Creator of those things whether he understands them or not.

For example, we take a villager who is uneducated in electronics: Does he benefit from electricity or not? He does, and he is able to use the light-switch to turn the light on and off, but does he know the secret behind it? He does not, but yet he can benefit from it. Similarly, when the believer recites 'Alif Lam Mim', he takes the secret of the letters from the One Who said them whether he understands them or not. We do not need, then, to philosophise on this issue. It is true that the human intellect would delve into something in order to reconcile it with its understanding, but the provision of God and the wisdom of God's provision are above any intellectual reconciliation, or the absence thereof.

The Words of God the Most High at the end of the chapter of al-Baqara: '… so give us victory over the disbelieving people' (al-Baqara: 286) also suit the chapter of Al-'Imran – Why? It is because Islam would come to face the forces of disbelief and the forces of the people of the Book. Islam did not come to divide and split the call to God which came from God by means of the prophets who came before Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, or to contradict any of it; but rather, it came to fortify the call to God so that all of the nations who followed these other religions would join the ranks of Islam (which means surrendering oneself to God). Because of this, when the Arabs rejected the Message of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him, God said to them that he who truly knows and understands the Divine Book and Revelation will testify that Muhammad is the Messenger of God (ar-Ra'd: 43). So if the disbelievers said that Muhammad had not been sent by God, Muhammad was commanded by God to say to them that sufficient to hold witness between him and them is God's testimony and the testimony of him who truly has knowledge of the Divine Book and Revelation (al-Ra'd: 43). For this reason, the duty of the people of the Book was that when the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him came, they should have been the first to believe in him because he came to confirm the course of faith, and that by coming with a chapter called Al-'Imran ('The Family of 'Imran'), all would know that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not come to undermine the religion of Jesus, but rather to preserve it and confirm it, as though it were said: You who believe in Jesus: if you truly believe in him, then hasten at once to believe in Muhammad as God has named a major chapter of the Quran, that of Al-‘Imran after the family from which Jesus came.

The Message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came neither to support tribalism and bigotry nor to wipe out that which preceded it in the manner in which bigotry prevails with one people seeking to erase every trace of another people so as to inaugurate an entirely new history. No. Rather, this Quran wants to correct and narrate history accurately, and so it brings a chapter entitled Al-‘Imran which is a great honour to that religion and its followers. God the Glorious and Exalted begins the chapter by saying:

ٱللَّهُ لَآ إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَ ٱلۡحَيُّ ٱلۡقَيُّومُ ٢

God – there is no god but Him, the Ever Living, the Ever Watchful [2] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 2)

This is the summit of all matters, and therefore the Quran repeats it to confirm it. ‘God – there is no deity except Him….’ As the scholars say, the word ‘God’ here is a subject, and ‘… there is no deity except Him…’ is a predicate. A subject must be clear in the mind, and the word ‘God’ is clear in the mind. However, God wants to give the word ‘God’ the description that is most appropriate for it which is ‘… there is no deity except Him….’ This is why the True Lord says that if you ask them who has created the heavens and the earth and made the sun and the moon subservient to His laws, they will surely answer that it is God. How perverted, then, their minds are! (al-‘Ankabut: 61)

So we see that the concept of God was clearly understood in their minds, but the incumbent authorities wanted to cloud this clarity. The Quran then came to remove and efface this confusion, confirming that ‘…there is no deity except Him…’ which is a matter that God has testified to saying that God Himself gives evidence that there is no deity except Him... (Al-‘Imran: 18).

God’s testimony should be sufficient, as it is a Personal testimony. The testimony of the angels is a testimony of witnessing, as they see no one but Him. In addition, the people of knowledge have testified taking evidence from creation, confirming the truth of the angels’ and the truth of God’s testimony.

If we look again, we will see that God has testified to Himself and said '…there is no deity except Him…', and has made it the slogan of monotheism, and has made matters very easy and simple. God did not want to make the strongest evidence of faith complicated or philosophical, or one which no one could comprehend except the well educated and cultured; rather, religion is required from all people, from the shepherd to the philosopher; it is required from the street-sweeper as it is required from the university professor.

Therefore, it is necessary that faith should be at the intellectual level of all people; there is no philosophising in this matter. For this reason, God wanted to make the affair of utmost simplicity, and so clarified it thus: I testify that there is no god but Me. Either this is true and the issue is resolved, and there is no need for anyone to dispute it, or it is untrue and so tell us: Where is the other god who has heard the challenge, and from whom has God taken his creation, and said: I am alone in the Universe, and I am the One Who has created? Yet we have heard no response to Him, and nor of any opposition to Him. Does this not assume other gods know? If that is the case, then this other is not fit to be a god, and if the other does know and has not defended itself and its ownership of creation, then it is not worthy to be a god. The matter belongs to God unless a cause appears to contradict it, and so we see that '…there is no deity except Him…' is a true statement, and intellectually and logically He is God, and we find no contradiction. We have already seen that if a claim is made and there is no contradictory claim made against it, the claim stands until the contradiction emerges. For example, if ten people gather in a room, and then after they leave, the owner of the house finds a wallet, and one of them returns in a state of anxiety and says 'I lost a wallet,' and the house owner says 'we found one, but there were ten of you;' all the ten persons gather and none of the others claims the wallet was his when asked, so the wallet must be his.

God has said, '… there is no deity except Him….' If there is another god, it must show itself. Yet nothing shows itself to us except the Omnipotence of God – '… there is no deity except Him,...'and while there is no god but Him, and while this universe is in need of eternal sustenance to manage its affairs, then He must be alive in a manner that suits Him, as He bestows life upon many species, humans, animals, plants, inanimate beings, and the One Who gives life must be alive, and must have a life that suits Him.

The name Al-Qayyum ('… the Sustainer of [all] existence') is in Arabic in a morphological form called 'the intensive form'. Sometimes an action happens in an ordinary way, and sometimes it happens in a more intense way. For example, if you call a person a 'glutton', it is different from calling him an 'eater' because we all eat, and so we are all 'eaters', but we are not all 'gluttons' because this word is in an exaggerated form to show the intensity of the action. If God is the One Who sustains and arranges the affairs of the entire universe, is He an 'arranger' (Qa'im) or 'Sustainer' (Qayyum)? He must be a 'Sustainer'. Another meaning of Qayyum is 'self-sufficient', but what is the nature of this self-sufficiency? It is completely eternal. So the word Al-Qayyum is an exaggerated form derived from 'arranging a matter', 'being self-sufficient', and 'sustaining innumerable others'. As these others are numerous and varied, they require a strong attribute in their Creator, so the Creator is the Sustainer of all existence. The Words of God 'God – there is no deity except Him,…' are the support of the believer in all aspects of his life.

Ubayy ibn Ka'b relates that the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him asked him once, 'O Abu Al-Mundhir, tell me which verse of the Book of God you think is the mightiest.' He answered, 'God – there is no deity except Him….' The Messenger patted his chest and said, 'May knowledge benefit you, O Abu Al-Mundhir.'(1)

Tell us, by God: if there is a son and a father, does the son want for anything in life? No, because the father takes care of things. The popular saying goes: 'He who has a father wants for nothing.' So, as for the one who has a Lord, he must be modest because his Lord is saying: I am alive, and I am the Sustainer of all Existence meaning: I am managing your affairs.

God the Most High emphasises this sustaining and management in the chapter of al-Baqara, when He says in Ayat Al-Kursi (the Verse of the Throne), 'Neither drowsiness overtakes Him nor sleep' (al-Baqara: 255). It is as though He is saying: You sleep, for I do not sleep. If not, then who watches over you when you sleep, and are unable to guard your own life? God favours us in His Power as the Sustainer of all existence, as ‘God – there is no deity except Him, the Ever-Living, the Sustainer of [all] existence.’ As long as He is living and sustaining, then it is logical that He is arranging and managing the affairs of all creation, and has granted to all creation that by which they live; of material and moral sustenance. As long as He is sustaining, managing, and taking care of the affairs of His creation, it is essential that He grants them that which is necessary to sustain their material and moral needs. As for their material needs, He says it is He Who, after creating the earth, placed firm mountains on it, towering above its surface, and bestowed so many blessings on it, and equitably apportioned its means of subsistence to all who would seek it; and all this He created in four days (Fussilat: 10). So He fulfils our needs with regard to material sustenance. As for our moral needs, He says:

---

(1) Narrated by Muslim

نَزَّلَ عَلَيۡكَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبَ بِٱلۡحَقِّ مُصَدِّقٗا لِّمَا بَيۡنَ يَدَيۡهِ وَأَنزَلَ ٱلتَّوۡرَىٰةَ وَٱلۡإِنجِيلَ ٣

Step by step, He has sent the Scripture down to you [Prophet] with the Truth, confirming what went before: He sent down the Torah and the Gospel [3] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 3)

So He did not give us the means of material sustenance only; rather, he also gave us the means of moral sustenance. This is because material life without morality would lead to reckless, frivolous folly, and so God wanted to lift the material to the level of faith. The revelation of morality is therefore necessary. For this reason, God the Most High says, ‘He has sent down upon you, [O Muhammad], the Book in truth….’ The phrase ‘sent down’ indicates obligation because it means something is coming down from a higher position, and so God is saying: Do not look down upon moral values that come to you from Someone higher than you because they are not equal to you; rather, they come from the Creator of the universe and humanity; you may only look down upon something which comes to you from someone lower than you. But when legislation comes to you from someone higher than you, do not disdain it; for your submission to it does not debase you, but rather honours you.

God the Most High says, ‘He has sent down upon you, [O Muhammad], the Book in truth….’ In the course of the Quran, we find God saying that the trustworthy Spirit has come down with it (ash-Shu'ara': 193); and in another place, God asserts that He has sent down the Noble Quran in truth, and in truth it came down, and that He has sent the Messenger but as a herald of glad tidings and a warner (al-Isra': 105). However, did the Quran descend by itself? Gabriel peace be upon him used to bring the Quran down to the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him. This does not mean that the Quran did not 'come down' because Gabriel peace be upon him would come down with the Quran to the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him and God the Glorious and Exalted says that He has sent down the Noble Quran in truth, and in truth it came down, and that He has sent the Messenger but as a herald of glad tidings and a warner (al-Isra': 105). This way the two phrases 'send down' and 'come down' are equal. When we consider an action in any given time, we must ponder: Is it confined to a particular time, or not? The Noble Quran came down to the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him over a period of twenty-three years, and was revealed in parts according to events so that every passage of the Quran's revelation was related to the course of a particular event. However, God the Most High says that He anzala ('sent down') the Quran on the Night of Power ('Laylat Al-Qadr') (al-Qadr: 1).

Here, God the Most High is specifying a time. We should realise therefore that the Quran that came down over a period of twenty-three years is the same Quran that God sent down on the Night of Power.

The Quran, therefore, has two modes of revelation: It was 'sent down all in one motion' (inzal), and then'sent down in parts gradually' (tanzil). So the meaning of God's statement that He anzala ('sent down') the Quran on the Night of Power ('Laylat Al-Qadr') (al-Qadr: 1) is that the Quran in its entirety was sent down from the Preserved Tablet to the first heaven in order to fulfil its mission in the universe, and this is what God sent down on the Night of Power. The Noble Book that God sent down to the heaven on the Night of Power was then revealed gradually according to events, as legislation or necessary clarification occasioned.

The other revealed scriptures did not have this form of revelation; rather, they were revealed in a single motion not according to events, but rather, all at once, as the Quran was first sent down from the Preserved Tablet to the heavens.

The Quranic rendition of this is as follows: ‘He has sent down (nazzal; step-by-step) upon you, [O Muhammad], the Book in truth, confirming what was [revealed] before it. And He sent down (anzal; in one motion) the Torah and the Gospel.’

Here we need to pay attention to God’s word nazzal (‘sent down step by step’) when describing the Quran and anzal ‘sent down’ when describing the Torah and Gospel. The Torah and the Gospel are described together as anzal (‘…sent down…’) which indicates to us that God revealed them in one occasion. As for the Quran, God revealed it over a period of twenty-three years in parts according to events that influenced the situation of the Muslims, and including a comprehensive message encompassing everything from the day of the first creation until the Day of Resurrection.

God revealed the Quran gradually in parts according to events in order to fortify the Prophet’s heart because he was exposed to all kinds of events: every time something happened that required reassurance, a Quranic revelation would come down. The Quran reports that the disbelievers used to ask why the Quran has not been sent down on him in one single revelation. The answer was that it has been revealed in this manner so that God will strengthen the Prophet’s heart with it (al-Furqan: 32).

A passage of the revelation would come, and the believers would memorise it and act according to its guidance, and then another passage would follow. God the Most High adds another reason for this step-by-step revelation: that whenever the disbelievers came to the Prophet with a statement, God would send him the truth with the best explanation (al-Furqan: 33).

So by His mercy, God gave the Muslims the opportunity to ask questions, and seek the clarification of ambiguous matters.

Throughout these twenty-three years, God the Most High gave the Muslims the opportunity to model their lives in the light of the Quranic Way and have any mistakes in their actions corrected by the Quran. This shows that the Quran condoned discussion and debate, and enjoined the bringing of things in the time when they are required because if something (an idea or a ruling) is produced when it is needed, it is accepted with joy.

An example of this in our daily lives is: A person keeps a medicine cabinet filled with all kinds of medicines, but when he has a slight headache and needs an aspirin, he cannot find it amongst all those medicines. If he were to buy it when he needed it, it would be easier and more trustworthy.

God the Most High both sent the Quran all in one motion, and then step by step; so He says, in continuation of the verse:

مِن قَبۡلُ هُدٗى لِّلنَّاسِ وَأَنزَلَ ٱلۡفُرۡقَانَۗ إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ بِـَٔايَٰتِ
ٱللَّهِ لَهُمۡ عَذَابٞ شَدِيدٞۗ وَٱللَّهُ عَزِيزٞ ذُو ٱنتِقَامٍ ﴿٤﴾

Earlier as a guide for people and He has sent down the distinction [between right and wrong]. Those who deny God's revelations will suffer severe torment: God is almighty and capable of retribution [4] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 4)

So the final word is: '… And He sent down the Furqan (Quran, Criterion of judgement between right and wrong).' So here we have the combination of 'sent down' both all at once, and step by step.

God often says of the Quran that it is '… the Book in truth, confirming what was [revealed] before it…' (Al-'Imran: 3). This means that the Quran highlights the right direction: It is a confirmation of what came before and preceded it, a confirmation of the doctrines that are unchanged from one divinely revealed religion to the next because the differences in these religions are only in terms of rulings and legislation, as certain rulings will be appropriate to certain times and may not be appropriate for other times; as for tenets of faith, they do not change or alter, just as histories and the stories of the Prophets do not change.

'Confirmation' means that which agrees with the actual reality, and this is what we refer to as 'honesty or truthfulness'. If it does not conform to the actual reality, we call it a 'lie'. So reality is the benchmark. For this reason, we said before that the honest person is the one whose narration of events does not differ from those events because he is true to reality and so whenever he narrates a story, he does so accurately and in detail. As for the liar, he does not narrate according to reality, but instead creates a new reality each time which is why people say: If you are taken to lying, make sure to have a good memory; meaning that if you are going to lie – God forbid – you should remember what you say, so as not to contradict it later. The honest person is the one who examines the reality, and as long as he speaks with honesty, he is describing a reality which is firm and unspoiled by vain whims; he does not speak now according to one whim, and then later according to another.

As long as a story of an event is conveyed with honesty, it becomes a truth because a truth is an unchanged fact. This is why God the Most High says, ‘He has sent down upon you, [O Muhammad], the Book in truth, confirming what was [revealed] before it. And He sent down the Torah and the Gospel Before, as guidance for mankind. And He sent down the Furqan (Quran, Criterion of judgement between right and wrong). Indeed, those who disbelieve in the signs (verses) of God, will have a severe punishment, and God is Exalted in Might, the Owner of Retribution’ (Al-‘Imran: 3-4).

We have already discussed the Torah, and said that some scholars try to examine arabicised foreign words as though they are originally from the Arabic language, and find the Arabic form and description for it, and so some of them have said about the Torah that the name comes from the Arabic word al-wary, an old Arabic word used to describe the lighting of a fire by striking sticks together. Other scholars have said that ‘Injil’ (‘Gospel’) comes from the word ‘najl’, meaning ‘increase’.

To these scholars I say: You have viewed these words as though they are Arabic, but Torah is Hebrew in origin, and Injil is Greek. These words were adopted as proper names for those books, and then entered our language.

Do not assume that just because the Quran was revealed in Arabic, every word in it is Arabic. No; it is true that the Quran is Arabic, but it is also true that the Arabic tongue had become accustomed to these words, and their meanings had become clearly understood.

For example, in modern times we have begun to use the word ‘bank’ in our language and it has become part of Arabic because Arabs have become accustomed to using it. The meaning of the Quran’s being Arabic is that God addressed the Arabs with words that they understood, and that were prevalent in their speech even if their origin was not Arabic. When God mentioned the Torah and Injil and said that the Quran came as a confirmation of them, He said, 'Before, as guidance for mankind. And He sent down the Furqan (Quran, Criterion of judgement between right and wrong). Indeed, those who disbelieve in the signs (verses) of God will have a severe punishment, and God is Exalted in Might, the Owner of Retribution.'

Which people are those whom God refers to when He says '… as guidance for mankind...'? Without doubt, they are the people who lived at the time when those scriptures were called to. If the Quran came as a confirmation to what is in the Torah and Gospel, could those books not also be a source of guidance for us? Indeed they are, but that guidance only extends to that which the Quran confirms in them, so not everything that is contained within them or that is ascribed to them is a guide for us. That which the Quran confirms within them is a guide for us; so the meaning of '… as guidance for mankind…' refers to those who lived at the time of those religions and scriptures; and we believe in whatever the Quran confirms to us from within them.

Then God the Most High says, '… And He sent down the Furqan (Quran, Criterion of judgement between right and wrong)….' This indicates that the Quran will come with a difficult mission because the word Furqan ('Criterion of judgement between right and wrong') is not appropriate except in the case of a conflict making clear the distinction between guidance and misguidance, truth and falsehood, happiness and misery, uprightness and deviance. The expression 'Criterion of judgement between right and wrong' indicates that the Quran came to witness a grave mission: the divide between good and evil. As long as it is dividing between good and evil, it makes mention of the forces of good, and the forces of evil. It involves within it, therefore, two factions. It comes to the faction defending the truth as a difficult struggle to differentiate truth and falsehood; and so God the Most High concludes this verse by saying, '… Indeed, those who disbelieve in the signs (verses) of God will have a severe punishment, and God is Exalted in Might, the Owner of Retribution.'

Why does the verse end in this way? As long as the Quran is a Criterion for judgement, it must differentiate between truth and falsehood. The truth has its soldiers: they are the believers. Falsehood too has its soldiers: they are the disbelievers. Evil has come from the disbelievers, so they must be addressed: '… Indeed, those who disbelieve in the signs (verses) of God will have a severe punishment, and God is Exalted in Might, the Owner of Retribution.' Punishment here is torment, and torment differs in intensity according to the one who is dealing the punishment. The blow of a small child is not like that of a youth or a strong man; each of them gives a blow which is commensurate with their strength. If torment were to come from the strongest of all, God, it would inevitably be unbearable. They '… will have a severe punishment, and God is Exalted in Might, the Owner of Retribution That is, He is invincible, no power can stand to Him, and His vengeance is inescapable.'

God the Most High calls Himself Al-Qayyum meaning that He creates and sustains the affairs of His creation, both in terms of matter and morality. The necessary implication of this is that He has knowledge of all of His creation, and its secrets, and therefore imposes upon each of His creations the appropriate legislation for all their affairs. Man-made legislation differs from divine legislation. Why is this case?

It is because, when God legislates – by means of a scripture which He reveals to His Messenger, in order that the ruling (hukm) of God can be delivered – He legislates according to His knowledge which may or may not be known to His creation. Events might turn out in a way that was not imagined by a human legislator at the time when they legislated, and because of this they are usually forced to make changes to laws because new circumstances occur which the human legislator was not aware of. Why was the human legislator not aware of them? It is because his knowledge is confined to the phenomena that occur during his lifetime, and does not encompass those things which occur after his time; and also because he legislates for talents and dispositions that are not fully known to him.

God the Most High, being the Creator and Sustainer of all existence and Revealer of the Criterion which differentiates truth from falsehood, has encompassing knowledge in which no fault can be found. And so those who say: Such-and-such a ruling is inappropriate to our times,' we say to them: Are you finding fault in God's rulings? It is as though you are saying: God is unaware of this matter; let us correct the ruling for Him!

No, indeed, you cannot find fault in God. Take God’s ruling as it is, for it is the ruling that cannot be touched by falsehood from any direction. It is the ruling of One Whose knowledge is not renewed or changed. Above all else, He does not benefit from what He legislates, and so He says:

إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَا يَخۡفَىٰ عَلَيۡهِ شَيۡءٞ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ وَلَا فِي ٱلسَّمَآءِ ٥

Nothing on earth or in heaven is hidden from God [5]
(The Quran, Al-’Imran: 5)

Look how this verse serves all the aims of the verses that came before it! As long as He is managing and sustaining all the affairs of creation, He must know everything about creation, so nothing in the earth or the heavens is hidden from Him. As long as He is differentiating between truth and falsehood, and sending severe punishment upon the unbelievers, nothing could be hidden from Him. So the verse is serving all of these purposes, and He knows these purposes, so when He legislates by virtue of being the Sustainer of all Existence, He legislates without being subject to emendation. If anyone deviates from His way, it is not hidden from Him. So the verse is the epitome of legislation, and of recompense: ‘Indeed, from God nothing is hidden in the earth or in the heaven.’

After this, God speaks about the first manifestation of His attribute ‘the Sustainer of all Existence’ in relation to humanity, saying:

هُوَ ٱلَّذِي يُصَوِّرُكُمۡ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡحَامِ كَيۡفَ يَشَآءُۚ لَآ
إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَ ٱلۡعَزِيزُ ٱلۡحَكِيمُ ٦

It is He who shapes you all in the womb as He pleases. There is no God but Him, the Mighty, the Wise [6] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 6)

‘Shaping in the womb’ is the creation of the substance from which the human being is fashioned in a special form. This form differs according to its type: male or female. Males and females also differ in their forms: light-skinned, dark-skinned, golden-skinned, brown-skinned, short, tall and all the different features inherent in humanity including the diversity of tongues and colours (al-Rum: 22).

This difference in colour, language, and many other things shows that they are not the product of a machine which makes a mould and then shapes it; rather, every human is born crafted by an inherently capable hand.

If a manufacturer in this age wants to make a cup, he will first make a mould, and then keep repeating it. As for the human being, everyone is created in a different mould, each one with its own distinct form, each one with its own distinctive voice – which has been proved to have a print just like that of a fingerprint, each one with its colour. These are all signs, pointing to an Absolute Power. Above all this, it is a creation which requires no processing meaning that a single mould is made for it to be filled with its substance. No; rather, He exalted be His Name says that He is the 'Originator of the heavens and the earth; and when He decrees a thing, He only says to it, "Be," and it is' (al-Baqara: 117).

It is possible for a mother and father to be of the same colour, and their child to be of a different colour. God creates the majority of people in a sound and normal state, but He creates a few of them in an abnormal state: a child might be born blind, or physically disabled, or with extra fingers... and by these abnormal cases, God reminds the rest of mankind of the beauty of His creation. This is because when a physically normal person sees another person who is paralysed, he praises God for the perfection of his own creation. And when a person with five fingers on each hand sees another person with an additional finger which impeded the moving of his hand, he realises the wisdom of there being five fingers. Beauty is not confirmed except by the presence of ugliness, and things are distinguished by means of their opposites. The person who has seven fingers on his hand presents for medicine a challenge which it must strive to meet, until the doctor is able to remove the digits which are superfluous to human need. If God had created mankind with three fingers, one would not be able to keep control when using objects of precision.

Throughout his daily actions, the human being of ordinary health cannot comprehend the beauty of his normal form unless he sees one of these unusual cases. Those who have forgotten God's blessed favour upon them due to its ordinariness and familiarity to them, God alerts them to it by showing them its absence in others. When someone who has good eyesight sees a blind person walking with a cane, he is alerted to the blessing of eyesight that God has given him, and so becomes aware of God's favour. The exceptions in creation are a means of creating awareness and causing people to notice the blessings by which God has favoured them.

These examples in creation cause people to notice how God has favoured them, and for this reason, you find them before you. Also, in order that you do not find fault in God's creation, or that someone asks ('what is this person's fault that they are created like this?' God gives them ample compensation in another area, for example by granting (a blind person) intellectual competency far above that of the person with good eyesight.

An example (and God has the best examples), is the leader Tamerlane (Timur the Lame), a military commander who astonished the world with his military prowess. God gave him great skill in strategy and combat, in compensation for his disability. We also often find that geniuses have some disability in a certain way. Why is this? It is because God gives to the disabled person the motivation and aspiration to compensate for what they lack, and so brilliance results. 'He it is who shapes you in the wombs as He wills …' and every instance of shaping has its wisdom since every shaping has its wisdom and all of God's creation is beautiful.

Creation should not be viewed separately from the wisdom of its Creator; rather, every creation should be considered alongside the wisdom behind it. The reason why you might say 'this is ugly' is that you are separating creation from its wisdom. If a school pupil fails, his father could become saddened by this. But why does he consider the failure and not the wisdom behind it? He has failed so he can learn the importance of hard work and study. If he had succeeded despite playing around, what would result? All of his colleagues who saw him succeed despite his foolishness would begin to play around, and say: he played around and succeeded.... It is therefore necessary to consider every action alongside the wisdom behind its existence.

Similarly, punishment should not be considered separately from the crime. Every punishment should be commensurate with its crime. You might see a person who is condemned to death, and take pity on him; in this case we say, 'You have separated his execution from the murder that he committed; if you considered his crime, you would find that he is being killed justly and in fair recompense, for he has killed someone unjustly. So do not separate one aspect from the other.'

‘He it is who shapes you in the wombs as He wills. There is no deity except Him….’ The meaning of ‘… There is no deity except Him…’ is that He will shape knowing that what he shapes will come out according to this image; because there is no other deity, for example, to say to Him: This does not please me, I will create it in a different image. No, because the One Who does this is Mighty and Invincible, and everything He wishes to do He does, all according to His wisdom. When He says, ‘He it is who shapes you in the wombs as He wills…,’ someone might say: there are unusual forms, and unnatural forms. God the Most High is saying to you: I am Wise and I create these things with wisdom, so do not separate an action from its wisdom; take the action with the wisdom behind it; if you consider the action with its wisdom, you will find it the essence of beauty. God the Most High is the One Who shapes in the womb as He wills. This is with respect to its substance and physical form.

God exalted be His Name then explains that He does not leave the substance and form alone; rather, He will create, alongside this matter, ethical values so that the forces of life will be in harmony; He says:

هُوَ ٱلَّذِيٓ أَنزَلَ عَلَيۡكَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبَ مِنۡهُ ءَايَٰتٞ مُّحۡكَمَٰتٌ هُنَّ أُمُّ ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ وَأُخَرُ
مُتَشَٰبِهَٰتٞۖ فَأَمَّا ٱلَّذِينَ فِي قُلُوبِهِمۡ زَيۡغٞ فَيَتَّبِعُونَ مَا تَشَٰبَهَ مِنۡهُ ٱبۡتِغَآءَ ٱلۡفِتۡنَةِ
وَٱبۡتِغَآءَ تَأۡوِيلِهِۦۖ وَمَا يَعۡلَمُ تَأۡوِيلَهُۥٓ إِلَّا ٱللَّهُۗ وَٱلرَّٰسِخُونَ فِي ٱلۡعِلۡمِ يَقُولُونَ
ءَامَنَّا بِهِۦ كُلّٞ مِّنۡ عِندِ رَبِّنَاۗ وَمَا يَذَّكَّرُ إِلَّآ أُوْلُواْ ٱلۡأَلۡبَٰبِ ٧

It is He who has sent this Scripture down to you [Prophet]. Some of its verses are definite in meaning –these are the cornerstone of the Scripture –and others are ambiguous. The perverse at heart eagerly pursue the ambiguities in their attempt to make trouble and to pin down a specific mean- ing of their own: only God knows the true meaning. Those firmly grounded in knowledge say, ‘We believe in it: it is all from our Lord’ –only those with real perception will take heed [7] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 7)

So, after He shapes in the womb as He wills, according to His wisdom, God does not leave the created image without an ethical system; indeed, He created an ethical system by revealing the Quran which contains a system of moral values. It is essential that we consider things with the wisdom behind them. If we do this, all affairs will seem upright, beautiful, and good. So God the Most High says, 'It is He who has sent down to you, [O Muhammad], the Book; in it are verses [that are] perspicuous and precise….'

What does God mean by verses that are '…perspicuous and precise…'? Something perspicuous and precise is something which cannot be penetrated by confusion or misunderstanding because it is precise. These Ayat muhkamat are the texts over which people do not differ. So when God ordains that the man or woman who steals should have their hands cut off (al-Ma'ida: 38), we see that the verse contains a clear ruling. Similarly when He rules that the adulteress and the adulterer should be flogged (al-Nur: 2), this is also a clear ruling. This kind of verse is the one which is clear in and by itself, the one in which understanding does not differ because the text is clear and direct, without ambiguity. The allegorical or unspecific verse, on the other hand, is the one which we struggle to understand. If we struggle to understand its meaning, then why did God reveal it?

God the Most High explains for us, as we said, that we should consider things with the wisdom behind them in order to understand why they were revealed. The verses that are perspicuous and precise came with clear rulings which were required from mankind, as in: 'Do this, do not do this.' As long as they are required from all mankind, the one who performs them is rewarded, and the one who does not perform them is punished; so reward and punishment will be derived from them. For this reason they come in a clear expression for if they had not, someone would say, 'I did not understand.' Rulings say to you: Do this; and do not do this. When they say 'Do this,' you have the ability not to do it. If you had been created in such a way that you had no option but to do it, God would not say to you: Do it. But since you have the ability to do something or not to do it, He says to you: Do it.

When He says to you: Do not do it, you have the ability to do it. It is not said 'do' and 'do not do' unless He has created in you the ability to act or not to act. We therefore notice that when He says to us: do this; and do not do that, He wants us to stand before the desires of our souls with regard to performing or leaving actions. For this reason, God the Most High describes prayer as indeed a hard thing for all but the humble in spirit (al-Baqara: 45).

So when He says to us: Do this; do not do that, the meaning is that certain things will be difficult for us to do, and others will be difficult for us to leave: for example, God has created in eyesight the ability to see everything within its range according to the laws of optics. For example, God instructs us to look at whatever there is in the heavens and on earth (Yunus: 101).

However, with regard to a woman at whom it is impermissible to look, God says: Lower your gaze; He commands the Prophet to tell the believing men to lower their gaze and to be mindful of their chastity: this will be most conducive to their purity – indeed, God is aware of all that they do. And to tell the believing women to lower their gaze and to be mindful of their chastity (al-Nur: 30-31). To 'lower their gaze' means that God has put limitations on the movement of the eyes.

Another example is the hand that acts – but God exalted be His Name orders us not to move it except to do something permissible; so we do not harm someone with it or light a fire with it to burn and destroy; rather, we may light a fire with it to cook, for example.

So God issues commands of 'do this 'and 'do not do that' to restrict the desires of the soul to act or not to act. When the soul desires sleep, the command to worship says: get up, and pray. If the soul tends to become angry, the command of faith says: do not get angry.

The ruling, therefore, only came in the form of command and prohibition in order to control human action; a person might want to perform an action which is harmful, so it is said to him: Do not do it. A person might not want to perform an action which is beneficial, so it is said to him: Do it. Every human action is legislated by 'Do; do not do'. The mind is one of the means of acquiring knowledge, just like the eye, the ear, and the tongue. The function of the mind is to understand, and this will mean that it will be directed to understand some things, but not others. God has made the messages clear to relieve the mind of the task of searching for the wisdom of clearly defined matters, as it might be beyond human comprehension. God instructs the servant to adhere to the manners of obedience even with regard to matters in which the wisdom behind the legislation is not understood; and also to provoke the mind to refer all allegorical verses to those that are clear, perspicuous, and precise. When we read God's words that no human vision can encompass Him whereas He encompasses all human vision; He is the Subtile, the All-Informed (al-An'am: 103).

We see that this is a general statement. And in another verse, God exalted be His Name says that on the Day of Judgement some faces will be bright with happiness looking up to their Lord (al-Qiyama: 22-23).

And, as for the disbelievers, He says that on the Day of Judgement, they will be shut out as if by a veil from their Lord (al-Mutaffifin: 15).

The mind can become preoccupied with His saying that no human vision can encompass Him. This is with regard to this world. As for the Hereafter, the human being will be equipped in a different way so that he can see God. We are now, in this worldly life, by the way in which God has equipped us to live in this world, unable to see God. The idea of equipping something to perform a specific task that it is currently incapable of performing is something that we are familiar with in our world: we know that a person who is blind or with impaired vision may undergo surgery, or may have glasses made for him, so he can see, and someone who is deaf or hard of hearing can have a hearing aid made for him so he can hear.

So, if human beings are capable of producing, with their limited physical resources, things which can restore the senses, what about the Supreme Creator, the Sustaining Lord; is He not capable of repeating our creation in the Hereafter in a form which allows us to see His Being and His Countenance? He is able to do all things.

So the matter here is allegorical. God can either be seen, or not. Which rulings do this change with respect to you? They change none at all. So, these allegorical messages did not come to bring rulings; rather, they came only in relation to faith. For this reason, the teachings of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him puts an end to all difference of opinion between scholars regarding this issue by saying – and he is the Final Messenger, 'The Quran was not revealed so parts of it would be give the lie to other parts; so act in accordance with that which you understand of it, and believe in that which is allegorical and unspecific of it.'(1)

(1) Narrated by Imam ibn Kathir in his Tafsir (Exegesis), and by ibn Mardawaih

The allegorical verses came to be believed in, and the clear verses came to be acted in accordance with, and the believer must always refer the allegorical verses to the clear ones. For example, let us consider God's words to His Messenger that all who pledge their allegiance to him pledge their allegiance to God; the Hand of God is over their hands. Hence, he who breaks his oath, breaks it only to his own hurt, whereas he who remains true to what he has pledged to God, on him God will bestow a great reward (al-Fath: 10).

A person might ask: Does God have a hand? That person should refer the matter to the realm of 'There is nothing like Him' (ash-Shura: 11). And the believer may hear God's words that God the Most Merciful sits on the throne (Ta Ha: 5). He may wonder: Does God have a body with which he settles on a throne? We say: This is the kind of allegorical verse which the believer must believe in, which is that your existence, O human being, is not like God's existence and your hand is not like God's Hand, and your sitting is not like God's sitting. As long as His existence is not like your existence, and His life is not like your life, why do you suppose that His Hand is like your hand?

It is as He has said about Himself: 'There is nothing like Him' (*ash-Shura:*11). Why has God even involved us in these affairs? It is because God wants to alert His creation to affairs that might not make sense to the mind, so whoever deems it necessary to interpret these things and refer them to the clear verse that states that there is nothing whatsoever like God, may do so; and whoever deems it necessary to say: 'I believe that God has a hand, but within the context of 'There is nothing like Him' may do so as well, and this is safer.

God says, '…in it are verses [that are] perspicuous and precise – they are the foundation of the Book….' The meaning of 'foundation' is the origin that the interpretation of the allegorical verses must refer back to if you interpret them, or return them back to the clear verses, saying: God has a Hand, but it is not like the hands of humans, but rather enters into the confines of 'There is nothing like Him' (ash-Shura: 11).

Why did God say, '…they are the foundation of the Book…' and not 'they are the foundations (in the plural) of the Book'? You must know, O believer that not each one of them is a foundation in itself, but rather, all of them aggregately are the foundation. To explain this, let us consider God's words that He made the son of Mary and his mother a sign, and provided for them both an abode in a lofty place of lasting restfulness and unsullied springs (al-Mu'minun: 50).

God did not say that they were two signs. This is because Jesus peace be upon him did not exist as a sign except by being born to his mother without a father; that is, as a sign, he was supplemented by his mother. The mother of Jesus did not exist as a sign except by the birth of Jesus; as a sign, she was supplemented by Jesus. So together they constitute the sign. Similarly, the meaning of '…in it are verses [that are] perspicuous and precise – they are the foundation of the Book – and others allegorical and unspecific….' is not that every individual perspicuous verse is a foundation of the Book; rather, the clear verses as a whole are the foundation, and the origin to which the believer refers the allegorical. The purpose of the clear verse is that we act in accordance with it, and the purpose of the allegorical verse is that we believe in it, the proof of which is that no matter how you imagine them, it will not affect your behaviour. So God's statement that no human vision can encompass Him (al-An'am: 103) does not carry any ruling; it suffices only to believe in it.

What of those about whom God says, '…As for those in whose hearts is deviation, they will follow that of it which is unspecific, seeking discord by seeking an interpretation [suitable to them]…'? We should know that the word zaigh (rendered here as 'deviation') means to bend or incline, and that the word in Arabic derives from the curving of the teeth, where some of them grow outwards and others grow inwards. When teeth do not grow straight, nowadays, they have cosmetic surgery and straightening procedures to make them grow into a single straight line.

So those whose hearts are given to deviation, that is, inclining crookedly, go after the allegorical verses, seeking confusion and discord. It is as though crookedness is an extraneous condition in the hearts, and that the original state of hearts is purity: not to be crooked and given to deviation. Pure natural disposition has no crookedness, but lusts and base desires make hearts incline to deviation from the truth. A person might be aware of God's correct ruling on a particular matter but human caprice wins out, and so the person deviates from God's ruling. This deviation is of the making of the heart; a person can submit logic and reasoning to serve the inclination of his heart, and for this reason, the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him says 'One of you would not be a believer until his desire is in accordance with what I have come with.'(1)

Why? Because caprice is the bane of reason; even deviant people know the sound conduct, but they deviate toward what they desire. The proof that they know sound conduct is that, after they commit their iniquity, they repent and announce their repentance, as is frequent and well known. This is because capricious inclinations are affected by behaviour that requires justification, whilst sound behaviour is a matter of natural disposition which comes effortlessly and does not cause tension. For example, when a man looks at his wife, he does not find the stimulation of one aspect of his conscience vying with another; but when he looks at a woman other than his wife, his conscience is in turmoil, and he wonders: is it acceptable for him to look, or not? His character traits struggle. As for looking at his wife, his conscience is not overburdened. For this reason, faith brings solace to consciences, so all the traits of a person harmonise in unity without any of them stealing from another.

Another example: If a person goes to bring something from his house, he does not feel any conflict of conscience. Yet if a person goes to steal this thing, his conscience will be in conflict, and his limbs too because he is going against reason, uprightness, and truth.

'…As for those in whose hearts there is deviation, they will follow that of it which is unspecific seeking discord by seeking an interpretation [suitable to them]….' So their attempt to interpret the allegorical verses contradicts reality in order to serve the crooked inclinations of their hearts.

The inclination is present in their hearts first, and then reasoning submits to the inclination, and then the expression submits to the deviant reasoning. So we see that the original inclination comes from them. Let us consider the statement of the Quran in saying that when the perverted ones deviated from the right way, God let their hearts swerve from the truth (as-Saff: 5).

(1) Narrated in Sharh As-Sunna by Al-Baghawi, and in Kanz Al-'Ommal, and in Tabrizi's Mishkat Al-MaSabih

It is as though God is saying: As long as you want to deviate, I will let you deviate further and assist you in it. God the Most High does not set a person on a course that contradicts His moral charges; but a person may be driven by his desires to deviate, and so God abandons him, and let him fall into the abyss of deviation. In another verse, God says about the disbelievers that whenever a Quranic chapter is revealed, they look at one another to see if there is anyone who can see them and then they turn away. God has turned their hearts away from the truth as they are people who do not have any understanding (at-Tawba: 127).

They are the ones who began it; they moved away from God, so God moved their hearts far away from faith. They are those who go after the allegorical verses seeking confusion, discord, and mischief seeking to confuse the minds of those who have no understanding. Since they seek to confuse the minds of those who have no understanding, they are going against the right way. Since they are going against the right way, they are not believers. Since they are not believers, God will not guide them to goodness because faith demands from a person that they direct themselves towards belief in the Wise Lord and God; and then aid will come from God. But as long as they are not believers, how can they seek aid from God? God says (in a Qudsi (Sacred) Hadith), 'I am the Most Self-Sufficient of associates, and have no need of association with anyone.'(1)

They seek confusion from the allegorical verses, and seek to have their own interpretation of them. Ta'wil (Interpretation) in Arabic means returning something to something else, so those whose minds are not deviant strive to refer the allegorical verses back to the clear verses, or to believe in them as they are.

God then says, '…And no one knows its [true] interpretation except God….' If God had wanted the allegorical verses to be clear, He would have revealed them as clear verses. So it is God's Will that there be allegorical verses, the purpose of which is to inspire the mind so that affairs do not come with a monotony that prevents the human intellect from thought and creativity, whilst God wants the mind to be inspired, think, and deduce. When the mind is inspired to deduction, it becomes a way for a person to exercise creativity and research so that all of us experience the attempt to refer the allegorical verses back to the clear verses, and by this attain a grasp of creativity and research; it is necessity that creates solutions.

(1) Narrated in Zubaidi's Ithaf As-Sada Al-Muttaqin, Ar-Rabi' ibn Habib's Musnad, Al-Mundhiri's At-Targhib wa At-Tarhib and Bayhaqi's Al-Asma' wa AS-Sifat

God wants to give the human being the skill not to view all matters with dull monotony accepting them sluggishly and as simple as possible. Rather, they should receive them attentively with thought and reflection. God encourages people to ponder over the Quran – otherwise there must be locks upon their hearts (Muhammad: 24).

All of this is to make the mind take sufficient action to receive the tenets of faith as God wants it, and receive rulings as God wants them. God wants from us that we believe in the tenets of faith, and that we act in accordance with the rulings. '…And no one knows its [true] interpretation except God…' and those people whose hearts are given to perversion and deviation try to interpret it, whilst being controlled by their vain desires, so they do not arrive to the truth. The true interpretation is only known to God.

We have seen that someone criticised a person for something he has done. The one who was criticised said to him, 'O brother, do you claim to know everything God knows?' When he answered in the negative, he told him, 'I am one of the things you do not know,' telling him indirectly to leave him alone.

Let us have a closer look at the part of the verse saying, '…And no one knows its [true] interpretation except God. But those firm in knowledge say, 'We believe in it: all [of it] is from our Lord….' This rendering of the verse considers the pause in the Arabic text to be between the two sentences: 'And no one knows its [true] interpretation except God,' and 'But those firm in knowledge say, "We believe in it: all [of it] is from our Lord."' In this reading, the meaning of the verse is that only God alone knows the interpretation of the allegorical unspecific verses; and those who are firm in knowledge, that is they are not beguiled by their base desires, proclaim their belief in all the verses as they come from God, their Lord. And this is what the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him said; thus they have belief in the unspecific verses and they act by the rulings of the perspicuous verses, and believe that both are from God.

However, according to scholars, you may place the pause at a different place in the text and the two sentences become: '…And no one knows its [true] interpretation except God and those firm in knowledge. They say, 'We believe in it: all [of it] is from our Lord ….'' The meaning here becomes that those who are firm in knowledge know the interpretation of the allegorical verses, and consequently they say, 'We believe in it'.

In fact, the two readings lead to the same meaning; whether we place the pause at 'except God' or not, the meaning returns to the same thing. The governing element of faith for those who are firm in knowledge is what God reports from their proclamation saying, '…We believe in it: all [of it] is from our Lord….' So the perspicuous verses are from our Lord, and the unspecific verses are from our Lord, and He has His Wisdom in that. It happens sometimes that a command comes from a higher authority to a lower functionary, with an explanation of the reason for it; the lower functionary understands the reason and acts by the command; the higher authority then may give another command without explaining it; in this case, we have difference: one person may obey, while another may say, 'No, you must explain the reason.' Does the one who has faith have faith in the command, or in the reason behind it?

God the Most High wants us to believe in Him as He commands. If everything became understood, there would be no value in faith. The majesty of faith lies in obeying some commands, whilst their wisdom is unknown to you because if you did everything, whilst understanding the wisdom behind it, your faith would be in the reason behind the command, not in the One Who gave the command.

When we consider pork, for example, which God prohibited fourteen centuries ago, we see that in modern times, it has emerged that eating pork is harmful, and some people stopped eating it because it is harmful; is their refraining from eating it something for which they will be rewarded? Of course they will not. The reward is for those who refrain from eating pork because God has forbidden it. Because the order is from God eventhough He has not informed us of the wisdom behind it, the one who has faith in God says: God created me, and it is not possible that He, my Creator, would deceive me, and I am the servant subject to His Will.

The servant who refrains from eating pork and drinking wine in accordance with God’s command is the one who earns reward; as for the one who does so out of fear of cirrhosis of the liver or disease, there is no reward for him. There is a difference between obeying a law because of its reason, and obeying a law out of obedience to the one who commands it.

So the allegorical verses came to be believed in, and those who are firm in knowledge are the opposite of those who are led by their desires. Desires lead to the lusts of the soul, and to seeking other than the truth. What is not the truth is falsehood, and all of the people of falsehood attempt to bring something which is in agreement with their desire. This is why God’s legislation came to protect people from harmful desires because one person’s desire could contradict another’s, and the rest of humanity could have desires which contradict each other. God the Most High says that if the True Lord were to follow their whims, the heavens and the earth would surely have fallen into ruin, and all that lives in them. Rather, in this Book (the Quran) God has conveyed to them all that they ought to bear in mind: but from their reminder they turn away (al-Mu’minun: 71).

So we must follow in our actions one whose only desire is the truth. Religion only came to protect us from following desires and whims. It is desires that cause us to deviate. The proof that desires cause deviation from the truth is that a person who follows his desire could desire a ruling in a certain matter, and then other factors could arise to make him desire the opposite ruling, so he twists the issue according to his desire. If not, then what is it that has compelled people to leave the original Sacred Law that ruled the earth at the time of Adam peace be upon him?

They abandoned the Sacred Law when a group of people took it upon themselves to manage the affairs of the religion, and took from it for themselves temporal power, and began to entrust affairs to their desires. If we look at the history of world law, we find that the origin of affairs of law was reserved for men of religion, priests, and temple officials. Governance was for them alone because they were spokesmen for God’s religion.

Why did this not continue, and instead came Roman, English, French, and other laws? It is because it was discovered that those in control of religious affairs had abandoned the rule of the Sacred Law in favour of serving their desires. People noticed that those priests would rule in a case with a judgement which differed from another judgement in a similar case.

They were the same judges, with identical cases, but the judgement of desire differs from case to case; rather, it could completely contradict the first judgement, so people thought of these priests: They have left the pronouncements of religion, and followed their desires in order to gain temporal power, and so we no longer trust them.

Legislation and ruling thus came out of the hands of priests and holy men and went to other lawmakers. The matter of judgement had been the preserve of priests and holy men because people were certain that they took their rulings from God's religion. But because of human whims, people took legislation for themselves, with whatever justice they possessed even if it was slight.

With respect to the word hawa ('desire'), we find three related words:

1. Hawa' which means 'air': that which is between the sky and the earth. It also means 'wind', which moves things, and deviates and gathers them. It is a physical thing.
2. Hawa which means 'desire', the inclination of the soul, from the verb to incline to something.
3. Hawiyy or Huwiyy, which means 'falling'.

This indicates that he who follows his desire is bound to fall, and linguistic etymology gives this meaning. The meanings are related. So, those who are deeply firm in knowledge stay firm on God's way. As for those who follow their desires, they deviate like the deviations of the wind. If the wind changes, they go where it goes.

Those who are firm in knowledge say, as the conclusion of their knowledge, '…We believe in it. All [of it] is from our Lord….' So here, the issue comes together. We know that the clear verses were revealed to be acted in accordance with, and the allegorical messages came to be believed in for wisdom which God the Most High willed which is that we follow the command for the command's sake, not for the wisdom behind it. When we receive commands from God, we should not ask for reasons for them because we are taking them from a Just, Wise, Loving Creator. If a person does not obey a command from God unless he knows the reason for it and the wisdom behind it, we say to this person: You do not believe in God; you believe in reasons behind His rulings; the real believer is the one who believes in the command even if he does not understand it. Those who are deeply rooted in faith say: We believe in it; as all is from God, both the clear and the allegorical messages.

God the Most High then says, '…And no one will bear this in mind except those of understanding.' The expression 'those of understanding' means those whose intellects are free from whims because whim is the bane of reason and leads it to deviation. '…And no one will bear this in mind except those of understanding.' 'Understanding' is the mind; God informs us that the mind considers the core of things, not just their outward appearance. There are rulings that concern outward matters, and rulings which require insight. God the Most High orders the amputation of the thief's hand. Yet, people come playing the role of defenders of humanity and compassion saying: 'this is cruel and brutal!'

This is superficial understanding. Insightful understanding sees that I want the hand of the thief amputated to prevent him from stealing in the first place! This is because everyone will fear for themselves, and this will prevent them from stealing. We have said before that a single car accident could result in mutilations equal to the number of people whose hands have been amputated for stealing in the entire history of Islam. So do not concoct justifications, and claim to be merciful, and do not consider punishments only as they are meted out to criminals; instead look at the crime when it occurs from them. God wants to protect people's livelihoods so that if you work and toil and struggle and sweat, God will preserve for you the fruits of this labour so that no one else can come and get the better of you, and illegally take his own provision from your sweat and toil.

He protects everyone's livelihood so people can live in security; this is the implication of 'understanding' in the verse.

In the same way we should read God's words: 'And in legal retribution there is life for you' (al-Baqara: 179). Beware of saying: this retribution is aggression against an individual's life. No, because 'And in legal retribution there is life for you' means that when a person realises that if he murders, he will be executed, this will prevent him from killing, so his life is saved, and people's lives are safeguarded from him. This is why there is life in legal retribution, and this is insightful understanding of matters. God is alerting us and warning us not to take matters according to their outer appearance, but rather to take them by looking at their core, and leave the shell that those who desire to abandon God's rulings judge by. So, when those who are deeply firm in knowledge render judgement with regard to the allegorical messages, they supplicate to God the Most High with the words He revealed, saying:

رَبَّنَا لَا تُزِغۡ قُلُوبَنَا بَعۡدَ إِذۡ هَدَيۡتَنَا وَهَبۡ لَنَا مِن لَّدُنكَ
رَحۡمَةًۚ إِنَّكَ أَنتَ ٱلۡوَهَّابُ ﴿٨﴾

Our Lord, do not let our hearts deviate after You have guided us. Grant us Your mercy: You are the Ever Giving [8] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 8)

So, the statement of those deeply firm in knowledge is: Every clear message and every allegorical message is from God; we act in accordance with the clear, and believe in the allegorical, and this is guidance. Then they supplicate for strength and firmness in guidance. The meaning is: Our Lord! Make us firm in worshipping You, and do not cause our hearts to deviate or swerve. This proves to us that hearts change and alter, so the last word is supplication for firm faith: 'Our Lord, let not our hearts swerve from the truth after You have guided us and grant us from Yourself mercy. Indeed, You are the Bestower.'

They seek mercy as a gift, not as a right. No created being has any right over God except to that which God bestows upon him. Those deeply rooted in knowledge ask God for grace not to fall into whims after God has guided them to this sound judgement: that all the clear and allegorical messages are from God. By this they teach us the way to reach guidance, and how to seek the bestowal of grace. As long as the person who is deeply rooted in knowledge knows something, he wants to spread it amongst the people, and so is saying to us:

Beware of thinking that the issue is just to understand the text, and that is all. From this issue, another derives. The latter does not exist only in this world, for there is Afterlife. This world will perish because it is limited, and has an ending; but there is also the Hereafter, which will come after this one and will last until eternity. And so God states what those who are deeply firm in knowledge say:

رَبَّنَآ إِنَّكَ جَامِعُ ٱلنَّاسِ لِيَوۡمٖ لَّا رَيۡبَ فِيهِۚ
إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَا يُخۡلِفُ ٱلۡمِيعَادَ ٩

Our Lord, You will gather all people on the Day of which there is no doubt: God never breaks His promise [9] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 9)

Their saying 'Our Lord' can be understood to mean that He is the One Who takes charge of their sustenance. The meaning of sustenance is to take the person being sustained to the desired level of perfection. So there is a Lord Who raises and sustains, and a servant who is sustained, and the Lord gives the human being that which will take it to the perfection desired for it.

The believers beg of God, saying: O Lord! Part of Your Sustaining us is that You protect us from the torment of the Hereafter, so when we have lived our worldly life and it is over, we know that You gather the people to a day about which there is no doubt. As long as You are Lord and God, You will not break your promises. The one who breaks promises cannot be God because at the moment of promising, God knows with His perfect Omnipotence and perfect Knowledge that He is Able to fulfil His promise. Only those who are incapable of fulfilling promises are unable to promise without any condition, and this is the case in our saying, 'If God wills' – why? That is because none of us have the absolute ability to fulfil their promise.

Let us have a close look at God's words in His command: Never say about anything that you will do it tomorrow without adding, 'if God so wills.' And if one should forget, then he should remember his Lord and pray that his Lord would guide him to get closer to a consciousness of what is right (al-Kahf: 23-24).

We say: Beware of saying 'I will do such-and-such' without including within it and connecting it with God's will because when you promise, you are not guaranteed of living, or fulfilling your promise. You do not do anything except by God's will, so do not promise except by His will as you are promising that which you cannot guarantee because in reality you possess nothing. If you want to do something, or go somewhere, the action requires an agent, an object, a time, a place and a cause. It then requires the ability to perform the action. The human being possesses none of these things except that which God wills him to possess. A human being cannot guarantee that he will remain capable of fulfilling his will. If the supposed doer of the action still exists, the human being cannot ensure the existence of the object. The human being does not possess time, and nor does he possess space, and nor does he have the ability to sustain a cause in order to do what he wants to do; all of these things, the doer, the object, time, space, and the cause, are not possessed by anyone except by God.

For this reason, a person should protect himself from being a foolhardy liar, and should place himself within the confines of God's command: Never say about anything that you will do it tomorrow without adding, 'if God so wills.' And if one should forget, then he should remember his Lord and pray that his Lord would guide him to get closer to a consciousness of what is right (al-Kahf: 23-24).

The phrase 'if God so wills' protects the person from being a liar; when the thing that a person promises does not happen, this means that God did not will it because the person does not possess any of the elements of the action.

God says, 'Our Lord, surely You will gather the people for a Day about which there is no doubt. Indeed, God does not fail in His promise.' This is because the one who breaks promises is usually prevented by an overwhelming power that comes to them which could even be their changing their mind. As for God, there is no overwhelming power to change what He wills to do, and it is not possible for Him to change because change is not an attribute of the Infinite and the Eternal.

When God affirms that He will gather us by His will on a day about which there is no doubt, and that God does not break promises, it is an affirmation that we will meet. Why will we meet? Those deeply firm in knowledge have said: We have acted in accordance with the clear messages, and believed in the allegorical messages; and they have called on God to strengthen their hearts on guidance out of His mercy, and to keep their hearts from deviation because they fear the day when God will gather all mankind, the day when we will meet to account for our deeds and our faith. After this, God the Most High says:

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ لَن تُغۡنِيَ عَنۡهُمۡ أَمۡوَٰلُهُمۡ وَلَآ أَوۡلَٰدُهُم
مِّنَ ٱللَّهِ شَيۡـٔٗاۖ وَأُوْلَٰٓئِكَ هُمۡ وَقُودُ ٱلنَّارِ ١٠

Neither their possessions nor their children will be any use to the disbelievers against God. The disbelievers will be fuel for the Fire [10] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 10)

When you as a believer hears, and the disbeliever and the hypocrite hear with you, 'Our Lord, surely You will gather the people for a Day about which there is no doubt. Indeed, God does not fail in His promise,' the disbeliever or the hypocrite might imagine that there is something that could save him from what will occur on that day such as the strength and support of offspring, or great wealth with which to ransom themselves, or friendship, or intercession. Here, God is saying to them: No, your offspring and your wealth will not avail you anything.

In ordinary speech, we say: this will not avail so-and-so, meaning that he will remain in need of other than it because sufficiency is not to be in need of anything from someone else. Wealth and children will not avail anyone on the Day of Resurrection; the matter has no relation with ancestry as there will be no kinship between them on that day. Paradise is not for sale with worldly possessions, and no one can buy his place in paradise with the wealth he possesses.

The disbelievers at the time of the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him used to say this corrupt statement, 'As long as God has given us wealth and children in this life, He will doubtless give us better than this in the hereafter.' This is why God says to them, 'Indeed, those who have disbelieved – never will their wealth or their children avail them in the least against God….' So the matter returns to God in its entirety. It is true that in this life God creates means, which apply to the disbeliever as well as the believer. So when the disbeliever utilises the means, he achieves his goals. In the Hereafter, however, things are different. Nobody possesses any means, and this is why God describes the Last Day as the Day when they shall come forth, with nothing of themselves hidden from God.

With whom will sovereignty rest on that Day? With God, the One Who holds absolute sway over all that exists (Ghafir: 16).

In this life, human beings possess means, and live in different levels of comfort according to their differing means, and their differing labours in life, and the differing availability of means of attaining enjoyment. In the Hereafter, however, there is no labour, and there are no means because the believer lives with the Creator of causes and means in the Hereafter, God the Most High; and so whenever anything crosses the mind of the believer in Paradise, that thing comes to him. As for the disbelievers, their wealth will not avail them, nor will their offspring because in this life they were absorbed with wealth and offspring, and disbelieved in God.

In one of the battles in the early days of Islam, some of the Bedouin stayed behind and did not take part in the fighting, and God informed His Messenger that they will say to him that their possessions and their families kept them busy, and that they will ask him to pray to God to forgive them. God says that they utter with their tongues something that is not in their hearts (al-Fath: 11).

So, we see that what the disbelievers busied themselves with in this life, will not benefit them. God adds concerning the disbelievers at the end of the verse we are discussing: '…And it is they who are the fuel for the Fire.' Being the fuel of the fire, they will be the tormenters, and soon they will be tormented in the fire. Consider the grave harm that will inflict them: those who torment are the ones who will be tormented because they will be the fuel of the fire. The one who is tormented will be the same one who torments.

So this is a struggle of the constituent parts: the atoms that make up the disbeliever are themselves believers and the atoms of the disobedient person are themselves obedient; the thing that has made these atoms perform actions that incur the wrath of God is the will of the person whom they comprise. In the past, we gave the example – and God has the highest of examples – of a squadron with a commander. The duty of the squadron is to hear and obey the orders of the commander. If they are brought before the high commander later, they will bring up the matter to him, saying: According to the regulations of the chain of command, we carried out the instructions that came to us from our direct commander, but we did not agree with his opinion. In religious life, this kind of situation is described in the wise words of our Creator that on the Day of Judgement, their own tongues and hands and feet will bear witness against them by recalling all that they did (an-Nur: 24).

So in this life the tongue speaks words of disbelief, while it curses its owner, and the hand commits sins and hates and curses its owner. God's Sublime Will has given the disbeliever authority over his hand and his tongue in this life, and God will remove the disbeliever's control over his limbs on the Day of Resurrection, so they will testify against him that he compelled them to commit sin, and so one part will torment the other. When God says, '…And it is they, who are the fuel for the Fire,' there is an issue which must be considered which we can take from historical facts. Those people who disbelieved in God's messages on earth encountered some torment in this life, because God does not reserve all torment for the Hereafter. If He did, people would be made miserable by the actions of the disbelievers and sinners, and because of this God hastens some torment for the disbelievers and sinners in this life. God gives an example of this:

كَدَأۡبِ ءَالِ فِرۡعَوۡنَ وَٱلَّذِينَ مِن قَبۡلِهِمۡۚ كَذَّبُواْ بِـَٔايَٰتِنَا
فَأَخَذَهُمُ ٱللَّهُ بِذُنُوبِهِمۡۗ وَٱللَّهُ شَدِيدُ ٱلۡعِقَابِ ﴿١١﴾

Just as Pharaoh's people and their predecessors denied Our revelations, and God punished them for their sins: God is severe in punishing [11] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 11)

In the phrase 'like the custom of the people of Pharaoh…' the Arabic word da'b (rendered here as 'custom') means constant, repetitive action; so we say that the da'b of so-and-so is to do this or that thing, meaning that he habitually and consistently does it. Or we could say, 'So-and-so has no da'b except backbiting people.'

Does this mean that all of his actions are characterised by backbiting people, or that he does other things? He does other things of course; but his usual action is backbiting. This is the meaning of da'b/'custom': it is repeating an action successively until the action becomes a habit. So this is the meaning of the phrase 'like the custom of the people of Pharaoh.' The people of Pharaoh came before the Islamic message, and before them were the tribes of 'Ad and Thamud and others.

God the Most High alerts us to consider these people and what happened to them: He did not delay their torment until the Hereafter perhaps because people might think that God the Most High will postpone all the disbeliever's torment until the Hereafter with His words: 'Indeed, those who have disbelieved – never will their wealth or their children avail them in the least against God. And it is they who are the fuel for the Fire' (Al-'Imran: 10).

Rather, torment is also in this life, and this is what we gather from God's words that for the disbelievers, there is suffering in the life of this world; but, truly, their suffering in the life to come will be harder still, and they will have none to shield them from God (ar-Ra'd: 34).

If the torment was postponed until the Hereafter, people would become miserable with the wicked. This is why God brings examples from this life and here He says, 'like the custom of the people of Pharaoh…', that is, like their custom, and nothing becomes a custom except by repetition of an action. The custom of the people of Pharaoh was denial, oppression, and Pharaoh's claim of divinity.

God the Most High says, '…and those before them. They denied Our signs, so God seized them for their sins. And God is severe in punishment.' So the custom became part of them, and part of what happened to them. When they became accustomed to disbelief and denial, God the Most High sent torment upon them. The custom of the people of Pharaoh was denial, and the Exalted Creator seized them for this by severe punishment. After urging us to consider the daybreak and the ten nights and to consider the even and the odd and to consider the night as it runs its course – after considering all this – could there be, to anyone endowed with reason, a more solemn evidence of the truth? Then God the Most High alerts us to be aware of how the Lord has dealt with the tribe of 'Ad, the people of Iram who had lofty pillars, the like of whom has never been created in all the lands, and with the tribe of Thamud, who carved out rocks in the valley, and with Pharaoh of the many stakes. They transgressed all bounds of equity all over their lands, and brought about great corruption therein; and therefore the Lord let loose upon them a scourge of suffering; for, surely, the Lord is ever on the watch (al-Fajr: 1-14).

So their custom was denial, and their punishment from God for this was torment and suffering. So God's words '…so God seized them for their sins. And God is severe in punishment' means that torment afflicted them in this life; and the end for the House of Pharaoh, and Thamud, and those disbelieving people before them, was what it was.

When we hear God's words: '…And God is severe in punishment,' the mind concludes that there must be a sin to merit this punishment. All metaphorical matters are always derived from physical tangible things, because the origin of the creation of any metaphorical image is the physical observable thing; physical matters are transferred to metaphorical concepts after this.

Why? It is because a physical thing is witnessed and can be grasped by everyone. As for metaphorical concepts, they are not comprehended except by reasoning beings; and the human being passes through many stages: in the stage of infancy, the human being does not understand or comprehend anything except the physical things before him. An example which I have already mentioned is the Arabic word ghasb (which means to take forcibly). Originally it means to skin a sheep and so it is as though when someone forcibly robs someone else it is like he is 'skinning' his possession from him as he holds on to it.

The word 'sin' (dhanb) and the word 'punishment' ('uquba) are interlinked. The word 'sin' in Arabic is derived from a physical word meaning the back end of an animal which follows the front end, so the physical meaning indicates something which follows. 'Punishment' in Arabic means something which comes after something else.

So, there is sin, and there is punishment. But what comes before the sin, and what comes after the punishment? There is no sin without a prior text: An action cannot be considered sinful or criminal except if there is a text to make it unlawful. No act is a sin; rather, there must be a text before the sin is committed that prohibits it. For this reason, conventional law views this issue thus: A person cannot be punished without criminalisation, and there is no criminalisation without a text, so nobody can come and suddenly say: This action is a punishable crime; rather, there must first be an announcement, and a text stating the criminalisation of the act.

There is no punishment without criminalisation, and there is no criminalisation without a text. The text explains the criminalisation of a given act, and that if a person commits this act, he is breaking the law. The sin is the same as this, as though it has come after a text of criminalisation. The punishment comes after the crime, and here we find that both sins and crimes are according to the original meaning of the word in Arabic, so the sin follows something, and this is why the Arabs call the pail they fill with water a dhanub (similar to the word dhanb, which means 'sin') because it comes after the rope, and dhanub is also the word for 'portion of punishment' in the verse in the Quran that warns that those who commit injustice shall have their portion of punishment like the share of their fellows of old: God warns them not to ask Him to hasten their doom (adh-Dhariyat: 59).

The naming comes because the punishment follows their crimes. So any Quranic text that mentions sin and punishment reaffirms for us the legally terminological matter that exists all over the world namely that there can be no punishment without a criminalising text. So punishment comes after the crime, that is, after the sin; and the sin is considered as such only by a legal text. We cannot come to anyone without a foregoing text and say: you have committed a sin; and this solves many problems. As an example, we can take God's judgement that He does not forgive the setting up of partners beside Him but He forgives any lesser sin to whomever He wills: for he who sets up partners with God has indeed committed a great wickedness (an-Nisa': 48).

God forgives any act other than the association of partners with Him, for the association of partners with God is the peak of high treason in monotheism, and there is no forgiveness for this. Other than this, He forgives whom He wills. In another verse, however, God commands His Messenger to proclaim to God's servants who have transgressed against themselves not to despair of God's mercy; indeed, God forgives all sins – for, surely, He alone is All-Forgiving, All-Merciful (az-Zumar: 53).

So, there are some people, in trying to cast doubt and find conflict between verses of the Quran, who say that God says He does not forgive that partners are associated with Him, and forgives other than that for whom He wills. (They are trying to insinuate that this verse stands in contradiction with the verse that says that God forgives all sins.) It is said that Ibn 'Abbas God be pleased with them, when this verse was revealed saying that God forgives all sins, said, ‘Except polytheism,’ so we see that this verse does not contradict the other verse.

In reality, if people of reason examine the issue in detail, they will not find any conflict. This is because the people who transgressed against themselves are from the servants of God who believe in Him and do not associate anything with Him, but who have strayed and fallen into misdeed, and so it is said of them that they are sinners because they believe in God and accept what He has revealed. As for the polytheist, he neither recognises God, and nor the rulings He has legislated, yet his actions are not described as sins, but rather as disbelief and polytheism. So there is no contradiction or conflict in the messages of the Most Merciful.

God says, ‘[Theirs is] like the custom of the people of Pharaoh and those before them. They denied Our signs, so God seized them for their sins. And God is severe in punishment.’This wise statement is balanced, and harmonised. The sin comes after the text, and the punishment comes after this. God then says, commanding His Messenger to deliver the message to the disbelievers:

قُل لِّلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ سَتُغْلَبُونَ وَتُحْشَرُونَ إِلَىٰ جَهَنَّمَ ۚ وَبِئْسَ ٱلْمِهَادُ ﴿١٢﴾

[Prophet], say to the disbelievers, ‘You will be defeated and driven together into Hell, a foul resting place [12]
(The Quran, Al-’Imran: 12)

This is a command from God to His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to deliver God’s message, and carry to the disbelievers a message containing a warning. Who are these disbelievers? Are they the disbelievers of Quraysh? They may probably be. Are they the Jews? They also may probably be. In fact, this warning includes every single disbeliever.

The Quranic text does not come according to the usual way people speak. I will give an example – and God has the highest of examples, and He is Purified of any resemblance or parallel. Suppose you tell your son to go to his uncle and say ‘my father will visit you tomorrow.’ What will the boy say to his uncle? He will go to his uncle and say ‘my father will visit you tomorrow.’ But the one giving the instruction, i.e. the father, said: ‘Say to your uncle “my father will visit you tomorrow."' So, if the boy is meticulously trustworthy, he will say, 'My father said: "say to your uncle 'my father will visit you tomorrow."' When we read in the Quran 'Say to those who disbelieve, "You will be overcome and gathered together to Hell, and wretched is the resting place,"' this is the peak of trustworthiness from the Messenger who delivers the Message of God, who carried to the disbelievers the text exactly as God commanded him to deliver it to them. If not, it would have been sufficient for The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to go to the disbelievers and say to them, '…You will be overcome and gathered together….' But how would they know, in this case, that this word was not from Muhammad, a human being? It is because of this, the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him tells them that God has instructed him to give them the message, with His words: 'Say to those who disbelieve, 'You will be overcome and gathered together to Hell, and wretched is the resting place."'

The Messenger did not inform them merely of the content of the statement; rather, he delivered to them the exact text of the message God charged him to deliver. When God commands His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him in the Quran to deliver a message to the disbelievers, the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is the one addressing, and the disbelievers are the ones being addressed, so when he confronts them, he says to them, 'You will be overcome....' In another verse, God commands the Messenger to tell those who disbelieve that if they desist, all that is past shall be forgiven them; but if they revert to their wrongdoing, then what happened to the like of them in times gone by will be repeated (al-Anfal: 38).

Analogy would suggest that he should say, 'if you desist, all that is past shall be forgiven you.' It is as though the disbelievers were not present when God said it, but the Messenger of God was the one present being addressed, and that God was speaking concerning those who were absent.

However, God the Most High, in the verse that we are currently examining, charges His Messenger to deliver with exactitude. So, sometimes the transmission is from the First Commander exactly as it issued from Him, as in His words 'if they desist,' and at other times, the First Commander charges the Messenger to deliver the word as though he were directly addressing them, i.e. do not say 'they will be overcome', but rather say '…You will be overcome' because you are the one who will address them. This compositional precision could not come from anyone but a Wise Power.

It is either a message directed at the disbelievers of Quraysh, or at all who disbelieve. The overcoming will be in this life, and the gathering will be in the Hereafter.

The Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him delivered the Quranic text '…You will be overcome….' But let us consider the time when he said it. He said it when the Muslims were few in number, unable to defend themselves, unable to do anything. The believers lived under each other's protection or imigrated to far-off places. It is not possible for such an address to come except from someone who possesses the means of all things.

The Messenger of God said it, delivering God's message, while the believers were in an obvious state of weakness. When he said it, it became a point that had to be proved because the One Who charged him with delivering it, God the Most High, was capable of doing it. 'Say to those who disbelieve, "You will be overcome…"' not only with punishment in this life, but in the Hereafter also: '…and gathered together to Hell, and wretched is the resting place.' This gave glad tidings to the Messenger of God and his Companions, and a warning to those who disbelieved in him; and the realisation of it took place at the battle of Badr. When the verse was revealed stating that the host of the disbelievers will be vanquished and that they will turn their backs in flight (al-Qamar: 45), our master 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab wondered 'which host is this?' He knew that the Muslims were weak and incapable, and that the means for the Muslims' victory did not exist, but the Messenger of God was not speaking to the believers of mere means, but rather of the Lord of all means. He challenged and warned them, though he and his companions were weak before them, and reality came to confirm the veracity of God's statement: '…You will be overcome…' and the victory of the Muslims was truly complete, and the disbelievers were overcome.

Is not the veracity of the message delivered by the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him concerning what would happen in this life, evidence of the veracity of the message concerning what would happen in the Hereafter? The realisation of '…You will be overcome…' confirms '…and gathered together to hell….' The verse contains two matters: firstly, a message of the defeat of the disbelievers in this life which is something that all people have witnessed; and the other matter is the affair of the Hereafter which some people might deny. God informed His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him that you, Muhammad, will overcome the disbelievers, though you do not possess the means to overcome them. Despite this, events came to confirm that the disbelievers were utterly defeated. Since the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was truthful with regard to the first message, despite his not possessing the means to do so, he is assuredly truthful with regard to the second matter, the report concerning the gathering in the fire of hell.

Some exegetes have said that this is directed at the Jews because when the Muslims triumphed at Badr, the Jews panicked. This is because they had not expected the Muslims and Islam to be victorious at Badr, and so when Islam triumphed, some of the Jews said, 'Muhammad is the Prophet God has promised us, and we should believe in him,' but others among them said, 'Wait until after another battle.' That is, do not accept it after the first battle. So they waited, and then the battle of Uhud came, which was a stalemate.

We say: what prevents the verse from being directed at the Jews, the polytheists, and everyone who disbelieved? The statement is general, although it is related that the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him gathered the Jews in the market of Banu Qaynuqa'and said to them, 'O you Jews! Beware of that which has afflicted Quraysh, and submit (embrace Islam), before what has afflicted them comes to you, for you know I am a Prophet and Messenger.' What did they say to him? They said 'Do not be deceived because you have met a group of inexperienced people, who have no knowledge of war, and have taken your opportunity with them. If you fight us, you will find that we are the real people.' So God revealed His words: 'Say to those who disbelieve, "You will be overcome and gathered together to Hell, and wretched is the resting place."'

The mihad (rendered here as 'resting place') in Arabic is what we usually prepare for a baby to sleep on in security. The expression 'wretched is the resting place' indicates that they will not be able to change the state they are in, just as a baby cannot fight the one who puts them down to sleep in any place. God then says:

قَدْ كَانَ لَكُمْ ءَايَةٌ فِى فِئَتَيْنِ ٱلْتَقَتَا ۖ فِئَةٌ تُقَٰتِلُ فِى سَبِيلِ
ٱللَّهِ وَأُخْرَىٰ كَافِرَةٌ يَرَوْنَهُم مِّثْلَيْهِمْ رَأْىَ ٱلْعَيْنِ ۚ وَٱللَّهُ يُؤَيِّدُ
بِنَصْرِهِۦ مَن يَشَآءُ ۗ إِنَّ فِى ذَٰلِكَ لَعِبْرَةً لِّأُو۟لِى ٱلْأَبْصَٰرِ ﴿١٣﴾

You have already seen a sign in the two armies that met in battle, one fighting for God's cause and the other made up of disbelievers. With their own eyes [the former] saw [the latter] to be twice their number, but God helps whoever He will. There truly is a lesson in this for all with eyes to see' [13]
(The Quran, Al-'Imran: 13)

When God says 'Already there has been for you a sign …,' who is being addressed in this verse? There is no doubt that the ones being addressed are all those who lived after this event, whether they are believers or disbelievers. For the believer, it confirms for him that God's help will come, even without the presence of the means for it. As for the disbeliever, the verse comes to him with the admonition that God can cause him to fail even when he possesses many means. God has made this event a sign, and a sign is something wondrous, i.e. the event and its consequences are contrary to human expectations.

This is a general statement that applies to anyone who belongs to either of the two hosts it mentions, whether it is the host of faith or the host of disbelief. As for the host of faith, it is so they understand that material means are not everything in the battle between truth and falsehood because God has armies that they cannot see. This address also shows the error of the host of disbelief, so they cannot say, 'We have in our means numbers and strong preparations,' because the battle between truth and falsehood has raged before, and truth was victorious.

The word 'host' invokes a group of people, but it has further specification. A group could be found in which each person has their own interest in life. When we hear the word 'host', however, it indicates a group in the process of performing a single action. Outside of war, every person has actions which might differ from those of the next person. The word 'host', however, indicates a group of people with one enterprise, and one action, for one goal.

Doubtlessly war depicts this phenomenon most precisely; indeed, war is the one thing that unites every host in the way of one enterprise and one action for one goal. This is because each individual in a host is not capable of defending himself alone; everyone relies on and returns to the host, and is not capable of separating himself from his group. An individual in his ordinary life, however, is capable of separating himself from his group. So, the word 'host' indicates a group of people in a single operation, and the word is always used in connotations of war to depict the forces facing each other. When God says, 'Already there has been for you a sign in the two hosts which met …,' this means there was a struggle between two hosts. God clarifies for us the nature of these hosts, saying, '…one fighting in the Way of God and another of disbelievers….' When we examine the Quranic text precisely, we find that God did not give us any description of the host that were fighting in God's Way, nor did He specify that they were believers; yet He specified that the other host were disbelievers. This means that the host that fought in God's Way were necessarily believers. God also did not mention that the host who were disbelievers were fighting in Satan's cause, as it suffices to know that their disbelief inevitably led to their fighting in Satan's cause.

God left out of the description of the first host that which He indicated with His description of the second host. We know the description of the host who fought in God's Way by their opposite in the verse, which is the other host. The opposite of the disbelievers are believers. We also know that the disbelieving host fought in Satan's cause simply by our knowledge that the first, faithful host, were fighting in God's Way. In Arabic linguistics, this is called 'interweaving', meaning that we leave out from the first the counterpart of that which is affirmed in the second and we leave out of the second the counterpart of that which is affirmed in the first. This is to avoid repetition, and to highlight the link between fighting in God's Way and faith, and the link between fighting in Satan's cause and disbelief.

So, according to this meaning, the verse confirms to us the following: You have already had a sign, i.e. a wondrous matter, contrary to the logic of material means, in the two hosts; for when the believing host met the disbelieving host in battle, the limited believing host managed, by means of the goal for which they were fighting, which was to fight in God's Way, to triumph over the disbelieving host, who were fighting in Satan's cause.

After this, God says, '…They saw them [to be] twice their [own] number by [their] eyesight….' So, we have before us two hosts. Which are they that saw? Which are they that were seen? Who were the seers, and who were the seen? If the seers were the believers, then those seen were the disbelievers. If the seers were the disbelievers, then those seen were the believers. Let us consider the matter according to both meanings.

If it was the disbelievers who saw the believers, they saw them as twice their own number. The disbelievers numbered at almost one thousand, so they saw the believers as twice their number, i.e. two thousand. Or, the meaning could be that the believers saw the disbelievers as though they were twice their actual number. The number of believers was around three hundred and fourteen, so twice that is six hundred and twenty eight fighters.

So, if we take 'twice their own number' to mean the number of the believers, this would mean that the disbelievers saw around six hundred and twenty-eight fighters, and if we take the meaning of 'twice their own number' to mean the number of the disbelievers, then the disbelievers saw the believers as around two thousand. What is the aim of this? God is speaking about the confrontation between disbelief and faith, where God gave victory to faith over disbelief.

Some people who try desperately to find faults in the Quran put the question: Why does the Quran say 'twice their own number,' when in another place God says to the Messenger that He showed them to him in a dream as few; for, had He shown them to him as many, the believers would surely have lost heart, and would surely have disagreed with one another about what to do. But God saved them from this; surely, He has full knowledge of what is in the hearts of men. And so, when they met in battle, He made the infidels appear as few in the believers' eyes – just as He made the believers appear as of little account in the disbelievers' eyes – so that God might accomplish a thing which He willed to be done; for all things go back to God (al-Anfal: 43-44).

These verses confirm a large number, whether it is a large number of believers or disbelievers, yet the verse we are currently examining confirms a small number. Those who have doubt in the Quran say: How could the Quran handle a single event in two different ways? We say to these doubters: You are lacking in wisdom because there is a difference between courage when approaching a battle, and the practical and mental spirit that takes over the warrior in the midst of battle. God the Most High is speaking about two states: God decreased these people in the eyes of those, and decreased those people in the eyes of these so that the believers, when they saw the disbelievers as though they were few in number, they would increase in courage and strength of faith, in order to achieve victory.

As for the disbelievers; when they saw the believers as few in number, they would consider them lightly, and be scornful when confronting them. However, when the battle commenced, what occurred? Everyone entered the battle with hope in the paucity of the opposition, so what happened to their nerves? The believer entered the battle well prepared to meet the disbelievers. The disbelievers' nerve flagged when the number turned out to be more than they had expected, and so God says that when they met in battle, He made the infidels appear as few in the believers' eyes – just as He made the believers appear as of little account in the disbelievers' eyes – so that God might accomplish a thing which He willed to be done; for all things go back to God (al-Anfal: 44).

This depicts the state before the battle because God did not want one side to dread the other, and in this case the battle might not proceed. But when the battle began, God turned affairs around, and moved them from one opposite to the other. Changing something from one opposite to the other is a sign that a Higher Power is guiding emotions and feelings, and the Higher Power is able to create whatever emotions He desires.

God first decreased the perceived numbers so that they would not dread the battle, and then in the midst of the battle, God made each side of them seem many in the eyes of the other side so that each host saw the other as a great many, and faithful courage was inspired in the souls of the believers, and they fought with vigour, and the nerve of the disbelievers flagged when they encountered higher numbers than they had anticipated. And God says, 'Already there has been for you a sign in the two hosts which met - one fighting in the Way of God and another of disbelievers. They saw them [to be] twice their [own] number by [their] eyesight. But God supports with His victory whom He wills. Indeed in that is a lesson for those of vision.'

This verse is a message of glad tidings of victory to all those who believe, and at the same time a message of warning to every disbeliever that failure will befall him if he confronts the group of believers. Beware of judging matters according to the scale of material means. The means that are expected from you are only those within the ability of humans, and the rest should be left to Divine Predestination. The faithful host should not be dispirited in front of a great number, and the disbelievers should not be deluded by their strength of numbers because they have in front of them a precedent confirming that a small number of believers defeated a large number of disbelievers.

Another alternative meaning of the verse is that the disbelievers saw the believers as twice the number of the disbelievers. Another meaning (thirdly) is that the disbelievers saw the believers as twice their actual number. Another meaning (fourthly) of the verse is that the Muslims saw the disbelievers as twice their number, i.e. twice the number of the believers, i.e. just over six hundred. This would mean that the number of the disbelievers in the eyes of the believers was less than the actual number of disbelievers. So what is the meaning of ‘twice their number’ here? God promised His support to the believers when He commanded His Prophet to urge the believers to fight: if there are twenty of them who are patient in adversity, they will overcome two hundred; and if there are one hundred of them, they will overcome one thousand of those who are disbelievers because they are people who have no understanding (al-Anfal: 65).

The proportion here means that a single believer could defeat ten disbelievers in battle. This is the promise of God. When God wanted to make things easier and the noble verse was revealed stating that God has lightened the hardship for the believers, and He knows that in them is weakness. So if there are from them one hundred who are steadfast, they will overcome two hundred. And if there are among them a thousand, they will overcome two thousand by permission of God. And God is with the steadfast (al-Anfal: 66).

So God lightened the proportion where one believer could defeat two disbelievers. The believers are promised victory by God even if they face double their number. In the verse we are currently examining, in which God brings glad tidings to the believers as well as warning to the disbelievers, He says, '…But God supports with His victory whom He wills. Indeed in that is a lesson for those of vision.'

We hear the word 'ibra (rendered here as 'lesson'), and the origin of the word 'ibra in Arabic conveys the meaning of 'crossing from one place to another,' which in Arabic is 'uboor ('crossing'). In our ordinary life, we assign places in the streets for pedestrians to cross in order for them to cross safely from one side of the street to the other. The 'uboor (crossing) of the ocean is ('uboor) crossing from one shore to another.

So, the meaning of the Arabic word 'uboor is crossing from one place to another and 'abra means a tear-drop because it falls from its place in the eye to the cheek. 'Ibara means a sentence that we utter because it travels from the mouth to the ear, so it, too, involves crossing. 'Abir means the scent that travels from a distant flower to arrive at the nose. So, the root of the Arabic word ('uboor) indicates the meaning of 'crossing/penetration/travelling.'

When God says, '…Indeed in that is a lesson…' ('ibra), i.e. in your being transported from a state which threw fear into your hearts, O believers, because you are few in number, and they are many, to God's help; and in transporting you, O disbelievers, to defeat, despite your numerous host and preparations.

The 'lesson' here is an event which takes you from one state to a different state, like a tyrant whose day we see come, and so we say 'there is a lesson in this for us', i.e. it has transported us from seeing him in power to oppress to seeing him in humiliation.

So, in this way, the 'lesson' is an eye-opening admonition which transfers one reality to another, something which the intellect might find astonishing. The ending of this noble verse with this meaning is a comprehensive clarification and elucidation; in its beginning, God says, 'Already there has been for you a sign in the two hosts which met …,' and the verse concludes by saying, '…Indeed in that is a lesson for those of vision.'

So, a lesson is something which takes us from one matter to another that might be unusual according to material means, that is, if you are confined to your own views; but the believer is not confined to his own views. If God the Most High had willed to torment the disbelievers without their facing the believers and fighting them, He would have tormented them without it, but He willed that the torment of the disbelievers would be by the hands of the believers as He commanded them to fight the disbelievers and God will chastise them by their hands, and will bring disgrace upon them, and will help the believers against them; and He will soothe the bosoms of those who believe (at-Tawba: 14).

If God had willed to torment the disbelievers by means other than the hands of the believers, He could have sent a natural phenomenon to torment them such as an earthquake to destroy them, but God wanted to torment the disbelievers by the hands of the believers. '…God supports with His victory whom He wills. Indeed in that is a lesson for those of vision.' 'Support' is power, so He desires from you only the starting point of action, and then God will complete the victory. 'Supports' means 'gives power to', so God strengthens with His help whom he wills, and the lesson is there for those who have eyes to see.

Someone might say: 'Is the lesson for those who have eyes to see, or for those who have insight?' We say that the lesson is for those who have eyes because the matter that the verse is concerned with is a physical matter to be witnessed, so whoever has two eyes must use them. If reflection and pondering are not granted to every person, eyesight is present in the majority of people, and all of these people can open their eyes, and witness this matter.

If we look at the battle itself, we find clear evidence of the truth of the statement. The believers were few, and their numbers are known and recorded, and their equipment was light; they had not gone out with the intention of war. They had only set out to take possession of caravans carrying provisions such as food and clothing to replace what the polytheists had usurped of their wealth in Mecca. If they had only taken possession of the caravan, their victory would not have been as great as it was because caravans did not usually carry a lot of military equipment; they were only protected by guards. God, however, desired for them a resounding, mighty victory against a powerful, heavily armed force. God promised them victory over one of the two hosts: God gave the believers the promise that one of the two enemy hosts would fall to them; and they would have liked to seize the less powerful one, whereas it was God's will to prove the truth to be true in accordance with His words, and to wipe out the last remnant of the disbelievers (al-Anfal: 7).

God's promise was to give the believers victory over one of the two parties, and human nature would hope to have victory against the less dangerous party, i.e. the unarmed party, the caravan. But this kind of victory would not have had the reverberation of the victory against the armed party; it would have been easy to say: Muhammad and those with him fought against a group of tradesmen without weapons or an army. God, however, wanted to make from this battle a separation line between truth and falsehood, and for truth to win out.

You, O believers, did not set out except to capture the caravan; your preparations were not sufficient for battle. As for the disbelievers, they came in full power, with all of their force, for Mecca had sent out all its sons for this battle. When victory comes to the believers in an occasion like this, it is true victory, and a wondrous sign from among God's signs. It becomes a lesson to others, and for this reason we find wondrous things about this battle, the battle of Badr.

Of these wonders, we find brothers each having their own opposing stance, fighting against each other; and we find fathers and sons each with their own stance and opposition fighting against each other despite the close kinship between them. For example, the son of Abu Bakr God be pleased with him, who had not yet embraced Islam, was on the side of the disbelievers, and his father, the Siddiq, the great believer, was with the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him.

After Abu Bakr's son converted, he told his father something out of gratitude and duty, saying, 'You appeared to me on the day of Badr, so I turned my face away from you.' Abu Bakr God be pleased with him, the trustworthy one, said, 'By God, if you had appeared to me, I would have killed you.'

Both of the positions are logical. Why? Because when Abu Bakr's son met with his father, and saw his father's face, he was drawing comparison between Abu Bakr and what? He was drawing a comparison between his father and falsehood, and he knew with certainty that it was falsehood, and so Abu Bakr's son preferred his father, and for this reason, he spared him and did not touch him with harm. Abu Bakr as-Siddiq God be pleased with him, however, was comparing faith in God with his son, and of course faith was greater in Abu Bakr's view, so if he had seen his son on the day of Badr, he would have killed him.

God has wisdom behind every Qurayshi war criminal killed at the hands of the believers, and God has wisdom behind every disbeliever who survived because they had been saved for a greater cause of faith, wherein they would serve well that cause. If Khalid ibn Al-Walid had been killed in any of the events in which he was on the side of disbelief, it would have been a great loss to us Muslims. This is because God saved him for religious battles in which he would be the drawn sword of God; and if ‘Ikrima had been killed, the Islamic community would have lost a military genius as well.

The Muslims were saddened on the day of Badr because they did not kill those heroes; that was because they did not know God’s wisdom in saving those warriors so that they could later join the ranks of Faith. God did not allow the Muslim warriors on the day of Badr to reach those warriors who at that time were still following the religion of their tribe because He was saving them for religious events that would come later, in which they would stand and fight in the ranks of the believers; and this was an unprecedented victory.

And we have Abu ‘Aziz, the brother of Mus‘ab ibn ‘Umair, one of the companions of the Prophet whom the Messenger of God peace and blessings be upon him sent to call to the Islamic religion and teach the people of Medina; Mus‘ab was one of the spoiled young men of Quraysh, surrounded by opulence, and whose mother was very wealthy; and when the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him saw him wearing a sheep-skin after a time when he had used to wear silk, He peace and blessings be upon him said to his companions, ‘Look what faith has done to your companion.’

Mus‘ab met his brother Abu ‘Aziz in the battle, and Abu ‘Aziz was a disbeliever and Mus‘ab God be pleased with him was a Muslim standing with the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him.

When Mus‘ab God be pleased with him saw his brother Abu ‘Aziz captured by a Muslim fighter named Abu Al-Yusr, he said, ‘O Abu Al-Yusr, keep strong hold of your prisoner as his mother is rich and well-off, and she will pay a large ransom.’

His brother Abu ‘Aziz said to him, ‘Is this your way of commending your brother?’ and Mus‘ab God be pleased with him said, pointing to Abu Al-Yusr, ‘This is my brother, not you.’ This was the spirit of faith that caused a small host to defeat the people of disbelief; the great power of faith overcoming the sentiments of brotherhood and of paternity, and the sentiment of filiation. God made the occasion of Badr a symbol so that no believer could be downhearted even if the numbers of believers were few, or their preparations were scant, and so that no disbeliever could be deluded even if his people were superior in number and materials.

God made it a symbol of true faith and this is why it is said: Covet death, and you will be granted life. The matter of faith is what fills the spirit of the believer; it is truly a profound and deep issue for the spirit. What do the disbelievers expect when they lie in wait for the believers? When they lie in wait to fight them, the believers will enter paradise if they are killed or they will gain victory over the disbelievers. In this regard, God commands the Prophet to put forth to the disbelievers the question: What are you expecting to befall us? It will be one of two good things (martyrdom and paradise or victory); and we hope that God will inflict you with suffering from Him or by our hands; so you wait and we wait, and we shall see (at-Tawba: 52).

So, success here will come in one of two ways: either victory over the disbelievers or martyrdom in God’s Way, and attaining the status of the martyrs in paradise – and both of these are desirable things. The believers wait for the disbelievers, either for God to afflict the disbelievers with torment from Himself, or to afflict them by the hands of the believers. It is a clear and perfect equilibrium of faith.

زُيِّنَ لِلنَّاسِ حُبُّ ٱلشَّهَوَٰتِ مِنَ ٱلنِّسَآءِ وَٱلۡبَنِينَ وَٱلۡقَنَٰطِيرِ ٱلۡمُقَنطَرَةِ
مِنَ ٱلذَّهَبِ وَٱلۡفِضَّةِ وَٱلۡخَيۡلِ ٱلۡمُسَوَّمَةِ وَٱلۡأَنۡعَٰمِ وَٱلۡحَرۡثِۗ
ذَٰلِكَ مَتَٰعُ ٱلۡحَيَوٰةِ ٱلدُّنۡيَاۖ وَٱللَّهُ عِندَهُۥ حُسۡنُ ٱلۡمَـَٔابِ ١٤

The love of desirable things is made alluring for men – women, children, gold and silver treasures piled up high, horses with fine markings, livestock, and farmland – these may be the joys of this life, but God has the best place to return to [14] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 14)

Let us contemplate the context in which this noble verse comes. The verse addresses the battle that Allah Glorified is He has caused to be continuous and eternal in order to clarify for us that spiritual battles require sincere devotion to Him and drastic change of some habits to which a believer has become accustomed and from which he derives worldly delights and enjoyments. These spiritual battles require the sincere believer to sacrifice much of his wealth to equip himself and others and be prepared.

He who fails to rise up to such spiritual battles is a person overwhelmed by worldly desires. Pondering over the context of the verse in reference, notice that it comes after the verse depicting the path to the recurring unprecedented victories for believers so that we would not be dazzled by the glamorous worldly desires and distracted from relishing the delight of fighting in the cause of Allah Glorified is He for His word to prevail. Allah says: ‘Beautified for people is the love of worldly desires…’ (Al-‘Imran: 14). The Arabic verb used in the verse- Zuyyina, meaning “(to be) beautified”, makes a clear distinction between the enjoyments and pleasures that Allah has deemed lawful for us and for the ones with which He is not pleased. This is because beautification usually denotes making additional improvements to the essence of the object or person. A woman is beautiful in essence and then further beautifies herself by means of make-up, clothes, ornaments, jewellery, etc. Such beautification is an additional improvement for the purpose of enhancing her original beauty.

In this verse, Allah Glorified is He is urging us to embrace the worldly life, not to reject it. He wants us, though, to be mindful of overindulgence in its alluring beautified pleasures and adornments. He wants us to embrace the worldly life but to consider the real nature of the worldly pleasures and enjoyments, which are associated with preserving life. He says: ‘Beautified for man is the love of worldly desires through women....’ (Al-‘Imran: 14). What is “desire”? A desire refers to the strong inner inclination towards a certain act or thing.

When one thinks more deeply on this verse, one can see that it clearly underlines the fact that such inner inclinations towards worldly needs that ensure the preservation of life are actually good and acceptable in Islam. However, when a person overindulges in the gratification of such acceptable needs, it is an undesirable and disliked attitude.

We have previously highlighted the example of the strongest human desire, namely the sexual desire, and we underlined that animals can be seen as better than humans in this respect. Animals embrace the sexual desire as a means for the preservation of their species. This is evidenced by the fact that once a female animal mates with a male, she does not allow another male to mate with her. Animals do not usually indulge in sex more than what is strictly necessary for conception. Similarly, a male would not solicit a female to engage in sexual intercourse if he finds out that she is pregnant!(1) For animals, the sexual desire is a means of preserving their existence and life on earth, unlike human beings who have pleasure-driven motivation to engage in sexual activities as a source of recurring pleasure(2).

However, human beings unjustly describe a person's strong sexual drive as having a "bestial sexual appetite." It would have been a good thing if such a person truly had a bestial sexual appetite because animals gratify their sexual desires and normally indulge in sex within what is necessary for conception. On the contrary, human beings have taken it so far beyond what is necessary for reproduction, adding a philosophical dimension to the equation. Hence, overindulgence in carrying out lawful acts beyond that which is permissible, is regarded as an indication of the lowness of the evil-inclined soul.

Allah Glorified is He wants to guarantee the preservation of the universe, which can be attained through two things: the preservation of one's life by means of providing one's needed nutrition (food and water), and preserving the existence and continuity of life on earth by means of reproduction.

Contemplating this issue, we realise that the Creator is All-Wise, and All Knowing. He knows that raising animal offspring is rather a simple task compared to raising human offspring. The pigeon, for instance, feeds its chicks until they are able to fly and then the mother will have no knowledge of their whereabouts as they fly away and start their own lives independently. However, raising human offspring requires significant toil and tremendous efforts until the child reaches adulthood. This is why there should be harmony between the gratification of the human being's sexual desires and the hardship and toil they would have to endure in the process of preserving the product of such pleasure.

Allah the Exalted says: 'Beautified for man is the love of worldly desires through women...' (Al-'Imran: 14). The question arises as who has beautified such pleasures and desires for Man? If the beautification is channelled into the gratification of lawful enjoyments beyond what is needed, then it is the work of Satan. If it is within the scope of ensuring the preservation of the human existence and channelled into the lawful outlets, then it is from Allah.

Allah the Exalted adds the Arabic word Al-Banin, meaning "offspring," in the verse to the category of worldly desires. In this context, it refers to male offspring, specifically.

Why did not Allah refer to 'female offspring' as well? This is because people tended to seek sons to be a source of honour and pride for the family; sons would not expected to bring about them shame as daughters might. Before Islam, Arabs used to bury their female infants alive out of fear of future shame. For many people, male offspring were often more desirable than female offspring. In fact, this phenomenon is still evident in some present-day communities even among those who speak about and advocate women's rights.

Allah the Exalted also adds to the category of the worldly desires, '…heaped-up treasures of gold and silver…' (Al-'Imran: 14). The Arabic word qanatir is the plural form of qintar, denoting a specific weight. Besides being a unit for measuring weight, the qintar was also used as a unit for measuring volume until people noticed that it had a particular weight (about 100 pounds or 100 Kg). People started using it as a unit for measuring weight.

> It was a sign of affluence and richness in ancient times to bring the hide of a bull and fill it with gold; this amount of a bull's hide of gold was called qintar. The verse reads, 'heaped-up treasures (qanatir muqantara) of gold and silver…' (Al-'Imran: 14). Allah Glorified is He is confirming the literal meaning to denote the fact that they are complete qanatir in terms of weight, not less. We often find in the Arabic language words described with adjectives derived from the same root to confirm the intended meaning. The same applies to the word Dinar in the sentence "dananir mudandarah" meaning a lot of Dinars. For example, we say "zhil zhaleel", meaning "a shadowy shade" to describe a shadow as being very heavy and thick, and we say "layl alyal" to describe a night as being very dark and dim.

Darkness, for example, blocks sunrays. There may be one barrier between a person and the sun or more than one barrier. The shade in the second case is thicker. This is why the shade of a tree is so nice because the leaves block the sunrays and these leaves shade one another. Thus, they provide a thick shadow forming something of a natural air-conditioner.

This is why people in modern times make tents from several layers of fabric with several inches of space between them so that one fabric would shade the other. The difference between the natural thick shade of the trees and that of such tents is that each leaf which shades a person is shaded itself by another one and the leaves of the tree are in different positions so as to give room for the breeze to flow between them. Tents, however, block out the breeze. An Arab poet described an orchard, saying:

It blocks the sunrays from all directions, but allows the breeze to flow through.

So, when Allah the Exalted describes the qanatir (treasures) as muqantarah (stored-up and hoarded), it means that these treasures are accurately measured. What is the nature of these treasures? The verse goes on, 'treasures of gold and silver, and fine horses branded (with their distinct mark)…' (Al-'Imran: 14). Horses were considered signs of nobility, leadership, and prestige. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: "Good is tied to the forelock of the horses until the Day of Judgment."(1)

Allah says: 'fine horses branded (with their distinct mark)…' (Al-'Imran: 14). It is common that the word "fine" would have many different meanings. The Arabic word used in the verse to describe horses is mussawwamah, which is derived from the Arabic verb sama, denoting being bred in open pastures where they can eat freely, as opposed to being tied-up and forced to eat only what is offered to them. It also means that they have distinctive marks; one horse may be with "ghurrah," i.e. white blaze on the horse's brow (agharr), another may be black (adham), and yet another one may be bright chestnut (asqar).

---

(1) [Al-Bukhari and Muslim]

The word “fine” also denotes being well trained and tamed. Horses are originally wild and fierce; they must be tamed so that Man can benefit from them. Thus, we come to know that the Arabic word mussawwamah or “fine”, has diverse meanings.

These aforementioned fine horses are freely-grazed and bred in open pastures where they can eat freely; they have distinct marks such as "ghurrah," i.e. white blaze on the horse's brow, white spots on their feet, or black or bright chestnut colours; they are also well-trained and tamed. We notice that this verse, which lists different kinds of worldly pleasures, comes right after the one that discusses Jihad, or struggling in the cause of Allah, and in this context, it refers to war with those oppressing Muslim people.

War requires staying away from one’s family for long; accordingly, the fulfilment of one's desires, be it sexual desire or desire for offspring and wealth, must not come in the way, hindering the person's efforts in this regard. The believer gladly spends his wealth and efforts in Jihad and horses are items of wealth spent for that very purpose.

The previous verse reads: “You have already had a sign in the two hosts that met in battle, one host fighting in the cause of Allah and the other denying Him; with their own eyes [the former] saw the others as twice their own number: but Allah strengthens with His succour whom He wills. In this, behold, there is indeed a lesson for all who have eyes to see” (Al-’Imran: 13)

This underlines the fact that a believer should not give up his true aspiration (at times of war) - namely attaining martyrdom in the cause of Allah, or victory - for the sake of fleeting worldly desires and pleasures: women, children, heaped-up treasures of gold and silver, fine horses branded (with their distinct mark), and cattle. Allah says, concerning cattle, in the chapter of (al-An'am: 6) ‘And of cattle (He created) beasts of burden and those which are fit for slaughter only; eat of what Allah has given you and do not follow the footsteps of the Satan; surely he is your open enemy. [They are] eight mates - of the sheep, two and of the goats, two. Say, “Is it the two males He has forbidden or the two females or that which the wombs of the two females contain? Inform me with knowledge, if you should be truthful." And of the camels, two and of the cattle, two. Say, 'Is it the two males He has forbidden or the two females or that which the wombs of the two females contain? Or were you witnesses when Allah charged you with this? Then who is more unjust than one who invents a lie about Allah to mislead the people by [something] other than knowledge? Indeed, Allah does not guide the wrongdoing people)" (al-An'am: 142 - 144).

The verse made mention of the following: two sheep, two goats, two camels, and two cows; the total is eight pairs. They cannot be counted as sixteen as some early scholars suggested. A pair is not counted as two. It is one unit which consists of two people or things of the same sort considered together. Another example is the word "twin". A twin refers to two offspring; when we say two twins, this means four offspring. The Arabic word taw'am, meaning twins, is also used to refer to offspring in a multiple birth, or more than two offspring (twins, triplets, quadruplets, quintuplets, sextuplets, etc.).

Allah says regarding the beautification of worldly pleasures: 'Beautified for people is the love of worldly desires- of women; children; heaped-up treasures of gold and silver; fine, branded horses of high mark; cattle; and tilled lands.' (Al-'Imran: 14). The Arabic word harth means "tilled lands" and is used in this verse to refer to plants and crops. Allah Glorified is He wants us to bear in mind that, while He causes some plants to grow without any effort exerted on our part, He also requires us to exert effort in growing others through tilling and the preparation of land for crop bearing.

The word tilling means "stirring up soil and breaking up soil crusts and clods to prepare it for cultivation". Crops need water, air, and a suitable environment to grow; the farmer should provide suitable soil in which the tiny root hairs of the radicle (the embryonic root of the seedling) will have space to grow and become strong.

So, tilling involves stirring up the soil and preparing it so that the seed can grow. Allah the Exalted has placed within the two cotyledons (embryonic leaves) of the seed all the needed nutrients for the plant during the germination of the seed until it develops a stalk, by means of which the plant can derive the needed nutrients from the soil. As the stalk becomes stronger, the two cotyledons of the embryo within the seed of the plant dwindle and become mere leaves. So what happens to the volume of the two cotyledons?

The cotyledons are important for the seedling as it begins to grow because they contain the food reserves needed for germination and seedling growth, providing the seedling its initial burst of energy. They provide nutrients required for plant growth until the seedling is able to derive its own nutrients from the soil, and this is not possible unless the soil is tilled. This is why it is said that clay soil is difficult to manage and infertile. It is also said that sandy soil is also infertile. Why is that?

This is because there are two characteristics of good soil: First, the soil should allow water to penetrate through it to provide plants with the needed water. Second, the soil should be able to hold water. So, we need soil that allows both water penetration and water retention. Clay soil holds too much water, thus causing root rot; Sandy soil does not hold water (having the lowest water retention). For this reason, ideal soil is a mixture of clay and sandy types of soil. When Allah Glorified is He speaks about plants, He uses the word "harth," meaning "tilled land", in order to draw our attention to the fact that whoever wants to reap a harvest of crops has to work and exert effort in tilling the soil. He also says*:* 'And have you seen that [seed] which you sow? Is it you who makes it grow, or do We cause it to grow?' (al-Waqi'a: 63-64).

In these verses, Allah uses the word "seed" because it is the origin of the plant's existence. All the above-mentioned desires and pleasures- women; offspring, heaped-up treasures of gold and silve, horses of high mark, cattle, and tilled lands- have great value for the individual. This is clarified by the conclusion of the verse: 'That is the enjoyment of worldly life, but Allah has with Him the best return' (Al-'Imran: 14).

This verse lists the pleasures and enjoyment of this worldly life. A person may feel worried that he may miss out on an enjoyment and he may not relish it, or that he might die before savouring it. One does not really treasure those enjoyments and pleasures that he fails to experience. When we ponder over the verse as a unit, we can easily recognise that it underlines the keys and triggers for all personalities by means of which people would be enticed to deviate from the straight path. Allah the Exalted says*:* 'Beautified for people is the love of worldly desires- of women; children; heaped-up treasures of gold and silver fine, branded horses of high mark, cattle; and tilled lands. All this may be enjoyed in the worldly life – but Allah has with Him the best return' (Al-'Imran: 14).

The verse made mention of the triggers by means of which a person may be enticed to deviate from the straight path. Allah Glorified is He requires His believing servant to follow a lifestyle that conforms to His will. So, what drives a believer to give up the will of Allah the Exalted in any given matter and opt for a contradictory action?

There is no doubt that it is sinful desires and urges that cause the heart to incline toward evil and lead a person astray. Every person has his own temptations. It could be the desire for women. Maybe it is love for his offspring, love for raising them and providing for them beyond what he can afford. Perhaps it is the pursuit of a career, enticing him to steal or cheat in order to please his boss. For others, it may be love of wealth, horses and steeds, or tools and arms. Every person has his own temptations.

Those who beautify deviation from the path of Allah and lure people into it, resort to these personality triggers. A person may not be tempted by women's alluring gazes or by gold and wealth, but could be lured by his love for his children. This would be his alluring desire.

So, everyone has his own temptations and those who wish to lead people astray know such triggers. When Allah Glorified is He says that these desires and pleasures are beautified for people, someone might say, "If Allah wants us to stay away from such things, why did He create them to begin with?"

The answer to this question would be as follows: Allah the Exalted says in the verse*:* 'Beautified for people…' in the passive form. The question arises, then: who has beautified them? Allah Glorified is He could have used the active form and would have clearly stated it in the verse. However, He wanted to draw our attention to the fact that it is possible that Satan would be the one who beautifies these things. It could also be the faith-oriented logic that beautifies these enjoyments for us. Allah the Exalted related the supplication of some of his pious servants in the verse that reads*:* 'And those who say, "Our Lord, grant us from among our wives and offspring comfort to our eyes and make us an example for the righteous.'" (al-Furqan: 74)

So, what is the criterion in this regard? Allah Glorified is He designated a specific function for every worldly blessing. For instance, one's wife is made a source of tranquillity and peace of mind providing the man with much-needed affection, kindness, and tenderness. Allah the Exalted says*:* 'And of His signs is that He created for you from yourselves mates that you may find tranquillity in them; and He placed between you affection and mercy. Indeed, in that are signs for a people who give thought' (ar-Rum: 21).

Allah Glorified is He is stressing the function of this great worldly blessing; namely wives providing their husbands with tranquility, satisfying their needs and guarding their chastity. What about a man's love for his children? Allah relates the supplication of Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him in the verse that reads*:* 'He said, "My Lord, indeed my bones have weakened, and my head has filled with white, and never have I been in my supplication to You, my Lord, unhappy. And indeed, I fear the successors after me, and my wife has been barren, so give me, from Yourself, an heir. Who will inherit from me and inherit from the family of Jacob. And make him, my Lord, pleasing [to You]"' (Maryam: 4-6).

Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him implored Allah for an heir to inherit from him, and the Prophets do not leave behind wealth as inheritance. Rather, their legacy is knowledge and wisdom. So, Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him was imploring his Lord for a son who would inherit wisdom from him and from the family of Prophet Ya'qub (Jacob) peace be upon him and that Allah would cause him (the son) to earn the pleasure of his Lord. Had the Prophets of Allah left wealth as inheritance, some might infer that Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him asked for a son so that he could inherit Zakaryya's wealth; but Allah willed that the Prophets should not leave wealth as inheritance, but rather that they pass on the knowledge of God's way. So, Prophet (Zechariah) peace be upon him asked Allah to bless him with a son to carry on his duty of consolidating the religion and divinely revealed way of life on earth.

Similarly, the one who desires wealth to spend it in the cause of Allah, horses and steeds to tame for war purposes (at times of war), or tilled lands to grow food for the benefit of the creation of Allah, will earn commendation, praise, and great reward from his Lord. Therefore, we need to bear in mind that a blessing bestowed upon you by Allah may be employed in what pleases Him or in what gratifies the evil inclinations of the "self." When you, oh servant of Allah, examine your own desires, you will realise that they can possibly be directed towards good. Allah the Exalted says*:* "And those who say, 'Our Lord, grant us from among our wives and offspring comfort to our eyes and make us an example for the righteous'" (al-Furqan: 74).

Allah the Exalted willed that His Prophets and righteous people would be blessed with children who would inherit their good character traits and serve as good examples for other people. A believer should love having children who could be good role models for others. The one who loves horses can channel this love into doing good deeds.

Abu Hurayrah may Allah be pleased with him narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'The best of people is a man who is holding his horse's rein in the way of Allah (in Jihad) and is galloping towards the place wherever he hears a call for war or detects a note of danger; he goes on proceeding, seeking martyrdom or death wherever it is expected.'(1)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him encouraged Muslims to tame horses for war purposes. This proves that it is possible to channel our love for worldly pleasures and enjoyments toward what is good. It should be noted, though, that Allah Glorified is He is not urging us to abstain from relishing these blessings and enjoyments. On the contrary, He is urging us to abstain from employing what He has created for us in other than the way He has intended.

Let us ponder on the remark at the conclusion of the verse about the beautified enjoyments: The verse reads*:* 'All this may be enjoyed in the worldly life – but Allah has with Him the best return' (Al-'Imran: 14). This means that from a shallow and conventional view, these beautified enjoyments and desires are perceived as mere sources of pleasure. How long will these desires and enjoyments last? They are temporary, just like this worldly life.

(1) (Muslim)

Let us also contemplate the situation of a person who attempts to refine the value of doing good in his life. This can be attained through several means: 1- carrying out more good deeds, 2- observing good deeds constantly making sure that good-doing is not forsaken, 3- devoting one’s life to doing good and not allowing oneself to miss out on any chance to carry out good deeds, 4- not associating good deeds with other than Allah. For example, one may associate the blessings bestowed upon him with a strong person who may become weak, ill, go absent, or betray him.

Any other good attained by any other way is not genuine. These desires-women, wealth, offspring, horses, cattle, and lands-provide the individual with enjoyment in this worldly life. Hypothetically speaking, let us assume that nothing can take away these pleasures from you as long as you live, and you will continue to relish these enjoyments throughout your whole life. You have to ask yourself: what is the value of this short worldly life when a person only lives for a limited number of years according to the decree of Allah? A person's life in this world should be estimated by his own life- span rather than the length of the worldly life itself.

Let us assume that one continued to relish these desires and enjoyments: women, wealth, children, horses, gold, silver, lands, cattle, equipment, and arms. What would happen then? There is no doubt that this worldly life is limited and no one can live beyond his designated life span. Therefore, no one can retain these enjoyments forever because his life in this world is limited.

Allah the Exalted has not set a fixed life span for all human beings in this world. Rather, every person has a specific limited life span. When a child is born, there is no card sent down with him specifying the number of years he will spend in this worldl.

Allah Glorified is He has rendered the exact number of years each person will live on this earth, unknown to the person himself. This is why it is said that ambiguity is the utmost clarity. Allah the Exalted has concealed the time and cause of death of people. When will death approach? Where? Allah had decreed that this information should be hidden from people so that a believer would be constantly anticipating death at all times.

This ambiguity of the time of death serves as the utmost clarity. No matter how long the worldly life is, it is still limited and a person cannot guarantee living in it for long. The pleasures and enjoyments a person relishes in his short life are commensurate with his abilities. Even if a person does not fail to savour the enjoyments of the worldly life, he will surely leave this world eventually. If we compared all these denotations to the linguistic connotation of the Arabic word ad-Dunia, meaning "worldly life," we will come to realise that it denotes "the lowest" as opposed to "the highest," which is the Hereafter.

Why is it described as "the highest"? It is because the Hereafter will elevate the good deeds performed by an individual in his worldly life.

After the end of this limited life in this world, a believer will go to paradise where he will lead an unlimited life. This is the first aspect of refinement and elevation. A believer is guaranteed that the foods and enjoyments therein are eternal and is also guaranteed that he shall abide therein eternally. A believer cannot realize the real value of paradise because his perception of goodness is commensurate with his knowledge. A person's knowledge of goodness is partial and limited, whereas Allah's knowledge of goodness is absolutely perfect.

A believer relishes in paradise all that is good in a manner that is commensurate with what Allah the Exalted knows of the goodness within a believer. Thus, our life in this world is the lowest, and the one to come is the highest. When we are commanded not to be deceived by this glamorous worldly life and not to be lured by these enjoyments and desires, is this a form of encouraging self-love or self-hatred?

It is a heavenly call towards self-love because it contributes to the refinement and elevation of goodness within every believer. The Islamic Message has made it clear that there are such-and-such pleasures and enjoyments in this worldly life and that this life is limited and none can live beyond his specified life-span. It has also made it clear that a person's ability to relish worldly enjoyments is limited to his own capabilities, whereas the enjoyments of the next life are commensurate with the capability of the Creator. It is, therefore, very logical to say: '…All this may be enjoyed in the worldly life – but Allah has with Him the best return' (Al-'Imran: 14). This verse underlines that Allah the Exalted has with Him the best return and the best rewards.

When Allah Glorified is He demands of you, as a believer, to lower your gaze and refrain from looking at what is impermissible for you to look at, a superficial person might think that this is a restriction on the freedom of the eyes. However, Allah has commanded lowering one's gaze in this worldly life so that the eyes will savour the great enjoyments in the Hereafter upon which Allah has made permissible to gaze. Such a commandment, therefore, is generated from the love of Allah for His creation, and this is the elevation of goodness.

Let us assume that you have a small sum of money and you meet a poor person and give him the money, favouring him over yourself. You do so such a thing in order to earn doubled rewards in the Hereafter. So, the religious commandment can be perceived as a refined, lofty sort of selfishness, not a foolish one. Allah the Exalted then, clarifies this "best return" by saying*:*

قُلۡ أَؤُنَبِّئُكُم بِخَيۡرٖ مِّن ذَٰلِكُمۡۚ لِلَّذِينَ ٱتَّقَوۡاْ عِندَ رَبِّهِمۡ جَنَّٰتٞ
تَجۡرِي مِن تَحۡتِهَا ٱلۡأَنۡهَٰرُ خَٰلِدِينَ فِيهَا وَأَزۡوَٰجٞ مُّطَهَّرَةٞ
وَرِضۡوَٰنٞ مِّنَ ٱللَّهِۗ وَٱللَّهُ بَصِيرُۢ بِٱلۡعِبَادِ ١٥

[Prophet], say, 'Would you like me to tell you of things that are better than all of these? Their Lord will give those who are mindful of God Gardens graced with flowing streams, where they will stay with pure spouses and God's good pleasure – God is fully aware of His servants [15]
(The Quran, Al-'Imran: 15)

When we see the phrase 'Shall I inform you of [something]...' in a verse, we should bear in mind that the Arabic verb ykhbir, meaning "to tell", is different from yunabbi' meaning "to inform", as the second is often followed with huge news; It is often used to present extraordinary news. This is why Allah the Exalted says*:* 'About what are they asking one another? About the great news [of resurrection]…' (an-Naba': 1-2) This verse used the Arabic word naba' which means "news" to refer to the event that will turn the entire world upside down. Allah the Exalted says*:* 'Shall I inform you of [something] better than that?' (Al-'Imran: 15). This means that Allah Glorified is He will inform us of something big that is better than these things. Thus, we know that Allah has rendered these things criteria for comparison. Why? It is because they are tangible. He has clarified for us the way to refine goodness within us by saying: 'For those who fear Allah will be gardens in the presence of their Lord' (Al-'Imran: 15). The Arabic word Rabb, meaning "Lord," denotes the One Who sustains and supports those under His care until they reach the desired state of perfection.

The verse clearly stated that these gardens will be "in the presence of their Lord." What has the Lord and Sustainer promised His pious servants? He has promised them 'gardens through which running waters flow' (Al-'Imran: 15). Let us compare these gardens to the tilled lands and plants mentioned, as well. We have previously underlined that when Allah speaks of plants, He uses the Arabic word harth, meaning "tilled land" so that we know that growing plants requires exerting effort and hard work.

On the contrary, the gardens in the Hereafter will be prepared and will not require any work or struggle on the part of a believer. Rather, he shall relish therein the pleasure of having the rivers flowing beneath them and will find therein the promised enjoyments. The verse reads: '...beneath which rivers flow, wherein they abide eternally...' (Al-'Imran: 15). A believer shall abide therein eternally; it shall be a never-ending eternity in permanent pleasures.

The verse makes mention of '... and purified wives' referring to the pure wives promised by Allah for the believers therein, compared to women in the worldly life. We all know that women go through phases that may cause repulsion among the spouses either pertaining to her physical appearance or her character. There are times when a husband would not be attracted to his wife and does not like to approach her. A woman may also have a bad quality that causes her spouse to hate her beauty. This is why a man may be deceived by the outward appearance of a woman in this worldly life that he may fall in love with her and then discover a bad characteristic that drives him to hate her. As for the Hereafter, things are totally different. The people of paradise shall be granted "pure wives" (Al-'Imran: 15). This means that the spouses will be void of any defect that could be regarded as a deficiency in this worldly life. A believer will enjoy her beauty and spare himself the evils and defects in this worldly life because Allah has caused him or her to be purified and void of them.

Who has caused these spouses to be "purified"? Indeed, Allah is the One Who causes them to be pure physically and morally. A man in this worldly life may love a woman, who can retain her beauty and ability to attract him for fifteen years, and then she will start having wrinkles and put on extra weight; he then would start to develop an aversion to her! On the contrary, the women in the Hereafter will be purified from all defects and evils and retain their beauty and youth eternally. Is this not an elevation and refinement of good? We can notice that Allah has made mention of two things:

First: the gardens beneath which rivers flow compared to the tilled lands in this worldly life.

Second: pure wives which we can also compare to the women of this worldly life.

Allah does not mention any details about the other enjoyments in the verse. What about the heaped-up treasures of gold and silver? What about the horses? What about the cattle? What about the offspring? We notice that Allah Glorified is He has made mention of two of the beautified enjoyments and desires, one in the opening of the verse and one in the conclusion. Let us read the verse again. Allah the Exalted says*:* 'Beautified for people is the love of worldly desires - of women; children; heaped-up treasures of gold and silver; fine, branded horses of high mark; cattle; and tilled lands. All this may be enjoyed in the worldly life - but Allah has with Him the best return' (Al-'Imran: 14).

The worldly love of women was mentioned in the opening of the verse and tilled lands were mentioned in its conclusion. Allah the Exalted has made mention only of the first and last beautified enjoyments and desires listed in the verse instead of detailing all the listed beautified enjoyments, and clarified for us that they constitute the elevation and refinement of good. This means that we should understand that provision entails whatever benefits a person. Everything that benefits a person is part of his worldly provision (rizq): good conduct, acquiring knowledge, refined manners, forbearance, and honesty are all parts of the divinely bestowed provision. However, sometimes the provision is bestowed on a person directly and he can avail himself of it directly and at other times provision does not benefit a person directly. Rather, it serves as a means and an intermediary to what can benefit a person directly.

For example, bread is a direct provision. Money is also a provision, but it is indirect because a person could be hungry and have a mountain of gold. If someone were to say to him: "I can give you a slice of bread in return for this mountain of gold," the hungry person would gladly give up the mountain of gold in return for a single slice of bread because one cannot eat gold! The same is true of a cup of water for a thirsty person.

There are kinds of provisions which are not sought, in and of themselves, but a person seeks them as a means to gain other provisions and attainments. We will not need any means to obtain whatever we may want in the Hereafter because it will not be the realm of means. Rather, whatever is wanted will be realised by a single word of Allah: '"Be!" and it is' (Ya Sin: 82). A person will not need wealth in paradise, nor will he require heaped-up treasures of gold and silver because he will be granted whatever he may aspire to therein. We will not need fine horses in the Hereafter because we will not fight with them or enjoy riding them.

All the things that a person will not need in the Hereafter were granted to him in the worldly life in order to avail himself of the available means. Allah Glorified is He does not list them in the verse that reads*:* 'Say, "Shall I inform you of [something] better than that? For those who fear Allah will be gardens in the presence of their Lord beneath which rivers flow wherein they abide eternally, and purified spouses, with approval from Allah. And Allah is seeing of [His] servants"' (Al-'Imran: 15). Allah has not made mention of these things in the verse because Allah the Exalted bestows on people in the Hereafter direct provision. As for those things by which a person seeks direct provisions in this worldly life, He did not mention them in the verse because they shall not be needed in the Hereafter. Why do we love wealth? It is because it allows us to buy things. Why do we love horses of high mark? This is because they allow us to fight and struggle in the cause of Allah. Why do we love cattle? It is because they enable us to obtain our necessary supplies.

In paradise, a believer will be granted therein everything he aspires to and whatever might cross his mind. There will be no need for means in this realm. This is why Allah Glorified is He made mention of the direct provisions only. He mentioned the gardens beneath which rivers flow and the pure spouses.

Let us ponder on the verse that reads*:* 'Say, "Shall I inform you of [something] better than that?"' (Al-'Imran: 15). One may ask, "Would it not be more logical that Allah the Exalted would have simply informed us what He wanted to tell us, instead of asking us first, 'Shall I inform you of this news, or not?'"

Well, this style helps attract the listener's attention to the kindness of Allah towards His creation. He is saying to us: "Do you not wish for Me to tell you about things that are better than these worldly enjoyments you have in this worldly life?" Allah Glorified is He is alerting those who are heedless of this fact. He did not wait for us to respond, "Yes, tell us, Oh our Lord!"

Rather, He informs us without our asking. This style is known as a "rhetorical question". When a person hears the phrase, 'Shall I inform you of [something] better than that', his attention is caught. If he does not hear the news, his mind will remain preoccupied with it. After drawing the listener's attention, the answer comes to touch the soul of a believer.

The news and glad tidings come for those who fear Allah. When we contemplate the above-mentioned enjoyments and desires- women, children, heaped-up treasures of gold and silver, horses of high mark, cattle, and tilled lands- wouldn't it be appropriate that a person should be conscious of his Lord with regards to them?

It is obligatory on a person to fear Allah with regards to these enjoyments. This is why we have said earlier that in response to those who wish to make their lives dull and void of movement: They confine life to worship in terms of performing the prayer and fasting and call for denouncing everything else. We say to them: "This is wrong. Your actions in this worldly life help you foster your fear of Allah." We know that when a person has the fear of Allah, a person hides from hellfire and shields himself from the wrath of his Lord. If you employed the blessings of Allah in a way that conforms to His religion, this is the permissible employment of those blessings.

We have also underlined that the Arabic term taqwa, meaning “fear” or “being mindful of something or someone,” is mentioned in the Quran in association with Allah on some occasions and in association with hellfire on others. Some verses read “fear Allah” and others, “fear Hellfire”. Fearing hellfire implies guarding oneself against its flames so as not to be harmed by them; Fearing Allah implies guarding oneself against whatever incurs His wrath. This is because incurring the wrath of Allah eventually leads a person to subjecting himself to His punishment. So, regarding those who fear Allah, do not think that they have renounced excessive pleasure in the worldly life simply for the sake of asceticism. Rather, they did so hoping for what is greater, namely the everlasting delights of the Hereafter.

Allah Glorified is He clarifies afterwards that a believers will not relish such delights in the Hereafter because there will be no need for it. These delights in the Hereafter will not be confined to rejoicing at the blessings bestowed upon a person, but extend to seeing the One who confers the blessings on him since a believer who will be admitted to paradise shall be granted whatever he aspires to. In fact, he will be granted whatever he wishes and will relish therein the enjoyments according to the generosity and power of Allah.

If a person does not aspire to any of these enjoyments in paradise, he will be preoccupied with seeing his Lord. His place will be in a garden in paradise, called 'Illiyyun in which the blessings are nothing like whatever we may have heard about paradise; its dwellers only rejoice at their meeting with Allah. It should be noted that provisions and blessings in paradise will not be needed for sustaining the life therein. Rather, the inhabitant of paradise shall live therein for eternity, savouring everlasting bliss. The only thing a person really needs is earning the goodly pleasure of his Lord.

Indeed, the pleasure of Allah the Exalted is greater than any other attainment. Allah Glorified is He has informed us of the pleasures and enjoyments in paradise and told us of what is better than they are. He has informed us that earning His pleasure means that a believer is guaranteed to receive the privilege of seeing his Lord. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘[Some] faces, that Day, will be radiant, looking at their Lord’ (al-Qiyama: 22-23).

Thus, we have come to know that there are levels in paradise. Allah the Exalted informs us after this with*:* 'And Allah is seeing of [His] servants...' (Al-'Imran: 15). This means that Allah is Well-Aware of His servants; He shall reward each person according to his actions and his adherence to the religion of his Lord. He who obeys Allah out of desire for the delights of Paradise will be granted paradise, and he who obeys Him because He deserves to be obeyed, Allah will grant him the delight and joy of looking at Him. Rabi'ah Al-'Adawiyyah may Allah rest her soul said, in this regard: 'They all worship You out of fear of hellfire and perceives salvation from it as a great attainment. I am not like them; I only seek Your Love.'

She also said: 'Oh my Lord, if I worship you from fear of hell, burn me in hell. If I worship you from hope of paradise, bar me from its gates. But if I worship you for yourself alone, grant me then the beauty of your Face.'

So, Allah Glorified is He is aware of [the hearts of] His servants and will reward every person according to his actions and intentions. The one who loves the blessings and pleasures of his Lord will be rewarded with them in abundance. As for the one who loves Allah even if He withholds His blessings, Allah the Exalted will bestow on him the greatest blessing ever, namely having Allah boasting about him to the angels. One of the strongest proofs of faith and its perfection is favouring the love of Allah and His Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him over anything else in the whole world.

Anas may Allah be pleased with him related that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: "There are three qualities, and whoever has them will relish the sweetness of iman (faith): 1. The one to whom Allah and His Messenger become dearer than anything else. 2. The one who loves a person only for the pleasure of Allah. 3. The one who hates to revert to disbelief after Allah has brought (saved) him out from it, as he hates to be thrown into Hellfire.(1)" This means that some servants love Allah the Exalted because He is worthy of love and worship, for He is the Bestower who organizes and manages this beautiful Universe.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim

So, Allah Glorified is He underlines that He sees all that is in the hearts of His servants and knows exactly what every worshipper deserves. Each shall be rewarded according to his acts and intentions in his worldly life. He who worshipped Allah for His blessings, will be granted the desired blessings in paradise, and he who has obeyed Allah the Exalted because He deserves to be obeyed, even if he is denied the blessings of Allah Glorified is He will be rewarded with a seat in ‘Illiyyun.

This is why it is said that the people who are most severely tested are the Prophets of Allah, then the next best and the next best. Why? That is because this is an evidence of the sincerity of their love. People usually love those who are good and kind towards them and do not love those who harm them unless they enjoy a very special place in their heart. A believer is genuinely confident in His wisdom. Allah Glorified is He afflicts him with calamities, while knowing that he will adhere to endurance and will patiently face the trials in order to grant him a great reward and recompense. Allah the Exalted says*:* ‘Say, “I am only a man like you, to whom has been revealed that your god is one God. So, whoever would hope for the meeting with his Lord-let him do righteous work and not associate in the worship of his Lord anyone”’ (al-Kahf: 110).

He says, “Whoever would hope for the meeting with his Lord” and not “hoping for his Lord’s Paradise”. We should not be distracted with the blessing, e.g. paradise, from the One Who confers it on us, i.e. Allah Glorified is He. When Allah demands that we do not associate any partner with Him in worship, we should bear in mind that Paradise is no exception. One should not associate anything, including Paradise, with Allah in worship! Allah the Exalted says*:*

ٱلَّذِينَ يَقُولُونَ رَبَّنَآ إِنَّنَآ ءَامَنَّا فَٱغْفِرْ
لَنَا ذُنُوبَنَا وَقِنَا عَذَابَ ٱلنَّارِ ١٦

Those who say, “Our Lord, we believe, so forgive us our sins and protect us from suffering in the Fire” [16] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 16)

The statement,‘…Oh our Lord! Indeed, we have believed…’ is the first step towards treading the path of Allah. It indicates that faith in Allah requires a person who is competent for religious responsibility to be mindful of his actions because it is required by his faith. It is as if a believer is saying: “As a human being, I am unable to fulfil the rights of faith in You; so, my lord, forgive my faults, inattentiveness, sins, arrogance, or sinful whims.”

This supplication is a proof that such a person has become aware of the implications of faith that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him clarified in his explanation of the meaning of ihsan, meaning “spiritual perfection and excellence in faith”. He said: “Ihsan is to worship Allah as if you see Him; if you cannot achieve this state of devotion (if you did not feel that you were seeing Him), then you must consider that He sees you”(1).

It means that a person remembers his Lord’s presence in all his actions because he knows his Lord sees him. Would any person have the audacity to violate the rights of his Lord Who sees him? A believer would recall the report on the authority of our Lord, reading, ‘Oh my servants! If you think that I cannot see you, then your faith is flawed. If you know that I can see you, then why have you made Me the least important of your viewers?’ (This has no basis in the Sunnah). It is as if Allah the Exalted is saying to His servant: ‘Am I less important to you than My own servants? Do you dare offend someone, while he can see you? How could you commit sin and disobey your Creator?’

The verse reads: ‘Those who say, “Our Lord! Indeed, we have believed (in You); so, forgive us our sins...”’ (Al-‘Imran: 16). They said this because they believed, and therefore, they are asking for forgiveness of their sins. Why? Because as long as Allah Glorified is He has prescribed repentance, this means that He understands that His servants would wrong themselves and deviate from His path.

Allah the Exalted concludes the verse by relating the supplication of His servants: “… protect us from the punishment of the Hellfire” (Al-‘Imran: 16). When a person knows that Allah has guaranteed the concealment of his sins when he repents, he will be shy to commit sins or at least hasten in seeking His forgiveness. But why should the meaning of the verse not be “Oh our Lord! Guard us from sins that we would not commit them ever.” If we do [commit sins], it requires seeking forgiveness and repentance. If one commits a sin, but then seeks forgiveness of his Lord, he should know that his Lord has granted him forgiveness because He says*:* 'And I said, 'Ask forgiveness of your Lord. Indeed, He is ever a Perpetual Forgiver"' (Nuh: 10). Knowing this, a person's fear fades away and he whole-heartedly observes his religious obligations out of love for his Lord and obliges himself to abide by the way of life prescribed by Him, comprehensively. This is why Allah Glorified is He prescribed repentance for people as another aspect of His Mercy. This divine mercy manifests itself best, while one is pondering on the opposite scenario.

---

(1) Muslim, Abu Dawud, At-Tirmidhi, and An-Nasa’i

For instance, let us imagine that Allah the Exalted had not prescribed repentance and when a person committed one sin, he was denied the mercy of Allah. What would happen to him? What would happen to the community where he lives? All the evils that this person would afflict on the community and society would be the product of his utter frustration and despair. He would lose hope in rectifying his affairs after falling into the abyss of sin. However, if Allah the Exalted opens the door of repentance for the sinners, whenever a person commits a sin out of heedlessness, he hastens to repentance.

In fact, this reflects the realistic approach of the Islamic sharia. Islam is a realistic religion that takes into consideration the reality of the human nature. Allah the Exalted knows that His servants will inevitably commit sins and, therefore, He guides them to the way of seeking forgiveness. If a person commits sins, Allah the Exalted enjoins him to repent and seek His forgiveness. If a repentant feels uncomfortable when he remembers his sin, this annoying feeling will be counted as a good deed every time he experiences it, as well.

There is a difference between having one's sins forgiven and being safeguarded from hellfire. How is that? When a person knows that Allah Glorified is He has guaranteed for him the forgiveness of his sins if he repents, and if he knows that his Lord is the Sustaining Creator, he will hasten to repent of his sins, hoping for the forgiveness and mercy of his Lord. This is the supplication of the believers if they have forgotten to seek forgiveness for their sins. Why? That is because seeking the forgiveness of Allah for one's sins is a religious obligation enjoined by Allah on His servants. As we have said earlier, one may forget some of these commandments and religious obligations, and accordingly forget to seek forgiveness sometimes. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says relating the supplication of His servants*:* "…and keep us safe from suffering through the Hellfire" (Al-'Imran: 16).

The meaning of the Arabic word taqwa (usually translated as "fear and consciousness of something") could also be "to build a barrier between yourself and the hellfire" or "a barrier between yourself and your Lord's wrath". If you employed the blessings of your Lord in accordance with His commands and the way of life prescribed by Him, then it will count as a good deed for you. We have previously underlined that the commands to adhere to taqwa in relation to Allah and hellfire are closely related and were used in the Quran because the concept of taqwa in relation to hellfire denotes fearing and being mindful of ending up in it and taqwa in relation to Allah denotes making a barrier between ourselves and (whatever may incur) the wrath of our Lord. Next, Allah the Exalted says*:*

ٱلصَّـٰبِرِينَ وَٱلصَّـٰدِقِينَ وَٱلْقَـٰنِتِينَ
وَٱلْمُنفِقِينَ وَٱلْمُسْتَغْفِرِينَ بِٱلْأَسْحَارِ (١٧)

Those who are steadfast, truthful, truly devout, who give [in God's cause] and pray before dawn for forgiveness' [17]
(The Quran, Al-'Imran: 17)

These are the attributes of those who attained taqwa, i.e. those who fear Allah and are duly conscious of Him. He has prepared for them gardens beneath which rivers flow, pure spouses, and (rewarded them with) His pleasure and acceptance. These people who spend in the way of Allah and seek His forgiveness in the last hours of the night before dawn are described as patient, true, and obedient.

The question arises: With what are they patient? They are patient about carrying out the commands of their Lord. When we receive the religious obligations and commandments, we experience a sense of discomfort because living in accordance with them requires effort and hardship. Religious obligations come with some hardship because they restrict a person's freedom to some degrees.

Allah the Exalted has created us and inculcated within us the inclination and ability to do good or refrain from doing good. When He commands you to carry out any given act, He has restricted your freedom in terms of commanding you not to be heedless in doing said act. Similarly, when Allah orders you not to do something, He has denied you the option of doing it. Thus, restricting your actions and imposing some limitations on your choices naturally incurs some hardship. When Allah commands you to do something, such an action might be difficult in and of itself. If you succeeded in enduring the hardship of the action and patiently carried out the command as enjoined, you are among "the patient" referred to here because you have endured and obeyed your Lord. You may also patiently give up a sin; when you are enticed to do a prohibited act which would incur the wrath of Allah, and you refuse to commit it and adhere to endurance, you have patiently refrained from committing the sin.

So, we are required to adhere to patience in relation to both, commands and prohibitions; doing the enjoined acts and refraining from the prohibitions require patience to endure the accompanying hardship. Patient people abide by patience in two aspects, namely when carrying out the religious obligations and avoiding the prohibitions. In the case of prohibitions such as the prohibition of consuming alcohol, or stealing, a person should patiently refrain from doing such forbidden acts. So, the divine commands and prohibitions make up the two types of religious requirements. A third category included the actions that do not fall into the realms of commands or prohibitions: these are the matters that occur beyond your control and fall into the category of divine decrees.

When Allah Glorified is He commands you to do something, He has created you and inculcated within you the ability not to carry it out as previously underlined. The same is true when Allah the Exalted commands you not to do something. How should a believer react concerning the divinely decreed actions that happen to him beyond his control? He should patiently endure the pain and hardship because he believes in Allah as his Lord, and the Lord is the One who takes care of His servants and provides sustenance for His creation until they reach the desired level of perfection. If Allah Glorified is He decreed that you should be tested by going through hardships and situations beyond your control such as an illness, or a calamity like having a rock falling on you or getting hit by a stray bullet, then, you should know that these matters do not fall into the realm of commands and prohibitions.

You should patiently endure such events by having faith in the wisdom of the One Who has caused them to occur. The One Who has decreed such matters is your Lord Who has created you, and no one would carelessly spoil his own creation. If a person is decreed to go through an experience or situation beyond his control, he should bear in mind that the One Who has decreed it has wisdom behind it. If he patiently endures the pains and hardships, he will become among "the patient" mentioned in these verses.

So, there are many kinds of patience: some patiently endure the hardship of carrying out acts of obedience, some patiently endure the temptations of sin, and some endure the decreed events that happen to them beyond their control or choice. When you see someone who patiently endures the hardship of carrying out acts of obedience, patiently refuses to give in to the desires of committing sin, and endures calamities that befall him, you should know that he loves his Lord, and is pleased with Him.

Let us move on and contemplate the other attributes mentioned in the verse. Allah the Exalted says: 'The patient, the truthful…' (Al-'Imran: 17). The opposite of truthfulness is lying. Truthfulness denotes conformity with reality. A statement which is true is in agreement with the actual reality.

If you say, "such-and-such happened," and the statement conforms to reality- that such a thing actually happened, the speaker is truthful and his statement is true. However, if the statement does not conform to reality, the statement is untrue and the speaker is lying. Why? This is because there are three standards for declaring a statement of a rational speaker truthful:

First: Before I utter a statement, I consult my intellect concerning the matter to see if it makes logical sense and then my intellect gives the signal to the tongue to speak. This is the first truth standard- the intellectual truth standard. I may refrain from uttering a statement after consulting my intellect; in this case, the intellectual truth standard is present, but the verbal one is missing.

I may also insist on pronouncing a statement anyway in which case the second truth standard is present that is the verbal truth standard. This deals with whether the matter I have described really happened: if it happened, the statement is truthful. If it did not happen, and the statement does not conform to reality, we say that it is a lie. So, "truthfulness" means that the verbal truth standard conforms to reality, and "lying" is when the verbal truth standard does not conform to reality. People very often misunderstand reality, and so they find contradiction in certain matters.

For example, some of the orientalists criticized the verb in the verse that reads*:* 'When the hypocrites come to you, [Oh Muhammad], they say, "We testify that you are the Messenger of Allah"'(al-Munafiqun: 1). This is the verbal statement. Does it conform to reality, or not? Indeed, it conforms to reality, and Allah the Exalted confirms this as He says*:* 'And Allah knows that you are His Messenger, and Allah testifies that the hypocrites are liars' (al-Munafiqun: 1). What lie have the hypocrites spoken? Have they lied when they said, 'You are the Messenger of Allah'? No. Allah the Exalted does not state that they had lied when they said, 'You are the Messenger of Allah' because He has confirmed this by saying, 'And Allah knows that you are His Messenger.' He declared them liars because of the statement of the hypocrites of which the critic and orientalist lost sight. They said: 'We testify that you are the Messenger of Allah'. Allah Glorified is He declared them liars in their claims to testify that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is a Messenger from Allah the Exalted and not the fact itself. There is no doubt that Allah the Exalted knows that Muhammad is His Messenger, whom Allah sent as a mercy to all the worlds; the lie is their own testimony.

The statement of the hypocrites is refuted by Allah. Why? Because a truthful testimony requires that the statement must be in agreement with the belief harboured in the heart of the speaker, and conform to it. Their statement was not in agreement with the belief harboured in their hearts and, therefore, they were lying. So, their testimony to the fact was what is declared a lie and not the fact itself. If they had said "You are the Messenger of Allah" without saying "we testify", their statement would have been true. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He declared their testimony false. Hence, we come to understand the statement of Allah, 'and Allah knows that you are His Messenger.' (al-Munafiqun: 1) Allah Glorified is He confirms the fact to which has been testified, namely that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the Messenger of Allah. Then, Allah Glorified is He underlines that the hypocrites are liars in their testimony when they say, ‘We testify’. Truthfulness means that the statement conforms to reality. We have given the example of a person who is asked to tell a story he had witnessed and seen with his own eyes, and he is honest in relating it. If he honestly relates it, his account will be the same and will never change, no matter how many times he repeats it. If the story is a lie, the teller will be confused about the details; He will relate the tale in inconsistent ways. A liar may forget what he said the first time and change some details of his story each time he repeats it, and this is how his lie is exposed. However, the truthful narrator who relates a true story is the one whose account never changes each time he relates the story; he is consistent.

If we said, “Zayd is diligent”, then Zayd is either diligent or he is not. Then, a person who has witnessed Zayd’s diligence would speak about it. Zayd’s diligence was either observed or it was not. After this, there is the intellectual truth standard.

The “constative utterance” is the opposite of the “performative” one; constatives are the statements of facts which could be right or wrong, whereas performatives are utterances such as a warning, a command, a request, or a piece of advice. For example, you may say to someone, “Be diligent, and work hard.” Before uttering the statement, the concepts of diligence and working hard were present in the mind of the speaker, and when he spoke the statement, it became a statement with a verbal truth standard. Then, the event took place and both the intellectual and verbal truth standards were present. This is the constative. The constative in this case is a request. The “truthful” people are the ones whom Allah has chosen to praise. Why? They are the ones whose actions conform to the way of life prescribed by their Lord. When they said, “None is worthy of worship but Allah”, and believed it, they adhered to all of its implications to the best of their abilities.

“None is truly worthy of worship but Allah” means there is no entity which is worthy of being worshipped except Allah, and this means that there is no one worthy of obedience except Allah. Obedience, as we know, denotes abiding by commands and prohibitions. Thus, we have come to know that the implication of the testimony of faith, "none is truly worthy of worship but Allah," is that there is no one worthy of being worshipped except Allah, and that no onene must be obeyed but Him. No command or prohibition should be obeyed except those issued by Allah the Exalted (or those whom He commands us to obey in matters that are good and lawful). If a person follows the commands of his Lord after proclaiming, "none is worthy of worship but Allah," then this person is truthful in his statement "Indeed, none is truly worthy of worship but Allah." This is the peak of truthfulness: that all of the actions of a person who proclaims, "none is truly worthy of worship but Allah," conform with his own statement.

The true believer is the one who ensures that all his actions are in accordance with the religious guidelines of his Lord. As for a person who says, "none is truly worthy of worship but Allah and none has the right to be worshipped except Him" merely by his tongue, and then goes against his Lord's commands by disobeying Him, to him we say, "You are not truthful in your statement, 'none is truly worthy of worship but Allah'. Why? That is because your actions do not conform to your words." When a person who believes in any divine commandment, and then acts contrary to it, to him we can fairly say: "You are a hypocrite." Why? Because at the beginning of al-Baqara chapter (verses 8-20), when we spoke about the hypocrites, we said that when a believer believes in Allah and says as much, he is truthful because he says 'none is worthy of worship but Allah', while believing in it. When a disbeliever denies the divinity of Allah, he, too, is truthful.

However, the hypocrite is not truthful with himself or with people; rather, he wavers between this and that, belonging neither to the believers nor to the disbelievers. The hypocrite is untruthful and this is why Allah the Exalted describes them in the verse that reads*:* 'Wavering between them, [belonging] neither to the believers nor to the disbelievers. And whoever Allah leaves astray - never will you find for him a way' (an-Nisa': 143).

A disbeliever is truthful with himself; he does not proclaim "none is worthy of worship but Allah" because he does not believe it. On the contrary, the hypocrite says: "none is truly worthy of worship but Allah", but his conduct does not conform to its implications. Therefore, he is not truthful with himself and his Lord. Allah the Exalted says: '…The truthful…' (Al-'Imran: 17) and the verse refers to those people whose actions conform to the way of life prescribed by their Lord. They do not believe in one thing and do the opposite. This is why Allah Glorified is He says: 'Oh you who have believed, why do you say what you do not do? Great is hatred in the sight of Allah that you say what you do not do...' (as-Saff: 2-3).

The truthful are those whose words conform to their actions, acting in accordance with the proclamation of tawhid, or Islamic monotheism and its implications. "None is worthy of worship but Allah," means that none is worthy of our obedience to his commands and prohibitions except Allah. Therefore, if you obey someone else in a matter contrary to the divine Shari'a, believers have the right to say to you, "You are a liar in your statement, 'Indeed, none is truly worthy of worship but Allah'."

Abu Hurayrah may Allah be pleased with him narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: "The adulterer, at the time he is committing adultery, is not a believer; (the wine drinker) at the time he is drinking, is not a believer; the thief, at the time he is stealing, is not a believer."(1) This is the loftiness of a believer's faith: a believer cannot lie or go against the implications and prerequisites of his beliefs because a believer's conduct and his all actions are governed by his belief that none is worthy of worship but Allah.

Then, Allah the Exalted says: '...and the obedient…' (Al-'Imran: 17). The "obedient" here is the pious servant who worships Allah the Exalted with humility, tranquillity, and consistency. The obedient person is true to himself. When Allah Glorified is He enjoins His servants to observe a religious obligation, it may be beyond their ability to understand and they may fail to grasp the wisdom behind it. The obedient worshippers observe a religious obligation because the One Who ordered them to do so is their Lord, the Omnipotent, and they trust His wisdom. Therefore, they abide by His commands out of submission to His infinite wisdom. They obey the command because it is issued by their Lord not because of the wisdom behind it. As they obediently submit to the will of their Lord, Allah the Exalted shows them the resplendence of the divine command by granting them a divinely revealed criterion by which to differentiate between the true and the false for themselves:

---

(1) Al-Bukhari, Abu Dawud, At-Tirmidhi, An-Nasa'i, Ibn Majah, and Ahmad

Allah the Exalted says*:* 'Oh you who have believed, if you fear Allah, He will grant you a criterion and will remove from you your misdeeds and forgive you. And Allah is the possessor of great bounty' (al-Anfal: 29).

Considering this criterion, a believer will say to himself, "Allah Glorified is He decreed that I should relish the sweetness of the obedience to such a command." This is why one of the pious men once said, 'If you want to understand an obligation enjoined by your Lord without knowing the wisdom behind it, adhere to taqwa and observe it. Then, you will find your mind illuminated with the divinely-bestowed wisdom behind it." This is why Allah the Exalted says*:* "…And fear Allah. And Allah teaches you. And Allah is Knowing of all things" (al-Baqara: 282).

Before attaining taqwa, Allah the Exalted does not impart this knowledge to you. However, after attaining it, He imparts it to you. You carry out a commandment and, consequently, find a sign in the spiritual illumination within your soul (and heart). This is the difference between an order from an equal peer and a divine order issued by Allah Glorified is He. When we examine the Arabic word Al-'A'la, meaning "The Most High", we realise that it is only used to refer to Allah, The Exalted because He is the Most High in wisdom, position, status, and lordship.

So, a person does not demand to know the wisdom behind an order unless it is produced by an equal peer. If a person asks you to do something, you may ask him, "Why?" and if you are convinced of his reason, you will comply. You will carry out the request because your equal peer has convinced you of the wisdom behind it, not out of obedience to him.

However, when Allah the Most High issues an order, you obey the command immediately (as a believing servant), out of your love for obeying Him. The following example is meant to illustrate the matter and make the concept clear, not to liken anything or anyone to Allah the Most High. Indeed, there is nothing like Him at all; He is similar to nothing and nothing is comparable to Him. If a father says to his son, “If you succeed at your exam, I will get you a new bicycle,” does this mean that the rationale and wisdom behind going to school is to get a bicycle? No, it is not. The wisdom behind the father’s statement is to encourage his son to study and learn at school. When the son grows up, he will realise the actual wisdom behind his father’s request. He will say, “Now I know that my father was right.”

If this happens in our daily lives among human beings, what about our obedience to the commands issued by Allah? When Allah the Exalted enjoins His servants to comply with a religious obligation, a servant might find difficulty in comprehending the wisdom behind it. The genuine believer knows that his compliance with the commands of his Lord is, in essence, submission to the authority of his Lord The Most High.

A believer knows that he believes in Allah the Exalted as the One God and Lord and that there is nothing like Him at all, as He has the ultimate and absolute wisdom, omnipotence, and Lordship of the whole creation.

A person might fall ill; Health is the most valuable possession. He may consider going to a doctor to whom he would complain of pain in his stomach, or heart, or bowels. He would specify the source of his pain. The intellect of a person guides him to consult the doctor who diagnoses his problem. Then, he takes the prescription from the doctor. A sick person takes the prescribed medication from the trusted doctor without asking how the medication works in details because it will mean engaging in a detailed discussion about specialized chemistry subjects, some may be beyond his ability to comprehend! If someone asks this sick person, “Why are you taking that medication in particular?” he will simply answer, “Because the specialized doctor prescribed it for me.”

The doctor might be wrong, but the judgment of Allah Glorified is He is never mistaken. He is utterly infallible. When a believer carries out the commandments of his Lord, he will recognise the effects of The Divine Wisdom behind it. The word “obedient,” as we have underlined above, is the attribute of those who lead a life of devotion, worship with humility, reverence, and constant submission to their Lord. Why are submission and humility needed in this regard? It is because Allah the Exalted did not prescribe the acts of worship merely for a person to perform them in order to save himself from hellfire. We see many people who may have very obstinate bosses setting strict rules for their employees and requiring them to come to work early in the morning and leave at a fixed time. They may even stipulate that, while on the clock, their employees should not engage in any other activity aside from work, such as drinking tea, reading newspapers, or chatting with their friends at work. One of these employees may describe his boss as follows: "He is a very strict and difficult person. I have no choice but to come at 7: 55 and leave at 2: 05, and I cannot read newspapers, or do anything that he does not allow." This employee complies with the instructions of his boss because of his harshness and strictness without being able to criticize his boss or complain about it. This employee obeys but due to fear.

It is obedience void of love; Rather, it is out of fear. A servant might try and say, "What does Allah want from me? Doesn't He command me to perform the prayer, pay zakat (obligatory alms giving), and carry out acts of worship? Fine, I will do that." To a servant like this, we say, "No! Allah the Exalted wants you to carry out acts of worship out of love and reverence because religious obligations are a kind of charity offered by Allah to His servant." Allah Glorified is He enjoins His servant to observe religious obligations so that they will become morally upright and find real value in this life.

"The obedient" in this verse refers to a servant who worships his Lord with full submission and reverence, constantly. Why? Because when someone initially complies with his religious obligations and then refrains from adhering to them, it is as if he has tested his love for Allah, and by giving up the adherence to the religious obligations, he has shown that he finds Allah the Exalted unworthy of his love! As for the truly obedient servant of Allah, he never forsakes worship because he has relished the sweetness of constant worship of Allah, and as long as he knows the sweetness of worship, he will perform it with reverence, tranquillity, and constancy, and will be one of the obedient.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says*:* '…and (those) who spend in charity…' (Al-'Imran: 17). The Arabic word used in the verse is anfaqa, meaning "to spend," which is derived from the same root of the Arabic word for "die" or "run out (of something)". The word nafaqah, meaning "charity," is derived from this root to denote that when a person spends in charity, he wipes out what he has spent from his mind; He does not recall that he had given such-and-such to a poor person and such-and-such to another. He knows with certainty that what he has spent in charity is the rightful provision of the recipient of charity, and he merely earns the reward for delivering their due provision to them. There is no room for reminding the recipient of his favour or humiliating him.

Allah the Exalted wants the charitable person, who gives of his wealth, time, or effort in charity, to forget all about the act of charity, and refrain from reminding the recipient of it. "Spending in charity" requires three components; 1) the giver, who spends in charity, 2) the recipient, 3) and the charity itself. The giver is a believer who has wealth, time, or effort; the recipient is a poor person or the one in need; and the charity is that which the giver spends in charity, be it time, money, effort, or even kindness.

What is the source of this wealth? It is acquired through working and earning a livelihood which requires both mental and physical ability. If a person is unable to work and earn a living, how could he live? Allah Glorified is He provides for such a person's sustenance from those who are capable of working and providing for themselves.

Allah the Exalted has rendered the ability to work and earn a living one of the contingencies in this life. A person who is able to work today might become unable to work tomorrow. As long as the ability to work and earn a living is a contingency, so the one who is able to work and earn a living hears the command of his Lord to spend on a poor person (who is unable to work and earn a living), must bear in mind that his ability is of a contingent nature. The one who is currently able to work and earn a living might become unable to do so tomorrow. Hence, a person, who is able to work and provide for himself, would say to himself, "If I become incapable of providing for myself one day, Allah would bring someone to provide for me." This is the insurance of a believer. A believer gives in charity according to his ability so that Allah Glorified is He will spare him the hardship of begging for money when his situation changes; someone will be there to provide for him, from the mercy of Allah.

We must perceive the whole picture of this religious obligation and not only our side; we must consider the duties and rights of others as well. The one who is enjoined to spend on others should remember that he might become incapable of working and earning a living one day. We may ask him, "If you are incapable of providing for yourself, would you not like other people to help you without reminding you of their favour or harming you?"

This is true insurance, and the guarantor is Allah the Exalted. As long as a person realises that his situation may change in the blink of an eye, the one spending in charity today should forget his charitable act and the recipient of his charity and should refrain from informing anyone of the charity given.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said that the man who spends in charity and hides his charity so that his left hand does not know what his right hand has spent, will be amongst the seven types of people whom Allah the Exalted will shelter in His shade on the Day of Judgment. The prophet peace and blessings be upon him said: 'Seven people will be shaded by Allah under His shade on the day when there will be no shade except His. They are: (1) a just ruler; (2) a young man who has been brought up in the worship of Allah, (i.e. worshipping Allah (Alone) sincerely from his childhood); (3) a man whose heart is attached to the mosque (who offers the five compulsory congregational prayers in the mosque); (4) two people who love each other only for Allah's pleasure, and they meet and part because of Allah only; (5) a person who remembers Allah when in seclusion and his eyes become flooded with tears;(6) a man who refuses the call of a charming woman of noble birth for illicit sexual intercourse with her and says: 'I fear Allah'; (7) a person who offered charity so secretly that his left hand does not know what his right hand has given (i.e. nobody knows how much he has given in charity).'(1)

A believer who spends in charity must know that when he spends in charity, he is actually saving this wealth he is offering in charity to be received by him later, either when his situation changes or in the Hereafter in the form of multiplied rewards. So, the one who spends in charity provides for the one who is unable to work and earn a living, either as a form of insurance for himself in the future when he may become unable to provide for himself, or so as to earn multiple rewards in the Hereafter. Those who spend on the needy from their surplus wealth, act as a manifestation of the divine wisdom in creation. Since Allah the Exalted has created amongst us those who are able to provide for themselves and those who are not, He has decreed that we should know that ability is not necessarily guaranteed for all the creation. As long as our ability to provide for ourselves is of a contingent nature, a believer must hold onto his Lord, the Sustainer Who constantly grants him this ability. We should know that none of us can do good without his Lord and none of us was created capable of working and earning a living forever. Therefore, a believer must be constantly mindful of the provision bestowed upon him by Allah the Most High and Omnipotent.

(1) Al-Bukhari, Muslim, At-Tirmidhi, An-Nasa'i, and Ahmad

We have underlined before that Allah Glorified is He has listed "spending in charity" as one of the attributes of those who have attained taqwa, for whom He has prepared gardens underneath which rivers flow. The wisdom behind this divine decree is that Allah the Exalted wants to protect any suffering people, as He has created them for a specific reason. Spending in charity should not be perceived as depriving the giver of his wealth; rather, it is a mere transfer of the wealth to a different realm. This is made clear by the fact that when a person has surplus wealth it is earned through his physical work in this worldly life.

This work requires both an intellect to plan, and body parts to carry out the plan. He must use his intellect to understand the subject matter to be processed, be it land for cultivation or a tool for production. A person does not have any of these things intrinsically. The intellect, by means of which he plans, is a gift from Allah, and the strength, by means of which he moves and works, is also a gift from Him. We see that some people may be deprived of sound mind and, therefore, cannot think and plan, while others are deprived of the physical strength to move and work. Allah the Exalted might also deny a person the actual means of which he may work.

So, none of these things are intrinsically owned by a person; they are all gifts from Allah. A believer must bear in mind that he is investing with Allah Glorified is He and must give the right of Allah, i.e. the charity, to those who are incapable of providing for themselves. Allah Glorified is He does not take this charity for Himself; rather, He wants it for your incapable brother. Allah the Exalted will insure this right for you, too, if the situation changed and you were in his place one day.

This is why "… (those) who spend (in charity)…" are counted amongst those who have attained taqwa. Allah the Exalted has rendered patience a manifestation of firm and true faith in the human soul; truthfulness as a manifestation of the harmony with the implications of the testimony of faith 'none is worthy of worship save Allah'; and spending charity as a protection for those who are incapable of providing for themselves.

Then, the verse moves to the spiritual character of a believer again, '…and those who seek forgiveness before dawn' (Al-'Imran: 17). We must bear in mind that this attribute came among other attributes describing the human soul. The beginning of these verses showed their proclamation of faith and supplicating Allah to forgive their sins and safeguard them from Hellfire. They adhered to patience, truthfulness, obedience, and sincerity in worship, and spent in the cause of Allah. All of these attributes absolve them from falling short in observing the rights of their Lord over them. For this reason, they get up at night, before dawn, and seek forgiveness from Allah the Exalted.

A person seeks forgiveness because either he has committed sin or he has fallen short in performing extra acts of obedience. This verse refers to the late hours of the night before dawn when a person is in a state of laziness and relaxation. The one who wakes up during this time of the night should have enough rest and must not exhaust himself throughout the day. Some people waste the precious hours of the night in playing and having fun.

This is an utter failure we witness among people in the present time. People are lost between toil during the daytime and playing during the night. People engage in vain talk and activities and stay up all night, and then they sleep late. How could such a person wake up in the last third of the night before dawn? The one who wakes up before dawn is he who has rested at night. After he comes from work, he sleeps soundly and wakes up before dawn to devote himself to the remembrance of his Lord at a time when most others are sleeping. Why is he doing so? Allah the Exalted distributes His mercy during the stillness of the night. When a person wakes up before dawn to implore his Lord and seek His forgiveness, he receives the mercy of his Lord as it descends.

When a person seeks the divine mercy descending during that time, it means that he will receive a great portion of the mercy of his Lord. It should be noted that one should beware of saying, “If we all wake up at this time, the mercy and provision of Allah will run out.” No, for Allah the Exalted has said:

‘Whatever you have will end, but what Allah has is lasting. And We will surely give those who were patient their reward according to the best of what they used to do...’ (an-Nahl: 96).

There is no doubt that the unlimited power of Allah is extensive enough for us all, without decreasing in the slightest. All of these things- firm faith, seeking forgiveness of sins, and protection from hellfire, patience, truthfulness, devotion, spending in charity, seeking forgiveness of Allah before dawn- are the fruits of the first quality, namely taqwa which is the very fruit of the proclamation of faith, “None is worthy of worship but Allah”. Therefore, every person must know that Allah has not called him to derive this fact from nothing (Allah’s exclusive right to worship); Rather, we know that Allah has testified that none is worthy of worship save Him, and His testimony is sufficient. Allah the Exalted says:

شَهِدَ ٱللَّهُ أَنَّهُۥ لَآ إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَ وَٱلۡمَلَٰٓئِكَةُ وَأُوْلُواْ ٱلۡعِلۡمِ
قَآئِمَۢا بِٱلۡقِسۡطِۚ لَآ إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَ ٱلۡعَزِيزُ ٱلۡحَكِيمُ ﴿١٨﴾

God bears witness that there is no god but Him, as do the angels and those who have knowledge. He upholds justice.
There is no god but Him, the Almighty, the All Wise [18]
(The Quran, Al-’Imran: 18)

Let us ponder over the first part of the verse. Allah Glorified is He testifies that there is no deity worthy of worship but Him. A testimony means “a statement or declaration of a witness declaring what he has seen, known, or witnessed”. The Arabic verb shahida, meaning “to bear witness, or testify”, can also mean “to know”.

Allah the Exalted has created proofs and signs in the universe that indicate His eternal existence and that He is the One and Only God, the Ever-Living. Does this evidence not establish the fact that He is the One and Only God? Who has created these signs and proofs? It was Allah the Exalted.

So, Allah Glorified is He bears witness that there is no deity worthy of worship but Him. We said that the testimony of Allah that there is no deity worthy of worship but Him is a personal testimony of a weighty statement. Allah the Exalted says*:* 'Originator of the heavens and the earth. When He decrees a matter, He only says to it, "Be," and it is' (al-Baqara: 117).

By Allah, if it is not an absolute truth that there is no deity worthy of worship but Him and none could oppose His will, why would He proclaim it? He the Most High, is testifying that there is no one worthy of worship but Him, so when He says 'Be', He knows that there is no other "god" who will say "Be not". Allah Glorified is He reassures us that there is no deity worthy of worship but Him and this entails testifying to it. When He issues a decree or command, He knows that there is none who can oppose it.

Is it not one of the requirements of the Prophet of Allah to testify that he is the Messenger of Allah? Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to say in his prayers: 'I testify that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah'. Even if he had not testified to that Himself, how could He state it in the Quran as a fact? For this reason, when the news reached Abu Bakr may Allah be pleased with him that his close friend Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent as a Prophet of Allah, he said, 'Has Muhammad said so? If he said it, he is definitely truthful!'

Abu Bakr As-Siddiq may Allah be pleased with him trusted his friend, given his history of truthfulness and honesty before he was commissioned to communicate the divine message to people. We read in the history books that a woman converted to Islam because of a single moment of reflection on the biography of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him This woman read that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had a group of believers guarding him from the disbelievers. One day, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him dismissed the guards and said to them, 'There is no need to guard me anymore; Allah has guaranteed me protection from people!'

We have all read this incident many times in the biography of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, but Allah caused this woman to reflect further on this incident. She wondered, "Were these people not guarding him out of their fear for his life? Why would he say to them, 'Do not guard me anymore because Allah guards me from now on'? If he had deceived the whole world, is it possible that he would imperil his own life?"

She realized it is not possible. He must have been completely positive that Allah the Exalted had informed him of it and guaranteed his protection, as evidenced by the fact that he peace and blessings be upon him dismissed the guards. If not, how could he be sure that no one would try to kill him? The woman said, 'By Allah, he may have deceived the whole world, he could not have deceived himself and endangered his own life. I testify that none is worthy of worship but Allah and that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is His Messenger.'

This woman's conversion to Islam came as a result of contemplating a single incident in the life of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

So, 'Allah witnesses that there is no deity except Him…' (Al-'Imran: 18). This is a personal testimony, and His testimony is sufficient. But the angels also testified to it. The angels belong to the realm of the Unseen -something which is hidden from us- and they receive their orders directly from Allah. The angels never receive orders from other than Allah; they know that He is the One and Only God. In addition to the testimony of the angels is the testimony of "...those of knowledge…." They have pondered over the signs and derived from the pieces of evidence, that none is worthy of worship but Allah the Exalted.

This is the greatest testimony ever by He the Most High along with that of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, the angels, and those endowed with knowledge. The people of knowledge have reached a lofty status because Allah the Exalted has mentioned them alongside the angels.

He has informed us that He has inculcated in His creation many marvellous signs; whoever reflects on them will derive from the proofs that none is worthy of worship but Allah. We have said before that the simplest way to prove this fact is that if "none is worthy of worship but Allah" is true, then it would be sufficient for us. If it is not true, then we should ask ourselves: where is the god of this universe? Why did this god not inform us that this universe is his? There are two possibilities: may be the other "god" does not know or he knows but is incapable of doing anything about it! Thus, we come to realise that there cannot be another god besides Allah, who has informed us that there is no god but Him.

The testimony of faith "none is worthy of worship but Allah" remains manifest in all the events of life; we find that an action can be a source of grandeur or arrogance. For this reason, we say that Allah, The Most High Creator, who is the One and Only God, informs us that '…[He is] maintaining [creation] in justice'. Despite the fact that none can challenge or retract the decree of Allah, He reassures us that He maintains His creation with justice.

A nice observation about the verse is that Allah the Exalted says*:* 'Allah witnesses that there is no deity except Him, and [so do] the angels and those of knowledge - [that He is] maintaining [creation] in justice. There is no deity except Him the Exalted in Might, the Wise' (Al-'Imran: 18). Why did He not say that the angels, as well as those endowed with knowledge, who bore witness that none is worthy of worship but Him, maintain justice in creation? Allah the Exalted testifies that there is no deity but Him, the Maintainer of creation with justice. The angels and those endowed with knowledge also testified to this fact. Why? It is because, had the verse read "They all are maintaining creation with justice", it would have meant that Allah the Exalted the angels, and the people of knowledge are all maintaining creation with justice; However, the verse means that He alone is maintaining creation with justice.

Allah the Exalted has created the angels and maintained the creation in justice. Had the verse read "They maintained the creation in justice" instead, it would not have been correct. Those who are endowed with knowledge were also created by Allah the Exalted and maintained in justice by Him. He has caused people's actions in the worldly life to be integrated; some employ their intellects, others employ their hearts, and others employ their limbs. This is an aspect of the divine justice otherwise, can anyone claim that a person may have all the skills required in this worldly life and can dispense with all other people? No such a person can exist. In fact, this is a manifestation of the divine justice of Allah the Most Merciful.

The divine justice entails that the skills and abilities required to maintain this worldly life should be distributed among all people; each of them is endowed with some so that they all would be constantly in need of one another. One cannot rely on himself to make his own clothes, food, beverages, and meet all the diverse needs of life. Rather, Allah Glorified is He has caused such skills and abilities to be divided among people. Some people master agriculture in order to produce enough food to provide their own needs and those of others. Thus, people exchange services with one another. A person cannot have the skills and abilities required to cultivate cotton, harvest it, spin, and weave it to make clothes. Similarly, a single person cannot possess the skills and abilities to plant wheat, harvest, and mill it to make bread.

Allah the Exalted has not created people so that each one of them would fulfill his own diverse needs independently from the others; He has decreed that the skills and talents should be distributed among all people so that their efforts would be complementary and for the broader human society to form an integrated unit. One person farms the land, the second spins the harvested cotton, the third weaves the fabric, and the fourth produces the required tools for these processes, and so on. This is the ultimate justice because a single person cannot possess the adequate energy or abilities to meet all of the required needs in the worldly life by himself. Allah the Exalted has created such a variety of talents and skills distributed among people in order to inevitably bond them together. He does not favour any person over the others in this regard. One person may have knowledge in a certain field and another person does not have any knowledge in it; they simply help one another to fulfill their mutual needs. In this way, people will necessarily need to exchange services and benefit one another.

This is why the whole universe is perfectly integrated. Let each of us ponder over his life and try to estimate the scope of the knowledge granted to him and the talents, skills, and abilities with which he is endowed to serve the maintenance of the movement of life?

These talents, skills, and abilities are distributed among all people so that they can help one another and collectively contribute to the movement of life.

This is the ultimate justice. In order to illustrate the real value of justice and the way it is maintained in the establishment of love and respect between and among people, let each of us think of another person and ask himself: “Is this person working for my benefit?” The answer is: “Yes.”

So, when a person sees someone else skilled in a given craft, he should say: “His talents and skills in this craft will benefit me as well!” Thus, Allah the Exalted has justly redressed envy and jealousy among people, and made all people essentially interdependent, and in mutual solidarity, not favouring any of them over the others. Every person who strives to work and make a living in any given field is actually maintaining some of the collective needs of the broader human community. It is amazing that the field in which a person excels is usually that in which his own needs are less. This is why we find many proverbs to this effect. Some of these proverbs are the following: “The shoemaker’s children always go barefoot,” “The carpenter’s house always needs work,” and “The mechanic’s car is leaking.” This is important to make a person realise that the talents and skills that another person possesses, will benefit him as well, as evidenced by the fact that the skills that he possess, do not benefit him except within a narrow scope.

Thus, the conviction that the talents and skills of each individual will benefit them all is instilled within people generating love and respect to replace envy and jealousy. A witty person once asked: “Why should the cobbler’s children be the worst-shod or the shoemaker’s children go barefoot?” Another one answered him: “It is because that some professionals do not apply their skills in their own circles as efficiently as they do at work; they will not be paid for it.” Great marvellous aspects can be realised in this common wisdom. For instance, some doctors specialized in certain fields may accomplish many achievements in their field, yet they may be afflicted with a disease within the very area of their expertise in which they excelled as if their excellence has not benefited them at all, but has only benefited others. Let us ponder over the verse as one unit. Allah Glorified is He says: “Allah bears witness that there is no god but Him, as do the angels and those who have knowledge. He upholds justice. There is no god but Him the Almighty the All Wise” (Al-‘Imran: 18). The verse highlights that Allah the Exalted witnesses that there is no deity except Him, and [so do] the angels and those of knowledge - [that He is] maintaining [creation] in justice." It is concluded with the emphasis that none is worthy of worship but Allah Glorified is He the Exalted in Might, the All-Wise. It is as though the verse means: As Allah the Exalted has testified that none is worthy of worship but Him, and so has the angels and scholars, through intellectual reflection and deduction, the matter is firmly established with no room for doubt. Therefore, we are urged to accept it as an established fact that "None is worthy of worship but Him." As long as there is no deity save Him, one should rely on Him only and know that if he depends upon Him alone, he has depended on Allah the Almighty Who cannot be overpowered or challenged.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him said: "Be mindful of Allah and He will protect you. Be mindful of Allah and you will find Him in front of you. If you ask, then ask Allah [alone]; and if you seek help, then seek help from Allah [alone]. And know that if the nation were to gather together to benefit you with anything, they would not benefit you except with what Allah had already prescribed for you. And if they were to gather together to harm you with anything, they would not harm you except with what Allah had already prescribed against you. The pens have been lifted and the pages have dried."(1)

No one can argue with Allah or challenge His decrees. The created beings may engage in arguments with one another and debate with their equal peers; however, none can repel the divine decrees because Allah is the Almighty Lord Who cannot be challenged. If you believe in Him alone, you shall attain success (in this worldly life and the Hereafter). The phrase "Him alone" in the verse may apparently suggest belittling the reliance to Allah the Exalted alone according to human standards. One may say, "I rely on so-and-so only;" would i not be in a stronger position if I rely on twenty people instead of one? However, there is no comparison between relying on Allah alone and relying on the created being. You rely on the Creator in whose Hands lie the keys to all things and who is able to do all things. The phrase "Him alone" in the verse, actually, suffices you to stand in need of nothing or no one else. You should simply seek the sake of Allah the Exalted alone, and He will suffice you and you will not be in need of all others. You should know that there is nothing that can challenge or repel His decrees.

(1) At-Tirmidhi

The greatness of Allah Glorified is He lies in the fact that He is the One and Only God, the Unique, the Eternal Refuge. He is the Almighty Lord, whose decrees cannot be challenged or repelled by anyone. He has the ultimate wisdom in the creation and arrangement of all things. When one knows the wisdom behind the divine decrees in governing and maintaining the creation, he will be amazed at the magnificence of the divine power of his Lord because wisdom means placing everything in its correct place. As long as something is in its right place, it is stable and as long as it is stable, it does not change and this entails calls for trust in it. The word "wisdom" in the Arabic language is derived from the word "Hakamah" which means the bridle that is placed in a horse's mouth. It is made of a piece of leather which is placed on the tongue and has a piece of iron; it is used to steer and direct the horse veers towards the wrong direction.

The presence of wisdom, i.e. the "bridle," requires the presence of something to be steered and directed towards the right direction. As long as Allah the Exalted testifies to the fact that none is worthy of worship save Him, and the angels and those endowed with knowledge has testified to the same fact and the fact is established that there is no deity save Him, the Almighty and All-Wise, this means that we should submissively abide by and follow His guidance. As long as Allah the Exalted has testified that none is worthy of worship but Him, that there is no partner associated with Him in worship to repel or challenge His decrees, He has caused the whole creation to exist with no partners and accordingly none can be associated with him in legislation.

Therefore, the source from which we derive the fundamentals of our way of life is one. It would have been possible that such one and only source of guidance may wrong the created beings because none of the creation of Allah has a right over Him. However, Allah is Just and He reassures us of the fact that Allah the Almighty All-Powerful, All-Knowledgeable, and All-Wise One and Only God does not wrong anyone in the slightest because He has underlined, "Despite being The One and Only God of this universe and none can repel or challenge my decrees, I maintain the creation is justice."

We should ponder over the concept of maintaining the creation in justice and upholding justice in the universe to have a better and more profound understanding of it. Allah the Exalted states that He upholds justice. The verb "uphold" in this context means that Allah the Exalted has created the first beings and creatures and maintained His creation in justice and equity. It also means that the religious obligations as assigned by Allah Glorified is He to the creation, are based on justice and equity. Justice and equity necessitate an unbalanced scale held by the powerful Hand of Allah, the Omnipotent, with no higher power to repel the judgments and decrees. Allah the Exalted maintains the creation in justice as He provides us with all the requirements of life before He has created us and upholds justice in the universe. He has not caused life to be exclusively dependent on the worldly means. Rather, He caused some matters to be beyond our control. He did not limit our movement and our freedom of movement in the worldly life; He has created some worldly means for us to avail ourselves of them, if we choose to do so, and they yield the relevant results; we are given the option not to avail ourselves of these means and causes as well.

Therefore, Allah the Exalted has not caused us to control the first creation in the slightest compelling us to do anything. Rather, He has not caused our actions to have influence on many of the movements of life upon which our lives depend. For instance, He has not caused us to control the movement of the sun, moon, wind, or rain. He has willed that all these means should be under His control. Why? It is because these means will work for the human being before any power or ability is imparted to him. They work for the benefit of a person even before his life starts in order to prepare the life granted to him by Allah the Exalted in this world. Had these responsibilities been assigned to people instead, they would not have been fulfilled until the human being possesses the required willpower and knowledge first.

Allah the Exalted has caused the means for life to be under His sole control such as breathing, for instance. Breathing does not depend on a person's willpower. Rather, Allah, The Exalted and Powerful, controls the breathing of the human being until he develops the willpower to carry on the breathing. The possession of willpower entails the acquisition of knowledge that he needs to fill his lungs with oxygen to be carried to all the cells of the mind and the whole body through the blood and in order to clean the blood and the body from harmful bodies. This requires knowledge. Had breathing required knowledge and learning first, what would have the infant, who has no knowledge, done? How would he have taken his first breaths? Therefore, the divine mercy entails that breathing, for example, should be under His control. However, He has not decreed that His creation should exist without any freedom or choice. Rather, Allah the Exalted has left great room for human freedom and choice.

So, Allah the Exalted does not completely control all the actions and choices of a person leaving him no freedom of choice and nor does He grant him the freedom of choice and action in all matters. This is the ultimate justice. Allah the Exalted has respected the human being's existence, life, willpower, and choice. He grants the human beings the indispensable means of life and renders them under His sole control because were a person to be given control over such matters, he would have abused them and delayed their fulfilments until he acquires the needed knowledge. Allah the Exalted wills that the human beings should be given these means of life and they are unable to do anything before acquiring such means. Therefore, Allah the Exalted has caused them to be under His control because He is the Creator, Who best preserves and maintains His creation. However, He does not limit the freedom of the human being when he wishes to progress in life and better his conditions; he is given the chance to do so and if he does not want to do it, it is his choice. This is the ultimate justice.

Then, Allah the Exalted underlines that He upholds justice in the universe which includes maintaining justice, the legislations, and religious obligations. This means that His justice in legislations is absolute. Some people believe that there is no God and others worship many gods; Allah the Exalted maintains justice between the two positions. He is an Existing God, oh you who claim that there is no God! He is The One and Only God, oh you who associate others with Him in worship. This falls into the category of maintaining justice in terms of rulings. We find that Allah Glorified is He commands a person to do certain acts without giving him a choice in the matter. Other matters are left for the human being on which to decide. The person is not left completely free to do whatever he wants in all matters with no restrictions; he is not compelled into all actions and is deprived of neither willpower nor choice in all matters.

Allah the Exalted willed that there should be a scope of compulsion and another for free will and choice for the human beings. He has imparted to the human being the ability to act; He has commanded the human being to work and has guaranteed the protection of the results of his work. He has decreed that He should have a right to part of the wealth with which He has entrusted him, to help one's fellow humans who are in need.

Allah the Exalted has given humankind the chance to work and toil and has preserved for them their possessions. However, He has not given free rein to their actions in all matters. Rather, He confined them in certain matters that fall within the scope of "the rights of Allah, The Exalted." Thus, we realise that Allah Glorified is He has maintained justice in this regard.

Thus, it becomes clear how Allah the Exalted upholds justice in the universe. We can see His justice evident in all affairs: in creation, imparting provisions, and legislation. As long as He is The One and Only God who maintains the creation in justice, what should prevent you, as a human being, from submitting to His will and abiding by His commands? Allah the Exalted says*:* "Behold, the only [true] religion in the sight of God is [man's] self-surrender unto Him... "

And Allah the Exalted also says:

إِنَّ ٱلدِّينَ عِندَ ٱللَّهِ ٱلۡإِسۡلَٰمُۗ وَمَا ٱخۡتَلَفَ ٱلَّذِينَ
أُوتُواْ ٱلۡكِتَٰبَ إِلَّا مِنۢ بَعۡدِ مَا جَآءَهُمُ ٱلۡعِلۡمُ بَغۡيَۢا بَيۡنَهُمۡۗ
وَمَن يَكۡفُرۡ بِـَٔايَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ سَرِيعُ ٱلۡحِسَابِ ١٩

True Religion, in God's eyes, is Islam: [devotion to Him alone]. Those who were given the Scripture disagreed out of rivalry, only after they had been given knowledge – if anyone denies God's revelations, God is swift to take account [19] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 19)

Allah the Exalted underlined that He is The One and Only God, the fact that He maintains the creation in justice is the logical result. The verse means that Islam, i.e. submission to Allah the Exalted is the only true religion in His sight, is the logical result of the fact that Allah the Exalted testifies that there is no deity except Him, and so do the angels and those of knowledge, that He is maintaining the creation in justice. Why? Because there should be no submission to anyone except Allah Glorified is He since none is worthy of worship but Him. He has no partners in worship. He says*:* "Allah has never had a child. Nor is there any god beside Him – if there were, each god would have taken his creation aside and tried to over- come the others. May Allah be exalted above what they describe!" (al-Mu'minun: 91)

As long as it is established that He is the One God, what prevents the human being from submitting to His will and commands? The emphasis in the verse that the religion in the sight of Allah is Islam is, in fact, the logical conclusion to which the wise person's intellect arrives. Despite this fact, Allah Glorified is He has bestowed His mercy on us, and sent His Messengers to inform us of the premise and conclusion, namely that Islam is the true religion in the sight of Allah. If we ask ourselves what religion is, the answer will be that religion is a word with many connotations. The Arabic word for religion is "Din" and it is derived from the root "D-a-n" meaning to draw closer, submit, and abide by someone's commands. It also means recompense. The Day of Judgment is also known as Yawm Ad-Din, i.e. the Day of Recompense. It is the day when a person is rewarded for obedience and punished with disobedience. If the human being submits to the will of Allah, then it is as described in the words of Allah the Exalted stating that the only true religion in the sight of Allah is Islam. Thus, we become aware that although there might be other religions which people follow, they are not true religions in the sight of Allah the Exalted Who says*:* "For you is your religion, and for me is mine." (al-Kafirun: 6) This means that there might be a religion, the adherents of which submit to someone other than Allah the Exalted comprising reverence, submission, and obedience to orders of another entity. However, it is not accepted by Allah Glorified is He and it is not considered a true religion in His sight. The only religion that is accepted by Allah the Exalted is Islam, i.e. genuine submission and devotion to Him. Religion can mean a way of life or a divine Law. If it is used to refer to the religious rulings and commandments, it is called Shari'a, or divine Law and if it is used to refer to obedience, reverence, and the consequent recompense, it is called way of life. However, if he is referring to the umbrella that encompasses all that, it is called faith.

Allah Glorified is He underlines that the only true religion in His sight of God is Islam; this means that there is no religion accepted by Allah Glorified is He except Islam. The Arabic word "Islam" is derived from the root "s-l-m". This root denotes many meanings. The root of the word denotes diverse meanings revolving around safety from evil and corruption. It could also mean the realization of inner peace between a person and his self, his Lord, the universe, and his fellow brothers. It denotes righteousness and the absence of corruption. All of the derivatives of the root denote these meanings. Since the word "Islam" denotes these commendable meanings, why do we not follow it?

We have previously underlined that a person does not submit to his equal peer unless he is convinced with what he is saying. A person says to an equal who gives him an order: "Why should I obey your order? You must convince me first of the wisdom behind that order." However, when a person believes in Allah Glorified is He who maintains the creation in justice, he must obey His commands.

Hence, we came to know that Islam, in essence, means submission and surrender to Allah, The Exalted stemming from dignity, understanding, honour, reason, and wisdom. There is a rational servitude when a person abides by the superficial meaning of servitude. There is a profound dignity realised when a person ponders over the true meaning of servitude to Allah the Exalted which cannot be approached by falsehood from any direction. It is the dignity of the sound intellect that does not lead to anything except genuine submission to the consistent commands that is void of contradictions.

As long as Allah the Exalted is The One and Only God, who maintains the creation in justice, when a person believes in Him and abides by His commands, he should know that there lies genuine dignity in the understanding, reason, and servitude because he worships Allah the Exalted who has control over all the created beings and creatures. He does not worship an equal peer. The one who worships his equal has nothing but the false pride and zeal of a subservient servant. As long as Islam is submission and surrendering to Allah the Exalted, it is not submission to an equal. Embracing Islam means embracing submission, peace, and consistency, security, and rest. It means freeing oneself from everything except Allah, The Exalted. He says*:*

"Allah puts forward this illustration: can a servant, who is owned by quarrelling partners at odds with each other, be considered equal to a man belonging exclusively and devoted wholly to one master? All praise be to Allah, though most of them do not know." (az-Zumar: 29) Allah the Exalted wants to demonstrate the difference between submission to the commands of a single master and submission to several masters.

He gives us an example that is familiar to us. He gives us an example of a servant owned by ten masters at odds with one another, each of whom gives him an order; what should he do? The second example is of a servant owned by one master. There is no doubt that the second will be more at peace because he has one master only, whereas the one owned by ten masters will be lost between the conflicting orders of his masters.

A servant owned by many masters is miserable because his masters are not in agreement; they are disputing partners. If one master sees him following the instructions of another, he will give him orders to do the very opposite! Accordingly, a servant's efforts will be squandered and he will be exhausted trying to please and obey them all. On the contrary, a servant owned by one master only is at peace. The same goes for worshipping one Lord. Allah Glorified is He gives this example from the daily life to show us the sweetness of Tawhid (Islamic monotheism) and worshipping Him alone with no partners. A servant who believes in One God should express his gratitude to Him because he submits to One God only. Islam, in essence, is submission, surrendering, and embracing inner peace. The Arabic word for peace is "Silm." Allah the Exalted says*:* "And if they incline towards peace, then incline to it [also] and rely upon Allah. Indeed, it is He who is The All Hearing, The All Knowing." (al-An'am: 61) This submission is not to an equal peer; rather, to a Higher Entity. The Higher Entity, to whom we submit, is the One Who has created all things; He is The Most High Who has sustained and granted us all things.

Thus, when a person embraces Islam, i.e. submits to Allah the Exalted, he earns the recompense of such submission from his Lord. Hence, submitting oneself to Allah and embracing Islam are in the best interest of a person. As long as

Islam is the only true religion in the sight of Allah the Exalted it is the religion, the adherence to which yields rewards. Islam is the religion of all the Prophets and all of them followed it. Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him the close friend of Allah Glorified is He said: “Our Lord, and make us submit ourselves to You and from our descendants a Muslim community submissive to You. And show us how to worship You, and accept our repentance. Indeed, You are The One who accepts the repentance and the Most Merciful.” (al-Baqara: 128)

Prophet Ya’qub (Jacob) peace be upon him was telling the truth in his conversation with his sons related in the following verse. Allah the Exalted says: “Or were you there to witnesses when death approached Ya’qub (Jacob); when he said to his sons, “Whom shall you worship after me?” They replied, “We shall worship your God and the God of your fathers, Ibrahim (Abraham) and Isma’il (Ishmael) and Ishaq (Isaac) - one God. And we submit ourselves to Him.” (al-Baqara: 133)

Allah Glorified is He also says: “Say, “Indeed, my Lord has guided me to the right path; (to) a most right religion, the faith of Ibrahim (Abraham), the upright one inclining toward truth. And he was not among the polytheists who associated others with Allah in worship.”[161] Say, “Indeed, my prayer, my rites of sacrifice, my life and my death are for Allah, The Lord of the worlds. [162] No partner or associate has He; and this I have been commanded, and I am the first of those who submit to Him. [163]” (al-An‘am: 161-163).

Islam is a comprehensive term and the word “Muslims” is a common description for all the Divine Messages. Islam does not merely refer to the Divine Message revealed to Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessing be upon him. Rather, it means devotion and submission to Allah the Exalted according to the divine guidance sent with the Prophets of Allah who were assisted by miracles. The difference is that the term “Islam” is used as a description and not a name for these past Divine Messages. However, Muslims, i.e. the followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him were distinguished with the enduring nature of this description in relation to their Divine Message. This is because the Divine Message revealed to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him has encompassed the ultimate and most perfect submission and devotion to Allah the Exalted and there will be no further refinement. The followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him were distinct in being given a name derived from the word "Islam." Islam became used as a name for the religion of the the followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him who have become known as "Muslims."

Islam, i.e. submission to Allah the Exalted is used as a description for the previous Divine Messages revealed to the past Messengers of Allah. However, in case of the final and concluding Divine Message, with which the Messenger of Allah peace and blessing be upon him was sent, Islam became its distinguishing name because it is the concluding Divine Message. Thus, Islam is the universal religion for all humankind. This is why we describe ourselves as "Muslims," whereas those who followed the past divinely revealed messages are also described as Muslims, in the sense that they had submitted to Allah, the Exalted. Muslims, the adherents of the concluding Divine Message have been named as such by Allah Glorified is He in His Book. This is an aspect of the verbal miracles pertaining to nomenclature in which Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him the close friend of Allah, was in agreement with the will of his Lord.

Allah the Exalted says*:* "And strive hard for Allah with the striving due to Him. He has chosen you and has not placed upon you in the religion any difficulty or hardship. [It is] the religion of your forefather Ibrahim (Abraham). Allah has named you "Muslims" before [in former scriptures] and in this [revelation] that the Messenger (Prophet Muhammad) may be a witness over you and you may be witnesses over the people. So, establish prayer and give zakat and hold fast to Allah. He is your Protector and Guardian; and how excellent the Guardian and how excellent the Helper is!" (al-Hajj: 78)

Islam has become a name for the followers of Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessing be upon him. This description is not used as a name except in the case of someone who has perfectly submitted to Allah Glorified is He.

How? We know that the name "Allah" is exclusively used in reference to Allah the Exalted and the attribute "Pre-eternally Living" is among His divine attributes. However, the attribute "Pre-eternally Living" has become one of the divine Names of Allah because He is Eternally Living. Thus, an attribute is not used as a name except if the description denotes an enduring and absolute meaning. Hence, the past Prophets of Allah who were sent before Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him and the previous peoples were also all Muslims in the sense that they submitted themselves to Allah, the Exalted. However, the followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him are distinguished with the fact that Islam is used in reference to them as both an attribute and a name. The religion of the followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him became a universal name. Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him foresaw it as related in the verse that reads*:* “[It is] the religion of your forefather Ibrahim (Abraham). Allah has named you “Muslims” before [in former scriptures]” (al-Hajj: 78) Allah Glorified is He relates on the authority of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him that he clearly gave the followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him the name “Muslims.” The verse did not read, “Allah has described you as Muslims.” Rather, it reads, “Allah has named you Muslims” because the previous peoples were described as Muslims, whereas the followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him are named Muslims, derived from the word Islam. One of the miraculous aspects of the name “Muslims” is that the followers of other Divine Messages attribute themselves to other than Islam. The “Jew” (in Hebrew, “Yehudi”) is derived from the name Judah which was the name of one of the sons of Prophet Ya’qub (Jacob) peace be upon him. They also describe themselves as “Followers of the Mosaic faith” attributing themselves to Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. Similarly, the Christians name themselves after the Christ, the son of Mary peace be upon him. We, the followers of Prophet Muhammad peace be upon him do not call ourselves “Mohammedans;” rather, we call ourselves “Muslims.” No other name is used in reference to the followers of Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessing be upon him. The name “Islam” has become a distinguishing honour for us.

Allah the Exalted underlines that the only true religion in His sight is Islam. This means that any other Prophet of Allah or his followers could be described as “Muslims, namely submissive to Allah the Exalted” one of the Messengers of Allah might have been sent with new laws and teachings that were not revealed to previous peoples, we, as Muslims, top this by being granted the honour of bearing the name Muslims. The submission to Allah Glorified is He has been perfected by Muslims and this is why it has become a name for the followers of Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessing be upon him.

Allah Glorified is He explains to us that the people, who were given divine revelation, differed after knowledge was imparted to them.

Why did they diverge? He the Most High answers, "out of rivalry and jealous animosity between themselves." The reference to the divergence indicates that they were once in agreement. Islam is the submission to Allah and abidance by His way of life and guidance because He is the One and Only God who upholds justice. What was the source of such divergence? What has caused it? Had another "god" come to the picture challenging His supremacy? No! As long as there is only One true God and the guidance that comes from Him is one, what has caused such animosity and divergence?

Allah the Exalted clarifies for us that the divergence arose among the people of the Book, i.e. those who had been given divine revelation, after they were granted knowledge. This is truly outraging and wicked. If they had diverged before they were given knowledge, we may have perceived their divergence excusable.

However, for the divergence to take place after being given knowledge by Allah, the One Who maintains the creation in justice, they should be asked, "What happened causing you to diverge?" A new element must have been added to the equation, namely their sinful desires. First, we should identify the meaning of divergence in this context. Divergence, in essence, denoted having different inclinations and views.

Why does divergence occur despite the fact that there is no deity other than Allah the Exalted Who maintains the creation in justice? We must draw the conclusion that a new element is added to the equation. What was it? It was the different inclinations. The verse underlined that "they have diverged" which means that a group held a certain view and the other held a different one. We may conclude that one group arrived at the truth and the other fell into the abyss of falsehood or that both groups fell into the abyss of falsehood. In fact, inclining to falsehood may be of different forms because there are many forms of falsehood. Did the verse mean that Allah the Exalted has revealed the divine messages and His mercy for the creation entailed that some people may adhere to the truth even if some others would differ with them in this regard? A good example of this is the situation of the Jews when the Messenger of Allah peace and blessing be upon him was sent. They held different views about the concluding Divine Message. Some of them embraced Islam and believed in the Divine Message of the final Prophet of Allah, while others did not. Those who accepted Islam attained the truth. It is as aspect of the divine mercy that He has caused those who knew of the fact that the tidings about the Divine Message of Islam were documented in their scriptures would proclaim them. They did not conceal this knowledge; rather, they proclaimed their faith, while others insisted on concealing the knowledge that had been imparted to them by their Lord and insisted on denying it. The following poetic verse applies to those who embraced Islam:

He who has rendered the truth taste as unbearably bitter as gall to some,
has spared some generations of people who would adhere to the truth

If Allah the Exalted has protected the successive generations of Muslim community by preserving the Quran, some of the followers of the past divine religions had adhered to the truth. Allah the Exalted credited them when He says: "But they are not all alike. There are some among the People of the Book who are upright, who recite God's revelations during the night, who bow down in worship, [113] who believe in Allah and the Last Day, who order what is right and forbid what is wrong, who are quick to do good deeds. These people are among the righteous [114]" (Al-'Imran: 113-114).

Allah the Exalted has done them justice. Those who have believed in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him from among the adherents of the past divinely revealed messages, have been guided to the truth and differed from others. The reference to the "People of the Book" in the verse, i.e. those who were given the divine scripture, requires a pause for reflection. The verse underlines that they were given these divine books and they were not their own production. So, the divine revelation is not the product of the human thought because if such a guidance and way of life were the human production, it would have been possible that people would disagree on them. The fact that the verse uses the passive form makes us wonder who gave them the book. It was Allah Glorified is He Who does not bring anything inconsistent.

As long as the Quran is revealed to us by Allah the Exalted it is inconceivable that it should include any contradiction. Allah the Exalted says*:* "Had it been from any other than Allah, they would have found in it much contradiction and discrepancy." (*an-Nisa': *82)

Allah Glorified is He is underlining that any product of the human thought, will inevitably contain contradiction and discrepancy and people will differ about it. Only the divine product produced by Allah, the One and Only God, is free of contradiction and discrepancy. It is not possible that the divine products that are produced by the very source should contain contradictions or discrepancy unless they are altered and modified by human interference. These modifications are made due to the sinful desires and inclinations of the people who claimed to be attributed to Allah Glorified is He!

So, Allah the Exalted is clarifying for us that the divine books were not given to them by their human peers; rather, the divine books were granted to them by Allah, the One Omnipotent God. This is intended as an admonition for the followers of past Divine Messages. It means that when they follow the guidance of Allah Glorified is He and adhere to the way of life set by Him and revealed to their Messengers, they are not following the guidance of a human being because all the Messengers of Allah were sent to communicate the divine guidance of their Lord to their peoples. None of the Messengers of Allah claimed that the guidance was his own production. Rather, the Messengers of Allah themselves were the firsts to obey and submit to the divine guidance revealed to them. In fact, this should be perceived as a source of honour for them. All people must be mindful of the fact that the true guidance was revealed to the Messengers of Allah by their Lord.

When we see the term "The scripture or Book", we must bear in mind that it was used in different occasions in the Quran. The Quran is referred to as "Quran," literally meaning "recitation" because it is recited and sometimes as "the Scripture or Book" referring to the Quran in written form. The Arabic word Quran is derived from the root q-r-a meaning to recite. It means to recite something from memory. The information that is only preserved in the hearts and minds of people could become distorted and altered due to sinful desires. Therefore, Allah the Exalted preserved the Quran in written form and also in the hearts of Muslims.

When Allah Glorified is He refers to “the people of the Scripture or the Book,” it draws our attention to the fact that the divine scripture is the divine guidance preserved in a written form. This means it was not just preserved in the memories and hearts of people and would be eventually forgotten and lost. Rather, it is documented and preserved in written form as well. Thus, Allah the Exalted described the divine revelation prior to the revelation of the Quran as being preserved in written form. If the adherents of the past Divine Messages followed their sinful desires, as happened, this means that the divine revelation was altered and distorted. Now, let us ponder on the word “knowledge.” What is knowledge? Knowledge is the realization of an existing fact that can be proven with evidence. Some propositions do not amount to knowledge because they cannot be proven with evidence.

For example, we say that the earth is spherical. This fact about the earth has been ascertained and we are certain of it. In the past ages past, some people argued that the earth was flat, and attempted to prove this. However, those who proved the earth to be spherical were actually correct. In modern times, the spherical shape of the earth could be seen from spaceships and by other means. We know without any doubt that the spherical shape of the Earth is a fact, of which we are certain, and we can prove it with evidence.

This is an example of “knowledge”. The problem is that people bring forth propositions which have not amounted to knowledge and label as established facts and knowledge. For example, the proposition suggests that human beings evolved from apes. No one can ascertain such a contention beyond doubt and it does not amount to true knowledge. The word “knowledge” refers only to ascertained propositions that are certain and existent in the real world and can be proven with evidence. If a proposition is certain and exists in the real world, yet we are unable to prove it with evidence, what is it called? It is called “imitation,” like a little boy imitating his father in every action before his intellect is fully developed and says, “None is worthy of worship but Allah, The One and Only God.” Another example of imitation is the pupil who accepts the propositions of his teacher without understanding their relevant proofs. We call this “imitation” or adherence to previous authoritative positions without verifying the supportive evidence himself. When the pupil’s intellect and analytical skills become fully developed, he is asked to do his own research on the matter, examine the proofs himself, and then arrive at his own conclusions.

So, imitation in this context denotes adherence to previous authoritative positions on existent and established propositions lacking the supportive evidence. Thus, we come to realise that knowledge is different from imitation in terms of the ability to prove the proposition with evidence. However, what do we call a proposition which is certain and held to be true, but non-existent in the reality? This is called “ignorance.” Ignorance does not mean lack of knowledge; rather, it means that a person’s knowledge of a certain issue is contrary to the reality. As for the one who has no knowledge, he is in need of instruction and edification on the truth and the correct notion. The ignorant person, on the other hand, is different; he needs first to remove the false and incorrect notion out of his mind first to be replaced with the correct notion. Thus, convincing an ignorant person to accept the truth comprises two actions: removing falsehood out of his mind and then replacing it with the truth.

Therefore, we find it difficult to edify the ignorant people on Islam and not those who lack knowledge because the ignorant person is convinced of a false propositions which are contrary to the truth, whereas the one lacking knowledge simply does not know the truth and needs to be informed of it. What if the contention is not certain and not held to be true and the degree of certainty and uncertainty are equal? This is known as doubt. If certainty outweighs uncertainty, we call it “conjecture.” If uncertainty outweighs certainty, we call it “illusion.”

Thus, the means by which propositions are perceived are: firstly: knowledge; secondly: imitation; thirdly: ignorance; fourthly: doubt; fifthly: conjecture; and sixthly: illusion. Knowledge is the highest level in the perception of propositions. This is why Allah the Exalted specifies the subject matter of the difference among the people of the Book; they diverged after being granted knowledge. The verse did not underline that they had diverged after being granted “imitation, conjecture, ignorance, or doubt.” Rather, He says that they had diverged after attaining the perfect perception, namely, knowledge. As long as there is a divine command issued by Allah the One and Only God Who maintains the creation injustice, it must be true and amounts to the degree of knowledge. So, what has caused their divergence? There must have been a new factor. The new factor was their sinful desires. This is why Allah Glorified is He specifies that they diverged out of rivalry and jealous animosity among themselves. What is meant by rivalry in this context? It means seeking eminence without any right to it. Seeking eminence is not blameworthy in and of itself because it is the essence of the worldly ambition in the universe. The person naturally seeks to better himself and his life conditions by means of hard work, striving and exerting greater efforts in order to arrive at a certain academic or social level or the like. This is a natural right for all people. We know that the world has been developed and enhanced because of such human ambition. Had people of any given generation settled for their current conditions, the world would have been left in a state of dullness and inactivity. However, people have caused the developments in the world through the efforts exerted by some of them to support beneficial causes. They strove to enhance their situations and succeeded in bettering their life conditions by means of the knowledge earned through the real effort they have exerted and learning about the efforts of their predecessors.

So, seeking eminence is not blameworthy in and of itself; rather, it is praiseworthy as long as it is based on hard work and striving. However, if a person seeks eminence without any right to it and without exerting the needed efforts to attain it, this is what is meant with “rivalry and jealous animosity.” Allah the Exalted confirms in this verse that every conflict between the genuine scholars or between religions is a result of “rivalry and jealous animosity”. The origin of such rivalry and jealous animosity is that the scholars seek eminence without any right to it. The manifestations of seeking undeserved eminence can be seen in hastening to issue Fatwas (legal positions of juridical cases) that conform to the inclinations of the people and contradict the divine revelation. Such a person might claim to be civilized, yet issue Fatwas that contradict what Allah the Exalted has revealed, claiming that he is following the religion in the light of the spirit of the present time or claim that he does not give in to dull rigidity and may even go far and accuse those who hold on to their religion of being backward. In fact, the hidden objective harboured in the heart of such a person is seeking undeserved eminence among his people. We must understand that the origin of every divergence among the followers of one religion or between different religions is as Allah the Exalted coined it, “out of rivalry and jealous animosity between themselves.” This means that some of them follow their own sinful desires instead of abiding by the revelation of their Lord. Why? It is because the religious rulings are either decisive, leaving no room for personal reasoning and intellectual efforts (by competent scholars) or indecisive, leaving the door open for personal reasoning and intellectual efforts by competent scholars.

Allah the Exalted wills that not all the rulings are decisive and nor are they indecisive and open for personal reasoning of the competent scholars. Rather, both kinds of rulings are produced so that the human being would respect the intellect that his Creator has granted him and in order to assign him with the task of contemplation, research, and examination, arriving at a conclusion and declaring one position preponderant. The person employs his intellect, which is an aspect of the divine mercy so that the human intellect would not be left in a state of dullness and rigidity.

When we find a divergence between scholars or adherents of different religions, we should know that the reason is as coined in the Quran as, “out of rivalry and jealous animosity between themselves.” Troubles arise as a result of such rivalry and jealous animosity. The one who aspires to attaining undeserved eminence is the one agitating the jealous animosity, claiming to be more intelligent than others are. He seeks undeserved eminence and superiority over those who have authority over him or when his opinion conforms to the ruler’s, trying to justify the ruler’s opinion.

The phrase “out of rivalry and jealous animosity between themselves” encompasses all kinds of waves of deviation from the divine guidance that we see around us. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him directed us to the preventative measures against spiritual ailments resulting from such rivalry and jealous animosity just like people are given serums to protect them from physical diseases. He peace and blessing be upon him has edified us on the preventative ways so that we would be safe from the spiritual diseases resulting from jealous animosity.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him said: “The essence of virtue and righteousness is (manifested in) good morals, whereas sinful conduct is that which turns in your heart (making you feel uncomfortable) and you dislike that it would be disclosed to other people.”(1) Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him is warning us as well in another Hadith. He peace and blessing be upon him also said: “Righteousness is that about which the soul feels at ease and the heart feels tranquil. And wrongdoing is that which wavers in the soul and causes uneasiness in the breast eventhough people have repeatedly given their legal opinion [in its favour].”(2)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him is warning us in order to clarify that the people given to jealous animosity insist on proclaiming their opinions and issuing Fatwas (legal positions and opinions) on all matters. What is meant by the issuance of Fatwa from which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him has warned us? Is it an opinion expressed by a person known for his knowledge of the divine rulings? Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him pointed out this in order to instruct taking the preventative measures against such spiritual ailments. The people of truth might be outnumbered and lack the means to communicate their opinions to people. Moreover, the ones who control the circulation of news and information might not be siding with the people of the truth and might be on the side of others, who follow falsehood or please the mob.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him has drawn out attention to the preventative measures so that those, who keenly hold on to the truth, would not despair. The adherence to the religion cannot always be smooth and easy. Rather, we will find some people interpret the religious rulings wrongly and distort the facts. Therefore, he peace and blessing be upon him has clarified that a believer has the ability to make his own judgments and warned us from those who hasten to issue Fatwas out of rivalry and jealous animosity. People need the Fatwas of those endowed with knowledge. This is why the words “they seek your Fatwa” are found in more than one verse in the Noble Quran because those who ask for Fatwas are in need of clarification about a certain religious matter as they are keen to foster their faith. Therefore, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him is warning us from those who try to issue Fatwas that are not based on genuine knowledge and alert a believer not to follow the Fatwas of unqualified people.

(1) Al-Bukhari
(2) Ahmad

Allah the Exalted says*:* "And whoever disbelieves in the verses of Allah, then indeed, Allah is swift in [taking] account" (Al-'Imran: 19) Who disbelieves in the verses of Allah the Exalted? The disbelief in the signs of Allah the Exalted is specified in the reference to divergence and jealous animosity, i.e. seeking undeserved eminence without any right to it. Allah the Exalted describes it as disbelief so as to warn us against concealing the divine commandments of Allah Glorified is He by the divergence of views or jealous animosity. The verse was concluded with the warning. "...then indeed, Allah is swift in [taking] account" (Al-'Imran: 19) The person should beware of thinking that recompense will be delayed for long, saying, "I can enjoy the results of divergence and rivalry to serve those who benefit from the divergence" because he wants to hasten matters that he thinks to be beneficial for him. Allah Glorified is He is warning you from assuming that His reckoning to be slow because it is possible that the recompose would be in this worldly life. If a person is not afflicted with an adversity in this worldly life, he will have a severe reckoning in the Hereafter.

Someone might say: "Allah the Exalted may defer the reckoning and recompose to the Hereafter; we are experiencing the lesser signs of the Day of Resurrection now, and the greater signs have not appeared yet." To such a person we say that there is a difference between the event itself and a person's experience of the event. There is a difference between the Resurrection of all people and the end of a person's life by an accident that he did not foresee. A person might issue a Fatwa today and then have a sudden accident, ending his life and bringing about the swift reckoning. Had a person thought that the reckoning would have been far away, he would not have known that his life could come to an end as fast as the abrupt events take place in this worldly life because no one is capable of extending his own life span. He could die at any given moment. Thus, the life of a person who might have thought that his recompose would be distant could end very swiftly. The word account or reckoning used in the verse is intended to reassure a believer that Allah the Exalted maintains the creation in justice and does not leave the acts of those who disbelieved in Him and disobeyed Him to go unpunished; every person will receive his due recompose. Then, He says: “So if they argue with you, say, “I have submitted myself to Allah [in Islam]. “

فَإِنۡ حَآجُّوكَ فَقُلۡ أَسۡلَمۡتُ وَجۡهِيَ لِلَّهِ وَمَنِ ٱتَّبَعَنِۗ وَقُل لِّلَّذِينَ أُوتُواْ
ٱلۡكِتَٰبَ وَٱلۡأُمِّيِّـۧنَ ءَأَسۡلَمۡتُمۡۚ فَإِنۡ أَسۡلَمُواْ فَقَدِ ٱهۡتَدَواْۖ وَّإِن
تَوَلَّوۡاْ فَإِنَّمَا عَلَيۡكَ ٱلۡبَلَٰغُۗ وَٱللَّهُ بَصِيرُۢ بِٱلۡعِبَادِ ٢٠

If they argue with you [Prophet], say, ‘I have devoted myself to God alone and so have my followers.’ Ask those who were given the Scripture, as well as those without one, ‘Do you too devote yourselves to Him alone?’ If they do, they will be guided, but if they turn away, your only duty is to convey the message. God is aware of His servants [20]
(The Quran, Al-’Imran: 20)

“If they argue with you” indicates that Allah Glorified is He reveals His guidance to the last of Prophets, Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him and informs him of the reality he would be facing. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him was confronted by three camps: First, the pagans of Quraysh who were in utter disbelief. Second, the Jews and Christians, who are both coupled together in the verse because they are among the people of the Book. Third was the camp of the hypocrites. The argument was started by the second camp because the pagans of Quraysh did not claim that they followed a divinely-revealed religion. The people of the Book, on the other hand, claimed that they were following a divinely-revealed religion. Since polytheism and paganism oppose to the divine religion, the conflict between them is logical; however, when the followers of a past divinely-revealed Message opposes the divine Message revealed to the final Messenger, this is a matter which calls for a pause for reflection.

The meaning of “argument” in this context is that they were debating with Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessing be upon him; “arguing”in the verse simply means that each party presents his argument and contentions. This indicates a dialogue; as long as there was a debate between truth and falsehood, Allah the Exalted would not leave Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him unequipped. Rather, He says to him: “If they argue with you”, meaning if they debate with you about the religion of Islam with which you have been sent as the final and concluding Divine Message, which clashes with idolatry and paganism followed by Quraysh and the alterations done by the people of the Book to their divinely revealed Messages, changing the meaning that Allah the Exalted intended, say, Oh Muhammad: “I have submitted myself to Allah [in Islam], and [so have] those who follow me.” We have previously underlined that when Allah Glorified is He commands the Prophet peace and blessing be upon him to say something, it would have been possible that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him would simply relate the statement of Allah the Exalted directly without referring to the command of his Lord “Say such-and-such.” When a father says to his son: “Go to your uncle and tell him such-and-such” and the son goes to the uncle and tells him as instructed, he does not say to his uncle, “Say to your uncle such-and-such…” However, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him repeated the command of his Lord to us as clearly stated in the verse. The verse reads*:* “If they argue with you, say, “I have submitted myself to Allah (in Islam), and (so have) those who follow me.” (Al-‘Imran: 20) Is this a rebuttal and refutation of an argument? Indeed it is because the people of the Book and the pagans of Quraysh have been described as related in the following verse.

Allah the Exalted says: “And if you should ask them, “Who created the heavens and the earth?” they would most certainly say: The Almighty and All Knowing, has created them.” (az-Zukhruf: 9)

Moreover, Allah the Exalted says about them*:* “And if you should ask them who created them, they would surely say, “Allah.” So how are they deluded, and turned back (for the truth)?” (az-Zukhruf: 87)

The universe compromises two things: the place, namely the heavens and the earth, and the human being. The heavens and the earth as well as the human being are created by Allah Glorified is He. It is logical that we should submit ourselves to the Creator of all things and beings. Thus, Allah the Exalted says*:*

"Say, "I have submitted myself to Allah [in Islam]," means, "Bear in mind that I have not gone out of the fold of the belief in The One and Only God whom you believe in." He is the One Who has created all things and beings and has caused the universe to exist.

Islam, in essence, is submission to Allah the Exalted He has decreed that the noblest part of a person should be placed on the floor where this submission is manifested (prostrating oneself before Him). Prostration is the highest degree of obedience and servitude because a person places on the earth the loftiest part of his body, i.e. his forehead, and expresses humility and weakness in the presence of the Omnipotent Authority. The face is the body part that shows feelings: happiness or sadness. It reflects a person's inner character and feelings; when a person prostrates before someone against his will, it shows on his face. When he prostrates willingly, savouring proximity to Allah Glorified is He happiness and delight will be written all over his face. Allah the Exalted says*:* "(Say) I have submitted myself to Allah [in Islam]." (Al-'Imran: 20) It means that the face, the loftiest part of a person's body, should submit to Allah Glorified is He. No loftier body part is worthy of expressing submission to Allah Glorified is He. The word 'face' in the Arabic language can be sometimes used to refer to a person. When someone says, "I have surrendered my face," he means, "I have submitted myself and my whole being." Let us ponder on the words of Allah the Exalted as He says*:* "Everything is perishable but His Face; His is the judgment, and to Him you shall be brought back." (al-Qasas: 88)

This means that everything shall eventually perish and cease to exist except Allah the Exalted. This is the meaning of the phrase "but His Face" in the verse. If we interpret the verse according to the literal meaning referring to His Face in particular and not to Allah the Exalted someone might say: "Does Allah the Exalted not have a Hand, for example?" We believe that He has a Hand that is not like anything in the creation. His hand or any of His attributes shall not cease to exist or perish. The word "Face" in the verse is a reference to Allah the Exalted and not merely to His Face, with the emphasis that there is nothing whatever like unto Him. The word 'face' is used to refer a person as a whole because the face is the feature which best distinguishes a person. Unlike any other body parts, the fact is crucial for human identify; we recognise people by their face. Allah the Exalted has instructed His Messenger to proclaim, "I have submitted myself to Allah (in Islam) and so have those who have followed me." This indicates that Prophet Muhammad, blessing and peace be upon him, submitted his face to Allah the Exalted as He has commanded him in the divine revelation since the revelation was given directly to him. However, when he says "and all who have followed me," this is proof for all those who followed him eventhough they are not directly addressed by Allah Glorified is He.

Therefore, there is no room for any person to say to Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessing be upon him: "You have submitted to Allah the Exalted because he has commanded you directly." It is as though the speaker wants the divine command to be directly addressed to all believers instead. Allah the Exalted says "and all who have followed me." Everyone who follows Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him believes that he peace and blessing be upon him is a true Prophet of Allah, delivering the Divine Message and true guidance to mankind. There is no need to demand that the divine command should be addressed to every person individually because the Divine Message has reached them by virtue of their belief in what Allah the Exalted has revealed to His Noble Messenger, and Allah the Exalted has commanded His Messenger, peace and blessing be upon him: "Say to those who were given the Scripture and [to] those without one, "Have you submitted yourselves to Allah?"

When you find a question in the Quran, you should know that it is intended as a request for you to seek the truth. It is like the case when a person says to another, "Is Muhammad there?" or "Has so-and-so visited you?" The intention of a question is to know the truth. Sometimes, the question is used in order to give an order, such as the case when someone visits you, and your father may say to you, "Have you made coffee for your guest?" This is an instruction for you to make coffee for him if you have not and failed to fulfill the obligations of hospitality.

Thus, we understand the question in the verse, "Have you [too] submitted yourselves unto Him?" Let us ponder on the verse revealed in relation to alcohol: "Satan only wants to cause enmity and hatred to spring in your midst by means of intoxicants and games of chance, and to keep you off from the remembrance of Allah and from prayer. Will you then desist?” (al-Ma‘ida: 91) The exclamation of Allah Glorified is He “Will you then desist?” includes a question and the question in this context is meant as an order for them to desist. The verse in reference reads, “Have you [too] submitted yourselves unto Him?” It is a call for them to submit to Allah. It means, “Submit to Allah.” Then, Allah the Exalted says: “And if they should submit [in Islam], they are rightly guided” (Al-‘Imran: 20) It means that they have been guided to the right way to accomplish the objective for which Man was created. We should emphasize that the word “Islam” in this context indicates submission and surrender to Allah Glorified is He. Submission is not recognised except by the humble. Submission is manifested in action not only in belief. This is why Imam 'Ali may Allah be pleased with him who was blessed with a share of the prophetic eloquence, said to his brothers: “I am defining Islam as no one has defined before me: Islam is submission; submission is conviction,; conviction is affirmation; affirmation is acknowledgment; acknowledgment of the Divine Power means recognizing and accepting His Majesty; acceptance of His Majesty means fulfilling the obligations laid down by Him and fulfilment of obligations means actions (Therefore, Islam does not mean mere faith, but faith plus deeds).” In our daily life, we may ask: “Who is so-and-so? To whom so-and-so is attributed?”

In other words, we ask who his father is. The meaning of the word ‘genealogist’ is a person who knows the chains of lineage of people. As Imam ‘Ali Allah be pleased with him was defining Islam as none has defined it before, he, Allah be pleased with him, underlined that Islam does not mean mere faith, but faith plus deeds. He remarked that a believer’s faith is verified by means of his actions. The best proof of a person’s faith is his actions. Imam ‘Ali may Allah exalt his mention then added: “A disbeliever’s disbelief is known by his denial of truth. A believer has taken his religion from his Lord and is not following his own personal opinion.” It is better to be a Muslim and commit a sin than being a non-Muslim and carry out a good deed. This is because when a Muslim commits a sin, he can simply repent of it and seek forgiveness of his Lord. Moreover, the good deeds carried out by non-Muslims are not rewardable because the doer disbelieves in Allah the Exalted. How great the affiliation to Islam is! The verse reads*:* "And if they submit to Allah [in Islam], they are rightly guided..." (Al-'Imran: 20) The opposite of submission is mentioned in the following statement in the verse: "but if they turn away, your only duty is to convey the message." The opposite of submission is "turning away;" this means that they refrained from submitting themselves to Allah the Exalted. He commands His Messenger peace and blessing be upon him not to be saddened by their attitude if they turned away from guidance. This is similar to the verse that reads*:* "Then perhaps you would kill yourself with grief over them, [Oh Muhammad], if they do not believe in this message, [and] out of sorrow." (al-Kahf: 6)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him was only required to deliver the Divine Message to people. As stated in the opening of the verse, "(Say, Oh Muhammad,) I have submitted myself to Allah [in Islam], and [so have] those who follow me." The duty of communicating the Divine Message includes the Prophet peace and blessing be upon him and his followers. This is why another verse is revealed to explain this doctrinal issue so that the duty of communicating the Divine Message would be maintained by his followers. It also informs us why there is no longer need for other Prophets after Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him because Allah the Exalted has caused some of the followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him to shoulder the duty of rectifying the corruption in the universe. There is no longer a need for sending another Prophet of Allah. This is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him said: "The scholars are the heirs of the Prophets."We understand that the duty of communicating the Divine Message to people was not exclusively the duty of Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessing be upon him. Rather, it is the duty of all those endowed with knowledge of the Divine Message revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him, and believe in it. He peace and blessing be upon him served as the optimal role model in this regard. Allah Glorified is He says in another verse*:* "[Believers], you are the best community produced (as an example) for mankind; you enjoin what is right, forbid what is wrong, and believe in Allah. If the people of the Book had also believed, it would have been better for them. For although some of them do believe, most of them are defiantly disobedient." (Al-'Imran: 110) Allah Glorified is He says in another verse*:* "And strive for Allah with the striving due to Him." (al-Hajj: 78) This means that you shall witness against the people to whom you had delivered the Message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Those who failed to deliver the Divine Message to people as enjoined, have not taken on the inheritance of prophethood. Shouldering the duty of communicating the Divine Message to people and celebrating the prophetic inheritance are a great privilege and honour. It also requires patience and endurance. The Prophetic inheritance is sometimes savouring the honour of delivering the divine message to people as enjoined and at others the adherence to forbearance of arduous labour in delivering it. This enjoined arduousness is what the followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him should display because Muslims inherit the honour of prophethood. They also inherit the duty of communicating the Divine Message to mankind arduously. This is the meaning of the verse that reads: "that the Messenger may be a witness over you and you may be witnesses over the people." (al-Hajj: 78)

What does a "role model" mean in this context? The fact that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him is our role model entails that he should arduously shoulder the duty of communicating the Divine Message to humankind. This means that we should follow his example in this regard. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him strove in communicating the Divine Message to people and his followers should also carry on the struggle for the sake of promoting the religion of Islam, following his example. If you see the religious people lax, lethargic, and unable to struggle in the course of delivering the Divine Message to people, know that they are not the heirs of Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessing be upon him. Therefore, when you see an Islamic scholar who has no enemies, know that his share of the Prophetic inheritance is small.

Why? That is because Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him had enemies. When we see a scholar who has enemies, we should know that he has received his full share of the Prophetic inheritance. Let us now contemplate the concluding statement of the verse clarifying for us what Islam (submission) is: "And Allah is All Seeing and Aware of [His] servants." (Al-'Imran: 20) Allah Glorified is He knows His servants because He is Seeing of all matters; the reference to Him as the All Seeing is always in the context of addressing faith-related matters. He is All Seeing of [His] servants. Sight is not used except in reference to witnessing action and behaviour. What does Allah Glorified is He see of His servants? He sees their actions in the universe and whether these actions conform to the teachings of Islam. Monitoring action requires sight and not knowledge; it is as though Allah the Exalted is saying: “If you think that I cannot see you, your faith is defective. If you believe that I can see you, why have you made Me the least important of those who can see you?”

Allah the Exalted underlines that He is Seeing of [His] servants. We understand from this verse that Islam must be translated in a person’s conduct and actions; it is not a mere conviction because unlike conviction, actions can be “seen.” As long as Allah the Exalted is All Seeing of every movement and stillness of a person, he should feel ashamed that his Lord should see him doing something He does not approve. Let us ponder over the following example to clarify the meaning further, with no intention to draw comparison. Indeed, there is nothing like Allah the Exalted. We see that a young man who smokes feels ashamed to smoke before the elders of his family; he would refrain from smoking in their presence. What about a servant who believes that Allah the Exalted sees him? Then, Allah the Exalted says:

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ يَكْفُرُونَ بِـَٔايَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ وَيَقْتُلُونَ ٱلنَّبِيِّـۧنَ بِغَيْرِ حَقٍّ وَيَقْتُلُونَ
ٱلَّذِينَ يَأْمُرُونَ بِٱلْقِسْطِ مِنَ ٱلنَّاسِ فَبَشِّرْهُم بِعَذَابٍ أَلِيمٍ ٢١

Give news of agonizing torment to those who ignore God’s revelations, who unjustifiably kill prophets, who kill those who command that justice is done [21] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 21)

We have previously underlined that when Allah Glorified is He refers to those who disbelieve in His signs, it means those who disbelieve in the divine signs of Allah the Exalted in their totality. There is a difference between disbelieving in the signs of Allah the Exalted and disbelieving in Him. This is because the belief in Allah the Exalted necessitates proofs that of His existence and there are many proofs of the existence of Allah the Exalted in the universe.

The proofs of His existence are clear; however, whoever disbelieves in Allah the Exalted essentially denies the evidences which prove the existence of the Creator.

The verse did not refer to “Those who disbelieve in Allah,” in order to clarify for us that the knowledge of Allah the Exalted falls into the category of the Unseen, whereas the knowledge of His signs are apparent in the universe. This is why the verse referred to those who disbelieve in the signs of Allah in particular. We notice that the word “kill” is always used with the word “Prophets of Allah” and not the Messengers of Allah. It is inconceivable and not logical that Allah the Exalted would send a messenger to preach His guidance and make it possible for His servants to kill him! Allah the Exalted sends His Prophets, however, to be role models for believers and none of them is given new legislations. On the contrary, the Messengers of Allah are sent to communicate the divinely revealed guidance and way of life to their peoples. It is inconceivable that Allah the Exalted should choose a servant to communicate His Divine Message, and then would allow some people to kill His Messenger!

No created being can kill a Messenger of Allah; however, they may kill the Prophets of Allah. Every Prophet of Allah is sent as a role model for his people. This is why we find some Prophets of Allah adhering to the very divine religion of the previous Messenger of Allah. The question arises as why people would kill the Prophet of Allah since he is merely a role model for them and was not sent with a new Divine Message. If a Prophet of Allah is sent with a new Divine Message, we would say that the reason for killing him was the zeal for the previous divine message. Why would they kill a Prophet of Allah who is merely sent as a role model for his people? The Prophet of Allah performs acts of worship as enjoined and thus people come to realise that the conduct of the Prophet of Allah does not conform to their sinful desires.

Those people who kill the Prophets of Allah are those who do not want to follow the Islamic way of life, namely submitting and surrendering oneself, one’s body, and actions to be in accordance with the religion. This is because, while the Prophet of Allah follows the Divine Message of the Messenger who was sent before him, when he abides by the teachings of the religion among a group of people who do not practice the religion, they will feel offended by his actions.

The presence of a Prophet of Allah, who holds fast to the divine laws of his Lord, submits his body and actions to the divine guidance among his people, who claim to follow the religion of Allah the Exalted but those who do not hold fast to His guidance, would say: "Why should the Prophet of Allah display this upright conduct? Why should not he submit his body to the divine decrees and embrace faith, while we are not practicing our religion like him?" These questions caused rage and envy towards the Prophet of Allah to grow in the hearts of these people, who do not practice the religion of their Lord, although claiming otherwise. They envy the Prophet of Allah because he is elevating his status and bettering himself by means of devotion to his Lord and they are not able to do the same.

The Prophet of Allah submits to the divine guidance as a clear and evident role model for people, demonstrating the difference between the mere claim of believing in the divine guidance and practical adherence to it. Therefore, when we see a person following the divine guidance and way of life as enjoined, we find that the non-practicing person takes the practicing person as a target of scorn and ridicule because the non-practicing person is filled with rage and envy towards the practicing one for being capable of submitting himself to the divine guidance. The non-practicing person asks himself:

"Why should this person follow the divine guidance and abide by the divine way of life and I do not?" He tries to get rid of such a person who complies with the divine guidance. This is because the non-practicing person sees himself small and is perceived as such by others as well when he compares himself to the one who adheres to the divine guidance. When people compare the conduct of the one who adheres to the divine guidance, and that of the non-practicing person who does not adhere to the divine guidance, they do not respect the non-practicing person. Accordingly, the non-practicing person feels belittled before the practicing person and others. The non-practicing person tries to banish the practicing one and get him out of the picture. He mocks and scorns him as Allah Glorified is He says in the verse that reads*:* "Indeed, those who committed crimes used to laugh at those who believed. [29] And when they passed by them, they would exchange derisive glances. [30] And when they returned to their followers, they would return jesting and exulting.[31] And when they saw them, they said: "Most surely these are in error." [32] But they had not been sent as keepers over them. [33]" (al-Mutaffifin: 29-33)

Do these clear verses not underline what non-practicing people in our societies would say to those who adhere to the divine guidance? Do we not hear non-practicing people mockingly say to the practicing ones, “Intercede with Allah for us”? These non-practicing people are referred to in the verse that reads: “And when they passed by them, they would exchange derisive glances. [30] And when they returned to their followers, they would return jesting and exulting.[31] And when they saw them, they said: “Most surely these are in error.” [32]” (al-Mutaffifin: 30-32)

A non-practicing person might rejoice at being able to mock the devout believer who adheres to the guidance of Allah the Exalted. Some non-practicing people might accuse a devout person of being misled and deviant. Allah the Exalted refutes this false accusation saying: “But they had not been sent as keepers over them.” (al-Mutaffifin: 33)

Allah the Exalted defends the believers who adhere to His guidance. The believers on the Day of Resurrection will laugh at disbelievers, and Allah the Exalted shall ask them: “Today those who believed are laughing at disbelievers, [34] On adorned couches, observing. [35] Have a disbelievers [not] been rewarded [this Day] for what they used to do? [36]” (al-Mutaffifin: 34-36)

Thus, the non-practicing person is duly punished. What about those who wrongfully kill the Prophets of Allah? We are entitled to ask for the reason why Allah the Exalted describes their killing of the Prophets of Allah as “without right.” Could the Prophets of Allah be rightfully killed? It is not possible that a Prophet of Allah could be ever killed rightfully? When Allah Glorified is He says “…and kill the Prophets of Allah without right.…” (Al-‘Imran: 21), this statement is intended to clarify a fact. He then continues listing the evil actions of those people who slay the Prophets of Allah without any right. He says: “…and kill those who command justice from among the people...” (Al-‘Imran: 21) They were not satisfied with killing the Prophets of Allah; rather, they also killed believers who defended their Prophet. When a Prophet of Allah is slain, those who believed in him will surely become angry and agitated at his murder.

The followers of the Prophet of Allah would be angry at his murder and if they are unable to prevent it, they will at least enjoin good and forbid evil.

However, the transgression of the murderers did not stop at that point; they even killed anyone who forbade their evil deeds and sins. If anyone should ask them why they killed the Prophets of Allah, they would have killed him as well. With regard to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him we know that his enemies attempted to assassinate him several times and this indicates the stupidity of those who planned these assassination attempts because they did not consider his status. He peace and blessing be upon him was not only a Prophet of Allah; rather, he was also a Messenger as well.

He was a Messenger of Allah, a role model for his people, and the one responsible for communicating the divine guidance and way of life to humankind at the same time. If Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him was only a Prophet of Allah, they would have been able to kill him as people had killed other Prophets of Allah in the past. Rather, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him was a Messenger sent by Allah, The Exalted. They have witnessed him communicating the divine guidance and new way of life that shattered their dreams, exposed their lies, and underlined how they altered the divine scriptures that were revealed to them.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him was a Messenger, of Allah sent with a Divine Message, guidance, and way of life. When they tried to kill him, as the previous peoples did with their Prophets of Allah, they forgot that he peace and blessing be upon him was also a Messenger of Allah. This is why Allah the Exalted says, addressing Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him in order to reassure us*:* "Oh Messenger, deliver what has been revealed to you from your Lord; and if you do it not, then you have not delivered His message, and Allah will protect you from the people; surely Allah will not guide a disbelievers." (al-Ma'ida: 67)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him has been sent with a Divine Message and protected by Allah the Exalted from his enemies. Allah the Exalted is telling us of the previous peoples who killed their Prophets in order to reassure believers, and reassure Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him and in order to underline for the enemies of the Messenger of Allah that they cannot kill him. Allah the Exalted says*:* "Say, "Then why did you kill the prophets of Allah before, if you are [indeed] believers?" (al-Baqara: 91). The verse refers to the past situation to clarify for us, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him and his enemies that killing the Prophets of Allah was possible in the past only. However, things changed and none can kill Prophet Muhammad, the final Messenger of Allah, peace and blessing be upon him. Allah the Exalted is reassuring a believers and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him that none could harm him. This is why the following verse was revealed: “And Allah will protect you from the people.” (al-Ma‘ida: 67).

Allah the Exalted denied those who wished to kill Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him any chance by saying, “Say, “Then why did you kill the prophets of Allah before, if you are [indeed] believers?” (al-Baqara: 91).

Had the matter been confined to the Prophethood, and had they not given any credence to the fact that Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him was a Messenger of Allah and had they merely denied his Message out of stubbornness, they would have said: “The killing of the Prophets of Allah did not stop at that point; we will make sure it does not.” They would have gathered all their forces and tried to kill Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessing be upon him. However, Allah the Exalted caused them to despair of it and denied them this out of His absolute omnipotence.

When Allah Glorified is He tells us of those who killed the Prophets and those who enjoined equity was that in the same context as this statement of Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessing be upon him? To whom was it addressed? It was addressed to some of the people of the Book who believed in following the example of those who killed the Prophets of Allah in the past and killed those who enjoined equity. They believed in the same thing as those who came before them, who killed the Prophets of Allah, and those who enjoined justice.

This is a reproach for those who followed the example of the killers of the Prophets of Allah and killed those who enjoined justice. It is a reproach and a rhetorical question. How could you believe in that which those who killed the Prophets of Allah believed? How can you follow people who did hideous acts? Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him had related to them the story of the Israelites who killed forty-three Prophets of Allah in one occasion! One hundred and seventy followers of these Prophets stood up to them and forbade their hideous act; they killed them as well. This is the very meaning of the verse that reads: "Those who disbelieve in the signs of Allah and kill the prophets without right and kill those who order justice from among the people - give them tidings of a painful punishment" (Al-'Imran: 21).

Why does Allah give them tidings of a painful punishment? Is the meaning of "give tidings" not to relate good and pleasant news? Why is it used in the verse as such? Glad tidings are always used to refer to good news that will bring happiness to the listener such as giving the glad tidings of Paradise to believers. It means that Allah the Exalted informs a believer of a pleasant thing and gives him the opportunity to follow the guidance in the worldly life in order to attain such a reward and glad tidings. Why are these tidings directed at the descendants of such people? We know that those who killed the Prophets of Allah and those who enjoined equity were not contemporary to the revelation of this verse. The people of the Book who were contemporary to the revelation of this verse were the descendants of those who had killed the Prophets of Allah and those who enjoined equity. Allah Glorified is He gave them tidings of a painful punishment because they might have been under the impression that what their ancestors did was right. If they thought that what their ancestors did was right, they were also meant with the tidings of a painful punishment.

The scope of such painful punishment extends to encompass them too. The question arises as to why they should be given the glad tidings of a painful punishment despite the fact that the glad tidings are generally used with good news. When a person is told of "glad tidings," his heart is ready to receive the pleasant news. As their hearts are ready to receive pleasant news and savour happiness and joy, they are informed of the painful punishment. What would happen to them? They experience a sudden painful dejection. They were prepared to receive good news, but instead were informed of their "painful punishment". Accordingly, their pain becomes more intense. This is because if Allah the Exalted forewarns them right from the start, without saying: "give them tidings," the delivery of the news would have been less painful.

Allah Glorified is He however, wanted the news to be of a startling on them similar to the verse that reads: "And if they cry for water, they shall be given water like molten brass which will scald their faces; evil the drink and ill the resting-place.” (al-Kahf: 29).

They will beg for water in the Hereafter and their calls will be answered. However, Allah the Exalted will give water like melted brass that will scald their faces! When we hear that “they will be answered,” we might think that they would be provided with fresh water to extinguish their thirst. However, the verse underlines that they will be given water like melted brass that will scald their faces! Thus will be the glad tidings for those who killed the Prophets of Allah or their followers who followed their belief of these murderers. The verse reads, “…give them tidings of a painful punishment” (Al-‘Imran: 21). The word “punishment” in the verse means torment afflicted on a living being who can feel the pain. The punishment is afflicted on the living being not the dead. Killing, on the other hand, ends the life of the conscious being; so, it is not a punishment. The punished person must remain alive so that he can feel the pain and torment. The reference to the “painful punishment” in the verse reminds us of the other verse that reads*:* “Indeed, for those who disbelieve in Our verses - We will drive them into a fire; every time their skins are roasted through, We will replace them with other skins so they may taste the punishment. Indeed, Allah is ever Exalted in Might and Wise.” (an-Nisa’: 56)

It means that Allah the Exalted will cause them to live therein eternally so that their torment would be eternal. Next, Allah the Exalted refers to,

أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ ٱلَّذِينَ حَبِطَتۡ أَعۡمَٰلُهُمۡ فِي ٱلدُّنۡيَا
وَٱلۡأٓخِرَةِ وَمَا لَهُم مِّن نَّٰصِرِينَ ٢٢

The deeds of such people will come to nothing in this world and in the next and no one will help them [22]
(The Quran, Al-’Imran: 22)

Those who disbelieved in the signs of Allah the Exalted killed His Prophets and those who enjoined equity and justice among them will be subjected to torment and their actions will be made worthless in the worldly life and the Hereafter. The same applies to whoever follows their example. The meaning of causing their actions to be worthless is that they would not yield any rewards or fruits. The sane person has a purpose or objective for all his actions; an action done without a purpose is like the aimless blow of an insane person. A sane person must know the purpose for his actions before he does them and must know the benefits such act yields and whether such benefits are the best and most lasting ones possible or not.

In the light of this criterion, the sane person judges his actions. Allah the Exalted says, "They are the ones whose deeds have become worthless in this world and the Hereafter, and for them there will be no helpers." (Al-'Imran: 22) He is informing us that a person might perform an action that outwardly seem to be good, but a believer should beware of being deceived into thinking such an action to be good. Why? This is because a good action is only credited to a person according to the level of his intention and faith in the One Who rewards action. If a person performs an action by means of which his worldly life is rectified, it is a good action. Why will the deeds of these people be worthless in this worldly life and the Hereafter? They will be worthless because their actions were not performed by a believer. The person had performed the good action for the sake of its outcome not in abidance by the command of Allah the Most High.

When a believer performs an action, he does it out of his trust in the command of Allah the Most High. Some people in the present-day may criticize Islam for not rewarding the non-Muslims for their good actions, which are beneficial to humanity. One of them might say: "Could anyone conceive that Louis Pasteur who discovered microorganisms, and the other scientist who discovered radiation, and many others are going to hellfire?" In response, we say: "Yes, they will. The divine justice of Allah the Exalted entailed it." Let us judge the matter according to the human norms. From whom a person seeks the reward for his action? He seeks it from the one for whom he performed the action. Had these scientists devoted such good actions to Allah Glorified is He? No, they had not. Rather, they did their actions for the sake of humanity and people rewarded them with immortalizing their memory and crediting them for their great discoveries; they have received other worldly rewards as well. The following Hadith applies to them. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him said: "The first to be judged on the Day of Resurrection will be a man who had died as a martyr. He will be brought forward. Allah will remind him of the favours He had bestowed upon him and the man will acknowledge them. Then He will ask him: “What did you do to express gratitude for it?”The man will reply: “I fought for Your Cause till I was martyred.” Allah will say: “You have lied. You fought so that people might call you courageous; and they have done so.” Command will then be issued about him and he will be dragged on his face and thrown into hell. Next a man who had acquired and imparted knowledge and read the Quran will be brought forward, Allah will remind him of the favours He had bestowed upon him, and the man will acknowledge them. Then He will ask him: “What did you do to express gratitude for it?’” The man will reply: ‘I acquired knowledge and taught it, and read the Quran for Your sake.” Allah will say to him: “You have lied. You acquired knowledge so that people might call you a learned (man), and you read the Quran so that they might call you a reciter, and they have done so.” Command will then be issued about him, and he will be dragged on his face and thrown into hellfire. Next a man whom Allah had made affluent and to whom Allah had given plenty of wealth, will be brought forward; Allah will remind him of the favours He had bestowed upon him and the man will acknowledge them. He will ask him: “What did you do to express gratitude for it?” The man will reply: “I did not neglect any of the ways You liked wealth to be spent liberally for Your sake.” Allah will say to him: “You have lied; you did it so that people might call you generous, and they have done so.” Command will then be issued about him and he will be dragged on his face and thrown into hellfire.”(1)

As we receive the rewards from Allah the Exalted we must ask ourselves, “Did these scientists achieve such great discoveries and accomplishments for the sake of Allah?” No they did not. The one seeks the reward for his action from the one for whose sake he does it. Allah Glorified is He did not allow their good deeds and the fruits of their labour to go lost; rather, their work yielded them fame, prestige, and admiration. Allah Glorified is He does not allow the reward of the doer’s good deeds to go lost. “Whoever desires the harvest of the Hereafter - We increase for him in his harvest. And whoever desires the harvest of this world - We give him thereof, but there is not for him in the Hereafter any share.” (ash-Shura: 20)

(1) [Muslim]

As we have previously underlined, we should try imagining the surprise of a person who performs a deed which is outwardly good, but he does not believe in the existence of Allah. The following verse applies to this case. Allah the Exalted says*:* “But those who disbelieved - their deeds are like a mirage in a lowland which a thirsty one thinks is water until, when he comes to it, he finds it is nothing but finds Allah before Him, and He will pay him in full his due; and Allah is swift in account.” (an-Nur: 39) This person shall be surprised when he discovers the existence of Allah Glorified is He and he has not thought of Him, while performing the good deed i.e. he was not in his mind when he performed the action which was superficially good. It is as though Allah the Exalted is saying to the one who performs the like of this action: “You did not do such act for My sake; receive your reward from the one for whose sake you did it.” Allah the Exalted says*:* “They are the ones whose deeds have become worthless in this world and the Hereafter, and for them there will be no helpers” (Al-‘Imran: 22). Their deeds will be worthless in this worldly life because they might perform actions which are intended to be against Islam. Allah Glorified is He would cause their deeds to be futile. He causes His religion to triumph despite the fewer and less modest equipment, and these people will have no one to help them. This means that they will have no one to help them as they would be defeated by their adversary. They will not find helpers if Allah the Exalted decrees their defeat; there is no one equal to Him. Then, Allah says,

أَلَمۡ تَرَ إِلَى ٱلَّذِينَ أُوتُواْ نَصِيبٗا مِّنَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ يُدۡعَوۡنَ إِلَىٰ كِتَٰبِ ٱللَّهِ
لِيَحۡكُمَ بَيۡنَهُمۡ ثُمَّ يَتَوَلَّىٰ فَرِيقٞ مِّنۡهُمۡ وَهُم مُّعۡرِضُونَ ٢٣

Have you considered those who were given a share of the Scripture? When they are asked to accept judgement from God’s Scripture, some of them turn their backs and walk away, all because they declare [23] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 23)

The verse opens with the question “Have you considered?” The expression in Arabic literally means “Have you not seen.” When Allah the Exalted says to

His Messenger: “Have you considered [Oh Muhammad] those who were given a share of the Scripture? When they are asked to accept judgment from the Divine Scripture, some of them turn their backs and walk away” (Al-‘Imran: 23) It is a call to a clear matter. However, sometimes the phrase “Have you not seen” is used as a reference to a past event that occurred before Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him commissioned to communicate the divine message to mankind, and which he did not witnessed. For example, Allah the Exalted says*:* “Have not you [Oh Prophet Muhammad] seen how your Lord dealt with the army of the elephant?” (al-Fil: 1)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him did not see the army of the elephant and nor did he witness this past event. When we find the Arabic expression “alam tara,” literally meaning “Have you not seen” in reference to a present event, it may be used to denote the literal meaning and refer to actual sighting and witnessing of a current event leading to certainty. However, if the expression is used in reference to a past event, it means “have you not known or considered,” because the evidence of an eyewitness is the best evidence. The verse reads, “Have you not seen”; it actually means, “Have you not known?”

A person may say, “Why does He not simply say ‘ta'lam’ (to know), instead of ‘tara’ (to see)?” This is because the most irrefutable evidence is the visible one. This indicates that Allah wishes to inform us by using ‘‘alam tara?’ (do you not see?) That is, we should deal with the piece of information which Allah tells us as though it were visible. We should regard our Lord as more trustworthy than our own eyes. The matter of which Allah informs us may not be visible to us. However, as the speaker is Allah and there is no force that can change that which Allah says, Allah speaks of future matters which have not yet occurred using the past tense. For example, Allah says, ‘The command of Allah is coming, so be not impatient for it. Exalted is He and high above what they associate with Him’. (an-Nahl: 1)

Does His saying, ‘ata amru Allah’ (Literally, ‘the command of Allah came’) go together with His saying ‘aala tast'jiluh’ (so be not impatient for it)? The Arabic words indicate that Allah’s command came, so how can the people be impatient for it? The literary meaning of the Arabic word "ata" is "came” which indicates that this command came before Allah said His Words. It should be noted that the One Who says "ata" (came) can bring it about, so it is a matter of fact and an incontestable issue because there is no force capable of changing that which Allah has willed to happen. This indicates that Allah's saying ''alam tara?' (Literally: "Do you not see?") refers to an event in the past and is intended to give information, as it is Allah's saying. If it refers to a contemporary matter, it also gives information based on seeing and witnessing.

As for Allah's saying, 'Do you not consider, [Oh Muhammad], those who were given a portion of the Book?..'. (Al-'Imran: 23), the phrase "were given" refers to a people who received Revelation of guidance from an Exalted Entity. Therefore, when the Quran refers to a Book of Allah, it uses the words "nazal" and "*anzal*a" (sent down) so that the people recognise the loftiness of the place from which the Book or guidance has descended. What does the word "nasib" mean? It means "a share or portion". For example, if twenty dinars are divided among four people, everyone will receive five dinars, which are called a "share" or a "portion" of the original sum of dinars. The word "nasib" refers to a share or portion which is allocated to a person.

Therefore, when Allah says, '…those who were given a portion of the Book?…' (Al-'Imran: 23), it draws our attention in a subtle matter to the fact that the Book of Allah, as a whole, did not remain with them; rather, a small portion of it reached them. The word "nasib" indicates that the Prophet and those who heard this saying should excuse those people because they received only a small portion of the Book of Allah.

Allah reveals this point in other verses: 'So, for their breaking of the covenant We cursed them and made their hearts hard. They distort words from their [proper] usages and have forgotten a portion of that of which they were reminded. And you will still observe deceit among them, except a few of them…' (al-Ma'ida: 13). The abandoned part of the Book was not received by those who were contemporary to Prophet Muhammad. Allah has clarified that some of them concealed part of the Book: 'Those to whom We gave the Book know him [Muhammad] as they know their own sons. But indeed, a party of them conceal the truth, while they know [it]'. (Al-'Imran: 146)

Due to the fact that some people concealed part of the Revelation, this meant that it would be concealed from those who were contemporary to Prophet

Muhammad. Some people among them were deluded due to the missing parts of the Book which was wiped from their collective memory. In addition, parts of the Book were concealed so that it was known to some people and was not known to other people. As for the parts they did not conceal, Allah says concerning them, ‘There are some who twist the Book of Allah with their tongues to make you [people] think that what they say is part of the Book of Allah when it is not; they say it is from Allah when it is not; they attribute lies to Allah and they know it’. (Al-‘Imran: 78)

Therefore, the Book sent down to them by Allah has been exposed to much transgression on their part and only a portion of it remains. This portion of the Book is that by which the Quran debates with these people. The Quran does not debate with them in relation to that which has been altered by their former rabbis and monks; rather, it debates with them concerning the protected share that they have been granted.

Allah says, ‘Do you not consider, [Oh Muhammad], those who were given a portion of the Book? They are invited to the Book of Allah that it should arbitrate between them; then a party of them turns away and they are refusing?’ (Al-‘Imran: 23). To which Divine Book does this verse refer? Does it refer to the Quran? If so, this would mean that it inevitably arbitrated between them and Prophet Muhammad. However, those who were given a portion of the Book differed with each other. Why? If the Book referred to is the Quran, does the Quran not confirm what they have?

Therefore, when they are called to confirm that which was mentioned in their Books, this implies that the Quran will arbitrate among them. What is the meaning of ‘…they are invited to the Book of Allah…’ (Al-‘Imran: 23)? The person who invited them here is Prophet Muhammad and they are the people who were invited. Allah says, ‘…those who were given a portion of the Book…’ (Al-‘Imran: 23). Have they differed over the portion that they have in their possession, or over the portion that has been lost? The difference between them is over the portion that they had in their possession so that it could be a proof that they are not trustworthy even with regards to what was revealed to them and what they had in writing. When the scholars discussed this issue, they traced it back to a certain incident: they differed over the issue of our Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) and said that he was a Jew, while others said that he was a Christian. The Quran settled the matter:'Ibrahim (Abraham) was neither a Jew nor a Christian, but he was one inclining towards truth, a Muslim [submitting to Allah]. And he was not of the polytheists'. (Al-'Imran: 67) Why? Because the words "Jew" and "Christian" appeared after the death of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) and they had to be more rational and order events according to the time in which they occurred. Therefore, over which did they differ? Did they differ in regards to Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessings be upon him? Did they differ in regards to a ruling they found in the Torah? What were they called to? They were '…invited to the Book of Allah that it should arbitrate between them…' (Al-'Imran: 23). This indicates that the words: '…out of mutual transgression…' (Al-'Imran: 19, al-Haqqa: 19) refer to a state that prevailed amongst them. When the scholars mentioned the incident in which they were called to the Book of Allah-that it should arbitrate between them-, they said that two Jews, a Man and woman from Khaybar*,* committed adultery and were both from the tribe's nobility. Those who were responsible for judging the matter according to the Torah did not want to apply Allah's ruling on this matter that was stated in the Torah: stoning. They devised a trick, which was to go to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Why then did they go to Prophet Muhammad in this regard? We consider the mere referral of the issue to Prophet Muhammad as acceptance of his judgment.

Why did they not accept from the beginning the Message brought by Prophet Muhammad? They wanted to refer it to him in order that he might benefit them with regards to their issue. Otherwise, they would not have referred this issue to Prophet Muhammad. The fact that they went to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him implies that they wanted a sentence more lenient than stoning. The two adulterers of Khaybar wanted to save themselves from the Torah's ruling of stoning, for they were from the nobility of Khaybar and because the Jews at that time made a temporal power for themselves. Therefore, the adulterers went along with the rabbis, who wished to circumvent Allah's ruling which was revealed in the Torah: stoning.

When they visited Prophet Muhammad, there was a person named An-Nu'man ibn 'Awf, and another named Bahary ibn 'Amr. They said, 'Oh Messenger of Allah, judge between these people'. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said 'Do you not have a ruling?' Then, he added, 'I defer to the Torah, which is your book'. They said, 'You have done justice to us'.

The Messenger of Allah clarified for them that Islam's ruling in respect to adultery is stoning. The remaining part of the Torah which included this ruling came as a proof on the fact that Allah revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him matters that never crossed anyone's mind. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said an oath that was mentioned in the Torah and then said, 'Which of you is most knowledgeable about the Torah?' They said it was a Man named 'Abdullah ibn Suriyyah and they brought him forward. He gave him the Torah and said, 'Read'. So, 'Abdullah ibn Suriyyah sat and read, and when he arrived at the verse in the Torah pertaining to stoning, he covered it with his hand and read something else. 'Abdullah ibn Salam was present, so he said, 'Oh Messenger of Allah, did you not see him covering the verse of the Torah with his hand and reading the following one?' Ibn Salam moved the Man's hand and read what the verse was of the Torah which the Jew had covered and which was relevant to stoning. This issue shows that the ruling of the Noble Quran is the same as that of the Torah with regards to adultery and also indicates that Allah revealed to His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him so as to knew this part of the Torah that contained the text. Then one of the Soldiers of Allah, mamely 'Abdullah ibn Salam, who had been a Jew and converted to Islam, disclosed the desire of these people to forge and falsify.

The story of 'Abdullah ibn Salam's conversion to Islam is incredible. After faith had ripened in his heart, he came to Prophet Muhammad and said, 'Allah has caused my heart to be delighted with Islam. There is no god but Allah and Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah. But before I declare my conversion to Islam, I would like you to gather the leaders of the Jews and ask them about my character because the Jews are a slanderous people known for lie, slander, and deception'. When Prophet Muhammad asked the leaders of the Jews about their opinion regarding 'Abdullah ibn Salam, they said, 'He is our master, the son of our master and our rabbi…,i,e.' They praised, commended and appreciated him extremely. Then, ''Abdullah ibn Salam said to them, ‘Now I testify that there is no god but Allah and that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah’. The leaders of the Jews then changed their minds and said the opposite of what they had said previously: ‘He is the worst of us and the son of the worst of us…, i.e.’ When they changed their praise into vilification, 'Abdullah ibn Salam said, ‘Oh Messenger of Allah, have I not told you that that they are a slanderous people? By Allah, I wanted to show you their view of me before I have converted to Islam’.

This Man, 'Abdullah ibn Salam, is the one who removed 'Abdullah ibn Suriyyah’s hand from the text of the Torah that contained the verse of the Torah on stoning and the following saying was revealed in this regard, ‘Do you not consider, [Oh Muhammad], those who were given a portion of the Book? They are invited to the Book of Allah that it should arbitrate between them; then a party of them turn away and they are refusing’. (Al-‘Imran: 23) They are the people some of whom turned away from the acceptance of the truth. Why did they turn away? Was it a general issue? Or, was the cause of this rejection the temporal power that the Jews wished to assume? The meaning of “temporal power” is that people take from the parts of religion that will provide them with sanctity which they enjoy, and then use it in other than religious matters. We said before that the cause of each act of perversion of Allah’s Guidance is transgression. It is held that some of the followers of the Torah would predict their victory over the Arabs saying, "A prophet will come from the Arabs and we will follow him and fight you with him, as 'Ad and Iram were fought”. When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came to them, they denied him. Accordingly, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He said in this regard clarifying their stance in regards to faith, ‘And those who have disbelieved say, "You are not a messenger”. Say, [Oh Muhammad], "Sufficient is Allah as a Witness between me and you and (The witness of] whoever has knowledge of the Scripture"’. (ar-Ra‘d: 43)

This means that the one who had knowledge of the Book of Allah is supposed to testify to the veracity of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him otherwise, Allah would not have said, ‘…whoever has knowledge of the Scripture…’ (ar-Ra‘d: 41). Allah says such only because those who have knowledge of the Divine Book know that Prophet Muhammad is truthful with regards to the Message, a matter which is confirmed by Allah. The reason behind the attempt of some of the Jews to deny the Message of Prophet Muhammad was the temporal power and their desire to make religious matters overly for their followers.

Every impostor who tries to fabricate any principle attempts to assume temporal power and tries to decrease the religious obligations that might contain some difficulty for people, or to make a religion which contains only light acts of worship. For example, Musaylamah, a false prophet and liar, lightened the prayer so that those who found prayer difficult would join his religion. Musaylamah also reduced the zakat, an act which created the opportunity to escape from religious obligations. Therefore, the matter that distorted the pre-Islamic religions was that some clergy applied the facilitations they found in other religions to their religion because the religious obligations of true Islam are sometimes hard and no one can fulfil them except a person with real and true faith. Therefore, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says concerning the pillar of worship-prayer, ‘Seek help with steadfastness and prayer– though this is hard indeed for anyone but the humble’. (al-Baqara: 45) And He says in another verse about prayer: ‘Order your people to pray and pray steadfastly yourself. We are not asking you to give Us provision; We provide for you and the rewards of the Hereafter belong to the devout’. (Ta Ha: 132) Allah is All Knowing and All-Wise; He is aware of the human being whom He has created and the weaknesses that may afflict his soul. He may not steadfastly pray, or he considers prayer a difficult obligation. However, the one who observes prayer steadfastly is truly devout.

Therefore, we find that every deviant person tries to lighten religious obligations and tries to make forbidden things permissible. We do not see deviant people increasing the number of impermissible things; deviant people always want to annul prohibitions. If we ask those deviant people about the reason for doing this, we will find that they do this in order to attract people to the forbidden matters which are made lawful by those deviant people. Accordingly, some of the Jews wanted to make the religion easy for their followers and some of their rabbis told the Jews not to worry about the Day of Resurrection. Then, Allah’s saying reveals that they believed falsely that Allah had made previously forbidden things permissible for them. However, Allah does permit lawful matters and forbids unlawful matters. As for Allah's saying, 'He has ordained a way for you [believers] to release you from [such] oaths — Allah is your helper: He is the All Knowing, the Wise' (at-Tahrim: 2), this verse is concerned with a specific context and means that the matters which Allah has allowed, no one should forbid them and the matters which Allah has forbidden should not be made lawful by anyone.

They desired to allow their followers to commit sins because they believed that Hellfire would only harm them for a limited number of days. However, if we scrutinize Allah's saying which quoted them, we will notice the following: It is well known that every event occurs in a certain time, with certain intensity. In relation to time, those who fabricated lies about Allah's rulings concerning the Day of Resurrection said that hellfire will be experienced for only a few days, i.e., it is not eternal punishment. Moreover, even if the torment is severe, it will only last for a few days and the human being can bear it. As for the intensity of the event, they desired to belittle it, saying that the torment is not severe; it is only a light touch. They tried to delude people in order to appease them. These rabbis said that they were the sons of Allah whom He loves. They believed that Allah selected Ya'qub (Jacob) as a prophet and he would never punish his progeny except in much as required for releasing oneself from an oath.

In regards to Ayyub (Job), Allah says: 'Take a small bunch of grass in your hand and strike [her] with that so as not to break your oath. We found him patient in adversity; an excellent servant'. (Sad: 44) When Ayyub peace be upon him swore that he would whip his wife one hundred times if he regained health, Allah wanted to release him from this vow, so He ordered him to take a small bunch of grass in his hand, or straw, consisting of one hundred stalks and hit her once lightly, in order to fulfil his vow. This was a mercy from Allah to him and his wife, who had taken care of him during his illness. Ayyub (Job) was a grateful servant to Allah. It was as if a single blow was equivalent to one hundred blows. In this way, he was released from the vow.

Some of the children of Israel said that that the progeny of the children of Ya'qub (Jacob) will not be tormented by Allah except in so much as is required for releasing oneself from an oath. They said this to attract the people to embrace their religion, in which punishment in the Hereafter will only be a touch of the fire that will last only a few days. They said this, claiming that the sons of Ya'qub (Jacob) are Allah's children and His beloved people and that Allah promised Ya'qub (Jacob) that He would not punish his children except in so much as required for releasing oneself from an oath. Certainly, this is clear fabrication of Allah's Religion and Guidance. They turned away from Allah's Guidance in disobedience. This clarifies what Allah says: 'All because they declare, "the Fire will only touch us for a limited number of days". The lies they have invented have led them astray in their own religion'. (Al-'Imran: 15)

They turned away in aversion from Allah's rule. They believed that the fire would not touch them, except for a limited number of days. We must understand the meaning of the Arabic words gharrahum (led them astray) and ghurur (going astray). They mean "the desire for something that is unrealistic and cannot be obtained." When someone is described as maghrur (going astray), this means that this person is following a path that will not lead him to the desired goal. Therefore, ghurur (going astray) is the desire for something unrealistic and unobtainable. Accordingly, Allah describes Satan as 'the deluder': 'People! Allah's promise is true, so do not let the present life deceive you. Do not let the Deceiver deceive you about Allah: Satan is your enemy—so treat him as an enemy—and invites his followers only to enter the blazing fire'. (Fatir: 5-6)

Satan is the one who beautifies some things for people and urges them to wish them to happen, but when these things occur, no benefit will be gained from them. Satan has beautified them and so their yield is not worthy. Allah Glorified is He says, concerning this world, 'Bear in mind that the present life is just a game, a diversion, an attraction, a cause of boasting among you, of rivalry in wealth and children. It is like plants that spring up after the rain: their growth at first delights the sowers, but then you see them wither away, turn yellow, and become stubble. There is terrible punishment in the next life, as well as forgiveness and approval from Allah; the life of this world is only an illusory pleasure'. (al-Hadid: 20)

A Man who has no experience is described by the Arabic word "ghir" (fool), meaning that he does things without any experience, so he does not benefit from them and they are inappropriate. Accordingly, all the words that share the root of the word "Al-ghurur" (going astray) mean "aspiring for something unrealistic and unobtainable" and therefore Allah calls Satan "Al-Gharur" or "the deceiver" because he influences humans to desire unrealistic and unobtainable things. Satan will disavow himself on the Day of Resurrection from those who followed him and will accuse them of foolishness: 'When everything has been decided, Satan will say, "Allah gave you a true promise. I, too, made promises but they were false ones. I had no power over you except to call you and you responded to my call, so do not blame me; blame yourselves. I cannot help you, nor can you help me. I reject the way you associated me with Allah before". A bitter torment awaits such wrongdoers'. (Ibrahim: 22)

The Arabic word "sultan" means "power that urges a person to do a certain action". There are two kinds of power: the power of persuasive evidence when a person is urged to do something, while being convinced and the other type is that of coercion which means forcing a person to do a certain act. Therefore, Satan declares to his followers on the Day of Resurrection that he had no power over them, i.e., he had no persuasive evidence to convince them to commit sins, and nor did he have any power to compel them to do such. Rather, they were on the brink of committing sin and he called them and they responded to him. Satan adds, addressing his followers, '…I cannot help you, nor can you help me…' (Ibrahim: 22). In other words, Satan confirms that he will not call on any of his followers to save him. The Arabic word "yasrukh" here means "to call on someone for refuge and help." Therefore, Satan says he will not save anyone from Allah's punishment and no one will save him from Allah's punishment.

In this way, some of the people of the Book were deluded and ascribed fabricated statements to Allah that did not come from Him and believed in their fabrications. If only their delusion had not been with regards to religion! For delusions in non-religious affairs can be tolerated, but delusion with regards to religious affairs is grave. This is because religion is not confined to a limited period of time; it is permanent because it represents guidance sent from Allah to mankind. If a person experiences failure in any aspect of life due to delusion, his failure will be confined to that particular aspect and will not last for the rest of his worldly life. However, delusion with regards to religion causes permanent loss because such a person has not followed Allah's guidance. Moreover, he will experience loss and torment in the Hereafter.

ذَٰلِكَ بِأَنَّهُمْ قَالُوا۟ لَن تَمَسَّنَا ٱلنَّارُ إِلَّآ أَيَّامًا مَّعْدُودَٰتٍ ۖ
وَغَرَّهُمْ فِى دِينِهِم مَّا كَانُوا۟ يَفْتَرُونَ ﴿٢٤﴾

'The Fire will only touch us for a limited number of days.'
The lies they have invented have led them astray in their own religion [24] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 24)

"Lying" means "telling fabrications deliberately". Allah clarifies the meaning for them, saying that they rejected His rulings and Judgment which are mentioned in His Book claiming that the fire will not touch them except for a limited number of days which represented - as claimed - the number of the days in which they worshipped the Calf. They also said that they were Allah's children and beloved people. They made these fabrications and lies on purpose. If this is their case in the worldly life, what will be their status when Allah gathers them on a day in which there is no doubt? In this respect, Allah says,

فَكَيْفَ إِذَا جَمَعْنَٰهُمْ لِيَوْمٍ لَّا رَيْبَ فِيهِ وَوُفِّيَتْ كُلُّ
نَفْسٍ مَّا كَسَبَتْ وَهُمْ لَا يُظْلَمُونَ ﴿٢٥﴾

How will they fare when We gather them together for a Day of which there is no doubt, when every soul will be paid in full for what it has done, and they will not be wronged? [25]
(The Quran, Al-'Imran: 25)

Their lies will be disclosed on the Day of Resurrection, a day wherein Allah will expose all the people who lie, cheat, and make false claims. Allah says that they commit all these misdeeds in the worldly life, in which He has given them free will to do whatever they want, while knowing that He will give good rewards to those who follow His obligations and will punish those who deviate from His obligations. How will they behave when Allah will deprive them of free will on the Day of Resurrection?

In this worldly life, Allah gives people free will and choices between alternatives and has created them in a manner that enables them to control their limbs. Some of them use their limbs in a way that pleases Allah, while others use these limbs in a way that displeases Him. A person’s limbs are subservient to his will, which allows him to choose between different alternatives. The limbs that obey those who deviate from the Path of Allah in the worldly life will disobey them on the Day of Resurrection because the limbs will not be subject to the human will and their nature will change: ‘…on the Day when their own tongues, hands, and feet will testify against them about what they have done. On that Day, Allah will pay them their just due in full– and they will realise that Allah is the Truth that makes everything clear’. (an-Nur: 25)

On the Day of Resurrection, the tongue that is used to announce disbelief will witness against a disbeliever, the hand that is used to commit acts of disobedience will witness against its owner and the skin will also testify. In the worldly life, limbs are subject to the people, but they commit sins unwillingly and so Allah says*:* ‘How will they fare when We gather them together for a Day of which there is no doubt, when every soul will be paid in full for what it has done and they will not be wronged?’ (Al-‘Imran: 25) What will their status be on the day when Allah will gather them in order to hold them to account? It should be taken into consideration that this day will certainly come because there is evidence that confirms that it will come.

Despite their enmity towards Allah, He will not wrong them; rather, He will judge them justly:

قُلِ ٱللَّهُمَّ مَٰلِكَ ٱلْمُلْكِ تُؤْتِي ٱلْمُلْكَ مَن تَشَآءُ وَتَنزِعُ
ٱلْمُلْكَ مِمَّن تَشَآءُ وَتُعِزُّ مَن تَشَآءُ وَتُذِلُّ مَن تَشَآءُ ۖ
بِيَدِكَ ٱلْخَيْرُ ۖ إِنَّكَ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَيْءٍ قَدِيرٌ ٢٦

Say, ‘God, holder of all control, You give control to whoever You will and remove it from whoever You will; You elevate whoever You will and humble whoever You will. All that is good lies in Your hand: You have power over everything [26] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 26)

There is a difference between the Arabic words mulk and milk. The latter means “a person's ownership of some things, such as his clothes, books...etc”.

But when we refer to possessing a person who possesses properties, we use the word "mulk". If the properties possessed are apparent to us, we refer to them as "'alam al-mulk", but when we refer to the possession of unseen properties, we call it "alam al-malakut". Therefore, the words under discussion are milk, mulk and malakut. When Allah Glorified and Exalted is He revealed Himself to Ibrahim (Abraham), the elect of Allah and revealed to him apparent and unseen matters, He said, 'In this way We showed Ibrahim (Abraham) [Allah's] mighty dominion over the heavens and the earth so that he might be a firm believer'. (Al-'Imran: 75)

This means that Allah Glorified and Exalted is He wanted Ibrahim (Abraham) to witness the malakut (dominion) of the heavens and the earth, i.e., everything both apparent and unseen to people. The following are the levels of possession: milk refers to the case when a person owns his properties, but the owning of a person who owns properties is referred to as mulk. Every human being owns some properties and the ownership of all those who possess properties returns to One Owner: Allah. Ownership with regards to human beings refers to the case when a person possesses some properties. It also applies to a person whom Allah gives authority over people and causes to become a king.

As for the divine realm, we see that the One Who possesses every owner and king is Allah Glorified and Exalted is He. No one believes that a person can possess anything in this world without Allah's Will. Every person possesses things according to Allah's Will. If the people go astray, it is inevitable that Allah will place a wicked ruler in authority over them because virtuous people may not excel in chastising people. Allah says, 'In this way, We make some evildoers have power over others through their misdeeds'. (al-An'am: 129)

Allah Glorified is He intends to reveal that virtuous people may spare themselves the trouble of taking revenge on the evildoers, as He gives a worse tyrant authority over the evildoers. Allah takes revenge for the virtuous people without letting them engage in committing misdeeds. Therefore, Allah says: 'In this way, We make some evildoers have power over others through their misdeeds'. (al-An'am: 129)

There is a well-known saying: "Allah gives oppressors authority over other oppressors". If those who were oppressed could gain authority over their oppressors, they would not treat them as harshly as oppressors would treat each other. Allah gives oppressors authority over oppressors and spares benevolent people the trouble of taking revenge from their oppressors. Therefore, there are the words malik, mulk, and above all-Malik Al-mulk. Allah has not said here that He is Malik Al-mulk (King of all dominion), because if we consider the matter of ownership well, we will find that there is no true owner except Allah.

'Say, "Allah, holder of all control"…' (Al-'Imran: 26) He is in full control of His dominion. No one should imagine that anyone can have authority over Allah's creatures against His Will. However, when people disobey Him, He causes an oppressive ruler to rule them. Allah Glorified is He says in a Qudsi Hadith (direct revelation from Allah in the Prophet Muhammad's words): Prophet Muhammad said, 'Allah Glorified and Exalted is He will roll up the heavens on the Day of Resurrection and then take them in His Right Hand and say, "I am the King! Where are the tyrants? Where are the arrogant people?" Then, He will roll up the Earth in His Left Hand and say: "I am the King! Where are the tyrants? Where are the arrogant people?"'

The believer should not imagine that anyone can take sovereignty from Allah. He gives sovereignty to those who will chastise some people. If the ruler disciplines people oppressively, Allah will send to him someone who will oppress him. Allah may cause the person who has been treated oppressively by this ruler to see him oppressed. This noble verse confirms that Allah Alone is the Lord of all dominion. Allah Glorified is He orders His Prophet, Muhammad, saying: "Say, 'Allah, holder of all control'…" (Al-'Imran: 26). The word "Allahumma" (Oh, Allah) is itself a linguistic marvel. The Quran was revealed in Arabic and the Arabs of that time were eloquent in speech, oratory, and rhetoric. Allah willed to give the word "Allah" a unique distinction in the Arabic language.

Arabic has a grammatical rule stating that it is not correct to refer to a noun with a definite article using the Arabic word article "Ya". The Arabs do not say, "Ya Al-rajul" (Oh, Man!), but they say, "Ya ayyuha Al-rajul" instead. However, the language that Allah has facilitated for His servants has this divine name distinct in terms of sanctity (Allah), so people can say, "Ya Allah" (Oh, Allah). This holy expression is distinct, even with regards to its pronunciation.

This fact was not clear to the Arabs from among the disbelievers of Quraysh, although they were eloquent. This means that Allah makes this holy word distinct, compelling the disbelievers to say along with the believers, "Ya Allah" (Oh, Allah).

As for the rest of the nouns which were preceded by definite articles, it is not possible to precede them with "Ya", saying for example, "Ya Al-Rajul" or "Ya Al-'Abbas", but we should say, "Ya ayyuha Al-rajul" or "Ya ayyuha Al-'abbas". Even when calling the Prophet, we do not say, "Ya Al-Naby,” instead we must say "Ya ayuha Al-Naby". However, when calling upon Allah, we say "Ya Allah" (Oh, Allah), a distinct name to which Allah draws our attention, clarifying that it is specific to Him alone. In addition, no word is prefixed by the Arabic letter "Ta'" to make an oath, except the holy name Allah, as we say "tallahi" (by Allah), but this Arabic letter never precedes any other name to make an oath. For example, "ta-Zayd" and "ta-‘Amr" are impossible to find in classical Arabic.

The Arabic letter "Ta" is not used for making an oath except with the Divine Name. In addition, there is no proper noun in Arabic with which the vocative "Ya" can be replaced by the Arabic letter "Mim", except the Divine Name. We say "Allahumma"; this indicates that the name itself has the distinct features of the One holding it. ‘Say: “Oh Allah!..’”. (Al-‘Imran: 26) The removal of the vocative letter shows us that Allah is the Only One Who is called without a vocative letter. Some dialects combine the "Ya" and the "Mim,” as in the poem:

If a calamity ever befalls me, I call Ya Allahum Ya Allahumma (Oh Allah! Oh Allah!).

This indicates the distinction pertaining to the One Who is most distinct.

‘Say: “…holder of all control”…’ (Al-‘Imran: 26). A person may ask, "Why does Allah not say "Malik Al-mulk" (King of all dominion) here?” We must be aware that a day will come when no one will possess anything but Allah. Therefore, He will be the Only Possessor and He says: ‘He is Exalted in rank, the Lord of the Throne. He sends Revelations with His teachings to whichever of His servants He will, in order to warn of the Day of Meeting, the Day when they will come out and nothing about them will be concealed from Allah. Who has control today? Allah, the One, the All Powerful'. (Ghafir: 15-16) Allah's saying, 'Say: "…holder of all control"…' (Al-'Imran: 26) clarifies that Allah's ownership is eternal, omnipotent, mighty and confirmed. If Allah had described Himself as the "Malik Al-mulk" (King of all dominion) here, it would have meant that some people would hold ownership alongside Him; rather, He alone is Lord of all dominion. Allah is Lord of all dominion, as He may grant it to whom He wills and take it from whom he wills. This meaning comes after the establishment of clear reasoning and after some of the people of the Book abstained from applying Allah's rule when they were called to it. Some of them obstinately turned away from Allah's rule. They justified this by claiming that they were Allah's children and beloved people and that the fire would not touch them, except for a limited number of days.

Out of Allah's kindness, He gave His servants choices: either to follow Allah's rule, or to follow one's vain desire. However, they made the wrong choice and followed their vain desire. Consequently, Allah informed them of the day that will come, a day on which no one will have any power or choice. The right of making a choice exists in this worldly life, so people must make the right choices in light of Allah's guidance.

In this respect, there is an example which the prophetic biography stated: On the Day of the Battle of the Confederates, all the enemies of Da`wah (the call to submit to Allah in Islam) gathered together and the Jews plotted and vowed dissension among themselves. Then, Prophet Muhammad wanted to dig a trench around Medina, upon Salman Al-Faresi's advice. It is worth mentioning that a trench is a large hole in the ground which is dug up to impede passing. The fighters knew that a horse can leap a certain distance while digging the trench, the believers tried to make it wider than a horse's leap. Prophet Muhammad's wise leadership should be taken into consideration; when Salman Al-Faresi suggested that the trench should be dug- and it seems that he got the idea from his homeland, a land of disbelievers- Prophet Muhammad accepted the idea and the Muslims carried it out.

Not everything the disbelievers did was rejected by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; rather, he put into practice any useful action, whether it was done by disbelievers or not. Prophet Muhammad felt that such digging would be arduous because of the rocky and hard nature of the land in some areas. Therefore, he allocated a piece of land amounting to forty cubits long to each group of ten companions. In this way, Prophet Muhammad allotted work and responsibility and did not leave it up to each group for fear that they might depend too much on each other.

Assigning responsibility means that every group knows the size of the task that it will carry out, along with the other groups. A person may ask, "Why did not Prophet Muhammad allocate responsibilities to every individual?" The reason is that Prophet Muhammad's insight and good Management made him aware of the fact that the Companions who would dig the trench were not all of equal strength. Therefore, he wanted every weak person to be supported by nine companions.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not make the matter open, but he specified responsibilities for his companions. He did not specify this responsibility for each individual in order that the strong would help the weak. Prophet Muhammad veiled the weakness of some companions with their brothers’ strength. If a weak person finds himself in a group of ten brothers, carrying things and digging together, he will feel a sense of love and comradery towards them and the strong will aid the weak.

'Amr ibn 'Awf belonged to the group of ten Companions, among whom was Salman Al-Faresi. When they came to dig, they encountered a piece of land called "Al-ka'ud" (insurmountable) which was a piece of land that was very hard and could not be dug up easily, while digging the earth, a digger might find the land soft and easy to dig, but if he encountered a hard patch of land impossible to dig with his spade, it was said that the land was insurmountable. When 'Amr ibn 'Awf, Salman Al-Faresi, Al-Mughirah and others encountered this rocky and insurmountable piece of land, they said to Salman, "Go and tell Prophet Muhammad about our problem”. We learn from this situation the lesson that when someone is given a responsibility and encounters a problem preventing him from carrying it out, he must refer it to the one who assigned the responsibility to him.

Salman Al-Faresi went to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who accompanied him to the place and struck the rocky land with the spade. Upon doing so, sparks flew up due to the strength of the strike of the iron against the rock. Prophet Muhammad exclaimed, 'Allah is the Greatest! The palaces of Basra in the Levant will be conquered'. Then, he struck the rock again and said, 'Allah is the Greatest! The palaces of Al-Hamra' in Byzantium will be conquered'. He struck the rock a third time and said, 'Allah is the Greatest! The palaces of Sana'a in Yemen will be conquered!' It seems that every time he struck the land, Allah showed him one of the places Islam would conquer. When these statements reached the enemies of Prophet Muhammad, they said to the Companions, 'Muhammad gives you a reason to hope for conquest of the palaces of Sana'a in Yemen, Al-Hamra in Byzantium and Basra, while you are not even able to meet us in battle'. Following this incident, Allah revealed the verse, 'Say, "Allah, holder of all control, You give control to whomever You will and remove it from whomever You will…"' (Al-'Imran: 26).

The matter is intention on the part of the believers, as they should have the intention to do a good deed, as much as they can. If they do so, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He will help them. Allah Glorified is He is the One who gives control and who removed control from the disbelieving rulers of Persia, Byzantium and Sana'a and gave it to Muhammad, the Messenger of Allah and his companions. He also removed it from Quraysh and the Jews of Medina, when they desired it. Allah's saying: 'Say: "…and remove it from whomever You will…"' (Al-'Imran: 26) makes us wonder: what does the Arabic word "naz'" (meaning "remove") mean here? It means "plucking out by force." Kings usually desire to cling on to their thrones because some of those who hold power view it as a privilege without paying attention to responsibility, hard work, or concern for human rights. They forget to ask themselves about how they benefit people. They do not pay attention to the necessity of fearing Allah with regards to the people's rights and exerting every possible effort to protect human rights.

There are rulers who are avid for power, so this implies that they regard it is a privilege, not a burden. In this regard, we should consider what 'Umar ibn

Al-Khattab said, when the people said to him, ‘If we lose you – and we hope not to lose you – we will appoint 'Abdullah ibn ‘Umar, as he is a very pious person. ‘Umar ibn Al-Khattab said, ‘It is enough for the family of Al-Khattab that one Man from amongst them should be asked concerning the ummah of Muhammad’. He said this because ruling in Islam is hardship and toil.

Allah says, ‘Say: “…and remove it from whomever You will…”’ (Al-‘Imran: 26) to draw our attention to those who cling on to authority and so Allah seizes it from them. A believer should consider the nations that were very prosperous and powerful and then power was removed from their rulers for the simplest causes, all because it was the Will of the Supreme Creator Whose will cannot be overturned. Allah either takes power from this kind of ruler, or takes them from their position of power. We see that some rulers attempt to keep their power so that it becomes difficult for anyone to dethrone them easily, but Allah removes power from them whenever He wills.

Then, Allah says*:* ‘Say: “…You elevate whomever You will and humble whomever You will…”’ (Al-‘Imran: 26). Power is not restricted only to rulers, but there are some people surrounding every ruler known as "shadow rulers.” This means that they also hold power and authority, but not in apparent manner, and these shadow rulers are often a source of evil. They hide behind the king’s authority so they do whatever they want and others follow their orders. When power is seized from them, those who were oppressed will doubtlessly be elevated by Allah, while the oppressors will be abased by Allah. Therefore, Allah’s saying ‘Say: “…You give control to whomever You will and remove it from whomever You will…”’ (Al-‘Imran: 26) is followed by ‘Say: “…You elevate whomever You will and humble whomever You will…”’ (Al-‘Imran: 26). Rulers are surrounded by those who enjoy their power and influence, yet when the authority of this ruler is removed, these people appear suddenly. This happens in every age.

‘Say: “…You elevate whomever You will and humble whomever You will. All that is good lies in Your hand…”’ (Al-‘Imran: 26) We notice here that people regard the blessing of dominion and power as good and the removal of power and authority is bad. Let me say to them then: the removal of power is bad for those from whom it is taken, but it is good for whomever it is granted to. It could also be good for a person from whom it has been removed because sometimes Allah has removed power from him to lessen the burden of his oppression. If the deposed ruler is wise, he will accept this and say, "Allah wants to remove my burden so that I may repent".

Therefore, if individual and general cases are considered, we will find that the blessing of power and the honour and elevation that follow it, as well as the removal of power and the abasement that follows it, are all a source of ultimate goodness. Therefore, Allah says here, 'Say: "…All that is good lies in Your hand…"' (Al-'Imran: 26). If all people consider matters carefully, they will find that Allah is the One Who gives and takes power and the One Who elevates and abases, causing goodness in all cases. Therefore, He says, 'Say: "…All that is good lies in Your hand. You have power over everything…"' (Al-'Imran: 26)

Giving power requires preparation and logical causes. Sometimes, gaining power takes place by means of military or political coups and the removal of power also needs the same effort. Allah clarifies this meaning, saying that it is not a difficult matter for His absolute, omnipotent power, for He does not handle things by work or endeavour; He merely says "Be" and it is so. Then, Allah brings evidence from the His signs in the universe which prove the truthfulness of His saying, 'Say: "…You have power over everything…"' (Al-'Imran: 26). Allah says,

تُولِجُ ٱلَّيۡلَ فِي ٱلنَّهَارِ وَتُولِجُ ٱلنَّهَارَ فِي ٱلَّيۡلِۖ وَتُخۡرِجُ ٱلۡحَيَّ مِنَ
ٱلۡمَيِّتِ وَتُخۡرِجُ ٱلۡمَيِّتَ مِنَ ٱلۡحَيِّۖ وَتَرۡزُقُ مَن تَشَآءُ بِغَيۡرِ حِسَابٖ ٢٧

You merge night into day and day into night; You bring the living out of the dead and the dead out of the living; You provide limitlessly for whoever You will' [27] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 27)

Allah says that this is a type of phenomena which comes frequently to you: the night and day, and life and death. We are all aware of the phenomena of night and day because they are miraculous signs. Allah says, 'Say: "…You merge night into day and day into night…"' (Al-'Imran: 27). Allah did not fix the hours of night and day, but He Glorified and Exalted is He willed that the night may sometimes last five hours more than the day and that the day may exceed the number of hours of the night by five hours. The question is: Do these five hours decrease from the night or the day suddenly? Does the day become seven hours after it has been twelve hours long suddenly? No; this change happens gradually, in a manner that is unnoticed. There is a type of motion called "clockwork motion.” When we examine a clock’s movement, we see that it depends on several cogs, each of which has a moment when it stops, and when it stops, we must wind it again so it continues to work. If we examine the minute hand carefully, we will be able to notice this. There is a moment of rest between the movements of the minute hand from one minute to another. This type of movement is called "clockwork motion.” There is another type of motion called "streamlined motion,” where movement exists at all times, which is the case of human, plant and animal growth.

The new-born child does not grow from morning to evening in a noticeable manner. He could grow only as much as a millimetre during the whole day. The infant does not have a constant weight or height for twenty-four hours and then suddenly grows at the end of the day. Rather, the infant’s daily growth is spread out over the whole day. This process requires extreme precision in the distribution of the elements of the event over the elements of time, an action which shows the magnificent power of creation, which the human being will be forever incapable of replicating.

I said once that if a person looks at his newborn child and keeps an eye on him constantly, he will not notice his child’s growth at all. However, if a person is apart from his child for a month or several months and returns, he will be able to see very clearly the total growth which his child has experienced during his absence. If a person who sows a certain plant watches its growth, he will never be able to notice the growth of that plant because the parts grow in a manner which the human being cannot notice.

We should be aware that anything that grows can also shrink and the human being cannot notice that directly, either. There are other examples in life, from which we will consider the following example: when scientists began to photograph the earth from satellites, the first photograph of New York City was an image of an undistinguished speck. When the scientists enlarged this image, the details emerged, such as streets, etc. Where were the streets in this tiny speck? The streets were shrunk in the image in a manner that was impossible for the human senses to discern and so it was necessary to enlarge the image in order for a person to see it. Distant things appear small to us, but when we approach them, we see them as larger.

Therefore, Allah's saying, 'Say: "…You merge night into day and day into night…"' (Al-'Imran: 27) alerts human attention to the fact that night and day do not have defined boundaries splitting them equally. Rather, by His Omnipotent Power, Allah merges night into day and merges day into night. The meaning of the Arabic word "tulij" is "merge or cause to enter into". For example, the mue'dhdhin calls for the Maghrib (sunset) Prayer on a given day at five o'clock and calls for it on another day at seven o'clock. This does not happen suddenly and sunset does not change from five o'clock to seven o'clock from one day suddenly to the next, but this happens gradually and smoothly. We take lessons from these facts.

Oh Servant of Allah, when you see a king ruling over a stable civilisation, you should know that subtle events which cannot be noticed by the eye eat away at that dominion until the day arrives when it will come to an end. Accordingly, civilizations collapse after reaching the peak of advancement, while their populations were attaining great potentials and overwhelming capabilities because the causes of collapse have been eating away at these civilisations from inside.

Allah draws our attention to the magnificence of His Omnipotence and the accuracy and precision of His creation by the example of night and day: 'Say: "…You merge night into day and day into night…"' (Al-'Imran: 27). Then, Allah sets another example, saying, 'Say: "…You bring the living out of the dead and the dead out of the living…"' (Al-'Imran: 27). This is absolute Omnipotent Power, without the employment of means.

If we pause for consideration here, we will see how we have been guided by the discovery of some of the secrets of the universe which Allah has revealed to some of His servants.

Science has arrived at the fact that everything has its own unique life - we see that many processes occur inside the leaves of the plant and each one has its unique life. In addition, some interactions occur inside each atom and each one has its own unique life. "Interactions" imply movement and it is well-known that movement manifests life essentially; there is a difference between how life is perceived by ordinary people and how it is perceived by educated people. At the time the Quran was revealed, an ordinary person did not know that there is life in a sperm and in a seed; only scientists and knowledgeable people knew such things. Ordinary people did not know that the seed has a visible life and has unseen growth. In addition, they did not know that there is a difference between a living object and an object that can be alive.

For example, the date pits that we take and plant to grow palm trees remain simply as pits until someone takes them and places them in the right environment to enable palm trees to grow from them.

The date pits are potentially alive. When we consider grains of soil, we are not able to plant them just anywhere to produce something from them. However, grains of soil have certain energy. Scientists say that the energy contained in the heads of the sticks of a single box of matches is sufficient to enable an electric train to circle the world for several years.

Scientists are aware of these facts, but ordinary people do not know them. When ordinary people listen to Allah's saying, 'Say: "…You bring the living out of the dead and the dead out of the living…"' (Al-'Imran: 27), they would say that an example of this is date pits, for they are aware that palm trees grow from date pits. However, scientists have performed research and discovered that there is life within the date pits and identified how they grow. Scientists know that everything in existence has a life that suits its purpose. Life is not only apparent movement and obvious growth; rather, there is life in everything.

Ordinary people can find clear examples of the fact that Allah brings the living out of the dead and the dead out of the living. As for scientists, they are aware of Allah's Omnipotence through their awareness of the fact that everything has life. If we take some of the soil in which seeds are planted and place it in isolation, nothing will come from it. This is what scientists describe as "dead in the first degree." As for pits that can be taken and placed in this soil, scientists term it "dead in the second degree."

When we move the dead in the first degree to be used as a means of planting something dead in the second degree, the results of this indicate the life present in both the soil and the pits. The Quran handles this issue with great precision because when the Quran mentions things that intellects might be curious about, it handles them in such a way that all intellects accept including the elite and the ordinary people. This is because the Quran deals with any issue using comprehensive language that is acceptable to all. Then, the human intellect discovers new details about the matter.

For example, the Quran did not say to us that the atom has energy and life within it, as well as charges that produce a certain type of power. Rather, it handled the atom and other matters with the elucidation of divine omnipotence, especially that those things were not associated with any controversy regarding any ruling or guidance. If the human being had been aware that the atom contained life within it at the time of the Revelation of the Quran, this information would not add anything to him. Moreover, if someone proved that atoms do not contain life within them, this would not affect the rulings of the religion. If we consider the Quran intelligently and understand the significance of its words, we will find that the word "life" has an opposite, which is "death". Allah Glorified is He has not used the word "death" in several verset, replacing it with "to perish", such as His saying: '…so that those who were to perish might perish after seeing a clear proof and so that those who were to live might live after seeing a clear proof– Allah is All-hearing and All-seeing.' (al-An'am: 42).

The word "perish" is used here as the opposite of living. The word "death' is not used here because the Creator is aware of His servants and knows that they differ concerning the issue of death: some of them define a person who does not move, sense, or grow as "dead." However, this dead body has a form of life which suits it such as the life existing inside the atoms, the grain of sand, or that of any dead thing. In this way, we understand from the previous verse that the opposite of living is perishing. Allah Glorified is He says the following about the Hereafter, to inform us of what will occur on the Day of Resurrection: '…Everything will perish, except His Face' (al-Qasas: 88). Allah has excluded His Face or Divine Entity from the things that will perish. Since everything will perish, this means that everything is alive even if we are not aware of its life. Therefore, true life is present in all things in the manner that suits them: sometimes you recognise it and sometimes not.

Accordingly, Allah's saying, 'Say: "…You bring the living out of the dead and the dead out of the living…"' (Al-'Imran: 27) can be understood according to how ordinary people will perceive it, or to how the elite (the scientists) will perceive it. This is an apparent matter that can be perceived by seeing the night merging into day and day merging into night. In the Arabic language, a Man's closest friends are termed his "walijah" (confidants) which is derived from the Arabic word which Allah uses when referring to the night that merges into the day and the day which merges into the night. This is because friends are closely interlocked together in friendship; therefore, if any person wants to know the innermost character of any other person, he should meet his friends, who closely mix with him.

In this way, the concept of night's merging into the day and day's merging into the night is completely clear and the issue of life and death is handled with expressions that both ordinary people and the elite can understand. If these phenomena reveal part of Allah's Omnipotence, a person can never find it far-fetched that Allah also has the power to give power to whom He wills, to elevate who He wills, to take power from who He wills and to abase who He wills. Evidence has come from the signs inherent in the universe, which we witness every day, first-hand.

'Say: "Allah, holder of all control, You give control to whomever You will and remove it from whomever You will; You elevate whoever You will and humble whoever You will. All that is good lies in Your hand: You have power over everything."' (Al-'Imran: 26) Allah is the One Who has established all these things in His Universe, which are all good even if their goodness is not apparent to some people.

When a person sees that his son has a medical problem, he takes him quickly to the doctor and asks him to do all the necessary measures to restore the health of his son even if it be a surgery. The father is doing what is good for his son, though the treatment might cause the child to feel pain. If this is true in regards to the relationship between two created beings, what about the Supreme Creator who does what He wills in His creation giving power and removing it, and elevating and abasing people? All of these things must lead to goodness. Allah's signs bear witness that He is able to do what He wills; the next verse (Quranic verse) states it as such: 'Say: "…You merge night into day and day into night; You bring the living out of the dead and the dead out of the living; You provide for whomever You will beyond reckoning…"' (Al-'Imran: 27).

If a person is aware of the night merging into the day, or the bringing of the living out of the dead, he must be aware of His sustenance, for all human beings have an inevitable relationship with their sustenance and so Allah mentions this clear reality: 'Say: "…You provide for whomever You will beyond reckoning…"' (Al-'Imran: 27). When a person hears the Arabic word "hisab" (reckoning), he will know, as we have said previously, that this word means "a clarification of that which is for him and that which is against him."

When Allah says, 'Say: "…You provide for whomever You will beyond reckoning…"' (Al-'Imran: 27) we know that "reckoning" necessitates the presence of someone who reckons, someone who is reckoned and something to be reckoned for. When Allah says, 'Say: "…You provide for whomever You will beyond reckoning…"' (Al-'Imran: 27), we must consider: from whom and for whom? From where does this sustenance come and where does it go? It comes from Allah and goes wherever He decrees, as He is the Sustainer and Allah whom no one can hold to account. He is the One Who reckons us all, has no partner, and does whatever He wills.

Allah performs reckoning for mankind and He does not only give them sustenance according to how hard they work; rather, sometimes He provides them with sustenance that is greater than what their efforts have earned. Allah may grant you something that you have not expected because "reckoning" entails holding an account of the matters that a person expects and plans for; for example, when a farmer reckons the yield of the land which he sows, or a craftsman expects a certain income from his craft. This is considered reckoning, but sometimes a person finds that Allah has given him sustenance, without any reckoning, or he may expect to receive something, but he does not get it.

For example, it is said that a certain country announced that it had sown enough wheat to suffice the entire world, but when the crop ripened, a storm came and destroyed it and the country had to import wheat from abroad.

Those who had announced that they would feed the people ended up being fed by the people.

This proves the veracity of Allah’s saying: ‘…beyond all reckoning’ (Al-‘Imran: 27). Allah does not count the people's work to provide them with sustenance equal to it, but He sometimes gives them more than what the effort they have exerted deserves.

We see our brothers whom Allah has blessed with oil wealth which sprang without any effort from them. Allah wished to show people His omnipotent power and that sustenance is in His Hand. We see people pointing to the oil-bearing regions and accusing the people there of laziness and we find that Allah has harnessed to them active people in order to work for them. When Allah blessed the Arab regions with oil, the other countries which regard themselves "developed" have become in need of them, this is provision without reckoning.

These reflections confirm to a believer Allah’s Absolute Omnipotence. He has created the means and has not left people to control matters; He has given them to the human being to make use of, though He may not grant him sustenance in accordance with his efforts. Allah may provide people by other means, for which they did not reckon. One who considers his affairs and the affairs of those he knows, will find that this matter prevails throughout creation: Allah grants sustenance beyond all reckoning; He does not give people their sustenance according to the efforts they exert. He gives without reckoning on the part of the human being because the scales by which a person measures could be nullified by incidents which he does not expect.

Therefore, ‘Say: “…You provide for whomever You will beyond reckoning…”’ (Al-‘Imran: 27) means that Allah’s Absolute Power over sustenance is beyond all reckoning from any authority higher than His autority that might question Him. Moreover, He gives sustenance to His creatures, often more than the effort they have exerted would earn. He also may give people sustenance that they do not expect; everything is under Allah’s control and He is the Lord of all dominion Who gives to whom He wills, elevates whom He wills, causes day to merge into night and grants sustenance to whom He wills, beyond all reckoning.

Therefore, the foolish person is the one who gives allegiance to someone who has no authority and abandons this Supreme Authority (Allah).

Let us consider this issue of faith: since all these matters are under Allah's control, people should not give allegiance to His foes because everything is in His hand. Allah says, 'You who believe: do not take for your intimates such outsiders as spare no effort to ruin you and want to see you suffer. Their hatred is evident from their mouths, but what their hearts conceal is far worse. We have made Our Revelations clear for you; will you not use your reason?' (Al-'Imran: 118)

Allah commands us not to give allegiance except to Him. If a person makes reckoning for everything, he will not give allegiance to anything except the Possessor of all of these things. He should beware of relying on an enemy to the Omnipotent Power which is in control of everything in existence, and of relying on Allah's enemies by taking allies from amongst them. If he does so, he is not of sound mind. Allah says,

لَّا يَتَّخِذِ ٱلْمُؤْمِنُونَ ٱلْكَٰفِرِينَ أَوْلِيَآءَ مِن دُونِ ٱلْمُؤْمِنِينَ ۖ وَمَن
يَفْعَلْ ذَٰلِكَ فَلَيْسَ مِنَ ٱللَّهِ فِى شَىْءٍ إِلَّآ أَن تَتَّقُوا۟ مِنْهُمْ تُقَىٰةً ۗ
وَيُحَذِّرُكُمُ ٱللَّهُ نَفْسَهُۥ ۗ وَإِلَى ٱللَّهِ ٱلْمَصِيرُ ﴿٢٨﴾

The believers should not make the disbelievers their allies rather than other believers – anyone who does such a thing will isolate himself completely from God – except when you need to protect yourselves from them. God warns you to beware of Him: the Final Return is to God [28]
(The Quran, Al-'Imran: 28)

A person will not take a warring disbeliever as an ally unless he sees signs of strength in this disbeliever and weakness in himself. The Arabic word "wali" means "ally". When we say, "Allah, Huwa Al-Wali" (Allah is the ally), we use the word in its broadest sense. However, when we use it to refer to people, we use it in the limited and relative sense. Allah says, 'Allah is the ally of those who believe: He brings them out of the depths of darkness and into the light…' (al-Baqara: 257). Allah is an "ally" in the broadest sense of the word. He also says, 'But for those who are on Allah's side, there is no fear, nor shall they grieve' (Yunus: 62).

The singular of "awlia' Allah" (Allah's allies) is "waly Allah" (Allah's ally); a believer is Allah's ally. Allah says, 'In that situation, the only protection is that of Allah, the True Allah: He gives the best rewards and the best outcome' (al-Anfal: 44). We notice here that allegiance is sometimes attributed to Allah and sometimes to Allah's servants. It is understood and well known that Allah is the ally of a believer, but how can a believer be an ally to Allah? We can understand the matter in this way: Allah is the helper of His believing servants, so He is the ally of those who believe, i.e., their helper and supporter. The allies of Allah are those who support Allah and so He helps them. Allah Glorified is He says*:*

'You who believe! If you support Allah, He will help you and make you stand firm' (Muhammad: 7). Is Allah not able to take revenge on those who fight against Muslims, all at once and cause them to perish? However, Allah says, 'Fight them: Allah will punish them at your hands, He will disgrace them, He will help you to conquer them, He will heal the believers' feelings' (at-Tawba: 14). If Allah were to fight them, His fighting would be a hidden affair, and they might say that this is a natural phenomenon. Therefore, He caused the believers to fight the warring disbelievers who considered them weak. So, sometimes the word "wali" means "helper" and sometimes it means "the one who is helped" because if a person supports Allah and He becomes this person's ally, this means that Allah is the Helper and this person is the one who is helped.

Allah Glorified is He wants His religion to prevail by His servants' belief in Him; otherwise, He would have compelled all humanity to obey Him by His Omnipotent Power, as no one can escape Allah's Power. It is incumbent on a person to think deeply and know that his life from birth to death is under Allah*'s* control: 'The creation of the heavens and earth is greater by far than the creation of mankind, though most people do not know it' (Ghafir: 57). Nothing escapes the Creator's Will. Allah handles the affairs of the motion of the heavens and the earth with the strength of His Might and Absolute power.

Nothing escapes His Hand. As for humanity, He wishes for the people to believe in Him and love Him, but faith is left up to a person's choice. Certainly, Allah can make all people believers, but He wishes to see who will believe in Him, while having the option of not believing.

The subduing of things shows Allah's absolute power and the human being's free will shows their love of Allah, who wants us to see His power and come to His Path (Islam, submission to Allah) out of love. Therefore, He says: 'The believers should not make the disbelievers their allies rather than other believers…' (Al-'Imran: 28). The meaning of this verse is that if the warring disbelievers appear to be allies to the believers, they will try to make them feel at ease with them. Perhaps the warring disbelievers may approach the believers stealthily and with subtlety and false affection. Since they are warring disbelievers, they do not love the believers, as there is no meeting between faith and warring disbelief. Therefore, Allah says, '…anyone who does such a thing will isolate himself completely from Allah…' (Al-'Imran: 28).

Whoever takes the warring disbelievers as allies isolates himself from Allah because he thinks that these warring disbelievers can help him. Therefore, Allah warns us and clarifies the matter for the believers saying that they should not be deceived by the power of the warring disbelievers and take them as allies. A believer should not say that he has nothing else to do, because Allah wants him to do his best. Therefore, He says, 'Prepare whatever forces you [believers] can muster, including war-horses, to frighten off Allah's enemies and yours and warn others unknown to you but known to Allah. Whatever you give in Allah's cause will be repaid to you in full and you will not be wronged' (al-An'am: 60).

Allah did not ask the believers to prepare that by which they will defeat the warring disbelievers. He says, 'Prepare whatever forces you [believers] can muster…' (al-Anfal: 60). A believer must exert every possible effort and trust Allah. Therefore, there are certain things that the intellect might question, but Allah reassures the believers concerning them. He tells the believers not to panic and not to think that the large numbers of the warring disbelievers can defeat them and not to say that "there is nothing we can do." Allah has taught us what will protect us from this situation and so He says, '…I shall put terror into the hearts of the [warring] disbelievers– strike above their necks and strike all their fingertips!...’ (al-Anfal: 12)

When Allah puts terror into the hearts of these warring disbelievers, what could they do, however large their numbers and preparations? Is this not the end of the matter? Terror is one of Allah’s soldiers. The believers must not take allies from among the warring disbelievers, in preference to the believers so that the saying of Allah may not apply to him: ‘…I shall put terror into the hearts of the [warring] disbelievers– strike above their necks and strike all their fingertips…’ (Al-‘Imran: 28). Allah then gives an exception to this: ‘…except when you need to protect yourselves from them. Allah warns you to beware of Him: the Final Return is to Allah.’ (Al-‘Imran: 28)

Allah Glorified and Exalted is He gives guidance to the human being, who is one of His creatures and He knows all his instincts, emotions and thoughts and that circumstances may be greater than he can bear. Therefore, Allah treats him as a creature with limited abilities. In another verse, Allah gives another exception, saying: ‘…if anyone does so on such a day– unless manoeuvring to fight or to join a fighting group– he incurs the wrath of Allah and Hell will be his home, a wretched destination!’ (al-An‘am: 16)

Allah says in this regard, ‘The believers should not make the (warring) disbelievers their allies, rather than other believers– anyone who does such a thing will isolate himself completely from Allah– except when you need to protect yourselves from them…’ (Al-‘Imran: 28).

Tuqah means “protection”. They may be extremely powerful and it might be unlikely that a believer could gain victory over the warring disbelievers. In this case, a believer may seek protection from their evil by seeming to be allied with them. Concealment is a concession from Allah. It is related that Musaylamah, a false prophet and liar, brought two Muslims and said to one of them: ‘Do you testify that Muhammad is a Messenger of Allah?’ One believer said, ‘Yes’. Musaylamah said: ‘Do you testify that I am a Messenger of Allah?’ The believer said, ‘Yes’. Musaylamah brought the other Muslim and said, ‘Do you testify that Muhammad is a Messenger of Allah?’ The second believer said, ‘Yes’. Musaylamah said, ‘Do you testify that I am a Messenger of Allah?’ The second believer said, ‘I am deaf’. How could a believer answer him by claiming to be deaf? Musaylamah knew he was feigning deafness, so he took him and killed him. The matter was raised before Prophet Muhammad. What did he say? He peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘As for the one who was killed, he said the truth openly, so glad tidings for him. As for the other person, he made use of Allah’s concession (to conceal his faith). So, concealment is a concession and announcing the truth is a virtuous act’. 'Ammar ibn Yasir made use of this concession, whereas Bilal ibn Rabah chose to bear the hardship.

Let us consider the wisdom of legislation in this matter. Every principle of goodness came to counter a Manifestation of evil. This principle required guidance from a wiser being and demanded firm conviction and strong will and the guidance needed to be borne. In order that it could remain for humanity, strong will was required so that a believer could face warring adversaries. If Allah had not allowed concealment with His saying, ‘…with the exception of those who are forced to say they do not believe, although their hearts remain firm in faith…’ (an-Nahl: 106), we would truly have to sacrifice for Allah’s Religion by giving our lives easily in Allah’s cause. But if every believer took this stance, then who would carry Allah’s knowledge to others? For this reason, Allah legislated resorting to concealment in order that some believers remain to hold the Message. He established sacrifice for the sake of the faith, and concealment for the sake of preserving the faith. Allah brought two matters: standing in the face of falsehood and achieving martyrdom for His cause, and concealment of one’s religion to protect some people so that His Guidance would not be lost if a tyrant came to put an end to all the believers. Therefore, Allah legislated that which would preserve self-sacrifice for some believers and preserve others to carry His Religion. Allah desired that His guidance would fill the entire earth and be passed down through generations. If He had not allowed concealment with His saying, ‘…with the exception of those who are forced to say they do not believe, although their hearts remain firm in faith, those who reject Allah after believing in Him and open their hearts to disbelief will have the wrath of Allah upon them and a grievous punishment awaiting them’ (an-Nahl: 106).

Accordingly, there is no allegiance between a believer and a warring disbelieving people except if he fears something from them because Allah warns us to beware of Him, saying: ‘…Allah warns you to beware of Him:

the Final Return is to Allah' (Al-'Imran: 28). A believer should beware of following the way that the disbelievers present to him pretending to make use of concealment. A believer should know that the reason for permitting disguising one's faith is to protect the guidance and to save oneself for the purpose of preserving the path of faith. If a person follows this guidance in this regard, he is really considered a true believer. Allah says, '…Allah warns you to beware of Him: the Final Return is to Allah' (Al-'Imran: 28).

Allah orders the believers not to conceal their faith in order to attain something that they desire, however. Allah set certain limits for this matter, saying, '…with the exception of those who are forced to say they do not believe, although their hearts remain firm in faith, those who reject Allah after believing in Him and open their hearts to disbelief, will have the wrath of Allah upon them and a grievous punishment awaiting them' (an-Nahl: 106). The main objective should always be Allah's cause, which is why the believers should beware of fooling themselves. Then, Allah says,

قُلْ إِن تُخْفُوا۟ مَا فِى صُدُورِكُمْ أَوْ تُبْدُوهُ يَعْلَمْهُ ٱللَّهُ ۗ وَيَعْلَمُ مَا فِى
ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَمَا فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَىْءٍ قَدِيرٌ ﴿٢٩﴾

Say [Prophet], 'God knows every- thing that is in your hearts, whether you conceal or reveal it; He knows everything in the heavens and earth; God has power over all things' [29] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 29)

This is because a disbelieving person may misuse concealment, but a believer never does this because the warning in this verse is clear. A person may say, "Concealing that which is in the heart is known to Allah. As for revealing that which is in the heart, people also know it. So why is this saying mentioned?" This beautiful verse was revealed because someone may imagine that because Allah is unseen, He only knows the unseen and not the apparent. However, Allah is not veiled from one place by another or from one time by another. A believer should beware of imagining that because Allah is unseen and He only knows the unseen. Allah knows both the unseen and that which is apparent.

Then, Allah says,

يَوْمَ تَجِدُ كُلُّ نَفْسٍ مَّا عَمِلَتْ مِنْ خَيْرٍ مُّحْضَرًا وَمَا عَمِلَتْ مِن
سُوٓءٍ تَوَدُّ لَوْ أَنَّ بَيْنَهَا وَبَيْنَهُۥٓ أَمَدًۢا بَعِيدًا ۗ وَيُحَذِّرُكُمُ ٱللَّهُ
نَفْسَهُۥ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ رَءُوفٌۢ بِٱلْعِبَادِ ﴿٣٠﴾

On the Day when every soul finds all the good it has done present before it, it will wish all the bad it has done to be far, far away. God warns you to beware of Him, but God is compassionate towards His servants [30]
(The Quran, Al-'Imran: 30)

An action is a phenomenon which has a beginning and an end. How, then, can a person come on the Day of Resurrection and find his previous actions? There is no doubt that he will find the recompense for his actions. Perhaps Allah will enable some later people to discover the secrets of existence and make more additions to the explanation of this verse. It is now possible to make a recording of an action and after a time, a person may show another person that which he did and said, recorded in a way that can be viewed later. If we humans can do this with our capabilities, what about Allah's Capabilities? There is no doubt that they are beyond ours, as He knows everything in the heart and in the heavens and earth. Allah's wisdom encompasses the entire universe, as He says, 'He has the keys to the unseen: no one knows them but Him. He knows all that is in the land and sea. No leaf falls without His knowledge, nor is there a single grain in the darkness of the earth, or anything, fresh or withered, that is not written in a clear Record'. (al-An'am: 59)

Allah ends this verse with His saying, '…Allah has power over all things' (Al-'Imran: 29). He knows the people's heedlessness and so warns them of the absoluteness of His Power, as He says in the previous verse '…You have power over all things' (Al-'Imran: 26). We are Allah's creatures and He is the Highest Power, able to do anything and will bring to all people a record of their reckoning on the Day of Resurrection: 'As for him who is given his Record in his right hand, he will say: "Here, read my Record!"' (al-Haqqa: 19). So, bearing this point in mind, one should remember the Day he will be brought to justice and find "…all the good that he has done…" (Al-'Imran: 30), being provided with the reward of his actions. As for the evil deed a person has done, he will wish that there was a great distance between him and his evil and will say to himself: “If only it had not been so!”

Allah Most High and Glorified is He says*:* ‘…And Allah warns you against Himself (His Punishment) and Allah is full of Kindness to (His) servants’ (Al-‘Imran: 30). Here Allah repeats the warning so that we are mindful of His Absolute Power. But at the same time, He is also the Allah of Mercy and He is Compassionate and Merciful. Then, Allah says*:*

قُلْ إِن كُنتُمْ تُحِبُّونَ ٱللَّهَ فَٱتَّبِعُونِى يُحْبِبْكُمُ ٱللَّهُ وَيَغْفِرْ
لَكُمْ ذُنُوبَكُمْ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ غَفُورٌ رَّحِيمٌ ﴿٣١﴾

Say, ‘If you love God, follow me, and God will love you and forgive you your sins; God is most forgiving, most merciful’ [31] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 31)

We must take note that the word “Say” in the Quran indicates that what follows is a Message that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is passing on from his Lord; it is indeed a Message of command directed to those concerned with it (i.e. mankind, the believers, etc.). But some people whose hearts are deviated from the Truth might say, “It was possible for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to simply say ‘If you (really) love Allah, follow me and Allah will love you…’ without the word “Say”. To such people, we say: if Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had done that, he would have thus been delivering a Message without properly carrying out the command itself (from his Lord) Why? Because the command is in the word “Say” and the subject of command here is “If you (really) love Allah, follow me”. So, this makes it clear to us that in any situation of divine command from Allah preceded with the word “Say”, what was expected of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was to deliver both the command from Allah and the Message itself (i.e. the subject of command), which gives an indication that whatever he (Allah’s Messenger peace and blessings be upon him conveyed is a direct Message from Allah.

Some people claim that the word “Say” should be removed from the Quran so that instead of saying, for instance, ‘Say: He is Allah, the One and Only’ (al-Ikhlas: 1), we should simply say “He is Allah, the One and Only”. To those people, we say: This claim reveals your desire to see Prophet Muhammad delivering only what is commanded and enjoined, detached from the wording and expression of command itself.

Allah Glorified is He says*:* ‘Say [Oh Muhammad to mankind]: “If you (really) love Allah, follow me and Allah will love you”’. (Al-‘Imran: 31) What does this Quranic verse indicate? No doubt, some people claim that they love Allah, but they do not follow Allah in what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him brought. It is as though they draw a distinction between love for Allah and abidance by His commandments. In truth, they should realise that Allah Glorified is He is the Mighty Creator and Sustainer and this is a blessing which Man should be grateful for. And at the same time, He has favoured Man (His creature) with responsibility, the benefit of which all returns to him (as a creature of Allah), not to Allah, the Source of responsibility, and this is another blessing.

Allah Glorified is He is not in need of anything or of anyone. By making us responsible, Allah wants us to follow the laws that make life better for human beings. We have mentioned before the example of tools made by humans. As we know, any tool designed by an engineer is accompanied by a pamphlet or a brochure that gives information about the product and its safe use. The pamphlet serves as a guide, with instructions of “do’s and don’ts”, for the safe use of the tool.

So, as we know, having a list of rules for the safe use of a particular tool and distributing them in a small booklet is for the benefit of those who use the tool. This is with regards to Man-made products, so what about Almighty Allah’s design, and creation? The aspect of Allah’s Blessing for Man is reflected in His creation, sustenance and His choice to make Man religiously responsible. So, Allah thus made Man’s responsibility a means for realizing the wisdom behind Allah’s Creation and His Sustenance. If Allah had not fashioned our life on a certain system, guarded by laws and regulations, the whole aspect of living would have been corrupted. One of Allah’s perfect blessings upon His creatures is that He laid down for us a system of religious responsibility. So, if Man, Allah’s servant, with his recognition of Allah’s blessings through His Creation and Sustenance, has realised His true worth, still more, he should also recognise Allah's favour upon him, by accepting the tasks Allah laid on him. Not only that, but he should also love his Lord, thanking Him for the fact that He charged him with religious responsibilities.

You might be saying you love Allah, but you must be fully aware of the difference between you loving Allah and Allah loving you. Religious responsibilities might seem too arduous for you and for this you may tend to show recalcitrance or neglect. But listen: it is not enough for you to love Allah only from the aspect of recognizing the blessings of His Creation and Sustenance because by so doing, you are neglecting the other blessing which is inherent in the concept of Allah's commissioning you with tasks and making you responsible. This is also for your own good! Mankind must realise that rising to the expectations and discharging the tasks ordained by Allah is for his own good, so he should not neglect them.

It is possible to find people who love Allah just for being their Creator and Sustainer, but they should know that Allah's love for His servants emanates from a servant's perpetual recognition of Allah's blessing of making him responsible and commissioning him with deeds. Allah loves a servant who understands the value of that blessing.

We, as humans, often notice a person loving another person, but with no reciprocal love from the latter; it is a one-sided love. The poet Al-Mutanabbi says: You are my beloved, but I pray against being a lover who is not loved. As you can see, Al-Mutanabbi detested loving someone who does not reciprocate one's love, so he sought Allah's refuge from it. To those who claim that they love Allah just because they recognize Allah's blessings of creation and sustenance, but they are too proud to bring themselves to live up to their responsibility, we say: You have refused a portion of the aspect of love of Allah. Whatever Allah ordains is not for His own good; He ordains it for Man's own good and benefit because the act of Allah's charging His servants with responsibilities goes side-by-side with the purpose of Allah's Creation and Sustenance. Why? Responsibility,in Islamic Law, involves having a proper perception of Allah's creation and sustenance and love, as we know, makes a heart glow. And when we apply that to Man's relationship with Allah, the more the heart gets attached to Allah with love, the more we see its glowing and beautiful effects on everything, reflected in compassion, mercy and satisfaction.

Also, with regards to Man's heart when it is filled with love for Allah, we see its effect in the way he shows obedience to Allah. Love which makes the heart grow and glow is within the realm of Man's capacity. What this means is that everybody can show love. However, Allah requires that, along with what love does to the heart; its effects must be transparent on the surface (being reflected in actions). Man must seek to understand Allah's commandments and live up to them -out of obedience and love for Allah- to be rewarded with Allah's love and love's effects of mercy, compassion and pleasure in one's life.

The love that is required by Allah differs from our narrow understanding of love. The reason I say this is that I want us to know that Allah Glorified is He is the Upholder of justice and does not command unfairly; He does not command anything that is beyond Man's capacity to do. The type of love required, with regards to religious responsibility, is an intellectual one. Let me quickly explain the difference between intellectual love and emotional love: Emotional love is controlled by nature, not by laws. I cannot order you, "You must love so-and-so emotionally!" because emotional love is not subject to laws. As we know, it is natural for Man to love his son even if he is not that brilliant, or he is disabled; such love is emotional; just as distaste a person naturally has towards a child who is not brilliant; such dislike exists according to logic or intellect, not emotion.

For instance, when a person shows love to his neighbour's child for being brilliant and even to his enemy's child, that love is not emotional love, but rather, it is intellectual love. One does not naturally show emotional love to one's neighbour's child or enemy's child the way one does to his son. It is your son whom you naturally pamper with gifts or presents, not your neighbour's son. All this shows the difference between intellectual love and emotional love.

Responsibility, in the context of Islamic law, is always something possible to attain and it is controlled by intellectual love. Within the context of such love, a person might ask himself: "What would my life be like if I had not embraced this religion? Would I survive in life without Allah's mercy and the blessings of this religion He generously gave us and sent to us with His Noble Messenger?” Such discourse is controlled by intellect, not emotion and it is emanated from intellectual love.

Such love might grow into emotional love, but that which is required to fulfil Allah’s commands is intellectual love, not emotional. For this reason, we must consider what was narrated from ‘Umar ibn-Khattab Allah be pleased with him that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘None of you will have [perfect] faith until he loves me more than his love for his father, his children and all mankind’. Prophet Muhammad’s Companion, ‘Umar may Allah be pleased with him, paused at this point, and said to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him: “Is it possible that I could love you more than I love myself? I love you already more than my wealth and my child… but myself? How come? I do not really get this.”

Here we see a perfect example of honesty, in the religious context, from ‘Umar ibn Al-Khattab may Allah be pleased with him. Then Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him repeated it a second time and a third time and at this point, the Companion ‘Umar may Allah be pleased with him realised that it had become a religious responsibility. That is an instance of a love which is easily attainable and this is intellectual love, not emotional love.

Then, ‘Umar said: ‘Now, Oh Messenger of Allah?’ The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him replied ‘Now, Oh ‘Umar’, i.e. it is now time you have your faith completed. So, from this we understand how Prophet Muhammad’s Companion ‘Umar may Allah be pleased with him understood the meaning of this love which is an intellectual love.

Let us give an example, so this issue does not become an obstacle to hearts or minds. With regards to taking a bitter medicine, a person asks himself: “Do I have to love that medicine or not?” So, it is clear that it is a mandatory love we have for bitter pills; it is love by mind, not by heart.

So, what we love with our mind is something we know is good for us, something beneficial, even if we dislike it. When the true worth of something becomes clear to you, you love it and that love sinks into your heart. So, the love required for religious responsibility is intellectual love which then often develops into emotional love and this is the meaning of what Allah Glorified is He says here: 'Say: "…If you (really) love Allah, follow me and Allah will love you…"'. (Al-'Imran: 31) This love is not a mere claim. When someone claims he loves a person, everything connected with that person will be loved as well, in such a way that his love for that person spreads. Did the poet not say: 'And whatever my beloved may do, it is ok (I have done it)? So, in the same context, if you love Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him follow him by rising up to meet all religious requirements.

Let us take note of the two phrases here: "follow me" and "listen to me". What is the difference between them? The word "follow" here means when one takes a person as a leading example, in his manners and conduct. So, by saying you love Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him it requires you to observe what he peace and blessings be upon him used to do and to do your best to do the same. But if you are merely claiming to love him and you do not follow the example of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him this is insincere love. The proof of the love you claim is that you follow Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. If we truly follow Prophet Muhammad, then we should perceive all the aspects of Allah's Commandments as a blessing and we should be accepting and obeying them, without any hesitation eventhough they might seem difficult and arduous.

This will earn us Allah's love, rewarding our sense of putting Allah first and our choice to go through hardships in obeying His Commands. Understanding this Quranic verse leads us to realise that Allah is alerting us. It is as if He is saying to us, "You love Allah because of His blessings of creation and sustenance, but you have stopped short of your religious responsibilities because they are difficult for you."

Let us consider responsibility: Is it for the benefit of the Allah, the One Who commands it, or is it for the benefit of those who receive it? It is surely for the benefit of the one being addressed by Allah's Command; it is for the sake of those who are religiously responsible, in the eyes of Islamic Law. In this way, we must include "responsibility" among Allah's blessings. So, these blessings are creation, sustenance, and responsibility. If you love Allah for His creation and sustenance, you must also love Him for His enjoining responsibility to you. The proof of sincere love is a servant’s fulfilling of his responsibilities. Since you express your sincere emotion in loving Allah, He will surely love you and we all know that our love for Allah is not of any consequence in the scheme of things; it is Allah’s love for you that matters.

The words of Allah Glorified is He which He taught His Messenger (Muhammad) to convey to mankind are: ‘Say: “…follow me and Allah will love you…”’. (Al-‘Imran: 31) This means that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who was sent by Allah, has conveyed everything that Allah revealed, without concealing anything, so no one can put a boundary between Allah’s Messenger and Allah Glorified is He. The mission of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was to deliver everything that Allah revealed to him.

Then, Allah says, ‘Say: “…and forgive you of your sins….”’ (Al-‘Imran: 31) The point here is: In the phrase “…and forgive you,…” we see something similar to what is known in man-made laws called “retroactive law”. So, if somebody does not know the impact of Allah’s love for us and for our choice to follow the instructions of Allah’s Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him he should still know that it is his responsibility to immediately begin following the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him and fulfilling his religious responsibilities. In doing so, Allah will forgive him for all that he has done wrong. But which sins does Allah forgive here? They are those sins which made some people turn away from obeying Allah’s Messenger, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. So, he peace and blessings be upon him came with divine commandments regarding this matter.

Thus, it is clear to us that, considering His Supreme Justice, Allah Glorified is He does not punish any of His servants for a previous sin, as long as he has agreed to abide by his religious duties henceforth. Having received the Message from Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him creates an obligation upon people to use their brains in comprehending the Message he conveyed to them. But I have to stress that religious responsibility follows commandments, i.e, once Allah’s Message has been delivered, it becomes binding on people to follow. In this context, it has already been delivered. What follows is that Allah forgives sins committed before the Message was conveyed. Then Allah Glorified is He says*:* 'Say: … and Allah is Oft-Forgiving, Most Merciful….' (Al-'Imran: 31) We know that mercy and grace are both from Allah. After this, Allah Glorified is He says*:*

قُلْ أَطِيعُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ وَٱلرَّسُولَ ۖ فَإِن تَوَلَّوْا۟ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَا يُحِبُّ ٱلْكَٰفِرِينَ ﴿٣٢﴾

Say, 'Obey God and the Messenger,' but if they turn away, [know that] God does not love those who ignore [His commands] [32] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 32)

I have said this before: when it comes to Allah's Command for obedience, it only occurs in the Quran in three forms. Sometimes, Allah Glorified is He says, "Obey Allah and His Messenger," as mentioned here in this Quranic verse which we are now discussing and trying to reflect on. We notice here that Allah did not repeat the command of obedience (as was the case in some other verses), but He used it only once, saying: "Obey." And if someone asks, "Who should be obeyed?" the answer is: both Allah and His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him.

So, the words of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him while conveying Allah's Message, '…follow me. Allah will love you….' (Al-'Imran: 31) mean that showing obedience to Allah's Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is part of obeying Allah. It is also important to note here that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not order us to obey him; rather, he ordered us to obey Allah, hence Allah did not repeat the command of obedience. Allah used it once, giving an indication that it' is for both, Allah and His Messenger. In Arabic, when Allah commands his servants to "obey Allah," it is linked with "obey His Messenger" peace and blessings be upon him by the coordinating conjunction "wa," meaning "and."

Allah Glorified is He says*:* 'Say: "Obey Allah and obey the Messenger [Muhammad]". If they turn away, then he is responsible only for what he is charged with. If you obey him, you will be rightly guided. The Messenger is responsible only for delivering the Message clearly'. (an-Nur: 54)

Allah Glorified is He repeats the command to obey three times: once, it is a command to obey Allah, then, it is a command to obey Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the third time, Allah Glorified is He says*:* ‘Oh you who believe! Obey Allah and obey Prophet Muhammad, The Messenger and those of you (Muslims) who are in authority. (And) if you differ in anything amongst yourselves, refer it to Allah and His Messenger if you believe in Allah and in the Last Day. That is better and more suitable for final determination’. (an-Nisa’: 59)

What exactly is the concept of “command” to obey, as mentioned in the above verse? It implies obedience in different forms of responsibilities. The rulings that the believers are required to obey are sometimes commandments which have come from Allah, or which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as confirmed with his words and deeds. If a believer obeys these commands, he is obeying Allah and the Messenger together. Sometimes, the ruling comes from Allah in a general form and the Messenger specifies it, such as the command from Allah: ‘And establish prayers and (ensure) the payment of zakat and accomplish (absolute) obedience to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him so that you may be granted mercy’. (an-Nur: 56)

None of us could have known how many prayers there are in a day, or the number of cycles in each prayer, or the manner of their performance, without Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him having specified the matter for us for every prayer. So, while a believer obeys Allah’s Command in general matters, he also obeys Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in specifics. We must be aware that there are two types of obedience: firstly, obedience to Allah; secondly, obedience to the Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him When the command is one, the obedience is for both Allah and the Messenger because it is a single command.

As for it when a general commandment comes from Allah, the details and explanations are left for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as part of his mission from Allah. A believer obeys Allah in regards to the general aspects of His Divine Command such as the prayer and its establishment, and obeys Prophet Muhammad in regards to the details of the prayer and the manner of its performance. Sometimes, there are some instances when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was given higher authorization from Allah to explain some important details about religion and so it is as if Allah tells His Messenger, Muhammad, that he has the authority to articulate on the affair and this is also explained by Allah Glorified is He when he says, '…And whatever the Messenger [Muhammad] gives you, take it; and whatever he forbids you, abstain from it…". (al-Hashr: 7)

Thus, Allah Glorified is He left it up to Prophet Muhammad to establish the legislation necessary to make the lives of the believers righteous. He gave him general authorization to do so. In that context, with Allah giving Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him such general authorization, it becomes imperative for the believers to show obedience to Prophet Muhammad in everything that he says even if Allah did not say it explicitly.

For example, we do not find evidence in the Quran that the dawn (Fajr) prayer is comprised of two rak'as (cycles), but Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the one who specified the details of the prayer to us, so we know that the dawn prayer (Fajr) is of two raka's (cycles). The same applies to the other prayers: the midday prayer (Zhuhr) is four, just like the afternoon prayer ('Asr), the sunset prayer (Maghrib) is three and the night prayer is four raka's (cycles). The evidence is in the specification given by Prophet Muhammad, on which Allah Glorified is He has made clear to us how we ought to respond to that, as He says: '…and whatever the Messenger gives you, take it; and whatever he forbids you, abstain from it….' (al-Hashr: 7)

This is the evidence from the Noble Quran. Thus, the command for obedience occurs in the Quran in three forms. Firstly: if the "obedience" is for both Allah and His Messenger, then the conjunction "and" is used here to link "the Messenger (Muhammad)" with Allah Glorified is He. Secondly: Obedience to Allah in a general matter and obedience to Allah's Messenger, Muhammad, with regards to the details, as Allah Glorified is He has made clear in the following: 'Say: "…Obey Allah and obey the Messenger…."' Thirdly: The issue on which there was no specific ruling from Allah, and so the matter was left for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to legislate in line with what Allah Glorified is He says: '…And whatever the Messenger [Muhammad] gives you, take it; and whatever he forbids you, abstain from it….' (al-Hashr: 7) This is pertaining to showing obedience to Allah's Messenger, Prophet Muhammad.

Then with regards to the issue of obeying those who have been entrusted with authority, as Allah Glorified is He says*:* 'Oh you who believe! Obey Allah and obey Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and those of you (Muslims) who are in authority. (And) if you differ in anything amongst yourselves, refer it to Allah and His Messenger, if you believe in Allah and in the Last Day. That is better and more suitable for final determination'. (an-Nisa': 59)

As we see, Allah Glorified is He did not put the command of showing obedience to rulers and people in authority in a way that will make it look like it is being mixed with the command of showing obedience to Allah and His Messenger, Prophet Muhammad. He did not make it look like a single act of obedience; rather, He mentioned the issue of "obeying those in authority" in the Quranic verse in which He made a distinction between obedience to Allah and obedience to His Messenger, Prophet Muhammad. Thus, Allah is making it clear that obedience to those in authority is part and parcel of showing obedience to the Messenger. Why? It is because there is no inherent required obedience to those in authority, unlike Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who commands a very special and inherent obedience. As for obedience to those in authority, it takes its significance and merit from obedience to Allah and His Messenger; there is no obedience to those in authority in a matter in which there is no obedience to Allah and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Allah Glorified is He says*:* 'Say: "Obey Allah and His Messenger". And if they turn back – verily, Allah does not love those who reject the Faith"'. (Al-'Imran: 32) In this verse, Allah Glorified is He instructs His Messenger to address those who claim that they love Allah, in the way that believers earn Allah's love, so that they can reap benefits from such love and thus the benefits extends to mankind. Allah's love is greater than anything mankind could offer. So, there is no doubt that the actual form of obeying Allah and His Messenger emanates directly from following the instructions of Prophet Muhammad and meeting our religious responsibilities.

This is the best way for people to express their love for Allah and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him And then Allah says, "…if they turn back", i.e. if they do not listen to you, Oh Muhammad and do not follow you, they will then be regarded as disbelievers and may Allah save us from that. This is in line with how Allah Glorified is He described such people: '…And if they turn back – verily, Allah does not love those who reject the Faith'. (Al-'Imran: 32) There is no graver abomination than this.

The phrase "turn back" gives an indication of renouncing Allah's Command and rejecting it after being exposed to it. So, due to laziness, they fail to respect Allah's Decree and honour their religious obligations. Rather, they disdain Allah's Divine Decree. For this reason, I have said and I still say that those who disobey Allah's Command should beware of making a distinction between accepting what is considered a binding rule and bringing oneself to follow the rule and carry it out; they are one in the same.

Beware, Oh Muslim, of denying a rule that you are unable to bring yourself to follow. If you deny it, you take yourself out of the sphere of Islam into the sphere of disbelief and we seek Allah's refuge from that. You must abide by and believe in Allah's ruling and in case you fall short, you should say: "I believe it is Allah's rule and there is no doubt, but to err is human and I cannot control myself." This failing to obey Allah's Command will make you just a sinner and not a disbeliever.

We have seen Allah Glorified is He explain to us the roots of faith with His Words, 'Allah bears witness that none has the right to be worshipped but He and the angels and those having knowledge (also give this witness); (He is always) maintaining His creation with justice. None has the right to be worshipped but He, the All-Mighty, the All-Wise'. (Al-'Imran: 18) We then see also how Allah gave the believers the glad tidings that He would grant them dominion of faith (i.e. He would grant them authority in this world, based on their true faith), and that He has the Supreme power to do that and among the signs of His Absolute Power is that He enters night into day and day into night and brings life from the dead and death from the living. Not only that, but we have also seen how He describes His love and makes it clear that if a believer claims that he loves Allah for the blessings of His Creation and Sustenance and he wishes to earn Allah's love in return, he must obey Allah Glorified is He and His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by living up to the responsibilities prescribed by Allah. And then, we have seen how Allah Glorified is He, explains to us the religious principles, be they creedal or legislative ones.

After all this, He gives us practical examples from people's behaviour. This is because there is a difference between theoretical doctrines and putting them into practice; when it comes to applying the doctrines, some people fail to rise to expectations. Allah Glorified is He does not make people responsible frivolously or meaninglessly; He says to us, "I have charged you with religious responsibilities and there are people just like you who are capable of living up to and honouring them". For this reason, Allah Glorified is He gives us examples that clearly show this.

Let us also recollect, Muhammad, The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him was sent to illiterate people and Islam was new to them. For this reason, Allah gave them some antique examples that would suit their mentality. This highlights the fact that Islam is not a religion of tribalism because it is the same religion that came down from Allah to Adam peace be upon him and the same religion that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him brought from Allah. It is the same religion that was revealed to the Family of 'Imran and Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him as well as Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him.

So, it is clear that Allah Glorified is He gives attributes of nobility to those who follow religions that are based on the guidance that He revealed. And Islam, upon its advent, abrogated some of what these previous Messages brought and placed them all in a single religion that would continue until the Day of Resurrection. This is the religion of Islam, which is the final compilation of magnificence.

Allah Glorified is He then says*:*

إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ ٱصۡطَفَىٰٓ ءَادَمَ وَنُوحٗا وَءَالَ إِبۡرَٰهِيمَ وَءَالَ عِمۡرَٰنَ عَلَى ٱلۡعَٰلَمِينَ ٣٣

God chose Adam, Noah, Abraham's family, and the family of 'Imran, over all other people [33] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 33)

This is an indication of justice which is one of the characteristics of the Noble Quran; it also gives a sense of justice in the way Allah Glorified is He revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him knowledge about some of his good ancestors. The Message was carried over by these noble descendants, and it would be a shame for descendants to veer away from the line of good ancestors!

'Verily, Allah has chosen Adam....' (Al-'Imran: 33) The word "chosen" gives a sense of a satisfactory selection. We may ask: "Did Allah Glorified is He choose those Messengers, Adam, Nuh (Noah), the Family of Ibrahim (Abraham) and the Family of 'Imran, peace be upon them all, while they were already obedient servants of Allah? Or was the choice a resultant effect of Allah's Supreme Knowledge of their inherent righteousness, i.e. that they would be automatically obedient?

Of course, Allah's Knowledge is Eternal and it is not dependent on things; rather, it preceded them. Sometimes, in our human capacity, for example, we entrust somebody with a position, based on our predictions and when that person succeeds, it elates us and we get excited about getting it right. But is this not by means of Allah's Knowledge and Power?

So, it is clear that it is by the Eternal Knowledge of Allah Glorified is He that Messengers were chosen for the mission because He knew, from pre-eternity, that they would be obedient. Someone might say, "They are obedient to Allah because He made them special." To such a person we reply: On the general level of being human beings, they were inherently "obedient servants" and then the moment they were charged with this responsibility and were specially chosen for it, their level of piety and obedience increased. This means that had Allah Glorified is He left it up to their intellects, they would still have been guided to obedience. And when they were charged with this responsibility, they were specially chosen by Allah to become Messengers, conveying His Heavenly Guidance.

When a person hears Allah Glorified is He saying: 'Verily, Allah has chosen Adam….' (Al-'Imran: 33), he might wonder about its meaning. This is because by saying "Allah has chosen Adam" peace be upon him it would mean that Allah chose him and singled him out from others. How could that be? How could Adam be chosen when there was no other human being before him or with him at that time? Since he was the first human, how could he be chosen and from whom? Yes, this sounds like a valid question.

We know that Allah's choosing of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him is quite easily understandable because he was chosen from amongst other humans who were in existence at that period of time. The same is true with the case of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him who is known as the Friend of Allah the Most Merciful and this is also the case with the rest of the Prophets.

So, what about the case of Adam peace be upon him? How was he chosen? The meaning of "Allah has chosen Adam", as we said, is that Allah Glorified is He selected him and it might mean that "the chosen one" would come from him and from his progeny. And, as we know, the chosen one has truly come from his progeny, so this explanation fits. Allah says*:* 'Verily, Allah has chosen Adam and Nuh (Noah)....' (Al-'Imran: 33) We know that Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him was sent by Allah, but a group of people disbelieved in him and Allah Glorified is He drowned them with the Flood as a punishment and saved Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him and those with him by His Will and Decree.

Thus Allah says*:* 'At length, behold! There came Our command and the fountains of the earth gushed forth! We said: "Embark therein, of each kind two, male and female and your family - except those against whom the word has already gone forth, - and the believers". But only a few believed with him'. (Hud: 40)

Those who remained after Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him were believers, but then, they turned to worshipping other false gods, and rejecting the True Faith, and unfortunately this act of worshipping false deities spread after them, thus leading to the situation where we had disbelief and faith side-by-side in society. Why? It is because when Allah Glorified is He created Prophet Adam peace be upon him He gave him a test of responsibility, while making him dwell in paradise and it was essential that what Allah taught him should be transferred to his descendants.

Prophet Adam peace be upon him passed on to them the details of their material lives and taught them how to eat and drink and so on. It was essential that they had moral values. Prophet Adam peace be upon him delivered his Message along that line. He taught his offspring how to take care of the material aspects of their lives and he taught them moral values as well. However, with the passage of time, some of Adam's progeny began to deflect from their religious responsibilities and bit-by-bit, with this kind of heedlessness on their part, the religious doctrines got weaker, forgotten and then completely vanished.

But out of His pattern of mercy and graciousness towards His creatures, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He renews His Divine Message from time-to-time by sending new Messengers.

First of all, the new Message tries to keep and maintain those things that are true and basic from the old Message, such as doctrines and information, in addition to things that do not normally change. Then, the new Message sets forth rulings that are appropriate to the time in which it comes. It is an established fact that when Man succeeds in creating a system of law and order in the society, life will be better for everybody and no crime will go unpunished. This is an important yardstick for a Divine Message to remain intact and flourish and thus enabling its adherents and the society to remain in prosperity. Why? The reason for this is that there is a tendency towards restraint that is naturally inherent in human beings, something we can feel and notice.

For instance, when a person upon dropping his standards and becoming unable to control himself commits a sin, with just a quick strike from his reproaching soul, we see him turning remorseful and thus seeking repentance. Another person with no such reproaching soul may not be able to have this quick comeback. So, it is something existing in some people and lacking in some other people. But in general, it is better for the society to be blessed with people who command good and forbid evil. If the people in the society are void of faith-based personal restraints and there are no people who are religiously equipped to restrain people from evil, things will certainly become gloomy in such a society and failures and dispiritedness will become the norm. In that case, it becomes imperative for a new Divine Message to come down through a Messenger who will be sent by Allah and aided with a miracle.

It is clear that Allah Glorified is He decreed that no other Messenger would come after our Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him And this stands as a testimony for the special status of the followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and it is also a clear evidence that Allah has secured His religion (Islam) through Prophet Muhammad's followers; and it is quite evident that in this ummah (global community of Muslims), people are imbued with communal religious restraints, which are never lost, even if individual's personal restraint gets weaker or lost. And this must be the case since he is the last Messenger of Allah; otherwise, it would have been necessary for Allah to send a new Prophet.

So, in this, we see why Allah Glorified is He did not bother to send any other Prophet after Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him because He the Almighty has secured His guidance and imbued the ummah of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with what it takes for them to preserve His Message.

Also, with regards to what we said about Allah's equipping the followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with a powerful religious spirit of restraint both on an individual and communal level which help them to preserve Allah's Message, Allah Glorified is He referred to this in the following verse: 'You are the best of peoples, evolved for mankind, enjoining what is right, forbidding what is wrong and believing in Allah. If only the People of the Book had faith, it would be best for them. Among them are some who have faith, but most of them are perverted transgressors'. (Al-'Imran: 110)

In this verse, Allah Glorified is He addresses us so we know that the spirit of communal religious restraints will always remain active in the soul of the followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him And after the waves of disbelief and heedlessness that followed the demise of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him Allah, out of His Mercy for mankind, selected and chose others as Messengers who were sent to guide people to the Right Path. On this, Allah says: 'Verily, Allah has chosen Adam and Nuh (Noah), the Family of Ibrahim (Abraham) and the Family of 'Imran over all the worlds'. (Al-'Imran: 33) We call Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him the 'Father of the Prophets' and in the above verse, Allah mentioned some of the progeny of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) i.e. The Family of 'Imran and He gave them higher distinction.

When the name ‘‘Imran’’ is mentioned in any Islamic context, we should be aware that there are two people with this name: “Imran” was the name of the father of Prophet Musa (Moses) and Prophet Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them, but there is another “Imran”. With regards to the first, “Imran”, the father of Prophet Musa (Moses) and Prophet Harun (Aaron) peace be upon him was born to someone called Yashur whose grandfather’s name was Fahath. Next in the line was Lawa; before this, was Prophet Ya’qub (Jacob), and before this, Prophet Ishaq (Isaac), and all the way back to Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. The other “Imran” is the father of Maryam (Mary), the mother of ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon her and him.

Some scholars and researchers might be confused and wondering about “Which ‘Imran did Allah refer to here?” This confusion might likely come from the fact that the name of the sister of Prophet Musa (Moses) and Prophet Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them, was also named Maryam (Mary), Allah be pleased with her and of course, she was also “the daughter of ‘Imran” which some might allude to the above verse.

So, both of these women were named Maryam (Mary), “the daughter of ‘Imran”. The name Maryam (Mary) was very common in those times because it means ‘devout’. For those scholars who fall into this confusion, it is because they forgot that the Quran is clear and precise in its meanings. They should have understood that the intention here is not ‘Imran, the father of Moses and Aaron, peace be upon them; rather, the Quran is referring here to ‘Imran, the father of Maryam (Mary) Allah be pleased with her the mother of Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. This ‘Imran, (the father of Maryam (Mary), was the son of Mathan, in the family line of Prophet Sulaiman (Soloman), son of Prophet Dawud (David), son of Awsha, son of Judah, son of Prophet Ya’qub (Jacob), son of Prophet Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon them.

Years ago, during our days at schools, we used to memorize the following phrase, using the first letters of the names, saying (‘am’am sad’iyya’), which means (Prophet) ‘Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary) may Allah be pleased with them Maryam (Mary) daughter of ‘Imran, son of Mathan, son of (Prophet) Sulaiman (Solomon), son of (Prophet) Dawud (David), son of Awsha, son of Judah, son of (Prophet) Ya’qub (Jacob) son of (Prophet) Ishaq (Isaac) peace and blessings be upon him but as you can see, this matter has confused some people and they have been unsure as to which ‘Imran, of the two, Allah Glorified is He is referring in this noble Quranic verse. The fact that Allah mentioned the name of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her immediately after this, shows that it is ‘Imran, the father of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her being referred to. We must also be aware that Allah Glorified is He said concerning Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her: ‘Her Lord accepted her in a handsome manner and caused her to grow like a lovely plant and told Zechariah to take care of her. Every time Zechariah entered the shrine to [see] her, he found she had already been supplied with food. He said: “Maryam (Mary), where did this provision come from?” She replied, “This is from Allah. Allah provides for whomever He wills without measure”. (Al-‘Imran: 37)

Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him was the son of Adhan, who was a contemporary to Mathan. So, in this context, it is ‘Imran, father of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon him who is the one meant here. Thus, it is clear now that we have clarified which “Imran” Allah Glorified is He meant when He said: ‘Verily, Allah has chosen ‘Adam and Nuh (Noah) and the Family of Ibrahim (Abraham) and the Family of ‘Imran over all the worlds’. (Al-‘Imran: 33)

With regards to the word “chosen”, when you say that you have chosen somebody and preferred him over somebody else, this means that you have picked that person out of a group and rated him above the others. For this reason, we can clearly understand the meaning of the phrase “over all the worlds” in the above Quranic verse as giving an indication that the people mentioned in the verse were chosen from the people of their time, and Allah Glorified is He chose one person from amongst them. But this aspect of “being chosen and given preference” is not applicable to the generations that came after these people, which means that this is not applicable to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, i.e. none of these were given preference above him.

Then Allah Glorified is He says: ‘They are the offspring of one another. And Allah is All-Hearing, All Knowing’. When Allah Glorified is He says, ‘They are the offspring of one another,...’ (Al-‘Imran: 34), there is a question here: Is this referring to descent of lineage, or of religion and moral values? We must take note that Allah has taught us through the example He gave about Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him that the bloodlines are not of any significance when it comes of the Prophets of Allah; what is of a paramount importance with regards to the Prophets is the posterity of moral values and religion.

We have already considered this in the following statement of Allah Glorified is He ‘And when his Lord put Ibrahim (Abraham) to a test with certain Words and he fulfilled them, He says, “I am going to make you an Imam (leader) for mankind”. He [Ibrahim] asked, “And from among my progeny?...” (al-Baqara: 124)

So, Allah Glorified is He answered him, saying: ‘…He (Allah) replied, “My promise does not extend to the unjust”’. Thus, Allah Glorified is He was addressing all humanity through Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him saying: ‘…”My promise does not extend to the unjust”’. (al-Baqara: 124) Why? It is because a leader should be followed in matters of guidance. So, this issue of Prophetic leadership is not something based on a bloodline; it transcends that level. That is how Allah Glorified is He made this clear to Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him: the posterity of the Prophets is not based on heritage or ancestry. This is what Allah Glorified is He wants us to understand in His Words,

ذُرِّيَّةَۢ بَعۡضُهَا مِنۢ بَعۡضٖۗ وَٱللَّهُ سَمِيعٌ عَلِيمٌ ٣٤

In one line of descent – God hears and knows all [34]
(The Quran, Al-'Imran: 34)

This is in order to show us how such extraordinary nobility was passed down in moral values.

We hear, in the Quran: ‘The hypocrites, both men and women, are all alike. They enjoin what is evil, forbid what is right and they are stingy when it comes to spending for the cause of Allah. They have forgotten Allah, so He has forgotten them. The hypocrites are the disobedient ones’. (al-Tawba: 67) The hypocrisy referred to here has no relationship with lineage; it is a matter of moral values. And so the Quranic phrase, ‘And Allah is All-Hearing, All Knowing’ (Al-‘Imran: 34), means that Allah knows all words, deeds and secrets. Then, Allah says: ‘Remember when the wife of ‘Imran said, “My Lord, I have dedicated what is in my womb entirely to Your service. So, accept this from me. Surely You are the All-Hearing, the All Knowing’.

When you read the word “when,” know that it is an adverb of time and in linguistics, it can mean “remember when….” Someone may say (in Arabic) “idh je'etuka” meaning “remember when I came to you.” When Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Remember when the wife of ‘Imran said...’ (Al-‘Imran: 35), some of the people with proper enlightenment understand this as a perfect indication of how Allah Glorified is He is of Supreme Awareness and full comprehension of what was going on at the time when:

إِذْ قَالَتِ ٱمْرَأَتُ عِمْرَٰنَ رَبِّ إِنِّى نَذَرْتُ لَكَ مَا فِى بَطْنِى
مُحَرَّرًا فَتَقَبَّلْ مِنِّىٓ ۖ إِنَّكَ أَنتَ ٱلسَّمِيعُ ٱلْعَلِيمُ ﴿٣٥﴾

‘Imran’s wife said, ‘Lord, I have dedicated what is growing in my womb entirely to You; so accept this from me. You are the One who hears and knows all,’ [35]
(The Quran, Al-’Imran: 35)

So, they attempt to link this Quranic verse with the one preceding it, which said that Allah Glorified is He is “All-Hearing, the All Knowing.” Let us consider the statement of ‘Imran’s wife: ‘My Lord, I have dedicated what is in my womb entirely to Your service….’ (Al-‘Imran: 35). When we hear the Arabic word “muhararan” as mentioned in this verse, we understand that it means “not owned by anyone; it gives a sense of freedom. So, if we say, “I freed a servant,” this means that he is now a free person and no longer in bondage. Another meaning for that Arabic word is “to revise,” so when I used it for a book, it means “I corrected the errors in it.” Therefore, the general meaning of that word (muhararan) is to rectify the faults in something and purge that thing of all its blemishes, or keep it away from restraints. As for the statement made by ‘Imran’s wife here: ‘My Lord, I have dedicated what is in my womb entirely to Your service...’ (Al-‘Imran: 35), it is a prayer to Allah, an invocation. But what is the reason behind this supplication?

‘Imran’s wife lived in an environment in which people exulted in their children. As we know, parents influence their children’s manners and as they act as watchdog for their kids, children also have an impact on their parents' behaviours. And it is also true that parents strive hard to make their children better successors and a source of delight. This makes the society prosperous, thanks to such material continuity of legacy. But this is not what 'Imran's wife wanted for her and for her child. She wanted the child in her womb to be free of all such material constraints. She wanted him to be completely dedicated and committed to something of higher value, something bigger than herself. This means that she wanted the child in her womb to be unconnected to anything, or with any physical love or patronage.

It is because no matter level of maturity a person reaches in life, he always gets affected by his circle of social connections and it is normal for such a thing to sway or distract him from his purpose. For this reason, 'Imran's wife wanted the child in her womb to be free from all this. It could be said that by this vow, 'Imran's wife was attempting to control the nature of a fellow human being, blending it to resemble her own nature. We answer this as follows:

In the past, parents used to dedicate their children to the service of the Temple and they took vows for that. This vow would last as long as the child was in their custody thus preserving him to do what they planned and desired for him and that would continue until the child reached adulthood. Then, the child had the right to choose between remaining as his parents wished, or choosing his own lifestyle.

Reaching adulthood is an acknowledgment of a person's maturity and readiness to make appropriate decisions in his life. As said above, 'Imran's wife did not want her child to be only a source of delight, or to have him just attached to her; no; she wanted the child to be completely devoted to the service of the Temple and from this it is understood by human comprehension that the child must have been a male because the ones who were chosen for such religious missions at that time were males.

Though we know that the word "child" can mean a boy or a girl, generally speaking, whenever the Arabic word "walad" is used, it refers to a boy. However, the linguistic meaning of that Arabic word is "child," whether male or female. Also, whenever we hear the word "vow," we understand that it means committing oneself to an act of worship above and beyond that which one is charged with by Allah, but of the same type of act of worship which one is obliged to do.

For instance, Allah Glorified is He has made five daily prayers obligatory upon us. If a person vows to pray extra cycles of prayer beyond this, he has thus made it compulsory for himself to do something extra beyond that which Allah charged him with, but which is of the same type that Allah has obligated him with: prayer. Also, Allah Glorified is He has made fasting in the month of Ramadan obligatory. If a person vows to fast Mondays and Thursdays, or to fast for two solid months, this is up to him, but it is clear that he has chosen to abide by something extra, but something of the same type which Allah has obligated, which is fasting. Allah Glorified is He has also obligated zakat (alms giving) with the rate of 2.5% of a person's extra wealth, but a person might vow to give more than this, for example 10% or even 50%.

It is up to a person to make such vows. One is free to commit himself to doing more than what it is obligated by Allah on him, but of the same type of what he is originally charged with. Thus, such vows represent an intention to do more than what Allah Glorified is He ordained. One of the meanings of '…I have dedicated...' (Al-'Imran: 35) is that the wife of 'Imran was a virtuous, upright woman and it is clear she was not compelled to make the vow, but she did so of her own volition in order to dedicate herself to the service of Allah's House (the Temple, at that time).

A vow, as we know, expresses a servant's longing and readiness to obey Allah's commandments by charging himself with extra acts of worship. Then 'Imran's wife prayed for Allah's acceptance of this vow, saying: '…So, accept this from me....' (Al-'Imran: 35) "Acceptance" means taking something gladly. Something might be taken unwillingly, or reluctantly, but when the word "accept" is used, it means taking something with pleasure.

In responding to this supplication and a sign for answering that prayer, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Her Lord accepted her in a handsome manner'. (Al-'Imran: 37)

We notice here that 'Imran's wife said at first: '…My Lord, I have dedicated what is in my womb entirely to Your service, so accept this from me. Surely

You are the All-Hearing, the All-Knowing' (Al-'Imran: 35) and she did not say "Oh Allah, I have dedicated…." This is so that we come to know that her Lord is the One Who takes care of human beings and all creatures. Sometimes, one says "My Lord" and this gives a sense of invoking the One Who takes care of and sustains everything. And when one says "Oh Allah," this gives a sense of invoking a higher authority and a source of command. So, with 'Oh Allah', it is a call to the One Who is Only to be worshipped and obeyed in that which He commands. But using the word "Oh Lord," means calling on the One Who assumes care and sustenance. Imran's wife said: '…My Lord, I have dedicated what is in my womb entirely to Your service, so accept this from me. Surely You are the All-Hearing, the All-Knowing'. (Al-'Imran: 35) That's her prayer and look at how Allah answered her: 'And Her Lord accepted her in a handsome manner….' (Al-'Imran: 37)

After this, Allah Glorified is He speaks about those things related to upbringing: '…and caused her to grow like a lovely plant and told Zechariah to take care of her....' All this is connected to upbringing and sustenance. We have seen how the wife of 'Imran invoked Allah and how she mastered that and vowed to dedicate the child in her womb to the service of Allah. Then, the answer came from Allah for her prayer in a way that gives an indication of Allah's acceptance and pleasure: 'And Her Lord accepted her in a handsome manner….' (Al-'Imran: 37)

The word "handsome" here gives a sense of something extra; it exceeds the normal level of satisfaction because the word "acceptance" in the verse gives us the meaning of taking something with approval. So, the word "handsome" clarifies for us that there was an increased status of approval which indicates that Allah Glorified is He took what 'Imran's wife offered with approval, as something good and beyond expectation. And this also indicates that people would see her upbringing as something extraordinary, with higher distinction. Thus, it is not an ordinary acceptance; rather, it is extremely nice.

The verse '…and caused her to grow like a lovely plant…' (Al-'Imran: 37) indicates that the wife of 'Imran, when she vowed to dedicate the child in her womb to serve the Temple, did not have the intention to keep the child with her and then release it at the age at which it could serve Allah's House.

No, on the contrary, her vow was to release the child from the moment of its birth. She did not intend to have the normal enjoyment with her child and this is the reason why Allah Glorified is He says*:* '…and told Zechariah to take care of her....' (Al-'Imran: 37) Zakaryya was the husband of Maryam's (Mary) maternal aunt.

After the prayer of 'Imran's wife, Allah Glorified is He said:

فَلَمَّا وَضَعَتۡهَا قَالَتۡ رَبِّ إِنِّي وَضَعۡتُهَآ أُنثَىٰ وَٱللَّهُ أَعۡلَمُ بِمَا وَضَعَتۡ وَلَيۡسَ ٱلذَّكَرُ
كَٱلۡأُنثَىٰۖ وَإِنِّي سَمَّيۡتُهَا مَرۡيَمَ وَإِنِّيٓ أُعِيذُهَا بِكَ وَذُرِّيَّتَهَا مِنَ ٱلشَّيۡطَٰنِ ٱلرَّجِيمِ ٣٦

But when she gave birth, she said, 'My Lord! I have given birth to a girl' – God knew best what she had given birth to: the male is not like the female –'I name her Mary and I commend her and her offspring to Your protection from the rejected Satan' [36] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 36)

This statement came from her because she had said that she had vowed the child in her womb to be devoted to the service of the Temple. Her word "dedicated" gives an indication that she wanted a male child to serve the House of Allah, but the child was born female. It is as though she was saying: "It looks like I will be not be able to fulfil the vow and this is something beyond my power; it is predestined that the child would be female". However, Allah Glorified is He says after this*:* '…And Allah knew very well what she had given birth to…." (Al-'Imran: 36) So, this means that she did not intend to inform Allah about the child's sex; she was just expressing her grief because she thought the goal of her vow would not be realised.

After this, Allah Glorified is He said: '…a male is not like a female….' (Al-'Imran: 36) The question here is: Is this her statement, or Allah's?

'Imran's wife said: '...I have given birth to a girl' (Al-'Imran: 36) and Allah says*:* '…a male is not like a female....' (Al-'Imran: 36) It is as if Allah Glorified is He was saying to her, "Do not think that the male child you dreamt of having could ever reach the rank of this female child you are blessed with. Behold, this girl has a mighty and elevated status!" Or, we could say the statement could have been a completion of her statement "...I have given birth to a girl...." (Al-'Imran: 36) and the words of Allah Glorified is He '...And Allah knew very well what she had given birth to...' was between brackets and the rest of her statement was '...a male is not like a female..'., as if she was saying "Oh my Lord, a male child is not like female one: she cannot, for instance, serve the Temple".

Let a believer take the meaning that he likes; we find that the first meaning is more illuminating. It suggests that Allah Glorified is He said addressing 'Imran's wife: "You want a male child so that your vow can be fulfilled according to your understanding and so that he can serve the Temple; and I have given you a female child, but I will give her a sign much greater than dedicating service to the Temple. The sign that I will give this female will make her a great support for the creed, not just a service of a plot of land where rituals take place. I will make this sign a means for the creed to remain established in the world until the Day of Judgment. And because I am the Creator, I will also bless this female child with a sign that does not exist anywhere else and it would be a sign that confirms the omnipotence of Allah."

As I have said before, an Absolute Power is different from an ordinary one: power gets created using means, but from where do the means come? The means come from Allah, the Source of Power. So, as Allah, the Creator of means, desires to use these means to create, this is up to His Supreme Will and no one can question that. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He gave us the ability to witness the absoluteness of His Power because it is a matter of faith which must remain central to doctrinal awareness and solid in the mind of a believer, and be always intact.

Allah Glorified is He created some creatures with means, as He created us and all other creatures through means of reproduction: from fathers and mothers. As for Allah's creation of Adam peace be upon him it was accomplished without any means. We know that everything divided into two has a logical and rational permutation; since there is a system of creation where we have mothers and fathers, males and females, there will definitely be reproduction...

Allah Glorified is He says*:* 'And in everything, We created pairs so that you might bear in mind [that Allah alone is One]'. (adh-Dhariyat: 49) When a pair come together, this makes a complete image and this is the imaginable level of the first logical permutation. The second logical permutation imaginable here is in the scenario of having both pairs absent. Another case is to have one of the pair absent (female, for instance), while the other (male) remains and this is the third logical permutation imaginable. The fourth logical permutation imaginable is to have the other one of the pair (male) absent and the first one remaining (female). So, therefore, we have here four logical permutations imaginable.

All of us human beings come from the mating of two elements of creation: a man and a woman. As for Prophet Adam peace be upon him Allah Glorified is He created him by His Omnipotent Power, that he would be the means for the creation of others. In this way, Hawwa' (Eve) peace be upon her was created from Prophet Adam peace be upon him. And then Allah brought out from the mating of Prophet Adam and Hawwa' (Eve) peace be upon them his progeny. There was a female, Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her from whom the Messiah, Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) came without means of a male. And this is definitely a sign for mankind and it confirmed a pinnacle of faith.

No one should say "I want a male child!" or "I want a female child!" We should all learn from the wife of 'Imran whose intention was to serve Allah by having a male child, but look at how the Mighty Lord willed something higher than the worship that 'Imran's wife understood. Thus Allah says: '…a male is not like a female…' (Al-'Imran: 36) i.e. no male could ever reach the rank of this female (Maryam) peace be upon her.

Then, 'Imran's wife said: '...and I have named her Maryam (Mary) and placed her and her children in Your protection from the rejected Satan'. (Al-'Imran: 36) The wife of 'Imran spoke in a way that indicated her perception, for when the child was born a female and because of her being a female, she was therefore unable to serve in the House of Allah. 'Imran's wife then reaffirmed her wish that the child would be obedient and pious, so she named her Maryam (Mary) because, as we said, in their language this name meant "devout".

Then, as we know, Satan always comes to dissuade Man from worship and he uses all his schemes to influence mankind to rebel against worship. One of the schemes Satan uses is laying down traps for people to fall in, thus leading people astray from worship. The wife of 'Imran wanted her daughter to be protected against the insinuations of Satan. So, she named her Maryam

(Mary) in hopes that she would be a devout servant of Allah. Also, given the fact that 'Imran's wife possessed a sound religious intelligence and was imbued with a high level of creedal guidance, she said: '…and I place her and her children in Your protection from the rejected Satan'. (Al-'Imran: 36)

As we can see, it is the divine protection from Allah Glorified is He that she sought and Satan is the one against whom the protection was sought. When Satan approaches Man to trap him into committing sin, he enters into conflict with him; but Satan is unable to engage in a conflict with his Lord and for this reason, it is said about Satan that when he hears the remembrance of Allah, he flees. The Noble Quran describes Satan as "the one who withdraws." Satan is only able to be in a person's company when that person is far from Allah and for this reason, Allah Glorified is He teaches mankind, saying: 'If Satan should prompt you to do something, seek refuge with Allah- He is All-seeing, All knowing'. (al-A'raf: 200)

Satan trembles fearfully whenever Allah's protection is sought. And when Satan's trembling is repeated because of these words, he knows that this person will not be led astray from Allah's obedience and cannot be pulled down into committing sin. The Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for instance, taught us on the significance of seeking Allah's refuge from Satan saying that when Man wants to have intercourse with his wife which is a very important moment that can lead to pregnancy, he should say: "Oh Allah! Shield me from Satan and keep Satan away from what you grant me." (Excerpt from the prayers of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him) Whoever says this statement before sexual intercourse, Satan will have no authority or power over the child that will come, by Allah's decree. For this reason, the wife of 'Imran said, '…and I place her and her children in Your protection from the rejected Satan'. (Al-'Imran: 36)

People might understand that the Arabic word "*dhurriyy*a" (which means "children") implies a large number of offspring, but the word itself could mean one, two, three or more children and not necessarily in higher multitudes. And the word "children" in respect to Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her, means Prophet Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him and no other person.

After the prayer of ‘Imran’s wife, ‘…and I place her and her children in Your protection from the rejected Satan’ (Al-‘Imran: 36), Allah Glorified is He says*:* ‘Her Lord accepted her in a handsome manner and caused her to grow like a lovely plant and told Zechariah to take care of her. Every time Zechariah entered the shrine to [see] her, he found she had already been supplied with food. He said: “Maryam (Mary), where did this provision come from? She replied,

فَتَقَبَّلَهَا رَبُّهَا بِقَبُولٍ حَسَنٍ وَأَنۢبَتَهَا نَبَاتًا حَسَنًا وَكَفَّلَهَا زَكَرِيَّاۖ كُلَّمَا دَخَلَ
عَلَيۡهَا زَكَرِيَّا ٱلۡمِحۡرَابَ وَجَدَ عِندَهَا رِزۡقٗاۖ قَالَ يَٰمَرۡيَمُ أَنَّىٰ لَكِ هَٰذَاۖ قَالَتۡ هُوَ
مِنۡ عِندِ ٱللَّهِۖ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ يَرۡزُقُ مَن يَشَآءُ بِغَيۡرِ حِسَابٍ ٣٧

Her Lord graciously accepted her and made her grow in goodness, and entrusted her to the charge of Zechariah. Whenever Zechariah went in to see her in her sanctuary, he found her supplied with provisions. He said, ‘Mary, how is it you have these provisions?’ and she said, ‘They are from God: God provides limitlessly for whoever He will’ [37]
(The Quran, Al-’Imran: 37)

We know already the meaning of ‘in a handsome manner’ and also the phrase ‘to grow like a lovely plant’. As for the words of Allah Glorified is He ‘…and told Zechariah to take care of her’ (Al-‘Imran: 37), this means that this command came from Allah the Most High. It was Allah who accepted Maryam in a handsome manner and it is He who caused her to grow like a lovely plant. So, it is clear that having Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him take care of the child was only by Allah’s decree. The evidence of this is what happened, while Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her was placed into the custody of somebody.

The leaders of the people gathered, all wanting to take her into their care and they drew lots to decide the matter. In such situations, when you find people drawing lots, or casting divining arrows, this means that they have left their own desires to follow Allah’s will. Sometimes, when we differ on something we draw straws: everyone takes a straw and after this, we see which person’s straw was shortest, and everyone accepts the result in order to prevent human caprice from influencing the decision. The matter is taken out of the hands of the people and put in the Will of Allah. This is what happened when Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her was placed in the care of Prophet Zakaryya's care peace be upon him. This is why Allah Glorified is He says to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'This is an account of things beyond your knowledge that We reveal to you [Muhammad]: you were not present among them when they cast their lots to see which of them should take charge of Mary, you were not present with them when they argued [about her]'. (Al-'Imran: 44)

So, this means that the custody of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her provoked a kind of competition and this is proven by the fact that they resorted to drawing lots to decide who would take care of her. It is not possible that they would resort to drawing lots unless there had been some sort of dispute and competition on who would take custody of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her. And it was by the grace of Allah Glorified is He that Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him was married to Maryam's (Mary) aunt, Ishai', sister of Hannah, who was Maryam's (Mary) mother.

The Quranic exegetes say that the words "their lots" here refer to either the divining arrows that they used to make in the past, or they refer to the pens that they would write the Torah with and then throw into the sea; the owners of the pens which floated would not take the custody of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her and the owner of the pen which sank would gain custody of her. That is how the matter was taken out of their own will and put completely in the Will of Allah.

Leaving behind desires and caprices and resorting to an object with no will of its own, as drawing lots, does not engender any bitterness in the soul. However, if someone had taken custody of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her by means of strength and force, this would inevitably have caused the souls of the others to be filled with rancour or anger. That is why the drawing of lots was prevalent in those times: they would resort to it if it was feared that someone would be wronged, or someone would be thought badly of. In the story of Prophet Yunus (Jonah) peace be upon him when the ship was close to sinking, in order to save it, someone had to jump into the sea. Allah Glorified is He describes this in the following verse: 'Jonah, too, was one of the Messengers.

He fled to the overloaded ship. They cast lots, he suffered defeat, and a great fish swallowed him, for he had committed blameworthy acts. If he had not been one of those who Glorified Allah, he would have stayed in its belly until the Day when all are raised up'. (as-Saffat: 139-144)

Someone had to jump the ship and so lots were drawn so that a dispute or fight would not ensue among the people on-board the ship and the matter would not reach the level of "survival for the fittest." Drawing lots is normally an effective tool to ward off such an unpleasant situation. So, the people on-board the ship said, "Let us draw lots and whoever's lot is drawn will be thrown over." Prophet Yunus (Jonah) peace be upon him had to jump into the sea and the whale swallowed him. However, because he was one of those who glorify Allah, He saved him. Prophet Yunus (Jonah) peace be upon him accepted Allah's decision and even in this terrible situation, he did not forget to glorify Allah and so he was saved. This is how we read Allah's words, to understand that Prophet Zakaryya's winning of the custody of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her was the decision of Allah Glorified is He:

'Her Lord accepted her in a handsome manner and caused her to grow like a lovely plant and told Zechariah to take care of her'. (Al-'Imran: 37) The words "to take care of her" mean He was assigned all the affairs of her upbringing. We know that in our culture that the Arabic word "kafil" means "guarantor," or the one who assumes payment of a debt if a person is unable to pay. Allah's words '…and told Zechariah to take care of her…' (Al-'Imran: 37) give us the clear meaning that Prophet Zechariah peace be upon him was the one who undertook responsibility for all of the affairs of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her.

Allah Glorified is He continues: '…Every time Zechariah entered the shrine to [see] her, he found she had already been supplied with food'. (Al-'Imran: 37) Prophet Zakaryya did not visit Maryam just this one single time; rather, he visited her in the sanctuary many times. Every time Prophet Zechariah peace be upon him visited Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her he found she had provisions with her. For this reason, he must have wondered from whence this provision came. His question was surely an expression of amazement and so Allah Glorified is He says that Prophet Zechariah peace be upon him asked her, '…where did this provision come from?'

When we hear '…where did this provision come from' (Al-'Imran: 37), this indicates that he had secured the place where Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her stayed; otherwise, it might be supposed that someone had visited Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her and supplied her with provision. But Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him had locked the doors on Maryam for security reasons. So, if the doors had not been locked, it would be assumed that someone had visited Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her and supplied her with the provisions.

"Provision" is whatever one is benefited from. When Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him said: '…where did this provision come from?' (Al-'Imran: 37) let us remember what we said before that. If a Man who is entrusted by Allah Glorified is He with responsibility and authority such as a ruler discovers that some of his subjects live in excess, possessing extra wealth beyond their means or their income, he must surely pose this same question: "Where did this provision come from?" This is because corruption gets spread in homes and communities due to a lack of such concern for "checks and balances" and the need for calling people to account, using this similar phrase, "Where did this provision come from?"

The same applies to domestic affairs. If a person, upon entering his house, finds his daughter wearing an expensive dress beyond the means of the family, or finds that his son has bought something that the family would be unable to afford, he, whether he a father or a guardian, will find time to ask, "Where did this provision come from?" This is a means of protecting the family's moral standards from collapse or dissolution. Thus, if every family man was shrewd enough to ask his family and everyone within his care, where this provision came from, he would then be able to monitor the acts of the people under his care, knowing the details of their actions and deeds. He knows that if the reins are slackened, everything will be ruined.

So, the question posed by Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him: '…where did this provision come from?' (Al-'Imran: 37) is a direct question about the source of this provision. Let us consider the response of Maryam (Mary): '…She would answer: "This is from Allah...."' (Al-'Imran: 37) She did not leave the intuition of faith up to Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him without mentioning it herself. She did not forget a plain truth present in the central understanding of every believer: '…Allah provides for whomever He wills without measure'. (Al-'Imran: 37) This issue touched Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him deeply and as we can see, it was an extraordinary matter. Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her told him that the provisions she had with her were from Allah Who grants sustenance to whom He wills beyond all reckoning; He is the Almighty Allah, capable of saying: 'Be' and it is!

Then Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him reminded himself of Allah. It was as though his soul was saying to him, "If Allah is able to act without means and give without reckoning, I desire a son to succeed me, eventhough I am old and advanced in years, and my wife is barren". The matter of the provision Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him found every time he visited Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her caused him to hope and wish.

It is clear that the thoughts that go through a person's mind are many, but those thoughts do not become forefront in Man's consciousness. There is a difference between notions that exist at the forefront of Man's consciousness and thoughts that occupy the margins, which are only called for when it is necessary. When Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him found the various provisions that Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her had and when she said to him concerning their source, '…It is from Allah; Allah provides for whoever He wills without measure', Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him said: 'How could this matter have escaped me?' And so, Allah Glorified is He said of Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him: 'There and then Zakaryya (Zechariah) prayed to his Lord, saying, "Lord, from Your Grace, grant me virtuous offspring: You hear every prayer".'

When she (Maryam) told Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him that the provisions came from Allah and that He grants them to whom He wills beyond all reckoning, this statement stirred up a very important faith issue in him and so hope arose in the consciousness of Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him. He said to himself, "Let us ask our Lord to provide us with what we wish for ourselves". Since he uttered this statement, this shows that he believed deeply, with conviction, that the provisions supplied to Maryam (Mary) came from Allah. Another evidence for his trust is that he must have noticed that the kinds of provisions that Maryam (Mary) had were not from the surrounding environment or from its season and yet it was all present in the Sanctuary.

We know that the word "sanctuary" means a place of worship. Allah Glorified is He said: 'They made for him whatever he wished of sanctuaries and statues and basins as [large as] great watering-troughs and cauldrons firmly anchored. [And We said]: "Labour, Oh David's people, in gratitude [towards Me] – and [remember that] few are the truly grateful [even] among My servants!"' (Saba': 13) The Arabic word for "sanctuary" (mihraab) is also used for a place in the mosque where the Imam stands during prayers. It is also used as a chamber which is reached by a staircase such as the places built in some mosques to show the movements of the prayer.

So, Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her informed Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him about the source of the provision she was blessed with, while she was in the sanctuary and that Allah was her Sole Provider. We have seen how the incident had a very powerful touch of faith on Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him and what was his reaction? Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him invoked Allah, whilst he was in the sanctuary, saying:

هُنَالِكَ دَعَا زَكَرِيَّا رَبَّهُۥ ۖ قَالَ رَبِّ هَبْ لِى مِن
لَّدُنكَ ذُرِّيَّةً طَيِّبَةً ۖ إِنَّكَ سَمِيعُ ٱلدُّعَآءِ ﴿٣٨﴾

There and then Zechariah prayed to his Lord, saying, 'Lord, from Your grace grant me virtuous offspring: You hear every prayer' [38] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 38)

He was asking for a child. We should, however, note the following: Did his request for a child follow the same pattern of ordinary people in the sense that they pray for a child just for the sake of enjoyment, or preserving their 'ancestry', or merely from being obsessed with a male child? No; Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him invoked Allah for pious offspring and using the phrase of "pious offspring" indicates his full awareness of the fact that a person might be afflicted with bad offspring.

Then in the statement of Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him quoted by Allah Glorified is He '...to be my heir and the heir of the family of Jacob…' (Maryam: 6), we can see that he was praying for someone to inherit his Prophethood and the heritage of guidance and morality. This was how Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him supplicated to Allah for a child: he requested it for a mighty mission. Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him said, '…Oh my Lord! Bestow…' (Al-'Imran: 38), which means that he was requesting something without any recompense and was acknowledging that saying, "I do not possess the qualifications necessary for a person to have a child, for I am old and my wife is barren. So, my Lord, your granting me a child is a blessing from you, not a right". Even in the situation that all such qualifications are present, having a child is still not a right and so everybody must know that Allah's granting him a child is a blessing. So, beware of thinking that the presence of means, like youthfulness, vigor, health, etc., is what brings children. Allah Glorified is He is alerting us in the following verse that we should not fall into fooling ourselves and getting deceived by the presence of means:

Allah says, 'Allah has control of the heavens and the earth; He creates whatever He wills- He grants female offspring to whomever He will, male to whomever He will, or both male and female and He makes whoever He wills barren: He is All-knowing and All-Powerful'. (ash-Shura: 49-50) This is a clear Message and warning that we should not become infatuated with the means. So, everything Allah grants is a blessing from Him and having the means does not automatically grant a person what he/she desires.

Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him said, '…Oh my Lord! Bestow upon me, too, out of Your grace....' (Al-'Imran: 38) When you say "out of Your grace", this means "grant me my requests out of Your means, by Your Grace". Why? That is because everything is from Allah.

However, there is a difference between Allah's blessing us with means such as a person going to seek knowledge and spending, for instance, for 20 years before attaining his goal, whereas you can see another person being blessed with knowledge from Allah without having to go through all this ordeal, i,e, his knowledge is a blessing from Allah. This is what the Illuminati people call "The knowledge of blessing," i.e. knowledge granted as a blessing from Allah without being worked for. So, the phrase '…out of Your grace…' (Al-'Imran: 38), indicates that no means were employed here and this is what Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him means in his prayer, '…Oh my Lord! Bestow upon me, too, out of Your grace....' (Al-'Imran: 38) Furthermore, the word "bestow" clarifies for us what is mentioned in the Quran (chapter of Maryam), when Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him said: 'Oh my Lord! How can I have a son when my wife has always been barren and I have become utterly infirm through old age?' (Maryam: 8).

The word "bestow" clarifies these meanings for us. The prayer of Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him was '…Oh my Lord! Bestow upon me, too, out of Your grace, the gift of pious offspring; for You, indeed, are the Hearer of all prayers.' (Al-'Imran: 38) Does this mean that Allah hears prayer, or answers prayer? Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him was placing all his hope in Allah, as though he was saying, "Oh Lord, as soon as You hear me, You will answer me by virtue of Your Omnipotent Power. Oh Lord, You know the sincerity of my intentions. You know that I want a boy, not to a be a source of delight, or just a source of pride, or for honour, or anything else; I want a child so that he can inherit from me the bearing of Your guidance on earth".

After this, Allah Glorified is He said,

فَنَادَتْهُ ٱلْمَلَٰٓئِكَةُ وَهُوَ قَآئِمٌ يُصَلِّى فِى ٱلْمِحْرَابِ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ يُبَشِّرُكَ بِيَحْيَىٰ مُصَدِّقًۢا
بِكَلِمَةٍ مِّنَ ٱللَّهِ وَسَيِّدًا وَحَصُورًا وَنَبِيًّا مِّنَ ٱلصَّٰلِحِينَ ﴿٣٩﴾

The angels called out to him, while he stood praying in the sanctuary, 'God gives you news of John, confirming a Word from God. He will be noble and chaste, a prophet, one of the righteous' [39] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 39)

Did all the angels gather or call Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him? No, Angel Gabriel peace be upon him was the one who called him. Why did Allah say that the angels called him? This divine statement came in order that we could be aware of something: the human voice makes a sound which comes from a definite direction, but as for the voice of angels, a person does not know from whence it comes and hears it as though it is coming from every direction. It is almost as though there are angels everywhere. In today's world, the modern surround-sound technology has developed, making sound that encompasses the listener from many directions.

So, the following statement from Allah Glorified is He '…the Angels called out unto him…' (Al-'Imran: 39) means that the voice came to Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him from all directions: 'Thereupon, as he stood praying in the sanctuary, the angels called out unto him: "Allah sends you glad tiding of [The birth of] John, who shall confirm the truth of a word from Allah and [shall be] outstanding among men and utterly chaste and a Prophet from among the righteous."' (Al-'Imran: 39)

The angels called to him when he was in the most devout moment of spiritual connection with his Lord. When he prayed, he followed what Allah Glorified is He taught the Prophets: in times of severity, they resorted to prayer. Was his request not from Allah? If so, then it was definitely logical that he stood before Allah in supplication. All of us should try this whenever things become difficult for us, or when life becomes stressful with no means to turn things around. So, in such a situation, a person should get up, perform ablution (wudu') and focus his intention even if he is already in a state of purification. Standing up before Allah, he can say, "Oh my Lord, there is a matter within Your means which is difficult for me", or something like this. I believe that if a person prays with such humility, by the time he finishes his prayer, deliverance will have come. Have we not received such a great guidance from Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him? Whenever things got rough and he got sad, he would rush to Allah, standing in prayer.

And what we mean by "things got rough and he got sad" is that his means became sparse, so he (Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him) would invoke Allah, the Creator of means, supplicating to Him in prayer, seeking means from the Creator of all means. Rather than being preoccupied with yourself, go to Allah through the shortest path which is prayer. Why would you tire yourself out, Man, oh servant of Allah, when you already have a wise Lord? It was said in the past that "whoever has a father has no worries and is it not more fitting for one who has a Lord to have peace of mind?"

Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him called on Allah in his time of severity and hardship and to do that, he stood in prayer and so the angels called him, while he was praying. They did not wait for him to finish his prayer: 'Thereupon, as he stood praying in the sanctuary, the angels called out unto him, "Allah sends you the glad tiding…"'.

'Glad tidings' means information about something good, the time for which has not yet come. If this is the case, let us consider: who was the one who gave these tidings? Was it one who was able to bring them about, or not? If Allah Glorified is He was the One Who gave the tidings, He was indeed able. So, in that case, there is no doubt that what was promised would be delivered: '…Allah sends you the glad tiding of [the birth of] John....' Allah Glorified is He said to him, "I will give you". In addition to this blessing, Allah named the boy "John", he who would '…confirm the truth of a word from Allah....' (Al-'Imran: 39).

Let us consider the precision of Allah's words: '…John, who shall confirm....' (Al-'Imran: 39) This is an indication that the promised child (Prophet Yahya (John) peace be upon him would live in accordance with Allah's guidance and that his acts of obedience would follow this path and would be a confirmation of it, and that he would bring Allah's word, or that he would come to believe in the words of Allah Glorified is He. Prophet Yahya (John) peace be upon him was later the first to believe in the Message of Prophet Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. He is described by Allah Glorified is He as '…outstanding among men and utterly chaste and a Prophet from among the righteous'. (Al-'Imran: 39)

The phrase "utterly chaste" means he is absolved from everything that is forbidden to him, or absolved from the supreme instinct, which is desire. And the phrase "a Prophet" indicates that he posed as an example of a follower of the Messenger sent in his time. Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him called upon Allah and stood in prayer and received the glad tidings about Prophet Yahya (John) peace be upon him. Here, Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him in his humanity, was dumbfounded by the turn of events and Allah Glorified is He depicted him as saying:

قَالَ رَبِّ أَنَّىٰ يَكُونُ لِي غُلَٰمٞ وَقَدۡ بَلَغَنِيَ ٱلۡكِبَرُ وَٱمۡرَأَتِي
عَاقِرٞۖ قَالَ كَذَٰلِكَ ٱللَّهُ يَفۡعَلُ مَا يَشَآءُ ﴿٤٠﴾

He said, ‘My Lord, how can I have a son when I am so old and my wife is barren?’ [An angel] said, ‘It will be so: God does whatever He will’ [40] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 40)

As you can see, Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him – the one who made the request – was amazed by the response and so wondered: how could this be? Allah Glorified is He relates this in order to show us that the human soul is always in the realm of uncertainty, not in the realm of certainty. This is so that Allah Glorified is He could give those of His creatures who have not been guided onto the straight path an example that, if a person is afflicted by tribulation, they must turn to Allah. Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him said, ‘…How can I have a son when old age has already overtaken me and my wife is barren?’ (Al-‘Imran: 40).

Reaching old age does not make a person incapable of producing children because a person could be old and still be able to impregnate a woman. This is because for some men, impregnation is not a difficult matter, even if they become old, as long as they are not sterile; the woman, however, is the important element. If she is barren, this is the height of incapability. If Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him had merely said “my wife is barren” without mentioning his own case of being very old, it would not have been pleasant for his wife for this would mean he had attributed vigor to himself and incapability to her.

This is one of the instances of the high virtues and the good manners of Prophethood. For this reason, he (Zakaryya) peace be upon him began with, ‘…old age has already overtaken me and my wife is barren....’ (Al-‘Imran: 40) Let us consider the precision of the phrase: ‘…old age has already overtaken me....’ (Al-‘Imran: 40) He did not say “I have become very old”; rather, he said, “Old age is what has overtaken me; it is not something that I did to myself”. Reaching something means that there is an intention and a desire to go for it. When Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him said ‘…my wife is barren…’ (Al-‘Imran: 40), this was a magnification of Allah’s omnipotence to anyone who listens to the story: it has mentioned all human misgivings and then the final word comes: 'Thus it is: Allah does what He wills'. This is the Divine Omnipotence which is above all means, for it is that omnipotence which creates all means. Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him said: 'Oh my Lord! Appoint a sign for me!' The angel replied, 'Your sign shall be that for three days you will not speak to men, other than by gestures. And remember your Lord unceasingly and declare His limitless glory, by night and by day'.

Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him sought a sign from Allah that his dream - on which he had received a glad tiding - would become a reality. Zakaryya (Zechariah) exclaimed: 'Oh my Lord! How can I have a son when my wife has always been barren and I have become utterly infirm through old age?' (Maryam: 8-9) No doubt, this word serves as a strong sign of Allah's Supreme Omnipotence, for if Allah Glorified is He merely says something, it is done, pure and simple, with no doubt. So, what did Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him want after that? He wanted a sign, an indication that Prophet Yahya (John) had been created in his mother's womb. As the woman was old, she must have apparently even passed the menopausal state. So, the Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him must have known the sign because he knew his wife was barren.

However, Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him did not want to miss a single moment of having Allah's gift within his reach. Since his wife had conceived (by Allah's Grace), the prayer of Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him was something like, "Oh Lord, do not leave me to recognise the pregnancy by the usual physical signs; for I want to live, from the first moment of Your favour upon me, in a state of being always thankful to You for your favour. The mere conception of a child is sufficient to make it incumbent upon me to turn my whole life into an expression of thanks because otherwise the favour might come, whilst I am not thankful".

So, Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him sought a sign from Allah so that he might make his life an expression of thanks; he did not seek a sign because he doubted the power of Allah. Rather, it was just that he did not want a single moment of the favour to pass by, from the beginning of its existence, without him meeting it with full thanks and gratitude. What gives us this impression is Allah's words,

قَالَ رَبِّ ٱجۡعَل لِّيٓ ءَايَةٗۖ قَالَ ءَايَتُكَ أَلَّا تُكَلِّمَ ٱلنَّاسَ ثَلَٰثَةَ أَيَّامٍ
إِلَّا رَمۡزٗاۗ وَٱذۡكُر رَّبَّكَ كَثِيرٗا وَسَبِّحۡ بِٱلۡعَشِيِّ وَٱلۡإِبۡكَٰرِ ﴿٤١﴾

He said, ‘My Lord, give me a sign.’ ‘Your sign,’ [the angel] said, ‘is that you will not communicate with anyone for three days, except by gestures. Remember your Lord often; celebrate His glory in the evening and at dawn.’ [41]
(The Quran, Al-’Imran: 41)

The meaning of this must be that he wanted to speak, but was unable. There is a difference between someone’s being able to speak but not speaking and someone being totally unable to speak. Since the sign is a gift from Allah, He, Allah, is the One Who said to him: “I will prevent you from speaking, so, when you find yourself unable to speak, know that it is the sign, but you will be able to speak to people with hand-gestures”. And so that we would know that the sign is from Allah - and that Allah knows that His servant does not wish to allow a single moment of Allah’s favour to pass him by without giving thanks to Him for it- and that Allah Glorified is He will allow him to speak later, He says, ‘…And remember your Lord unceasingly and declare His limitless glory by night and by day’. (Al-‘Imran: 41) .

So, Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him wanted to live that moment in full thankfulness and gratitude from the first moment, appreciating Allah’s favour and to fill his time with remembrance and did not want to be distracted by people through any form of worldly matters, such as talking. Allah knew that the intention and aim of Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him when he requested the sign was to spend the whole moment in ceaseless remembrance of Allah, thanking Him for His Grace. So, the words of Allah Glorified is He ‘…And remember your Lord unceasingly…’ (Al-‘Imran: 41) indicate that Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him was able to remember Allah’s faithfulness inwardly, but unable to speak about it to the people because Allah did not want him to be distracted by speaking to the people. It is as though Allah wanted to say to him, “As you desire to live in thanks for My favour, I will make you unable to speak with the people, but able to make remembrance of me”.

“Remembrance” here means making mention of Allah and His Power, Might, Omnipotence and attributes of perfection. “Declaring Allah’s Glory” means to declare His Unique Perfection, for that which Allah does, cannot be done by any other. “Glory be to Allah!” means that Allah is uniquely perfect, for He can do that which the means (His creation) cannot and that which no one else can do. Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him wished to give thanks to Allah who gives sustenance to whom He wills, beyond all reckoning. Such a remarkable observation was passed to Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him through the demeanour of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her.

As we know, Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him was her guardian and the fact that she spoke this statement is evidence that Allah had given her provisions which had come from other than Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him in the form of her receiving things without any means. It was as though Allah wished for her to have a taste of such a tremendous divine experience, of being supplied with provisions without human intervention , as a prelude to what would happen to her later, for she would be exposed to a situation connected with a woman’s honour and dignity. So, it was necessary for her to know, before this, that Allah gives sustenance to whom He wills, beyond all reckoning and without the use of means. If she then happened to conceive without the means of a father, it would be then, no strange thing for her, for she would know that Allah grants sustenance to whom He wills beyond all reckoning.

When Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him heard this from her, he said, “Since Allah grants sustenance without reckoning and brings things without the use of means and I have reached such old age and my wife is barren…why should I not ask my Lord to bless me with a son?” So, the words of Maryam (Mary): ‘…behold, Allah grants sustenance unto whom He wills, beyond all reckoning’ (Al-‘Imran: 37) caught the attention of Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him and aroused the faith present in the depths of his consciousness. We do not say that it created a new belief in Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him that Allah Glorified is He grants sustenance to whom He wills beyond all reckoning; rather, it brought this matter of faith from the margins of his consciousness to its forefront.

Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him said to himself, “As long as the matter is so, I will ask Allah to bless me with a gift of son”. So, the words of Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him ‘…Bestow upon me, too, out of Your grace, the gift of pious offspring…” (Al-‘Imran: 38) indicate that he and his wife were unable to produce children and so he appealed for a gift from Allah. The word “gift” means something given, free of charge. When he ,Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him prayed to Allah for this, his prayer was answered with Allah saying to him, essentially, “I will bless you with a son without the means of your fertility, or your wife’s ability to conceive. The matter will occur without means and I – the Creator – will undertake its creation, by My word “Be!’ and for a lofty, noble purpose, I will grant you something else, which is usually undertaken by you, fathers and mothers”. Allah bestowed them with another favour, which was the naming of the child after He had bestowed His mercy on them by blessing them with a child in their states.

Here, let us consider the gift of the name. ‘Thereupon, as he stood praying in the sanctuary, the angels called out unto him: “Allah sends you the glad tiding of [the birth of] John, who shall confirm the truth of a word from Allah and [shall be] outstanding among men and utterly chaste and a Prophet from among the righteous.”’ (Al-‘Imran: 39) When people have children, they give them names and this is one of the well-established human customs and traditions. However, people, being concerned with the child’s welfare, try to be positive when naming their children, so they tend to choose names that have good and positive meanings that imbue them with high spirit and hope. For instance, they might choose a name like Sa’id (which means “happy” in Arabic), hoping that this might be an omen of happiness for them, or they might name the child Fadl (“goodness”), or Karim (“generous”).

So, parents choose names that they would like to see their children live up to. This is their hope, but as a saying goes: “If hopes and wishes were horses, beggars would ride for free.” A child might be named Sa‘id, but turn out miserable, with his life full of sadness. Likewise, a child might be named Fadl (which means “goodness”) but he is very far away from being good. Also, a child with the name ‘Izz (“honour”) might turn out to be a full disgrace to the family. But what happens when Allah Glorified and Exalted is He names someone? There is no doubt that it will be completely different. So, when He says to Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him that the child's name would be Yahya (John) (which in Arabic means "he lives") this meant that he indeed would live, and would not die young.

In the old days, a poet would say, with high optimism, when he named his child Yahya (John):

I named him Yahya (John) so that he might live; But there is no way Man can go against his destiny.

Thus, as you see, the poet named his son Yahya (John), hoping that he would live, but Allah Glorified is He did not will this, so the boy died. Why? It is because men are mortal, regardless of the names given to them; humans are naturally weak. However, the One Who gives life is the Omnipotent Allah, and it is no doubt that when the One Who has Omnipotent Power gives someone a name, implying that a person will live, according to His Will, there is no doubt that this person will live a distinguished life. It should not be inferred that the life Allah Glorified is He indicates with His Words "his name is John" is different than the ordinary life known to mankind; for when a Man names his son Yahya (John), he hopes that he will live long, or at least reach the normal, average age of people at that time, such as sixty years, or seventy, or whatever number of years were written for them. However, when Allah Glorified is He gives the child the name Yahya (John), He does not intend "he lives" to be taken in an ordinary way, the way that people might have perceived it. Rather, He must surely have given him more than the ordinary human life-span and created for him enemies that would kill him and make him a martyr, and by his martyrdom, he would remain alive in a religious sense, granted a permanent life, for as we know, martyrs are alive with their Lord and are provided for.

In this way, Allah Glorified is He willed that Prophet Yahya (John) peace be upon him would live a normal life and then live a longer life beyond what is ordinary, i.e., remain alive until the Day of Judgment. We can also take note of the fact that Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him when he was given the glad tidings that Allah Glorified is He would bless him with a son and would name him Yahya (John), he was astonished. How could Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him have received the news of his being given a son with such astonishment, though he had already envisioned it when he saw the unusual provisions he found with Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her bearing in mind this Quranic verse, 'Allah provides for whomever He wills without measure'. (Al-'Imran: 37)

To this, we ask: Would you like to see such a miraculous, extraordinary situation happening to Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him and see him receiving that as if it were an ordinary matter, not worthy of any astonishment or amazement? No, he surely must have been astonished and amazed and so he said, 'Oh my Lord! How can I have a son…?' (Al-'Imran: 40) It is as though this amazement alerted him to the fact that an incredible sign would come; were it not for this amazement, the matter would have been lack-lustre and would have been perceived as if it was an ordinary issue. So, Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him was alerting us to the incredible matter that Allah had distinguished him with. The affair was also in contradiction to the laws of reproduction and procreation: '…old age has already overtaken me and my wife is barren....' (Al-'Imran: 40). The entire matter was a gift from Allah.

When the glad tidings came, Allah did not say to him, "I will bless you with a son named Yahya (John), while your wife is in this situation (of being barren) and you are also in the state (of being very old)", which would have prompted him to be confused. He may have then responded: "Do You say that a child named Yahya (John) would come from me, when I am in this state, with my wife barren and I have reached this old age?", or perhaps he might have assumed that Allah would make them young again so that his wife could conceive, or perhaps that Allah would bless him with another woman to marry so that he could have a child; any of these are possible confusions he could have faced.

The astonishment we see in him was related to the manner in which the conception would occur. So, the question posed by Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him, '…how can I have a son when old age has already overtaken me and my wife is barren?..'. (Al-'Imran: 40) was his way of seeking knowledge of the manner in which this conception would occur, for conception occurs in many different ways. And in confirming this, Allah says, 'Thus it is....' What does this mean? It means, "You and your wife will conceive, though you are in the condition you are in, your having reached old age and your wife being barren" because that was the point and that was the reason for amazement. Again, was it logical that Allah would make them young again in order to facilitate the Will of Allah for them to have a child? No, definitely not. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He says*:* '…Thus it is: Allah does what He wills' (Al-'Imran: 40), i.e. "as you are, in the state you both are currently in".

Allah Glorified is He made the sign that Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him would not speak to the people for three days except by gestures. The inability to speak might seem to people to be some kind of illness, but it was not so because Allah Glorified is He said to him, '…And remember your Lord unceasingly and declare His limitless glory by night and by day'. (Al-'Imran: 41) So, Allah Glorified is He made Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him able to declare His glory, though not, while he was unable to speak. This is another manifestation of Allah's Omnipotence: a man with the same tongue, at one time, is unable to speak so that even if he tried to, his tongue would not move, yet at a different time, with this same tongue, the person is able to declare and make remembrance of Allah by night and day. This remembrance was made with the tongue so that people could hear. This is a clear indication of Allah's Omnipotence.

After this, Allah Glorified is He takes us to another issue which is connected with Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her and she is the subject of all of this discourse because the provision that came to her from Allah Glorified is He without reckoning, was what inspired Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him to invoke Allah for a son. And thus Allah Glorified is He brings us the story of Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him and the child he was given, and then He takes us back to the story of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her: 'And lo!:

وَإِذْ قَالَتِ ٱلْمَلَٰٓئِكَةُ يَٰمَرْيَمُ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ ٱصْطَفَىٰكِ
وَطَهَّرَكِ وَٱصْطَفَىٰكِ عَلَىٰ نِسَآءِ ٱلْعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿٤٢﴾

The angels said to Mary: 'Mary, God has chosen you and made you pure: He has truly chosen you above all women [42] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 42)

The word "angels" in 'the angels said…' (Al-'Imran: 42) refers to Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him. The reason for Allah's referring to Jibril (Gabriel) as "the angels" is that human speech, as we mentioned previously, emerges from a certain source and the voice's direction determines the location of that source. Observe what you do when you hear a sound: you move your head to put your ear in the direction from which the sound comes. If the sound comes from the direction of your right ear, you turn your head to the right; if it comes from the direction of your left ear, you turn your head to the left. However, the speaker here is Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him and his voice comes from every direction in a wondrous way. That is why the speech here is attributed to "the angels" (plural).

What did Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him say? Passing on Allah's Message, he said: 'Mary, Allah has chosen you and made you pure: He has truly chosen you above all women'. (Al-'Imran: 42). What does "choosing" mean? It is selecting and distinguishing one among all others. It is derived from the Arabic word "Al-safw" (noun) or "Al-safi" (adjective), which refers to something free from doubt. A meaning is usually derived from physical denotations. As we have said, the root of the word "chosen" in Arabic is "safi". When water is described as safi, this means clear, pure water, or as Allah Glorified is He says*:* '…rivers of honey clarified and pure....' (Muhammad: 15) In this case, "musaffa" is used, meaning "clarified and pure".

When Allah says, "Allah has chosen you and made you pure: He has truly chosen you above all women" (Al-'Imran: 42), we notice that the choosing of Mary occurred twice. The first occurrence is not followed by "above"; the second occurrence is followed by "above." The meaning of the first occurrence is to tell Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her that Allah has distinguished her with faith, righteousness and good conduct. The occurrence of choosing Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her is not followed by “above” because there might be others who are distinguished with the same characteristics. This is indicated by Allah’s words: ‘Indeed, Allah chose Adam, Noah, Abraham’s family and the family of ‘Imran over all other people’. (Al-‘Imran: 33) Allah then mentions that He purified her. Then, the second mention of choosing her comes followed by “above” for He says*:* ‘…chosen you above all women’. (Al-‘Imran: 42) This excludes men from the scope of selection and clarifies that it has no relation with masculinity; she is chosen above all women. This implies that there is no other woman in the world who shares the blessing of being distinguished with her. Why? She is the only one who will have a child without the involvement of a man and this is something that no one else will share with her.

Allah says*:* ‘…chosen you above all women’. (Al-‘Imran: 42) This statement must have made her wonder what it was that distinguished her from all women. The mind would be occupied with such a question and it would also be occupied with an issue related to the role of a female. If we add this to what Allah says on Maryam’s (Mary’s) tongue, ‘Allah provides limitlessly for whomever He wills’ (Al-‘Imran: 37), we find that all are allusions to what would happen later: the incident that would involve her honour and virtue. Thus, it was inevitable that Allah would have paved the way to assure her that nothing would hurt her dignity.

Allah Glorified is He says, ‘…chosen you above all women’. (Al-‘Imran: 42) We can ask, “What was the result of this choosing?” We have learned that “choose” means to select and distinguish. In Arabic, it can be read “mustafa”, meaning “the one who is chosen” and can also be read “mustafi”, meaning “the one who chooses”. The one who chooses here is Allah, but what is the reason for this choosing? When Allah chooses someone or something, He chooses them to undertake a mission and particularly a difficult one. Thus, Allah chooses this specific person so that this choosing becomes widely known amongst the people. It is as though Allah has chosen this thing, in particular, for the sake and benefit of people, whether the chosen one is a place, a person, or a time so that this distinction becomes widelyknown among those above which the chosen is distinguished. For example, why did Allah choose the Ka‘ba? It was chosen so that every human being would turn to its direction. Allah has chosen it for the sake of mankind and to spread its distinction everywhere else. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says about the Ka'ba: 'The first House [of worship] to be established for people was the one at Mecca. It is a blessed place, a source of guidance for all people'. (Al-'Imran: 96)

If Allah, the Glorified, has chosen a time such as His choosing Ramadan (a month in the Gregorian calendar) as a special time of fasting, then why has He done so? He has chosen it so that its distinction and the distinction of what was revealed in it become widespread in all times. So, Allah's choosing of a particular person, place, or time is for the benefit of the rest of humanity, places, and times. Why? Because none of the creation is Allah's child and there is no one with a better position than another is in Allah's sight. However, Allah chooses a certain time over another, or a place over another, or a person over another in order that the distinction of the chosen one becomes widely known amongst those over which the chosen is distinguished. So, should people rejoice over the chosen one or not? Yes, they should rejoice because it has been chosen for their benefit. Allah Glorified is He then says: 'Mary, be devout to your Lord, prostrate yourself in worship, bow down with those who pray'. (Al-'Imran: 43)

It is as if the previous findings of both the first and second choosing call for her devoutness and her sincere, submissive, and humble worship. Someone may wonder, "Why would Allah choose one thing in particular to make its distinction widespread among people?" It is because the blessing of being chosen by Allah entails that the chosen is absolved from whatever its counterparts might fall into, among them, unsatisfactory decisions. Allah Glorified is He intends what He chooses to be a model from which only goodness should come. The best example of this is Allah's choosing of His Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. He willed that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him only acted in a praiseworthy manner from the very beginning of his Prophethood in order to provide us with the model of faith throughout the twenty-three years of his mission.

Allah says to Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her on the tongue of the angel: 'Mary, be devout to your Lord'. (Al-'Imran: 43) This is a command to remain in constant, sincere worship of her Lord. The Arabic word "lirabbiki" (your Lord) indicates edification. It is as though being chosen by Allah is one of His favours upon Maryam (Mary) and they merit devotion from her. 'Prostrate yourself in worship, bow down with those who pray…' (Al-'Imran: 43) means humble and submit yourself in excess, by placing your forehead, the noblest part of the human body, onto the floor, for prostration is the highest level of submission.

However, does this form of submission excuse Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her from having to bow to Allah alongside other people? No, for Allah's true command to Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her was to 'bow down with those who pray'. (Al-'Imran: 43) Hence, she was not excused from bowing in congregation by performing a higher act in terms of submission which was prostration; rather, she still had to bow down with those who bow down. Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her did not have the right to say, "Allah has commanded to perform a higher act of worship, so I will not perform the lower one". Allah commanded her, also, to join the procession of bowers.

This is similar to Allah's statement concerning the disbelievers: '"What drove you to Saqar (the Scorching Fire?)" [they will ask] and they [those in the hellfire] will answer, "We did not pray…"' (al-Muddaththir: 42-43) They were disbelievers, so how could they pray? This is an admission by them that they were disbelievers and did not follow the path of those who pray and an admission that they were not Muslims (following the religion of Islam), and nor were they believers in Allah. Here, someone may ask: "Why does Allah Glorified and Exalted is He say to Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her 'Mary, be devout to your Lord, prostrate yourself in worship, bow down with those who pray' (Al-'Imran: 43) and not say "with those women who bow down (pray)"?

In answer to this, we would like to provide you with a simple introduction to the philosophy of terminology. Names are words in a language used to identify certain objects. There are names of inanimate objects, names of plants, names of animals and names of subtle beings such as jinn, angels and everything that Allah Glorified is He has made unseen. These names refer to their meanings. Allah Glorified is He guided humanity to this when He taught Adam peace be upon him all the names; how else would Adam peace be upon him have been able to refer to those things with their names? So, everything must have a name to be distinguished among other things by one single simple word.

Were it not for this, how would a person be able to talk with another person about a mountain, for instance? Should the speaker take the listener to where the mountain is located and point to it? Or would it be enough for him to say the word “mountain” so that the listener could recall the picture of the named thing in his mind? So, Allah’s philosophy of teaching us the names of things removed the load of futile misunderstanding from our shoulders. Were it not for this, we would have been unable to make anything understood unless it was directly in front of us so that we could point to it. The word “mountain”, the word “rock” and other similar words, are names of things and beings. When I speak, for example, about America, I do not have to take the listener there and point to it, saying, “This is America”; rather, the single word “America” provides the listener with the meaning of what it refers to and so we attach terms to whatever they are used to name.

Since this is the case, names must exist for things or beings to which they refer. These are the names Allah taught to mankind so that they can understand one another. Man’s origin is from Adam peace be upon him. The word “Adam” in Arabic is grammatically masculine. The opposite of masculine is feminine. Allah, Exalted is He above everything, created males and females because by their union progeny comes forth. So, the distinction must have been made between the two forms of a single species. Males and females are the children of Adam peace be upon him and from them comes reproduction. However, it is extraordinary that Allah Glorified is He named Adam peace be upon him with a masculine name and named Eve with a feminine name and made a generic name to refer to all creation: “Soul”.

Allah says*:* ‘People, be mindful of your Lord, who created you from a single soul and from it created its mate and from the pair of them spread countless men and women far and wide; be mindful of Allah, in whose name you make requests of one another. Beware of severing the ties of kinship: Allah is always watching over you’. (an-Nisa’: 1)

Allah referred to Adam peace be upon him using the word “soul”, which is a feminine word. So, the concept of femininity is not less than the concept of masculinity; rather, the masculine form of words is merely an indication that gives things and beings their appropriate names and so is the feminine form.

Allah Glorified is He refers to every one of us as a "soul," which is a feminine word and when He makes another statement about creation, He says*:* 'Oh people, We created you all from a single Man and a single woman and made you into races and tribes so that you should recognise one another. In the sight of Allah, the most honoured of you are the ones most mindful of Him: Allah is All-knowing, All-aware'. (al-Hujurat: 13)

The word "people" here is the plural of a human being. In this way, we know that the word "human" can be used to refer to a male in one case and a female in another. Thus, the Lord has used a masculine word in one instance and a feminine word in another so that we would not claim that males are better than females. This distinction is nothing but a means of understanding. For this reason, Allah emphasizes to us that He has given names to things so that we can get to know one another by their means: '…and made you into races and tribes so that you should recognise one another'. (al-Hujurat: 13) The meaning of "recognise one another" here is that all of us have a name by which we are known to others. In an example from our daily life, let us say there is a man who has many children and so he gives each child a name by which the community will know them. The extraordinary quality of this verse is that part: '…and made you into races and tribes so that you should recognise one another'. We find that the Arabic word "shu'ooban" derived from sha'b (races) is masculine and the Arabic word "qaba'ila" derived from qabeelah (tribes) is feminine. So, there is no distinction based on preference; rather, the words here are just named so for the purpose of recognition. Allah the Almighty says*:*

'By the declining day, Man is [deep] in loss except for those who believe, do good deeds, urge one another to the truth and urge one another to steadfastness'. (al-'Asr: 1-3) So, what about the women who believed? They fall into the category of "those who believe," *'alladhina amanu'*in Arabic, which is masculine. Why has Allah put the feminine among the masculine? It is because the masculine is the origin and the feminine is derivative, as a branch, from it. So, the feminine is included in the masculine in matters which apply to both sexes.

'People, worship your Lord, who created you and those before you so that you may be mindful [of Him]'. (al-Baqara: 21) This means that the "feminine" is included in the masculine in terms of worshiping. The general meaning specifies human beings, as a species, as those required to worship, both male and female. In matters specifically relating to women, Allah addresses women, in particular. Allah Almighty says*:* ‘When Allah and His Messenger (Muhammad) have decided on a matter that concerns them, it is not fitting for any believing Man or woman to claim freedom of choice in that matter: whoever disobeys Allah and His Messenger is far astray’. (al-Ahzab: 36) Why? It is because the matter here includes both sexes of the same species: the man and the woman, husband and wife. For example, a husband might want to divorce his wife and so Allah clarifies this in detail. If there is a matter specifically related to women, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He specifies His commands, such as in His wise words: ‘Wives of the Prophet, you are not like any other woman. If you are truly mindful of Allah, do not speak too softly in case the sick at heart should lust after you, but speak in an appropriate manner; stay at home and do not flaunt your finery as they used to in the pagan past; keep up the prayer, give the prescribed alms and obey Allah and His Messenger. Allah wishes to keep uncleanness away from you, people of the [Prophet’s] House and to purify you thoroughly’. (al-Ahzab: 32-33)

Everything mentioned in the previous verse specifies the duties of the wives of the Prophet, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him This speech, addressed to women, clarifies the specification by using the Arabic pronoun “na” used at the end of the following Arabic words: “lastunna” (you are not), “ittaqaytunna” (are truly mindful of Allah), “takhda’ana” (speak too softly), “qarna” (stay at home) and “tabarrajna” (flaunt your finery). The speech in this verse is concerned with women and so it addresses women using the feminine pronoun.

However, if a matter is related to mankind in general, Allah inclusively addresses all men and women using the masculine form. For this reason, when women asked why it should appear that men are better than women, Allah’s words were revealed: ‘For men and women who are devoted to Allah - believing men and women, obedient men and women, truthful men and women, steadfast men and women, humble men and women, charitable men and women, fasting men and women, chaste men and women, men and women who remember Allah often - Allah has prepared forgiveness and a rich reward'. (al-Ahzab: 35)

Thus, Allah settles the matter, when He the Exalted says confirming this: 'Anyone, male or female, who does good deeds and is a believer, will enter paradise and will not be wronged by as much as the dip in a date stone'. (an-Nisa': 124) Here, the male and the female are both included in one description which is "a believer". So, when a commandment is related to a general matter, required from both men and women, women are included and addressed in the masculine form. The feminine is concealed into the masculine because a woman's position is based on her being concealed, veiled, and hidden in man. Therefore, she is included with him.

So, when Allah Glorified is He says to Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her,

يَٰمَرْيَمُ ٱقْنُتِى لِرَبِّكِ وَٱسْجُدِى وَٱرْكَعِى مَعَ ٱلرَّٰكِعِينَ ﴿٤٣﴾

Mary, be devout to your Lord, prostrate yourself in worship, bow down with those who pray [43]
(The Quran, Al-'Imran: 43)

The bowing is not specific to women. If that was the case, Allah would have said "with those women who bow down." Rather, it is a general matter encompassing both men and women. For this reason, Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her was commanded to bow down with those who bow down (to pray). After this, Allah says:

ذَٰلِكَ مِنْ أَنۢبَآءِ ٱلْغَيْبِ نُوحِيهِ إِلَيْكَ ۚ وَمَا كُنتَ لَدَيْهِمْ إِذْ يُلْقُونَ
أَقْلَٰمَهُمْ أَيُّهُمْ يَكْفُلُ مَرْيَمَ وَمَا كُنتَ لَدَيْهِمْ إِذْ يَخْتَصِمُونَ ﴿٤٤﴾

This is an account of things beyond your knowledge that We reveal to you [Muhammad]: you were not present among them when they cast lots to see which of them should take charge of Mary, you were not present with them when they argued [about her] [44] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 44)

We said before that the word for "account" in Arabic is only used to refer to highly significant news. "Al-Ghaybi" (things beyond knowledge) refer to what is beyond perception. There are some things beyond perception that a human like you can recognise and there are some things beyond perception that a human like you cannot recognise.

We also said before that the veils of the unseen (things beyond knowledge) are three: sometimes the veil is time that has passed; sometimes it is time that will come; and sometimes the veil is of the location. Why? It is because all events are based on the two factors of time and place. If someone gives me an account of an incident that took place in the past, they break through the time barrier; though the event took place several years in the past, I have been informed of it in the present and this means that the past time barrier has been penetrated. If they inform me of something that will happen two years from now, this penetrates the future-time barrier. Say that a person informs you of news that is contemporary to you. Here, the barrier of location is present, for, while I am with you now, I do not know what is happening in another city though the time is the same.

For this reason, we should know that the barrier is sometimes one of time –such as the past or the future– or the barrier might be one of location. If Allah informs His Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of this account, then the means by which Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him gained his knowledge are three, for the means by which an event is known about are three: witnessing, hearing, or reading.

The first means of knowing about an event –witnessing– necessitates that a person be present at the time of the event, yet the account that Allah gave to His Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was of an event that occurred at least six centuries before his mission. So, knowing about this event by means of witnessing must be ruled out because it took place in the past. Someone might say, “Perhaps the Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him read or heard about it”. Yet even the enemies of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him admitted that he could not read, so this means is ruled out as well. The enemies of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him admitted that he had never sat with a teacher, so he could not have heard it from a teacher.

There was no means by which Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him could have known this account except by Revelation and so Allah Glorified is He says*:* 'This is an account of things beyond your knowledge that We reveal to you [Muhammad]: you were not present among them when they cast lots to see which of them should take charge of Mary, you were not present with them when they argued [about her]…' (Al-'Imran: 44).

We have said before, that Revelation means the imparting of concealed information because the ordinary act of informing happens when a person tells something to another person. As for the imparting of concealed information, it is called "Revelation." Revelation requires One Who reveals (who is Allah), one who receives the Revelation (who is the Messenger, Muhammad, peace and blessings be upon him), and something which is revealed (which is the Quran). If we consider the imparting of concealed information, we will find that it has many different methods.

Allah is the one who reveals, whereas the one who is revealed to is different. Allah Almighty sends Revelation to the earth: 'When the Earth is shaken violently in its [last] quaking, when the earth throws out its burdens, when Man cries, 'What is happening to it?'; on that Day, it will tell all because your Lord will inspire it [to do so]'. (az-Zalzala: 1-5) This is imparting of concealed information. None of us hears Allah when He sends Revelation to the earth. Allah also sends Revelation to the bees, the angels, and the Prophets. There are even revelations from other than Allah, such as the incitement coming from the devils: 'The evil ones incite their followers to argue with you: if you listen to them, you, too, will become idolaters'. (al-An'am: 121)

Human beings also give revelation in the form of suggestions to each other: 'In the same way, We assigned to each Prophet an enemy, evil humans and evil jinn. They suggest alluring words to one another in order to deceive - if it had been your Lord's will, [Prophet], they would not have done this: leave them to their inventions'. (Al-'Imran: 112) However, when the word "revelation" is used without qualification, it refers to Revelation from Allah to whomever He chooses to bear His Message. Other forms of revelation are called "linguistic revelation." The conventional use of the word "revelation" means Revelation from Allah to one of His Messengers. So, Allah's Revelation to the Earth is not conventional revelation, nor is His Revelation to the bee, nor His Revelation to the mother of Musa (Moses), nor His Revelation to the disciples of Jesus. Allah says: '…and how I inspired the disciples to believe in Me and My Messengers - they said, "We believe and bear witness that we devote ourselves [to Allah]"'. (al-Ma'ida: 111)

This is a form of unconventional revelation; indeed, it is linguistic revelation, meaning that He informed them of some concealed information. True Revelation is when Allah Glorified is He teaches whomever He chooses to deliver His Message and this is the Revelation given to the Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon hi.

Allah says: 'This is an account of things beyond your knowledge that We reveal to you [Muhammad]: you were not present among them when they cast lots to see which of them should take charge of Mary, you were not present with them when they argued [about her]'. (Al-'Imran: 44) Thus, Allah informs us that the Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him received this account by means of Revelation; he neither read it nor saw it. We know that the enemies of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him testified that he couldn't read, and nor did he hear anything from a teacher. Thus, Allah informs us that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was not present with Maryam's (Mary's) people when they cast their lots.

The Arabic word for "their lots" here is "aqlamahom" meaning either the pens we use to write, or lots they used to cast to settle a dispute. When they disputed, they used lots to determine who would win the thing about which they disputed. This is called lot casting and it is performed to remove caprice from the process of allocation between individuals in order that no one's whim could influence the decision in favour of one person or another over the rest. Nowadays, we also cast ballots combining pieces of paper representing several persons, then picking one of them. So, no one's desires can influence allocation by means of voting. In this way, we refer the matter to Allah because a piece of paper has no inclinations. When Maryam's (Mary) people disputed and argued over her custody, they decided to remove caprice from the matter and leave it up to fate so that the decision would be made by the lot, not by desires as these lots would be in accordance with fate.

Their "pens" or lots in this verse refer either to the lots that they used for casting, or to the pens with which they wrote the Torah, seeking its blessing. Some might wonder about the meaning of Allah's words, 'When they cast lots…' (Al-'Imran: 44) and about the place where these lots were cast. It is said that they were cast into the sea. When lots are cast into the sea, how could someone be distinguished by this procedure? It is said that if the lot (or pen) stood with its point upwards, its owner was the winner; if all the lots sank but one floated, its owner was the winner.

They must have agreed on some sign or signal that would distinguish the lot of the one who would take custody of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her: 'This is an account of things beyond your knowledge that We reveal to you [Muhammad]: you were not present among them when they cast lots to see which of them should take charge of Mary, you were not present with them when they argued [about her]'. (Al-'Imran: 44) The phrase "when they argued" indicates that the strength of the dispute between the people wanting to take custody of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her reached the level of argument. Eventually, they resorted to casting lots to end the dispute. We'll move on now to another stage:

Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says*:*

إِذْ قَالَتِ ٱلْمَلَـٰٓئِكَةُ يَـٰمَرْيَمُ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ يُبَشِّرُكِ بِكَلِمَةٍ مِّنْهُ ٱسْمُهُ
ٱلْمَسِيحُ عِيسَى ٱبْنُ مَرْيَمَ وَجِيهًا فِى ٱلدُّنْيَا وَٱلْـَٔاخِرَةِ وَمِنَ ٱلْمُقَرَّبِينَ ﴿٤٥﴾

The angels said, 'Mary, God gives you news of a Word from Him, whose name will be the Messiah, Jesus, son of Mary, who will be held in honour in this world and the next, who will be one of those brought near to God [45] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 45)

The first stage of Maryam's (Mary's) preparation was Allah's words on her tongue, 'Allah provides limitlessly for whoever He will'. (Al-'Imran: 37) Thus, she recognised Allah's Omnipotent Power. The second stage was her hearing the story of Zakaryya (Zechariah) and Yahya (John), and Allah's confirmation for her that He had chosen her above all women. This was a matter related to women. This was a source of comfort from Allah to her.

Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her then, proceeded to a new stage. ‘The angels said, “Mary, Allah gives you news of a Word from Him…”’ (Al-‘Imran: 45).

Glad tidings do not come except for momentous, happy news. Some might wonder what Allah means by, “a Word from Him”. The answer is that Allah Almighty practices His Power in His dominion by means of merely a word, not by any biological means. Allah Glorified is He made us aware of this by His Words: ‘This is how Allah creates what He will: when He has ordained something, He only says, “Be” and it is’. (Al-‘Imran: 47). This statement clarifies Allah’s Omnipotent Power. We have no faster way of commanding other than the word “Be.” Allah’s Omnipotent Power, with its limitlessness, surpasses - with speed!- the time we take to pronounce even the first letter of the word “Be”. Allah clarifies this in the closest way possible to our human perception. When Allah the Exalted wills a matter, He says ‘Be’ and it is. This is to clarify that the mere divine will of a matter makes it exist immediately. ‘Be’ is just a manifestation of the way He gives commands to humanity. Thus, we understand the meaning of Allah’s giving glad tidings to Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her of “a Word from Him”. Allah says: ‘…whose name will be the Messiah, Jesus, son of Mary…’ (Al-‘Imran: 45) These are three names: the Messiah, Isa (Jesus) and son of Maryam (Mary).

What is the meaning of “the Messiah”? It could mean one who is absolved from all sins, or that one of his signs was wiping the body of the sick with his hands to cure them, or it could mean “blessed”. As for Isa (Jesus), it is the name of the child, whereas “the Messiah” is his title. “Son of Maryam (Mary)” is his surname. We know that proper nouns, in Arabic, are of three types: names, titles, and surnames. Ibn Malik said: ‘There are names, surnames, and titles’. A proper noun for a person has three types. The “name” is what a person is called by, at first. The second name is what we give to a person, something which denotes the elevated status of a person, or otherwise, and it is called a “title”. If the name includes the name of their mother or father, it is called a “surname”. All three are mentioned to refer to Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him ‘…whose name will be the Messiah, Jesus, son of Mary’. (Al-‘Imran: 45)

Mentioning Isa (Jesus) by title, name, and surname has a wisdom that will be revealed to us later. Allah Glorified is He says of him: ‘…who will be held in honour in this world and the next…’ (Al-‘Imran: 45) The Arabic word "wajihan" (held in honour among his people) means that no one can deny him a request, for his honour showed in his face. In our daily lives, we say that it is not appropriate to cause embarrassment to someone by turning down their request. As common people exclaim upon accepting a request, "Can anyone turn down that face?" So, a person held in honour is distinguished and privileged, so much so that people cannot bring themselves to reject his requests. In contrast, there are others who beg from you or from others. This results in people neglecting them, for they dishonour themselves and the issue is put to an end.

Allah says, describing Isa (Jesus) that he is one who 'will be held in honour in this world and the next'. (Al-'Imran: 45) It means that no one will turn him down if he asked them all because of the honour in his face. People are shy to refuse someone of such honour and for this reason, we find beggars sometimes say, "Give me for the pleasure of Allah's face", i.e. do not look at my face, but think of Allah's face, for it is Allah, the Creator, who brought me into this world and created me; thus, He is responsible for my provision. When you assist in the providing for someone whom Allah called into existence, you have given for Allah's pleasure; for He is the Creator who gives provision to all His creatures even those who disbelieve in Him.

So, a person's giving to a beggar is not for the sake of the beggar; it is giving for the pleasure of Allah. Allah describes Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon them as one 'who will be held in honour in this world and the next....' (Al-'Imran: 45) We know how a person can be distinguished in this world; why does Allah mention Isa's (Jesus') distinction in the hereafter especially when all the faces of the believers will be radiant, then? Allah mentions the distinction of Isa (Jesus) in the hereafter because he will be asked a question about the peak of faith: 'When Allah says, "Jesus, son of Mary, did you say to people, 'Take me and my mother as two gods alongside Allah'? He will say, "You are the Exalted! I would never say what I had no right to say - if I had said such a thing You would have known it: You know all that is within me, though I do not know what is within You, You alone have full knowledge of things unseen"'. (al-Ma'ida: 116)

Beware of imagining that this question is a rebuke from Allah to Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), peace be upon them; rather, Allah wants to rebuke all those who made such claims. For this reason, Allah says about him, on his tongue peace be upon him: ‘Peace was on me the day I was born and will be on me the day I die and the day I am raised to life again’. (Maryam: 33)

This is because his birth caused a sensation and some of the children of Israel (Israelites) spoke ill of his mother, the virgin, Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her. Later, they spoke of his “death,” and we all know the story of the crucifixion which also caused a sensation. He was not crucified; rather, the one who betrayed him and informed against him was crucified, for Allah cast Isa’s (Jesus’) likeness upon him and so they killed him. On the Day of Resurrection, when he will be raised to life again, Allah will ask him, “Did you say to people, ‘Take me and my mother as two gods alongside Allah’?” He will say, “You are the Exalted! I would never say what I had no right to say...’”. (al-Ma‘ida: 116) It is Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), who is blessed by Allah with peace in these three states. Allah continues describing Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary) as one who will ‘be held in honour in this world and the next, who will be one of those brought near to Allah’. (Al-‘Imran: 45) The words “brought near to Allah” indicate Allah’s sublime greatness; when some people get infatuated with a person, some others might get angry with this particular person though he himself is blameless.

Allah the Exalted teaches us that the one who goes to excess in religion will be recompensed for it, but the one who is the innocent subject of this going to excess will be saved by the mercy of the Most-Forgiving. Allah teaches us that the infatuation of some people with Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), does not affect the status of Isa (Jesus) in the sight of Allah; for he is one of those who are brought near to Him and the infatuation of the others does not affect his position.

Allah says*:*

وَيُكَلِّمُ ٱلنَّاسَ فِي ٱلۡمَهۡدِ وَكَهۡلٗا وَمِنَ ٱلصَّٰلِحِينَ ٤٦

He will speak to people in his infancy and in his adulthood.
He will be one of the righteous’ [46] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 46)

“Speaking to people in infancy” refers to the enunciation by which the thought of the speaker is transferred to the listener. Allah says*:* ‘…will speak to people in the cradle (in his infancy)'. (Al-'Imran: 46) Those who will encounter Isa (Jesus) in his cradle are the people spoken to, and a cradle is whatever is prepared for a child to sleep in.

Allah mentions 'in the cradle (in his infancy) and in his adulthood...' (Al-'Imran: 46) in order to illustrate that Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), is a changeable being: one time, he is in the cradle; in another time, he is a grown man. Since he is subject to change, no one should become infatuated with him as though he is a "god," or the "son of a god."

We also understand from '…will speak to people in the cradle (in his infancy)…' (Al-'Imran: 46) the secret behind the existence of the sign of the miracle bestowed on him in the cradle by Allah. This is because the issue was related to the virtue, the honour and the morality of his mother. The sign had to come to exclude, in advance, people's possible astonishment at her giving birth without a father for the child, or a husband. We have no account of this being mentioned by them, though it was necessary for it to be mentioned because they glorify their Prophet and so they must not have been heedless of this extraordinary matter.

The speaking of an infant was very peculiar, and that should have been mentioned and circulated amongst the people. People would not have been content to merely relate the fact that he spoke in the cradle; they would have memorised what he said and repeated it many times. The words that Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him said in the cradle do not sustain the argument of those who describe Isa (Jesus) in a way that contradicts his humanity because the very first thing that he said was: 'I am a servant of Allah'. They concealed this whole issue because these words refute the claim they wanted to ascribe to Isa (Jesus). Allah says: '…will speak to people in the cradle (in his infancy) and in his adulthood...' (Al-'Imran: 46).

We know that 'speaking in the cradle' means that he was an infant and that 'in adulthood' means when he would reach the age of thirty, i.e. his fourth decade. Some have said that the word "adulthood" means one who has reached the age of forty. In their account, the story of the crucifixion occurred before he reached this age and that he spoke in the cradle but did not get the chance to speak openly as a grown man. They say that the story of the crucifixion (or his being hidden from human awareness) happened before he reached this age. Then, there must come a time when Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon them will speak at this age. Allah’s true words ‘will speak to people in the cradle (in his infancy) and in his adulthood...’ (Al-‘Imran: 46) also mean that he spoke in the cradle as a child and he will speak as a fully mature, grown man. We know that Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary) underwent change and passed through different states. If they claim that he is God or the son of God, is the divinity in the cradle the same as the divinity in maturity?

If the divinity was in the cradle only, it is deficient because he did not continue being in the cradle and underwent changes. Since he underwent changes, he was mutable, and if he was mutable, he could not have been God or the son of God. After this, Allah says of Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary): ‘He will be one of the righteous’ (Al-‘Imran: 46). What is the story behind this? The prodigy that Allah speaks of is that when Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him spoke to the people in his cradle; it was not by his own choice and his speech as a grown man would be inspired by a Revelation, so he would have no choice in that, either. The statement, ‘He will be one of the righteous’ (Al-‘Imran: 46), refers to his deeds and behaviour. Why? Because it is not sufficient for him to just deliver the Message, and nor to bear signs; it was a must that he carries out the faith-based behaviours.

Allah says, on the tongue of Virgin Maryam (Mary):

قَالَتۡ رَبِّ أَنَّىٰ يَكُونُ لِي وَلَدٞ وَلَمۡ يَمۡسَسۡنِي بَشَرٞۖ قَالَ كَذَٰلِكِ ٱللَّهُ
يَخۡلُقُ مَا يَشَآءُۚ إِذَا قَضَىٰٓ أَمۡرٗا فَإِنَّمَا يَقُولُ لَهُۥ كُن فَيَكُونُ ﴿٤٧﴾

She said, ‘My Lord, how can I have a son when no man has touched me?’ [The angel] said, ‘This is how God creates what He will: when He has ordained something, He only says, “Be”, and it is [47] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 47)

We wish to pause here and reflect on her statement: ‘My Lord, how can I have a son when no Man has touched me?’ (Al-‘Imran: 47) If she had stopped at ‘My Lord, how can I have a son...’ (Al-‘Imran: 47), her question would have been logical. However, her addition of '…when no man has touched me?' (Al-'Imran: 47) raises the question: why did she add the part '…when no man has touched me?' (Al-'Imran: 47). Did someone say to her, "You will bear a child without means of a father"? The Angels did not tell her that. So, her thoughts were directed by them to the issue of being touched.

It is the instinct and intelligence of one who was ready and prepared to receive from Allah when He says to her*:* '…the Messiah, Jesus, son of Mary...' (Al-'Imran: 45).

She said to herself, "By Allah's command, his lineage is ascribed to me and so he has no father." Allah calls Isa (Jesus) the '…son of Mary' and so she asked, '…when no Man has touched me?' (Al-'Imran: 47) It is not possible in her culture for a child to be ascribed to the mother, while the father exists. Thus, we see Virgin Maryam's (Mary's) shrewdness in receiving from Allah. She was concerned when she realised that Isa (Jesus) had been ascribed to her and she said to herself, "My pregnancy of Isa (Jesus) will occur without a father, yet how can pregnancy occur when no Man has touched me?"

The Creator the Most Generous says, 'This is how', i.e. that no man will touch you. He does not say to her, "We have ascribed him to you because you are vowed to the service of the Temple"; rather, He says*:* 'This is how', confirming what she had understood: that Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him would be conceived without any man touching her. The Omnipotence of His Power is revealed in His Words, 'Allah creates what He wills...' (Al-'Imran: 47) This is omnipotence of power, the absolute control over human reproduction, procreation, and childlessness. Omnipotent power does not stop at the creation of males and females. If this were the case, how was Adam, the first human, created? Allah is able to create without a male or a female as in the case of Adam's creation peace be upon him. He also creates by means of only one of them such as the creation of Eve, or Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. The Almighty Creator who initially created masculinity and femininity is capable of fulfilling creation. The male and female can also be present and the ability to reproduce is not.

Allah says, 'Allah has control of the heavens and the Earth; He creates whatever He wills - He grants female offspring to whomever He wills, male to whomever He wills, or both male and female and He makes whoever He wills barren: He is All-knowing and All-powerful’. (al-Shura: 49-50)

This is the will of Allah, so do not say, “It is the completion of the two elements, male and female, that causes creation.” Creation occurs by Allah’s will. Allah says*:* ‘This is how Allah creates what He wills: when He has ordained something, He only says, "Be" and it is’. (Al-‘Imran: 47) You, oh mutable beings, act by the use of means, but the One Who created you and created the means has the power to create without means, for He created the world, in the beginning, without any means.

Allah Glorified is He says about Isa (Jesus) peace be with him:

وَيُعَلِّمُهُ ٱلْكِتَٰبَ وَٱلْحِكْمَةَ وَٱلتَّوْرَىٰةَ وَٱلْإِنجِيلَ ﴿٤٨﴾

He will teach him the Scripture and wisdom, the Torah and the Gospel [48] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 48)

When we hear, ‘He will teach him Al-kitab [the Scripture]...’, we understand that Allah will teach Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) the Revelations He will send down to him; namely, the Gospel. However, Allah says afterwards, ‘…and the Torah and the Gospel’; this matter poses a question: what, then, does “Al-kitab” refer to? Does it mean that he will be taught the Scriptures that have been previously revealed such as the Psalms and the Scriptures of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him? This may be the case. Therefore, ‘And He will teach him Al-kitab…’ may mean Allah has taught Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) the Books that were revealed before him: the Psalms of Dawud (David), the Scriptures of Ibrahim (Abraham) and the Torah of Musa (Moses), all which Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) came to complete.

Some scholars have said that Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was endowed with nine-tenths of all the beauty of calligraphy ever granted to humankind. This means that we may also interpret Al-kitab as “writing” or “the ability to write”. The Arabic word ketab (literally: “book”) is derived from the stem kataba (literally: “to write”). Let us consider the meaning of the verse at hand. In addition to Al-kitab (”the scripture” or “the ability to write”), Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him received from Allah ‘…wisdom and the Torah and the Gospel'. (Al-'Imran: 48) The word "wisdom' is usually mentioned in the Quran following mention of a revealed Scripture, as in Allah's words: 'And keep to mind what is recited in your houses of the communications of Allah and the wisdom; surely Allah is Knower of subtleties, Aware'. (al-Ahzab: 34)

"The communications of Allah" here means the Noble Quran and "the wisdom" means the teachings of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him Prophet Muhammad received the Quran and delivered it as it is and Allah also revealed to him matters that he was allowed to deliver in his own words. That was the wisdom Prophet Muhammad shared. As for the Torah, Allah has taught it to Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. As we know, the mission of Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) was to complete the Torah and restore what the Jews had concealed of the truth told in it. The Torah was the basis of legislation during his lifetime and for the community to whom he was sent. Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) was, according to this verse of the Quran, '... a Messenger to the Children of Israel'.

Allah says*:*

وَرَسُولًا إِلَىٰ بَنِىٓ إِسْرَٰٓءِيلَ أَنِّى قَدْ جِئْتُكُم بِـَٔايَةٍ مِّن رَّبِّكُمْ ۖ أَنِّىٓ أَخْلُقُ لَكُم
مِّنَ ٱلطِّينِ كَهَيْـَٔةِ ٱلطَّيْرِ فَأَنفُخُ فِيهِ فَيَكُونُ طَيْرًۢا بِإِذْنِ ٱللَّهِ ۖ وَأُبْرِئُ
ٱلْأَكْمَهَ وَٱلْأَبْرَصَ وَأُحْىِ ٱلْمَوْتَىٰ بِإِذْنِ ٱللَّهِ ۖ وَأُنَبِّئُكُم بِمَا تَأْكُلُونَ وَمَا
تَدَّخِرُونَ فِى بُيُوتِكُمْ ۚ إِنَّ فِى ذَٰلِكَ لَءَايَةً لَّكُمْ إِن كُنتُم مُّؤْمِنِينَ ﴿٤٩﴾

He will send him as a messenger to the Children of Israel: "I have come to you with a sign from your Lord: I will make the shape of a bird for you out of clay, then breathe into it and, with God's permission, it will become a real bird; I will heal the blind and the leper, and bring the dead back to life with God's permission; I will tell you what you may eat and what you may store up in your houses. There truly is a sign for you in this, if you are believers [49] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 49)

Prophethood requires a sign to prove it. It is not for anyone to just claim, "I am a Messenger from Allah!" Rather, he must show people a miracle to prove he truly is a Messenger from Allah. A miracle, as we know, is an extraordinary matter that goes beyond the limitations of natural laws and norms. Its purpose is to confirm the truthfulness of the Messenger. Such a sign stands as evidence against whoever denies the Message of Allah, as if it were saying to them, “If you deny that this is a Messenger of Allah, how, then, can you explain that he is able to perform a miracle, an extraordinary thing that goes beyond laws and norms?!” Thus, a miracle confounds a denier who defies the Messenger since he can neither explain it nor produce one like it.

For this reason, we have previously said that whenever Allah gave a miracle to a Messenger, it was meant to challenge his people with something at which they excelled. If Allah challenged a people with something they had no knowledge of, their reply to the Messenger would be, “You have brought something completely new to us. If we were familiar with it, we would certainly surpass you in it!” For this reason, whenever Allah granted a miracle to any of His Messengers, it was of a kind that his people were particularly excellent in. An example of this is the miracle given to Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him: Allah sent him to a people who excelled in magic, so his miracle was of a kind that was suitable to challenge magicians.

It is very important to note that the miracle of Prophet Musa (Moses) was by no means magic; it apparently resembled the magic that his people mastered, but it was a real miracle, not an illusion. Magicians used to deceive people with things that were not real. In the Quran, Allah clarifies to us the difference between the miracle He has given to His Messenger and his people’s magic. Allah says*:* ‘Musa (Moses), what is that in your right hand?” “It is my staff,” he said, “I lean on it; restrain my sheep with it; I also have other uses for it.” Allah says, “Throw it down, Musa (Moses)”. He threw it down and– lo and behold! – it became a fast-moving snake’. (Ta Ha: 17-20)

Allah meant to tell Musa (Moses) peace be upon him that the limit of his knowledge of that thing in his hand was confined to its being a staff he used for those common chores. However, in the Knowledge of Allah and with His Power, it could be something entirely different. For this reason, Allah commanded Prophet Musa (Moses) to throw down the staff. Once he did, he saw it turn into a snake moving rapidly which cast fear into his soul. The fear it cast into his soul was the sign that distinguished the miracle of Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him from the magic of his people. Why? When a magician throws down his staff, people see it a snake, but he still sees it as a staff; people see his illusion, but he sees reality. If the magician himself saw it as a snake, he would be as frightened as his audience would. Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him felt that fear since he saw his staff turn into a real snake. Hence, Allah says to him: 'He [Allah] said, "Pick it up without fear: We shall turn it back into its former state"'. (Ta Ha: 21) If it had been magic meant to delude his people, it would not have made him afraid because he would have seen reality, not the delusion. He would have seen it as a staff, though others would have seen it as a snake. This is the difference that proves it to be a miracle, a real one, and not sheer deception.

The people of Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) were renowned for medicine, so Allah gave him a miracle that was related to medicine. Allah challenged the people of Prophet 'Isa, not just by making him superior to them in the field wherein they excelled, but He also made him bring the dead back to life. Needless to say, that it is completely out of the scope of medicine. A physician can never grant life to the dead, but the Messenger of Allah did it by Allah's Might and Will to prove his Prophethood. For this reason, Allah granted His servant and Messenger 'Isa (Jesus) a miraculous sign that went far beyond the scope of human ability. Prophet 'Isa did not only heal the sick, but also raised the dead by the Will of his Almighty Creator. Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) said, '…"I have come to you with a sign from your Lord: I will make the shape of a bird for you out of clay, then breathe into it and, with Allah's permission, it will become a real bird...."' (Al-'Imran: 49) Let us ponder the meaning of this noble verse.

To "make" or "create" something means to produce something according to a design determined by its maker or creator. It is an idea that starts in the mind, and then it becomes crystallized and is finally put into reality accordingly. If the final product does not match that design, then it is not creation; it is just something random produced with neither knowledge nor design. If someone takes a piece of clay and makes a random shape of it, this is not creation. Creation means making something according to a definite design. An example of this is a cup or glass that we use to drink. Cups are not grown on trees. A manufacturer melts sand, mixes it with chemicals to remove impurities from it and then shapes it into a cup. So, a cup does not exist until a maker determines its design and produces it accordingly. This is what “creation” means.

Nevertheless, there are remarkable differences between human creation and the creation of Allah the Exalted. Humans create things using materials that already exist, but Allah creates things from nothingness. A human employs the materials Allah has created for him to produce things by His Will. No one can produce a cup were it not for the raw material Allah has created. This is the first difference between the creation of Allah and the creation of humankind. Both are comprised of the process of production based on a definite design; however, Allah creates things from nothingness, based on no materials that had existed before, whereas man must use the materials Allah has made for him to create things.

Moreover, there is the secret Allah puts in His creation, a secret not in the scope of humankind to give: life. It is what makes the creatures of Allah grow, develop, and reproduce. One may create a cup, but it would remain a cup; it would not grow and there would never be male and female cups to reproduce! We may produce things, but the secret of life that leads to growth, development, reproduction, etc. is only in the Hands of Allah the One and the All-Powerful Creator of all things. Human creation is thus dependent on the existence of necessary materials and cannot exceed the limits set by Allah Who creates things out of nothing, without depending on previously-existing materials.

Also, Allah creates things male and female and gives them the capability to reproduce, as He says in the Noble Quran, ‘And certainly did We create Man from an extract of clay. Then We placed him as a sperm-drop in a firm lodging. Then We made the sperm-drop into a clinging clot and We made the clot into a lump [of flesh] and We made [from] the lump, bones and We covered the bones with flesh; then We developed him into another creation. So, blessed is Allah, the best of creators!’ (al-Mu’minun: 12-14). Allah has created all things from nothing, whereas human creation is confined to the raw materials He has made available to them. Allah creates life in His creatures and endows them with the ability to reproduce. Humans can create things, but they cannot put into them the secret of life. Glory is for Allah, the Best of all creators!

Now, let us reflect again on the words of Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) as quoted in the Quran: ‘…“I have come to you with a sign from your Lord: I will make the shape of a bird for you out of clay, then breathe into it and, with Allah’s permission, it will become a real bird...”’ (Al-‘Imran: 49) Any human being can create a statue in the form of a bird, but Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) made a real bird out of that statue and that was the miracle Allah gave him to support his call. Someone might ask, “Which did he breathe into? Did he breathe into the bird statue, the clay, or the shape he created?” The first supposition is that he breathed into the clay after he made it in the form of a bird and the case is similar if he breathed into the clay. Another verse of the Quran mentions that life was breathed into the shape: ‘Then Allah will say, “Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary)! Remember My favour to you and to your mother: how I strengthened you with the holy spirit so that you spoke to people in your infancy and as a grown Man; how I taught you the Scripture and wisdom, the Torah and the Gospel; how, by My leave, you fashioned the shape of a bird out of clay, breathed into it and it became, by My leave, a bird...”’. (al-Ma‘ida: 110) The pronoun “it” in the aforesaid verse refers to “the shape”. So, the act of breathing is sometimes associated with the clay or the bird and sometimes with the shape.

About the Virgin Maryam (Mary), Allah says*:* ‘…And Maryam (Mary), daughter of ‘Imran, whose body was chaste, therefore We breathed therein something of Our Spirit. And she put faith in the words of her Lord and His scriptures and was of the obedient’. (at-Tahrim: 12) The act of breathing in this verse is associated with her womb to which the adverb “therein” refers. Another verse also in relation to Virgin Maryam (Mary) says*:* ‘Remember the one who guarded her chastity. We breathed into her from Our Spirit and made her and her son a sign for all people’. (al-Anbiya’: 91).

In one verse, the act of breathing is associated with her womb and in another with herself. The two statements have the same meaning. In the verse we are dealing with, the miracle is not that Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) made a clay statue of a bird because anyone can do such a thing; it is the act of breathing into it thus causing it to be alive: '... I will make the shape of a bird for you out of clay, then breathe into it and, with Allah's permission, it will become a real bird...' (Al-'Imran: 49).

As for the shaping of a bird from clay, anyone can do this. Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him shaped the bird and breathed into it. The assertion that he did that "by Allah's permission" encompasses both the making of the bird form and the act of breathing into it that caused it to be a real bird. Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) would not have dared do all that without Allah's permission. The statement "by Allah's permission" was made by Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) as a recognition by him that this was not his own doing, but the Will and Might of Allah Who wanted to support him by that miracle. It was as though Prophet 'Isa meant to say to his people that this miracle should not mislead them into worshiping him, or why were they not thus misled by the test they were put through when Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) cut up the four birds, placed each part on a separate mountain and then called them, so they flew to him: 'And when Ibrahim (Abraham) said, "My Lord, show me how You give life to the dead". Allah says, "Have you not believed?" He said, "Yes, but [I ask] only that my heart may be satisfied". Allah said, "Take four birds and commit them to yourself. Then [after slaughtering them] put on each hill a portion of them; then call them - they will come [flying] to you in haste. And know that Allah is Exalted in Might and Wise"'. (al-Baqara: 260)

If the act of breathing into a bird statue and making it real should mislead you into considering 'Isa (Jesus) a deity, then the temptation should have been stronger with Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him who slew the birds that then came back to him when he called them! If the reason you worship 'Isa (Jesus) is that he came into this world without a father, then it would have been more fitting to idolize Adam whom Allah brought into this life with neither a mother nor a father! Thus, their flagrant sin of ascribing divinity to 'Isa (Jesus) is entirely groundless and illogical.

Then, Allah continues to quote Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him: '…I will heal the blind and the leper and bring the dead back to life with Allah's permission…' (Al-'Imran: 49). Why did 'Isa mention these two diseases in particular? They were the two epidemics of that time. The Arabic word akmah (rendered in the verse as “blind”) means he who is born blind and leprosy is a disease that starts with whitening of parts of the skin, even brown or dark skin. White patches continue to spread over the skin, which indicate a decrease in the substance that causes the skin colour. In the course of time, whiteness covers all the body and a person becomes a leper.

It has been proven that skin is given its colour by special glands in the body. If they stop producing the colour substance, leprosy occurs (and we seek refuge with Allah from it). It was an incurable disease then. When Allah sent ‘Isa (Jesus) son of Maryam (Mary) as a Prophet, He gave him a miraculous sign in the same field his people mastered: medicine. He brought them a sign from Allah by curing what they could not cure despite their excellence in the field.

In an attempt to simplify the miracle of Prophet ‘Isa and make it easier to comprehend to the minds of people, some say they were only miracles given in their time, for it is possible that cures for these diseases will be discovered later. To them, I say: No, a miracle remains a miracle until the end of time. How is that?

For example, let us consider ophthalmology. They said there can be a cure for blindness by transplanting an artificial cornea into the eye of a blind person. Dermatologists also said there can be a cure for leprosy. Several kinds of treatment have been discovered to unify the skin colour eventhough the original colour of the skin cannot be restored. Such discoveries have made some people think that the miracles of Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) were only advanced for their time. However, this understanding is obviously faulty bearing in mind the means used in each case.

Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him used to cure by words and prayers. No matter how much science develops, it will still be far behind such a method of treatment! Scientists do analysis, mix chemicals and conduct surgeries to treat diseases. Thus, till the end of time, the miracle of Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon them remains a miracle. Allah then mentions Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) saying: ‘...and bring the dead back to life with Allah’s permission; I will tell you what you may eat...’ (Al-‘Imran: 49).

As for bringing the dead back to life, Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) did not have an absolute power to do that without any limitations. He was not granted the power within himself to raise any dead person; he only did it with certain individuals by the permission of Allah, such as Sam, son of Nuh (Noah), and Lazarus (Eleazar). Allah enabled His Messenger to do that only to prove the truth of his call, but it was a limited ability over which Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) had no control. No Prophet or Messenger of Allah could contradict or change the life spans Allah has predestined for His servants. Due to this fact, it has been related that when Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) raised Sam, son of Nuh (Noah), from death, the latter came back to life only to say one word then returned to death again. It was as a mission assigned to him by Allah to support the call of His servant and Messenger.

Allah then states Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), as saying: ‘…I will tell you what you may eat and what you may store up in your houses...’ (Al-‘Imran: 49).

Everyone has his personal life of which no one knows the details. Every person, for instance, prefers certain kinds of foods that he cooks in certain ways, ways which he knows well and others do not know. The other miracles, like creating a bird, healing the blind and the leprous and raising the dead, are general matters that have no relation to any particular person. However, the fact that he could tell what every person used to eat at home was quite a personal matter. How can anyone tell what you had for breakfast today unless you told him, or he saw you, or someone else saw and told him? Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary) was given this miracle by His Almighty Lord. It is far from plausible to think that Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) entered every house or had any means to obtain such information other than by Divine Revelation.

The same applies to his knowledge of what his people stored up in their houses. Some would claim that perhaps Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) caught the scent of every person and thus managed to tell what they usually ate. To refute such a claim, Allah made him also tell his people what they stored up in their houses: that was an obvious sign that he received Revelation from Him Who knows all hidden affairs.

‘... There truly is a sign for you in this, if you are believers’ (Al-‘Imran: 49). This is a wondrous sign that confirmed he received Revelation from a Transcendental Power, the power of Allah Glorified is He. If you believe in the existence of this power, then you must believe in the Message that ‘Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), brought. A “Messenger” means a servant of Allah chosen by Him to receive His Message and deliver it to those above whom he has been elevated. A miraculous sign influences only those who believe in the existence of the All-Powerful Allah. It is meant to firm up the faith of those who already submit to Allah and have readiness to accept His Message. As for him who does not believe in Allah in the first place, a sign, eventhough miraculous cannot benefit him or establish faith in his heart.

In the following verse, Allah continues quoting Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus):

وَمُصَدِّقٗا لِّمَا بَيۡنَ يَدَيَّ مِنَ ٱلتَّوۡرَىٰةِ وَلِأُحِلَّ لَكُم بَعۡضَ ٱلَّذِى حُرِّمَ
عَلَيۡكُمۡۚ وَجِئۡتُكُم بِـَٔايَةٖ مِّن رَّبِّكُمۡ فَٱتَّقُواْ ٱللَّهَ وَأَطِيعُونِ ﴿٥٠﴾

I have come to confirm the truth of the Torah which preceded me, and to make some things lawful to you which used to be forbidden. I have come to you with a sign from your Lord. Be mindful of God, obey me [50]
(The Quran, Al-’Imran: 50)

We have said before that the word “confirm,” in this context, means that what Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) brought was in accordance with what came in the Torah. We have said before: the Torah was revealed before him and still existed at his time. Now, this might pose a question: If ‘Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), came to confirm the Torah and if the Torah still existed at his time, why then was he sent with a new Message? Allah answers this question in the same verse by telling us that Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) came with new rulings: ‘…and to make some things lawful to you which used to be forbidden…’ (Al-‘Imran: 50) So, the Message of Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) came, not just to confirm the truth revealed in the Torah, but also to make lawful some of the things forbidden in it.

Someone might wonder: If divine Books come to confirm one another, what is the point in their successive Revelation? The answer is: first and foremost, each Book is revealed to remind those who have forgotten what was revealed in the previous Books. Second, each divine Book came with new rulings that suited the time, place and circumstances of the people to whom it was revealed. This is the point of sending the divine Books that were successively revealed by Allah to His Messengers: they have served as reminders to people of understanding and established new rulings.

It goes without saying that the fundamentals of faith do not change, and nor do events and stories of past nations. However, rulings are subject to change based on circumstances. This is the meaning intended by the words of Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) as quoted in the Quran: '…and to make some things lawful to you which used to be forbidden…' (Al-'Imran: 50) We know that Prophet 'Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), was sent to the Children of Israel and whatever Allah has forbidden or permitted is for a reason He knows. There is wisdom behind everything Allah ordains. Do not think that everything Allah forbids is harmful. No, Allah may forbid certain things simply to discipline people. A believer should avoid whatever Allah forbids without questioning the reason or the harm such things may pose. One could live and die without discovering the harm behind some of the things Allah has forbidden. One may wonder: Why has Allah forbidden such-and-such? What harm does it do us? Allah does not always forbid things because they are harmful. Allah may forbid things for other reasons and therefore He says: 'For the wrongdoings done by the Jews, We forbade them certain good things that had been permitted to them before: for having frequently debarred others from Allah's path'. (an-Nisa': 160).

In another verse, Allah explains to us the "certain good things" the Jews have been forbidden: 'We forbade for the Jews every animal with claws and the fat of cattle and sheep except what is on their backs and in their intestines, or that which sticks to their bones. This is how We penalized them for their disobedience: We are true to Our word'. (Al-'Imran: 146).

Therefore, harmfulness is not necessarily the only reason for the prohibition of a certain thing. This explains to us what Prophet 'Isa (Jesus), a servant and Messenger of Allah, said to the Children of Israel: '…and to make some things lawful to you which used to be forbidden....' (Al-'Imran: 50) Prophet 'Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), came with a command from Allah to make lawful for the Children of Israel what He had previously forbidden them.

Allah concludes the noble verse by quoting the words of His servant and Messenger, ‘Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary): ‘I have come to you with a sign from your Lord. Be mindful of Allah, obey me’. (Al-‘Imran: 50) All that has been stated- the miraculous signs and the commands of Allah to allow some of what the Jews have been forbidden- constitute indisputable evidence: they prove that ‘Isa (Jesus) was the Messenger of Allah, for it would have been impossible for a mortal like him to bring any such miraculous signs unless he had been sent and supported by Him the Exalted and Almighty. After thus proving his Prophethood, Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) called his people to believe in Allah Who has Absolute Power and Might to suspend laws and norms and Who has given those miracles to His servant and Messenger. He called them to be mindful of Allah and obey His ordinances.

In the following verse, Allah still quotes Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary):

إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ رَبِّي وَرَبُّكُمْ فَٱعْبُدُوهُ هَٰذَا صِرَٰطٌ مُّسْتَقِيمٌ (٥١)

God is my Lord and your Lord, so serve Him – that is a straight path [51] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 51)

In this verse, we find a declaration by Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) that he- as well as those he was sent to-were all servants of Allah Who has created them from nothing, provides for them and protects them. By this declaration, ‘Isa (Jesus) asserts that he is but a servant of Allah. He meant to make it clear to his people that the miraculous signs he was given were by no means intended to make him a master over them, let alone a deity! Rather, both he and they were servants of Allah Who is worthy of worship.

‘Indeed, Allah is my Lord and your Lord, so worship Him. That is the straight path’. (Al-‘Imran: 51) A “straight path” is one that does not deviate, for if it does, it takes those walking along it away from their goal. Consider the circle as a geometric shape: it has a circumference, a centre, and radii that join this centre to any point on the circumference. The farther we get from the centre, the greater the distances separating us and vice versa. Closeness to the centre means agreement and harmony. Differences occur between human beings when they stray from the centre. This centre is the essence of faith; it is servitude and submission to the One (Allah) Who has created us all. People split into sects when they follow their whims and stray from the Straight Path of Allah. Unity and harmony can only be achieved when we devote ourselves to Him Glorified is He.

Even the radii of a circle, from the circumference to the centre, are separated from each other by certain distances. Then, they get closer to each other as they approach the centre, and become all united in one point at the centre, with no distance whatsoever separating them. Likewise, people find harmony and agreement when they unite under the banner of servitude to Allah, the One God. If they stray from this point of agreement and unity, they become distanced from each other and disagreement ensues. For this reason, Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), called people to the worship of Allah: ‘Indeed, Allah is my Lord and your Lord, so worship Him. That is the straight path’. (Al-‘Imran: 51) Such is the Message Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) was sent with. Allah made him declare this creed when he was still in the cradle: ‘He said, “Indeed, I am a servant of Allah. He has given me the Scripture and made me a Prophet”’. (Maryam: 30)

The issue of his servitude to Allah was settled from the beginning: ‘Isa (Jesus) is a servant of Allah, not his son or partner, and this is the essence of his Message. Then his role as a Messenger who was assigned delivery of the ordinance of Allah to His creation comes so they would act upon it in every aspect of their lives. Normally, when a Messenger comes with guidance from Allah, his aim is to call all his people to follow this guidance and abide by the commands and prohibitions of Allah. Obedience to commands may involve difficulty since moral obligation is always heavy. Prohibitions also involve difficulty since they may deprive one from something he loves to do.

Throughout life, one often sways between two things: a difficult thing he tries to avoid and a desirable thing he craves. Divine guidance has been sent down to discipline humankind, to tell us what to do and what to avoid for our own good. However, moral obligation always involves the trying difficulty of commitment to what is right, on the one hand, and holding one's reins to abstain from what is wrong, on the other hand. Most people do not realise the sublime end meant to be achieved through this commitment, so they let the evil inside them prevail over goodness and defy the commands of their All-Wise Creator. When evil insinuations tyrannize over one's mind, they drag him into rebellion against the responsibilities of faith. They tempt him into committing things prohibited by Allah. Such rebellion is what brings on disunity and dispute among people, of whom the majority fail to realise- let along focus on- the ultimate goal behind their existence.

Human deeds fall into two categories: deeds complying with faith and thus causing harmony among humankind and the universe, and deeds committed in defiance or disobedience of faith which thus spoil this harmony and throw one into the calamity of conflict with oneself and the universe. Deeds that agree with and firm-up one's faith are considered deeds of righteousness. On the other hand, deeds that cause one to deviate from his goal are evil deeds. In all that one does, his goal is what motivates him and directs him to make his choice.

For example, a school or college student has the goal of graduating with a particular skill-set and starting a particular career. Assessment of his actions depends on these criteria: Does this action draw him closer to his goal, or farther from it? If he is hard working, then his conduct is of a kind that serves his purpose. If he is sluggish, he thus deviates far away from his goal. Therefore, goals contribute to determining whether a deed is useful or otherwise. Most people are deceived into directing their efforts to unworthy goals, thus straying from the real goal they should be reaching for. When one reaches for the wrong goal, he will slide into conflict, perplexity, and misguidance. Whoever makes this worldly life his ultimate goal will crave transient enjoyment however he can even by indulging in unlawful pleasures. Some people understand that this life is not the goal, but is only a journey. A question must follow: What is the goal, then? A believer would answer: It is the meeting with Allah and success in the Hereafter. His deeds will, therefore, be in line with this goal. However, a disbeliever who makes this life alone his goal, and who does not believe in the Afterlife (when people will enter Paradise or Hell), is immersed in his misguidance seeking whatever his soul desires and refraining from everything that tires him even if his ultimate happiness lies in it.

A believer, however, knows that the life of this world is just a journey and the goal is achieving success at the conclusion of this journey. For this reason, he strives to fulfil his duty to Allah in order to reach his goal: Paradise. So, behaviour is corrupted when one fails to determine the real goal he is brought to life for. Goodness is to realise this goal, know the deeds that get you closer to it and do them with diligence and patience. Evil deeds, on the contrary, make us refrain from reaching for this goal and do what causes us to deviate from it.

Knowledge of the goal we are created for comes first and foremost, and then comes our reaction to this knowledge. Some people’s attitudes towards many events come in a way that is contrary to knowledge of the ultimate goal. If you know that we are all going to experience the Hereafter and will meet Allah, why do you grieve- to the extent of despair- when someone you love passes to the Mercy of Allah? Why do you immerse yourself in sadness when, in truth, Allah has only taken him nearer to the ultimate goal? Grieve we must, doubtless; your beloved person must be missed and you must feel sad for yourself for a time. As for sadness on his account, there is nothing to justify it: No harm has been done to him; he has only reached the goal we are all seeking.

Suppose a group of people wanted to travel to Alexandria from Cairo. One may have to go on foot because he has no money or access to a means of transportation. Another may go riding a donkey and a third on horseback. One may go on a bus, or on-board a plane. Maybe someone could even travel by a rocket! They perhaps take different ways, but each of them finally reaches the goal by the means available to them. Likewise, the journey of one person to Allah may take him seventy years, whereas another may be called to meet Him after a short journey. Why then, should you feel sad for him?

We should be sad for a person who has strayed from the goal and led a misguided life. As for him who was guided to serving the goal in the manner Allah has ordained, we should be happy for him: Allah has cut short for him the distance that separated him from his goal. A parent would break his heart over a beloved child who died at a young age lamenting his misfortune of not seeing enough of the world. Dear parent, just think again: Allah has only spared your child many sins he would have committed and a long journey he would have travelled, and has taken him faster to the ultimate goal we all seek, so why let sadness overcome you? This is not meant to sound callous; rather, it is a call to resign ourselves to whatever Allah decrees in matters out of our hands. He is the All-Wise and All-Merciful and everything He decrees is for a reason.

After those noble verses where Allah speaks about the Virgin Maryam (Mary) and Prophet 'Isa (Jesus), He the Exalted and Almighty says*:*

فَلَمَّآ أَحَسَّ عِيسَىٰ مِنْهُمُ ٱلْكُفْرَ قَالَ مَنْ أَنصَارِىٓ إِلَى ٱللَّهِ ۖ قَالَ ٱلْحَوَارِيُّونَ
نَحْنُ أَنصَارُ ٱللَّهِ ءَامَنَّا بِٱللَّهِ وَٱشْهَدْ بِأَنَّا مُسْلِمُونَ ٥٢

When Jesus realized they [still] did not believe, he said, 'Who will help me in God's cause?' The disciples said, 'We will be God's helpers; we believe in God – witness our devotion to Him [52] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 52)

Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) was keen to obviously declare the essence of faith and purpose of his Message from the very beginning: 'Indeed, Allah is my Lord and your Lord, so worship Him. That is the straight path'. (Al-'Imran: 51) Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) thus indisputably clarified the truth to his people: both you and I are servants of Allah, the One God, and I have no advantage over you except that He has chosen me to deliver the Message to you. With regards to worship, we are all equal before Him: Allah is my Lord and your Lord and the straight way is to worship Him alone, with no partners.

The phrase "the straight path" conveys the meaning of a road leading to an end. No road is made for its own sake; it must be meant to lead somewhere. When we hear the word "path," we instantly understand that there must be an end to be sought through this path. Allah Glorified is He says*:* 'This is My path, leading straight, so follow it and do not follow other ways: they will lead you away from it'. This is what He commands you to do so that you may refrain from wrongdoing'. (al-An'am: 153)

One must first determine the end he wants to pursue so that he may find the right way that can take him there. Let us read again the words of 'Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), as Allah quotes him in the Quran: 'Indeed, Allah is my Lord and your Lord, so worship Him…' (Al-'Imran: 51).

The concept of worship encompasses every deed by which a servant shows devotion to his Lord. It is not restricted to observance of rituals; it is not just about uttering the Testimony of Faith- “I testify that there is no deity but Allah and Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah”. It is not just about performing salah (prayer), paying zakat (poor dues), and observing sawm (fasting) of Ramadan and performing hajj (pilgrimage to Mecca) for whoever can afford the journey are the only practices connected to worship. These are the tenets of Islam on which it is based, but does a building constitute of pillars only? Likewise, one’s faith cannot be complete when he is disconnected from his Lord except for the limited time when he observes rituals. Rituals are mandatory for every Muslim; they are the source of spiritual energy that refuels faith and empowers the soul to struggle for the cause of Allah. Worship is not confined to rituals, but it includes every action one does to contribute to the welfare of humanity and prosperity of the world, while directing his intention to pleasing Allah. “The pillars of worship” is a term Islamic scholars of jurisprudence have developed to draw a distinction between the various sections of worship and their juristic rulings. However, it does not mean worship is confined to those pillars; rather, everything Allah commands is included under the name “worship”. So, worship is comprised of the acts one observes to be connected to his Lord and Creator and recharge his spiritual power, as well as the actions one does to contribute to the prosperity of the universe. We have previously said that the rituals Allah has enjoined on us usually require one to suspend a worldly occupation for a, while to observe them. One is always busy earning or managing other affairs of his life. The clearest example of this is illustrated in the following verse: ‘Oh you who believe! When the call is made for prayer on Friday, then hasten to the remembrance of Allah and leave off trading; that is better for you, if you know’. (al-Jumu‘a: 9)

This command to observe the congregational prayer on Friday requires one to leave off trade temporarily and return to it after the prayer is done. “Trade” is particularly mentioned in the verse since it is the most obviously direct way of earning money and sustenance. This choice of the word “trade” represents one of the countless instances of miraculous precision in the wording of the Noble Quran. Allah did not say, for example, “Leave off manufacturing” or “Leave off farming”; rather, He mentions trade since it is the kind of occupation that yields instant profits. Farming involves waiting for a long time for crops to grow and profits to be generated. Trade, on the other hand, is the kind of occupation where profits are instantly generated upon concluding a transaction. The divine command to leave off this instant profit to hasten for observing the Friday Prayer necessarily implies that every other occupation that can yield profits must be suspended and resumed after the prayer is done.

Precision of the expression used in the verse does not stop here. Even though the term is rendered in the English translation of the verse as "trade," the Arabic word used literally means "selling." Allah particularly addresses sellers, for one would sometimes buy something reluctantly, unlike a seller who is often eager to sell his commodities to gain profits. A man may be buying something for his household and when he hears the call to the Friday Prayer, he should hasten to answer the call and postpone his purchases; he should suspend his shopping once he hears the call to the Friday Prayer. This is normal in the case of a purchaser, for people do not love to pay money, but it would take a seller more effort to suspend his transactions to observe the prayer. By that command, Allah enjoins on us to leave off the tempting occupation of making instant profit by selling goods and receiving their prices.

What should we do when the Friday Prayer is over? 'And when the prayer has been concluded, disperse within the land and seek from the Bounty of Allah and remember Allah often that you may succeed'. (al- Jumu'a: 10) After we observe the Friday Prayer, Allah commands us to return to our worldly affairs and seek out His Bounty. This implies that dispersing throughout the land to seek lawful provision is an act of worship, too.

In the aforementioned verse, a word is particularly worthy of reflecting on: 'disperse within the land…' (al- Jumu'a: 10). The Arabic word "fantashiru" (meaning "disperse") denotes spreading over a wide range which implies a command from Allah that we should take care of all aspects of life and excel in all fields to fulfil our goal and responsibility of achieving prosperity and the wellbeing of humankind. Every act of goodness done for the pleasure of Allah is an act of worship and this is how we should understand the words of Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) son of Maryam (Mary) quoted in the Quran: 'Indeed, Allah is my Lord and your Lord, so worship Him. That is the straight path'. (Al- 'Imran: 51)

After this, Allah says*:* ‘But when ‘Isa (Jesus) felt [persistence in] disbelief from them...’ (Al-‘Imran: 52) He had already made a clear and decisive statement summing up the essence of faith when he declared, ‘Indeed, Allah is my Lord and your Lord...’ (Al-‘Imran: 51) This implies a warning that the followers of Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) may perhaps ascribe to ‘Isa (Jesus) something more than that he is a servant of Allah, who is totally submissive to Him and ordered to obey and worship Him. He thus clarified to them the fundamentals of faith: ‘…That is the straight path’. (Al-‘Imran: 51)

Then, Allah says*:* ‘But when ‘Isa (Jesus) felt [persistence in] disbelief from them...’ (Al-‘Imran: 52) Everyone with a mission and a goal must necessarily have vigilance and discretion. The bearer of a religious call must have sound judgment so he can take people out of the darkness and into the light. Someone may wonder why people tend to live in darkness and are not interested in coming into the light without resistance. The answer is: Some benefit from keeping most people in darkness. Such oppressors usurp the rights of others and spread corruption, so they fear and hate those who call people to the way of Allah. They hate to be advised against evildoing or called to right guidance and logic. They cannot bear to listen to the voice of reason and the call to faith and hate as much those who undertake to spread them.

A caller to the way of Allah has to be wise and discreet. He should know that, while some accept his call and happily embrace the religion of Allah, others are enraged by his call. In every community, there are people who live in corruption; that is their religion. A caller to Allah has to be well aware of such feelings and attitudes so he can deal with them successfully. He has to employ all the senses Allah has granted him- eyesight, hearing, etc. - for this purpose. One who calls to Allah has to dedicate all the abilities Allah has endowed him with to distinguish between those who truly welcome his call and are sincerely ready to accept it, and those who reject it or try to bar people from the way to Allah. He must have judgment and understanding to tell a hypocrite from a true believer.

Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary) declared the essence of faith and the ordinance of Allah. Then, he understood that some who were prone to misguidance and evildoing did not want to accept faith. He was full of vigilance and attentiveness. He knew he was sent with a Message from Allah to save people from deviation and teach them uprightness. When he felt their persistence in disbelief, he found it time to single out those who truly believed with him to aid him in the issue of his call to Allah: '…he said, "Who are my supporters for [the cause of] Allah?"' (Al-'Imran: 52)

Delivering the Message of Allah is like fighting an uphill battle: losses and sacrifices are inevitable. For this end, one may have to sacrifice wealth and even life; so Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) had to choose and urge forward those who believed themselves capable of undertaking such a mission. He did not call specific individuals; rather, he declared his purpose so that supporters who found in themselves the ability to carry the banner of the call would join him. He wanted their sacrifices to be offered voluntarily out of deep faith and true enthusiasm, not just as an answer to an obligation. 'But when 'Isa (Jesus) felt [persistence in] disbelief from them, he asked, "Who are my supporters for [the cause of] Allah?"...' (Al-'Imran: 52) What does "supporter" mean? It means a person who offers all the power he possesses to support your cause.

When Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) asked: 'Who are my supporters for [the cause of] Allah?' (Al-'Imran: 52), he meant to single out those whose intentions were directed to pleasing Allah. He did not want those who sought any worldly gains, such as spoils of war, power, prestige, etc. He wanted to win to his side true supporters who had determination and sincerity so they would give their all to the cause of Allah alone.

This is similar to what happened between Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the men of Medina who pledged allegiance to him at Aqabah. Muhammad, The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him told them: 'I take allegiance from you that you will protect me from what you protect your women and children from'. Ad-Da' ibn Ma'rur took his hand and said, 'Yes, by the One Who has sent you with the Truth, we will protect you from what we protect our families'. They pledged allegiance to Prophet Muhammad on these terms. Then, Abu Al-Haytham ibn At-Tayhan stood up and said, 'Oh Messenger of Allah, we have ties with the Jews and we will sever them. If we do so and Allah grants you victory, will you return to your people [in Mecca] and leave us?' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him smiled and said, ‘No, but I shall sacrifice my blood as you do [during war] and shall hold your property as inviolable and sacred as mine. I belong to you and you belong to me. I shall fight against whoever you fight and make peace with those with whom you make peace’.

Did Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him promise them that they would defeat their enemies and rule the world? No; rather, he peace and blessings be upon him told them: ‘I belong to you and you belong to me’. Had he promised them victory, some of them might have been martyred before seeing it. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him directed them to the ultimate goal which was not necessarily living to see victory. Rather, he said he belonged to them and they to him, which meant they were to be granted his company in paradise. That is the end worth seeking.

Likewise, when Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), asked, ‘…Who are my supporters for [the cause of] Allah?’ (Al-‘Imran: 52), he meant, ‘Who will help me for the pleasure of Allah?’ Why do we understand it in this way? I reflect on the meaning as much as the capacity of my mind allows; the words of Allah are forever rich in their meanings and implications. Therefore, someone else may well derive a different meaning from the verse that has not come to my thoughts. As I have said before, a “supporter” is someone who spares no effort and employs all the power he possesses to back a cause. Given this understanding, what does it mean to “support faith”? Allah answers this in the Noble Quran: ‘Oh, you who believe! If you help (the cause of) Allah, He will help you and make firm your feet’. (Muhammad: 7)

Supporting the cause of Allah is committing ourselves to His religion: this is what He enjoins on us. Thus, a believer’s “help/support” for the cause of Allah is to obey His ordinance. The result is that Allah supports the believers, too, and grants them victory. Accordingly, Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him may have meant by his question, ‘Who will support me so that Allah will include them in His support?’

We are before two forces here: the people of faith and the people of disbelief. Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) asked: ‘…Who are my supporters for [the cause of] Allah?’ (Al-‘Imran: 52) In other words, he asked about those who were ready and able to join the cause and support it wholeheartedly for one goal:

pleasing Almighty Allah. We understand this meaning in light of what Allah says in the following verse: 'Oh you who believe! If you help (the cause of) Allah, He will help you and make firm your feet'. (Muhammad: 7)

The believers are ordained to support the cause of Allah through obedience and when they do, Allah supports them by making them firm in faith and granting them victory. In this way, the question Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) asked his people, '…Who are my supporters for [the cause of] Allah?' (Al-'Imran: 52) bears both senses together. Thus asked, some of the people of Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) answered: '…We are supporters for [the cause of] Allah. We have believed in Allah and testify that we are Muslims [submitting to Him]'. (Al-'Imran: 52) The disciples were a group of people in whose faces the sign of faith shone as though they were brilliantly illuminated. This "light" of the face does not mean white skin; rather, the light of a believer's face is a reflection of the light of faith in his soul. Allah describes those who believed in the Message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as: '…forceful against the disbelievers, merciful among themselves. You see them bowing and prostrating [in prayer], seeking bounty from Allah and [His] Pleasure. Their mark is on their faces from the trace of prostration...' (al-Fath: 29).

Even if a believer is black-skinned, he has brilliance on his face. How is this and why? Because the human body consists of many systems and has been made of atoms, and every system in the human body has a fixed function. When all of these systems are directed to what Allah wishes, all of his body systems work in harmony. Consequently, the soul is at rest. When the functions of these systems are in conflict with one another, a person appears to be gloomy.

When 'Isa (Jesus) said, '... Who are my supporters for [the cause of] Allah?…' (Al-'Imran: 52), he heard the answer from the disciples who were people that enjoyed the brilliance caused by harmony between soul and faith. Perhaps they had good and commendable characteristics which cast brilliance on their faces.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him named some of his Companions "the disciples of the Messenger of Allah." They were the ones whom Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him accompanied all the time. When the disciples of Isa (Jesus) said, 'We are supporters for [the cause of] Allah…' (Al-'Imran: 52), this meant that all of them wanted to be supporters for Allah's cause, and join in with the cause of supporting Allah's guidance. This required each one of them to know the guidance of Allah. We know that the basic element of supporting the cause of Allah is faith. What is faith? It is the heart's tranquillity with regards to something, and this is considered the general meaning of faith. If a person does not believe that the way he takes will lead him to the destination he seeks, he will not follow it.

For example, if a traveller from Cairo to Damietta does not believe that the road he takes is the right road, he will not take it. In addition, if a person does not believe that he will fail if he does not study his lessons, he will not study. So, everything in this world is based on faith. However, if the specific significance of faith is intended, then it refers to the heart's tranquillity towards the most important cause: belief in Allah. Therefore, the basic element of supporting the cause of Allah is the submission of all of a person's limbs to Allah. Therefore, the disciples said, '…We have believed in Allah and testify that we are Muslims [submitting to Him]'. (Al-'Imran: 52)

Why did Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him bear witness upon them? Because a Messenger should convey Allah's Message to his people and bear witness upon them, as Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says: '…and in this [Revelation] that the Messenger may be a witness over you and you may be witnesses over the people. So, establish prayer and give zakah and hold fast to Allah. He is your protector; and excellent is the protector and excellent is the helper'. (al-Hajj: 78)

We should note that Allah caused the disciples to mention the words denoting faith first because it is an unseen matter that settles in the heart. Then, they asked for witnessing that they submitted to Allah because submission to Allah involves submission to the obligations and rulings of faith. Their statement '…and testify that we are Muslims [submitting to Him]' (Al-'Imran: 52) is also a request from them to 'Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), to inform them with all the prerequisites of submission to Allah, i.e., to tell them what they should do and what they should not do.

They said, '... we have believed...' and since they declared their belief in Allah, they believed in the Message conveyed by 'Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam

(Mary), who had to witness that they submitted to Allah. This testimony could not be fulfilled unless he informed them of all the rulings and he did, so they acted in accordance with these rulings and then said,

رَبَّنَآ ءَامَنَّا بِمَآ أَنزَلْتَ وَٱتَّبَعْنَا ٱلرَّسُولَ فَٱكْتُبْنَا مَعَ ٱلشَّٰهِدِينَ ﴿٥٣﴾

Lord, we believe in what You have revealed and we follow the messenger: record us among those who bear witness [to the Truth] [53] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 53)

Does their declaration of faith mean that they believed in the legislation of a previous Message? No; faith here means belief in the Message which ‘Isa (Jesus) conveyed from Allah because every Messenger conveyed a certain Message from Allah, as this is the reason for sending a new Messenger. We know that creeds, historical reports, and stories do not change, but rulings change. This implies that the declaration of faith made by the disciples was a declaration of their belief in the former creeds that were sent before the mission of ‘Isa (Jesus), as well as the rulings and legislations conveyed by him.

They said, ‘Oh our Lord, we have believed in what You revealed...’ The phrase ‘…what You revealed...’ (Al-‘Imran: 53) refers to the Message of guidance which was sent from a high status to a lower one and we receive legislation from a Sublime Entity. We said previously that when Allah calls those who believe in Him to follow the guidance of faith, He says, “come”, i.e., rise to the level of receiving a Message from Allah, follow His Guidance and do not remain at the lowest level of faith. In addition, Allah orders the people not to follow the vain desires, opinions, and legislations of each other. Since a believer desires loftiness with regards to faith, he should adopt the Divine Law in his conduct on earth.

They said, ‘Our Lord, we have believed in what You revealed and have followed the Messenger 'Isa (Jesus)...’ (Al-‘Imran: 53) A follower is usually convinced first by a person he follows so that the act of following originates willingly from the depth of one's heart, not compulsorily or coercively. If we find a person forcing another person to go along with him, we cannot say that a person being forced is “following” the other one. However, we can use the word "follow" when this act takes place willingly and voluntarily. If a person accompanies another by force or compulsion, this act can be called “superficial” following. Accordingly, it is possible for a tyrant to hold a whip and force a weak person to follow him, an act which involves outward submission on the part of the weak person; but his heart has not submitted, as compulsion causes outward submission, but not inward submission.

‘Perhaps, [Oh Muhammad], you would kill yourself with grief that they will not be believers. If We willed, We could send down to them from the sky a sign for which their necks would remain humbled’. (ash-Shu’ara’: 3-4) Allah informs His Messenger that it is not difficult for the Creator to handle any person's affairs, as He is able to give life and death. If He wants to send down a miracle that may cause all His servants to submit humbly to Him, He will do so. However, Allah does not want to compel people, but He wants their hearts to submit to Him willingly. He also wants His Servant and Messenger to have faith, while not being able to compel them to belief. This shows the greatness of faith.

After they had declared their belief in the Message conveyed by 'Isa (Jesus), the disciples said: ‘…so register us among the witnesses [to the truth]’. (Al-‘Imran: 53) This is a request which denotes sublime and vigilant faith. They bore the responsibility of conveying the Message from their Prophet and they bore witness over their nations in the way the Messengers did. In addition, they asked Allah to count them among those who testify that the Messengers convey the Message of Allah which they would convey after them. Therefore, we said about the community of followers of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that it is the community that Allah has charged with the responsibility of conveying Muhammad's Message until the Day of Judgment. Why? The answer is Allah’s saying: ‘And strive for Allah with the striving due to Him. He has chosen you and has not placed upon you, in the religion, any difficulty. [It is] the religion of your father, Ibrahim (Abraham). Allah named you "Muslims" before [in former scriptures] and in this [Revelation] that the Messenger may be a witness over you and you may be witnesses over the people. So, establish prayer and give zakat and hold fast to Allah. He is your protector; and excellent is the protector and excellent is the helper’. (al-Hajj: 78) For this reason, no Prophets or Messengers will come after Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as Allah gave Muhammad's community of followers the responsibility of conveying His Message after his death.

Then, Allah says*:*

وَمَكَرُوا۟ وَمَكَرَ ٱللَّهُ ۖ وَٱللَّهُ خَيْرُ ٱلْمَٰكِرِينَ ﴿٥٤﴾

The [disbelievers] schemed but God also schemed; God is the Best of Schemers [54] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 54)

Things that can be perceived by the mind have names and are recognised first by the senses, as they help him conceive things. Then, we come to know the meanings of things when we grow up. The beginning is always with perceivable matters. Therefore, Allah describes religious Guidance as a straight path because we know the goal and the path that leads to it. The phrase "straight path" is a perceivable matter which people come to know by implementing the rules of this guidance.

The word "makr" (plan) in Arabic is derived from the context of trees. When a person sees a tree whose branches are not twisted around one another, it is possible for him to recognise the branch to which a certain leaf belongs. However, some kinds of trees have their branches wrapped around each other, so a person cannot recognise the branch to which a certain leaf belongs. Therefore, this word "makr" in this context refers to the person who deceives and cheats people. When a person tricks another in order to discover the truth, or uses artifice in order to expose the truth - provided that he intends no harm - this is called a "strategy." However, if harm is intended, this is called an evil makr (plot or plan). Therefore, Allah says*:* '…but the evil plot does not encompass except its own people. Then do they await except the way of the former peoples? But you will never find in the way of Allah any change and you will never find in the way of Allah any alteration'. (Fatir: 43)

This means that there is harmless makr (plan) which is not intended to do harm to anyone: this is called a good makr. However, the makr (plan) that is intended to cause harm is called an evil makr (plot or plan). The question is: what drives a person to scheme? The one who schemes conceals his motives; he may show love when he actually has feelings of hatred. In addition, this person may make an act appear pleasing in order to scheme against people. He may also try to take another person to a distant and uninhabited place in order to severely harm him, or perhaps to kill him.

So, one of the basics of scheming is plotting which requires craftiness and experience because the one who tries to plot may encounter a person who uncovers his plot by conjecture and guessing. As scheming requires plotting, this shows human weakness because the strong person does not scheme or deceive; rather, he confronts directly.

When a strong person catches a weak enemy, he may let him go because he is confident that his strength can harm this weak person. However, when the weak person captures a strong person, he considers this matter as an opportunity that may not come again. Regarding this, a poet said:

When a weak person finds an opportunity, he kills: Such is the power of the weak.

The weak person is the one who schemes and plots. The schemer may take into consideration that his foe has a more cunning plot and more wisdom and that he may harm him severely. Accordingly, the schemer conceals his makr (plan or plot). If the opponents of religious Guidance want to scheme, against whom do they scheme? The Messenger is not alone at this battle; Allah is with him. ‘They [think to] deceive Allah and those who believe, but they deceive not except themselves and perceive [it] not’. (al-Baqara: 9) Allah knows what any person conceals; therefore, when He wants to reveal something and make it prominent, no one can resist His Will and Command. Hence, Allah’s makr (good plan) is unmatchable.

‘And the disbelievers planned, but Allah planned. And Allah is the best of planners’. (Al-‘Imran: 54) When you find an attribute that seems inappropriate to describe Allah with, you should know that it has been mentioned for the purpose of showing similarity only, but it is not one of the Magnificent Names of Allah. The believers may say to the disbelievers, "If you desire to plot against us, Allah is able to turn the scheme against you”. As for the Names and Attributes of Allah, they are tawqifiyah (bound by a religious text and not amenable to personal opinion) and were sent down by Jibril (Gabriel) to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. If an action is ascribed to Allah, it is not possible to derive an attribute from it and use it as a name for Allah. In this verse, ‘And the disbelievers planned, but Allah planned. And Allah is the best of planners...’ (Al-‘Imran: 54), “plotter or schemer" cannot be considered among Allah’s Magnificent Names and we should never say this because the Names and Attributes of Allah are tawqifiyah (bound by a religious text and not amenable to personal opinion). The Planning of Allah is mentioned in order to draw analogy with the people's planning and to show them that they cannot deceive Allah or scheme against Him. This is because if Allah wills to scheme against them, they will be unable to encounter His Scheme. Allah says*:* ‘And the disbelievers planned, but Allah planned. And Allah is the best of planners...’ (Al-‘Imran: 54).

This means that there is a good makr (plan) and this indicates that some people use schemes for good purposes. Why does this verse come here? It came here because ‘Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), engaged in a battle in which he did not fight with a sword to protect the creed. However, he was sent as an adviser to guide the people to faith. Victory is not only attained by a sword, but it can be attained by overwhelming evidence. We know that Allah did not ask any Messenger to fight in the cause of faith because He undertook the punishment of the disobedient.

‘So, each We seized for his sin; and among them were those upon whom We sent a storm of stones and among them were those who were seized by the blast [from the sky] and among them were those whom We caused the earth to swallow and among them were those whom We drowned. And Allah would not have wronged them, but it was they who were wronging themselves’. (al-’Ankabut: 40)

No fighting took place except when the children of Israel asked for it: ‘Have you not considered the assembly of the children of Israel after (The time of] Musa (Moses) when they said to a Prophet of theirs, "Send to us a king and we will fight in the way of Allah"? He said, "Would you perhaps refrain from fighting if fighting was prescribed for you?" They said, "And why should we not fight in the cause of Allah when we have been driven out from our homes and from our children?" But when fighting was prescribed for them, they turned away, except for a few of them. And Allah is Knowing of the wrongdoers’. (Al-‘Imran: 246)

However, Allah has given the followers of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him permission to fight in defence of themselves in order to punish those who attempt to prevent the true creed from reaching people. The sword is not intended to compel the people to accept the creed; rather, it is intended only to protect the choice of the creed made by the believers. Instead of leaving the people to be compelled to follow a false creed, the Muslims fight any tyrant that oppresses Allah’s servants. Moreover, Allah’s servants have the right to choose their own creed. Therefore, when the enemies of Islam say that Islam was spread by the sword, we reply: Allah caused Islam to begin in a weak state in order to refute this accusation and the earlier Muslims were weak and unable to defend themselves. Therefore, some of them immigrated to Abyssinia seeking protection. If Islam was spread by the sword, a question should be asked: who held the first sword to force the first person to believe? The Muslims chose Islam as a religion when they were extremely weak. Islam began, continued, and still exists by the power of faith.

Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came from an illiterate nation, a tribe marked by power and valour. However, Allah willed not to support His Religion by causing the powerful members of Quraysh first to embrace Islam; rather, it was initially the weak people who believed in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and who spent thirteen years in Mecca calling the people to Allah. Then, he migrated to Medina and all the Muslims were strongly united by faith. The sword was not used to impose a creed on the people; rather, it was used to protect a people’s freedom to choose the true creed. If Islam was spread by the sword, how can we explain the presence of followers of other religions in Muslim lands? Islam gave every person the opportunity to choose his faith.

So, every Muslim represents an independent unity of faith and must be aware that Islam was spread by following good examples. In addition, as a believer in Allah and His Religion, every Muslim should know that Allah has chosen them to put the instructions of faith into practice, and that Allah has caused Islam to be firmly established on the earth by good conduct and good habits.

Every Muslim's conduct should be free from shortcomings which may be exploited by the enemies of Islam. This is because the imbalance between the Muslim's conduct and Allah's Law is considered as a gap that is exploited by the enemies of Islam. Therefore, when the intellectuals of other religions review Islam, they become convinced of Islam because it is a True Religion. They examine it intellectually and are guided to it by their intuitive faith. As for those who wish to slander Islam, they consider the behaviour of some Muslims and find therein the shortcomings which they can use to accuse Islam. The honest thinkers always make a distinction between the creed and its followers. Therefore, most of the intellectuals who follow this approach embrace Islam and believe in it. However, as for those who judge Islam by its followers, if they find a devout Muslim, this calls them to believe in Islam, and vice versa. Therefore, the majority of populations in the modern Islamic countries are in countries that were not reached by the Islamic conquest; rather, devout Muslims who were good examples caused the spread of Islam. The pious life, upright behaviour, and tolerant, honest, and righteous ways of dealing with people represented by those devout Muslims appealed to the people of these countries and drew their attention to Islam. They asked these Muslims, "What makes you adopt this good behaviour?" And they replied, "Because we are Muslims".

The people in these communities wondered, "What is Islam?" Then, the Muslims began to explain it to them. Thus, what attracted the people to Islam was the upright and disciplined behaviour of one who abides by the instructions of the religion. Therefore, when Allah outlines the methodology of successful da`wah (the call to the worship of Allah), He says: 'And who is better in speech than he who [says], "My Lord is Allah (believes in His Oneness)," and then stands firm (acts upon His Order) and invites (men) to Allah's (Islamic Monotheism) and does righteous deeds and says, "I am one of the Muslims"?' (Fussilat: 33)

Da`wah (calling to the worship of Allah) should be carried out by speech and righteous conduct so that a believer proves that what he calls others to, has been beneficial for him and so he has adhered to it. Righteous conduct proves the accord between word and deed. The Muslim should not merely be content with this; however, he should declare: '…I am one of the Muslims'. (Fussilat: 33) To whom should he say this? He should say this to whoever sees him adopting this good, upright, and tolerant conduct. This draws attention to his religion rather than his own self.

This explains how Islam was spread by means of a group of traders who travelled from one country to another, dealing with people using Islamic manners, earnestness and piety so that their devout conduct drew the people's attention. When the people asked them about the secret behind their righteous conduct, one of them said, "I have not invented such a conduct, but this is instructed in Allah's Religion, Islam, which I follow".

An example of this exemplary behaviour is the earlier Muslims from among the Companions of the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him They may Allah be pleased with them feared for him from his opponents and so they guarded him in shifts in order to protect him against any danger. Allah Glorified is He willed that His Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him should migrate from Mecca to Medina in secret and 'Ali ibn Abu Talib Allah be pleased with him slept in Muhammad's place. 'Ali wanted to be Prophet Muhammad's guard and to protect him from any possible danger.

There is no doubt that he did that because he was sure that the survival of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was good for Islam even if he sacrificed himself for his sake. This is the case of the Companions of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: all of them loved Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him because taking the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad as an example and following Allah's Religion can only result in good in all aspects of life. If one of them died in the cause of protecting a person whom Allah sent as a Messenger to deliver His Call, they would attain martyrdom in Allah's Cause.

Consider Abu Bakr As-Siddiq Allah be pleased with him when he was in the cave with the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him. Did he not tear pieces of his clothes to block the cracks he found? Did he not place his foot in a crack for fear that an insect might harm Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him? He wanted to protect Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him even if it required the sacrifice of his own life. This is a testimony to the fact that the Companions of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him believed that the preservation of his life was better for them, their faith, and their souls than the preservation of their own lives. In this way, Allah wanted to give victory to His Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him after his migration to Medina, when he fought the enemies of Islam who schemed –but Allah is the best of planners.

It is as though Allah Glorified and Exalted is He were saying with this victory, "You will not be able to harm Muhammad, neither by confrontation nor by scheming". One of his followers, 'Umar, Allah be pleased with him, migrated in public, saying, 'Whoever wants his mother to be bereaved, his wife to be widowed, or his son to be orphaned, let him follow me behind this valley!' On the contrary, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him migrated secretly. Why? Because Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is an example for the weak. The strong person was able to protect himself and emigrate openly; however, the weak person had to migrate secretly. Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was a good example for the weak. The enemies of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him schemed against him, but Allah schemed against them: ' And they had planned their plan, but with Allah is [recorded] their plan, even if their plan had been [sufficient] to do away with the mountains'. (Ibrahim: 46)

Despite the violence and severity of their planning - which had been sufficient to do away with the mountains - their plan failed when it faced Allah's plan which protects His Messengers and pious servants. The Children of Israel made a scheme about which Allah has revealed His saying, 'And the disbelievers planned, but Allah planned. And Allah is the best of planners'. (Al-'Imran: 54) This is because they wanted to get rid of Prophet 'Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon him.

Allah Glorified is He says*:*

إِذْ قَالَ ٱللَّهُ يَٰعِيسَىٰٓ إِنِّى مُتَوَفِّيكَ وَرَافِعُكَ إِلَىَّ وَمُطَهِّرُكَ مِنَ ٱلَّذِينَ
كَفَرُوا۟ وَجَاعِلُ ٱلَّذِينَ ٱتَّبَعُوكَ فَوْقَ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوٓا۟ إِلَىٰ يَوْمِ ٱلْقِيَٰمَةِ ۖ ثُمَّ
إِلَىَّ مَرْجِعُكُمْ فَأَحْكُمُ بَيْنَكُمْ فِيمَا كُنتُمْ فِيهِ تَخْتَلِفُونَ ﴿٥٥﴾

God said, ‘Jesus, I will take you back and raise you up to Me: I will purify you of the disbelievers. To the Day of Resurrection I will make those who follow you superior to those who disbelieved. Then you will all return to Me and I will judge between you regarding your differences [55]
(The Quran, Al-’Imran: 55)

Allah Glorified is He mentioned this wise saying after tackling the issue of their scheming. This indicates that 'Isa (Jesus) sensed disbelief on the part of the children of Israel, plotting and conspiring to murder him, so Allah reassured him about the end of the struggle: ‘Oh 'Isa (Jesus), indeed I will take you and raise you to Myself and purify you from those who disbelieve and make those who follow you [in submission to Allah alone] superior to those who disbelieve until the Day of Resurrection....’ (Al-‘Imran: 55) This verse includes four situations that Allah Glorified is He willed for 'Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon him.

Let us consider Allah’s saying ‘... I will take you….’ Generally, we understand words according to their common meanings, disregarding the other meanings so that the common meaning circulates and we understand the meaning of the word. We understand that the Arabic word "Al-Tawafy" means “death,” but here we must refer to the original root of the word. A particular meaning may generally be associated with a word, though the word actually encompasses several meanings; a person eventually uses it exclusively for one of these meanings. A person may understand the meaning of the Arabic word "Al-Tawafy" as death, but does Allah not say ‘... I will take you...’? (Al-‘Imran: 55) He also says in the Noble Quran: ‘And it is He who takes your souls by night and knows what you have committed by day. Then He revives you therein that a specified term may be fulfilled. Then to Him will be your return; then He will inform you about what you used to do’. (al-An‘am: 60)

So, what does the Arabic word "yatawaffakum" mean here? It means “cause you to sleep.” "Sleep" is another meaning of this word. Allah also says in His Book, ‘…I will take you....’ (al-An‘am: 60) Also: ‘Allah takes the souls at the time of their death and those that do not die [He takes] during their sleep. Then He keeps those for which He has decreed death and releases the others for a specified term. Indeed, in that are signs for a people who give thought’ (az-Zumar: 42).

Allah also referred to the Arabic word "Al-Nawm" (meaning “sleep”) as “death.” This is one of the expressions of the Quran which clarifies that the word “"Al-Tawaffy" does not only mean death; rather, it has other meanings, although the word is generally used to refer to one meaning. The common people consider that this is the only meaning of the word, so when it is used, they do not imagine any other meaning. Therefore, we say: We must be extremely precise when considering words and why they are used.

Someone may say, "Why does Allah choose words in this way?" The answer is: Because these matters which the mind has to scrutinize deeply do not affect rulings. Allah mentions them in a way that has many possible meanings so that no one exerts himself to scrutinize deeply a matter that does not require this. If someone believes that Allah raised 'Isa peace be upon him up to heaven, does this add any ruling to his religion? If someone does not believe that 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was raised, does this diminish any ruling from his religion? This issue does not affect any religious rulings, but the mind may deeply consider it, and someone may say, "How was he raised to heaven?" Another may say, "Allah caused him to die”. Any person can consider it in the way he likes because it does not affect the rulings required by the religion.

So, matters which do not affect the rulings enjoined on the people are mentioned by Allah in a way that can be understood in more than one way so that the mind does not get bogged down in issues that bring neither harm nor benefit. We know now that the Arabic word "tawaffa" which is derived from "Al-Wafat" means "sleep" from Allah's saying: ‘And it is He who takes your souls by night and knows what you have committed by day. Then He revives you therein so that a specified term may be fulfilled. Then to Him will be your return; then He will inform you about what you used to do’. (al-An‘am: 60)

And from His saying: ‘Allah takes the souls at the time of their death and those that do not die [He takes] during their sleep. Then He keeps those for which He has decreed death and releases the others for a specified term. Indeed in that are signs for a people who give thought’ (az-Zumar: 42).

Allah Glorified is He referred to the Arabic word "Al-Nawm" (sleep) as "death" because it is absence from life. The Arabic language clarifies this point: for example, when you lend a person some money and he asks you to waive some of it, you say, "No, I must astawfy maly” (receive my money in full). When he gives it all to you, you say, "istawfayt maly" (I have taken my money in full).

So, the Arabic word “mutawaffika” may mean "taking something in full”. I say this point in order to clarify the difference between "death" and "killing" both of which meaning taking someone's life. This may occur by physical destruction, as when a person strikes another on his head and kills him. As for death, it is not always associated with physical destruction; Allah takes the soul and the body visibly remains as it is. Therefore, Allah has distinguished in His Wise Quran between "death" and "killing,” although they share the meaning of “the ending of a life.”

‘Muhammad is not but a Messenger. [Other] Messengers have passed on before him. So, if he was to die or be killed, would you turn back on your heels [to unbelief]? And he who turns back on his heels will never harm Allah at all; but Allah will reward the grateful’. (Al-‘Imran: 144)

Both death and killing result in the termination of life. Yet, only killing ends a life by destroying the body. Some people overpower others and kill them. However, no one says, "I want so-and-so to die" because death is that which Allah causes to His servants to end their lives by taking their souls. Human beings are able to kill the body, but the body is not entitled to cast the soul out. Rather, the soul gives life to the body it enters; and when Allah takes it from the body, it dies and becomes a corpse.

So, ‘killing’ is considered as a disturbance of the special attributes that Allah decreed for the existence of the soul in a body such as the soundness of the brain or heart. If one of these basic special attributes is disturbed, the soul does not stay in the body anymore.

When the soul is extracted, it is not because it wants to be extracted for any reason; rather, the body is not suitable anymore to accommodate it. We will give an example: If electricity has been installed in a house, you know that it is available because of the light which the lightbulb emits. The lightbulb is not the source of light because light does not appear except in a form that has these particular attributes. The evidence is that if the lightbulb is broken, electricity is still available, but light is not emitted. Such is the case with the soul with respect to the body.

The soul does not exist except in a body which has certain attributes, the most important of which is that the cells of the body are suitable. If the heart stops, it is possible to massage it and return to life before the lapse of eight seconds. If the brain cells are damaged, however, life ends because the attributes which are necessary for the soul to exist have been disturbed. Therefore, the soul only inhabits a body which has special attributes and killing is a basic way of destroying the body and ending life. Death, however, is the termination of life without the necessary destruction of the body and no one is capable of that except Allah Glorified and Exalted is He.

However, Allah's creatures can harm the body because it is a physical substance. Therefore, the Arabic word "famutawaffika" means "to receive something in full such as money" and it also means "sleep." When Allah says: '... inny mutawaffika...' (Al-'Imran: 55), it means that Allah Glorified is He intends to say, "I will take you in full. My creatures are unable to harm your body; I will take you as a whole, because on earth you will be subject to the plots hatched by people. I will take you to a place where you will be devoted entirely to Me; I have taken you completely from people with the soul still remaining in the body with all its attributes. Therefore, those who are able to damage the body (physical substance) will not be able to do this."So, Allah's saying, '…raise you to Myself…' (Al-'Imran: 55) is in accordance with His previous saying: '... I will take you...' (Al-'Imran: 55)

Someone may say, "Why should we understand the Arabic word 'Al-Wafah' according to this meaning?" We say the Omnipotent Allah is able to say, "I will raise you to me and then cause you to die". We also say that the Arabic letter "Waw," which means in English "and" does not suggest a particular order of events? Does Allah not say, ‘And how [severe] were My punishment and warning’. (al-Qamar: 16)

Does the punishment take place before or after the warnings? Surely, it takes place after the warnings. The Arabic letter "waw" means "and” in English. It simply refers only to the combination of two events. In addition, Allah says in His Book: ‘And [mention, Oh Muhammad], when We took from the Prophets their covenant and from you and from Nuh (Noah) and Ibrahim (Abraham) and Musa (Moses) and 'Isa (Jesus), the son of Maryam (Mary); and We took from them a solemn covenant’. (al-Ahzab: 7)

The Arabic letter "waw" which means "and" in English does not imply a particular order of events, so if the word "mutawaffika” (Al-‘Imran: 55) is considered to mean "I will cause you to die", no one can say that the Arabic letter "waw" implies a certain order of events, i.e., that Allah caused 'Isa (Jesus) to die and then raised him.

If someone says, "Then why has the word "mutawaffika” (Al-‘Imran: 55) been mentioned first?" the answer will be: Because some people may think that the act of raising means exempting 'Isa (Jesus) from death. However, `Isa (Jesus) will definitely die, as death is inescapable and something that every human being will experience. This explanation is in regard to the Quranic text. If we consider the Hadith, we will find that Allah entrusted His Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with explaining and clarifying matters. Allah says*:* ‘…And We revealed to you the Message that you may make clear to the people what was sent down to them and that they might give thought’. (an-Nahl: 44)

The following Hadith was related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim: ‘What will be your state when the son of Maryam (Mary) descends amongst you and there will be an Imam amongst you?’ So, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him informed us that ‘Isa (Jesus), the son of Maryam (Mary) will descend again.

Let us scrutinize the matter in order to refute the rationalists who always try to tire the world out. The rationalists accept that 'Isa (Jesus) came into existence without a father and without the usual way of creation and birth. Now, if they accept that he was born in a miraculous manner that goes beyond all codes and laws, why do they question the end of his life, being also a miraculous matter? The fact that they have accepted the first miracle should make it easy for them to accept the second.

Allah Glorified is He says*:* '…indeed I will take you and raise you to Myself and purify you from those who disbelieve and make those who follow you [in submission to Allah alone] superior to those who disbelieve until the Day of Resurrection…' (Al-'Imran: 55)

Allah Glorified is He was telling 'Isa (Jesus) that He would take him in his entirety, safe from all mankind, and would purify him from the impurity of those disbelievers. He would also place those who followed him above those who disbelieved until the Day of Resurrection. The word "follow" indicates that there is a "follower" who comes after the "followed," i.e. the "follower" is the one who comes after. Who came after 'Isa (Jesus) with guidance from the heavens? It is Muhammad peace be upon him, but what guidance would the people who followed 'Isa (Jesus) be upon? Would they be upon the guidance that they brought, or upon that which 'Isa (Jesus) delivered? The person who follows guidance other than that which 'Isa (Jesus) conveyed is not really considered a follower of him. However, a person who comes to rectify the situation according to True Guidance is a real follower.

Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came to rectify the situation and to deliver Allah's Guidance in the way that Allah intends. '…and make those who follow you [in submission to Allah alone] superior to those who disbelieve until the Day of Resurrection…' (Al-'Imran: 55) If we perceive the meaning in this way, we will understand that the follower of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the one that has followed Allah's Guidance which all the Messengers, including 'Isa (Jesus), conveyed.

In addition, the followers of Muhammad have rectified many of the issues that the misguided people had perverted. The intended meaning here of the Arabic word "fawq" is not conquest and victory; rather, it means "clear proofs and rational evidence." This can only occur in the presence of impartial and rational people who weigh matters according to their evidence and proofs. At the end, they will arrive only at the issue and creed of Islam.

Hence, the Arabic word "fawq" here refers to the emergence of proof and the strength of evidence. Accordingly, Allah Glorified is He says*:* 'It is

He who has sent His Messenger with guidance and the religion of truth to manifest it over all religion, although they who associate others with Allah dislike it...’ (at-Tawba: 33) In another Quranic verse, Allah confirms the manifestation of Islam over all other religions and that He bears witness to this: ‘It is He who sent His Messenger with guidance and the religion of truth to manifest it over all religion. And sufficient is Allah s Witness.” (al-Fath: 28)

This means that Allah has willed for Islam to prevail over all religions. Someone may say that there are many religions in the world, over which Islam has not prevailed. In addition, there are one billion Muslims in the world now, and double this number of people who follow other religions. We say that Allah has willed for Islam to prevail as a rational proof not only before this person, but also before the followers of other religions.

Let us consider the one who legislates a positive man-made legislation and ask: does any man-made legislation remain always the same? No, it is constantly amended. Why? That is because the one who introduced the first legislation did not have knowledge of the new consequences of matters that might arise in the future. Then, upon the arising of new matters in life- which were not taken into the first legislator's consideration- the people need to amend the law. Consider any amended man-made law relevant to any issue in the world: which direction does it take? It is always directed towards Islam; and if it does not arrive at Islam, it comes close to it.

When a furore occurred in Europe about divorce in Christianity, what happened? Divorce was legislated in Italy right under the nose of the Vatican. Have they legalised divorce because Islam allows it? No, they have legalised it because the circumstances of life have forced them to legalise it. They have been forced by life’s circumstances to prove that the guidance of Islam which was revealed before this experience is correct. This is proved by the fact that Europe has resorted to legalising divorce, not to follow the Muslims, but to attain their life interests which cannot be attained without it. Is there a more manifest and overwhelming evidence than that which is provided by the opponent? This is the true proof. They have decided to legalise divorce despite their hatred for Islam, a decision which is considered as a proof of the truthfulness of the Islamic guidance.

Moreover, in the case of usury, which some people here want to legalise, we find Europe trying to get rid of it because they have found by experience that money does not perform its role in life unless interest rates are lowered to zero. They have realised that the cancellation of usury is necessary for money to perform its true role in life. They have resorted to this truth because usury is a cause of corruption in life, so they want to prohibit it. They have only now realized a fact which was proven by Islam fourteen centuries ago. Is there eminence or superiority for Allah's Religion greater than this? So, the opponents' understanding of that which will improve their life affairs has forced them to accept Islamic principles without even knowing it.

Let us continue our reflection on Allah's saying: '…and make those who follow you [in submission to Allah alone] superior to those who disbelieve until the Day of Resurrection…' (Al-'Imran: 55). It means that Allah will make those who follow the original guidance which has been revealed by Allah superior to those who disbelieve. The people who improperly attribute godhood to 'Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), do not really follow him. The true follower of 'Isa (Jesus) is the one who follows Allah's Guidance. 'Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), was sent as a Messenger to the children of Israel. Divine religions are not dedicated to certain races, tribes, or nations and so on; guidance results in unity. This is why Allah has stated the story of Prophet Nuh (Noah) in order to help us comprehend this point. Allah promised Prophet Nuh (Noah) that He would save his family. When he called his son to board the ark with him, his son refused. Then, Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him said to Allah: 'My Lord, indeed my son is of my family; and indeed, Your promise is true; and You are the most just of judges!' (Hud: 45) Does the word "family" refer to blood ties in the case of Prophets? No, because Allah says*:* 'He said, "Oh Nuh (Noah), indeed he is not of your family; indeed, he is [one whose] work was other than righteous, so ask Me not for that about which you have no knowledge. Indeed, I advise you, lest you be among the ignorant." (Hud: 46) Why? This is because the real followers of Prophets are comprised of those who believe in them. Those who follow the guidance conveyed by 'Isa (Jesus) from Allah are not those who ascribe themselves to him, or those who call themselves Jews; these are only names. The true follower is the one who follows the guidance revealed by Allah. The legacy of the Prophets is guidance and knowledge. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said about Salman, the Persian, who did not share the Arab origin with Prophet Muhammad: ‘Salman is one of us and belongs to our family’. Salman was ascribed to the Prophet's family by virtue of his faith and according to the text of the Hadith of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Therefore, ‘…and make those who follow you [in submission to Allah alone] superior to those who disbelieve until the Day of Resurrection…’ (Al-‘Imran: 55) means that Allah renders superior those who follow His true Guidance. The one who corrected the Guidance of 'Isa (Jesus) was Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him Is the concept of superiority relevant to the geographical area, as the area of land inhabited by non-Muslims is bigger than the area inhabited by Muslims? No, superiority is irrelevant to rational evidence.

Someone may say that evidence is not compelling, but we tell them that evidence is compelling, as we see those who do not believe in Islam still unintentionally prove that it is the True Religion. How do they prove that? They derive their man-made laws from the Divine Law. Since this verse contains the words “superior to” and “disbelieve”, and tackles the matter of following, then there is an issue of enmity, truth, falsehood, guidance and delusion. There must be a final word in this matter. The final word comes when a person has no free will over himself, or over others.

Oppressors are able to act on the earth, but when they return to Allah, He will say, "I gave you dominion, yet you disobeyed Me in many ways, but there is a time when your dominion over the means will come to an end”. So, the oppressors and those who commit falsehood may have power in this worldly life, for Allah has given us all free will and choice.

However, on the Day of Resurrection, there is no will except Allah’s Will: ‘The Day they come forth nothing concerning them will be concealed from Allah. To whom belongs [all] sovereignty this Day? To Allah, the One, the Prevailing’ (Ghafir: 16).

So, judgment will undoubtedly be given, as indicated by Allah’s true saying, ‘[And they should consider that] when those who have been followed disassociate themselves from those who followed [them] and they [all] see the punishment and cut off from them are the ties [of relationship], those who followed will say, "If only we had another turn [at worldly life] so we could disassociate ourselves from them as they have disassociated themselves from us”. Thus will Allah show them their deeds as regrets upon them. And they are never to emerge from the Fire’. (al-Baqara: 166-167)

The one who follows a deviant person will find on the Day of Resurrection that the one he followed will absolve himself from him. These followers will ask Allah to let them return to the world so that they can take revenge on those who deceived them. This is in regard to the relationship between human beings. As for each body, we will find the skin, the tongue and the hands bearing witness for or against a person. He will be deprived of his will, and his limbs and senses which were subjugated to him, will stop serving him. If he was misguided, they will say that their owner had the power to command them to do what they did not want to do. But on the Day of Judgment, there will be neither power, nor force, nor subjugation because the dominion is entirely for Allah. Therefore, the tongues and skin will bear witness and so Allah says, ‘…Then to Me is your return and I will judge between you concerning that in which you used to differ’. (Al-‘Imran: 55)

Allah judges between them concerning that on which they used to differ. What is the outcome of this judgment? Are there any other obligations? No, but the outcome of the judgment is the recompense. No deeds will be accepted in the Hereafter and judgment therein is for the sake of recompense. As we have said, as long as there are followers and disbelievers -and one group is superior to another and their return is to Allah- we must see the judgment that will be made. Allah, The All-Wise, says*:*

فَأَمَّا ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ فَأُعَذِّبُهُمْ عَذَابًا شَدِيدًا فِى ٱلدُّنْيَا وَٱلْـَٔاخِرَةِ وَمَا لَهُم مِّن نَّٰصِرِينَ ٥٦

I will make the disbelievers suffer severely in this world and the next; no one will help them [56] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 56)

Why did not Allah mention the judgment on the believers first? That is because the believers entirely understand and believe in this fact. We must be aware here that the judgment includes torment not only in the Hereafter, but also in this worldly life. The worldly torment will occur before the judgment. It is as though Allah were saying, "Do not imagine that the torment which I will inflict on them in this world will excuse them from the torment they will find in the Hereafter because torment in this world alone could even afflict the believers.’’

As for those who disbelieve in Me, I will torment them in this world and in the Hereafter. I will not delay the torment of the disbelievers until the Hereafter; rather, My torment will be inflicted on them both in this world and the Hereafter”. Allah says about this torment that it will be severe because when a punishment (torment) occurs, it should reflect the power of the One Who inflicts it (Allah).

Let us give an example (and Allah gives the best descriptions): A child may break something within the limits of his power and a young man may break something in the manner that suits his power. So, we must consider events in accordance with the one who carries them out. If the doer is Allah, will anyone be able to tolerate His Torment? This is unimaginable. None of these people will have any helper because the one whom Allah debases and torments will not be helped.

Afterwards, Allah sheds light on the other group of people, saying,

وَأَمَّا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ وَعَمِلُواْ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ فَيُوَفِّيهِمۡ أُجُورَهُمۡۗ وَٱللَّهُ لَا يُحِبُّ ٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ ٥٧

God will pay those who believe and do good deeds their reward in full; God does not love evildoers [57]
(The Quran, Al-‘Imran: 57)

This means that just as those who disbelieve will receive severe torment from Allah, those who believe will receive permanent delight, by Allah’s Leave.

Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says:

ذَٰلِكَ نَتۡلُوهُ عَلَيۡكَ مِنَ ٱلۡأٓيَٰتِ وَٱلذِّكۡرِ ٱلۡحَكِيمِ ٥٨

We relate to you [Muhammad] this revelation, a decisive statement [58] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 58)

The Arabic word "dhalika" (meaning “this”) refers to the events that have been previously mentioned concerning the wife of ‘Imran, Maryam (Mary) and Zakaryya (Zechariah), Yahya (John) and ‘Isa (Jesus). Each one of these people experienced a miraculous event which went beyond the laws of the universe and was full of wondrous signs. These wondrous events were conveyed to us by those who witnessed them. The certain accounts of these wonders are mentioned in the Quran which cannot include any falsehood and is the true Book that is described by Allah as ‘…the precise [and wise] Message’. (Al-‘Imran: 58) The believers should be assured concerning the accounts they receive by means of the Quran, as they are true and cannot be tainted by falsehood. The accounts that were mentioned concerning these signs is the actual truth of the matter which the people lived through and of which they spoke.

Then, Allah Glorified is He presents the case of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him which we must be completely aware of. We will also outline the viewpoint of those who place him in other than the place that Allah intends as well as recognise the viewpoint of those who do place him in the place that Allah intended. It is not a matter of gaining victory in this world over a group who says such-and-such. Rather, it is an issue which has an outcome in the Hereafter for which Allah Glorified is He will hold us to account. Therefore, it is extremely important that we clarify it in a manner that reveals the truth so that no one wrongs himself.

'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him lived during the era in which Judaism was prevailing and we know that Judaism was perverted by the Jews in a manner that made it exclusively focused on material concerns without the slightest regard for spiritual matters and belief in the unseen. They were materialists in a manner that was reflected by what they said to Musa peace be upon him and what the Quran relates: ‘And [recall] when you said, "Oh Musa (Moses), we will never believe you until we see Allah outright”; so the thunderbolt took you, while you were looking on’ (al-Baqara: 55).

They did not pay attention to the fact that part of Allah’s Perfection and Majesty is considered unseen; for if it were possible to be seen and perceived, it would be limited and encompassed. Since it was limited and encompassed in their imagination, they imagined that Allah Glorified is He could be present in one place and not in another. However, Allah Glorified is He is too Exalted to be in one place only because He is omnipresent in the existence as a whole and we do not see Him with the eye; rather, we see the effects of His Actions and the beauty of His creation inherent in the universe.So, the fact that Allah is unseen reveals His Majesty and Perfection.

The Jews, however, considered everything tangible, even the matter of their sustenance. Allah wanted their provisions to come from a place unseen in order to relieve them of worry in the desert. Therefore, He sent down to them manna and quails as provisions from the unseen that they did not plant, purchase, or understand. They did not work to obtain it; it was provision from the unseen. However, they insolently rejected this provision that was sent down to them from the unseen and said as Allah informed us: ‘And [recall] when you said, "Oh Musa (Moses), we can never endure one [kind of] food. So, call upon your Lord to bring forth for us from the earth its green herbs and its cucumbers and its garlic and its lentils and its onions”. [Moses] said, "Would you exchange what is better for what is less? Go into [any] settlement and indeed, you will have what you have asked”. And they were covered with humiliation and poverty and returned with anger from Allah [upon them]. That was because they [repeatedly] disbelieved in the signs of Allah and killed the Prophets without right. That was because they disobeyed and were [habitually] transgressing’. (al-Baqara: 61)

They wanted to have the food they were accustomed to and to see this food as a tangible matter. Therefore, they were suspicious of the provision of the unseen, the manna, and quails, saying that the manna and quails may not be sent again. They had no trust in the provisions granted to them from the unseen because they handled all their affairs with absolute materialism. Since all their affairs were materialistic, they were in need of a great shock to shake this materialism and take them to a spiritual meaning by which they could believe in the unseen.

We know that this materialistic thought considers life as a matter of cause and effect. So, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He wanted to rid the Jews of this materialistic thought process. Therefore, He brought 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him into existence in a way contrary to the natural way through which people come into existence. Hence, He willed that 'Isa (Jesus) should be birthed by a mother only-without a father-in order to shake the Jews' materialistic laws and beliefs. However, temptation afflicted his people who called him the Son of Allah though He is utterly too Exalted to have a son. What was the obscurity that caused them to claim that Jesus is the son of Allah?

They said that since he had a mother but no father, the obscurity came from Allah’s breathing His spirit into him. Therefore, they considered Allah as the father of ‘Isa (Jesus), and we seek refuge in Allah from this belief. If the matter were so, it would be more appropriate for you to be tempted by the creation of Adam peace be upon him rather than the creation of 'Isa (Jesus) because there is a mother in the creation of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him but there is neither a mother nor a father in the creation of Adam. If they say that Allah says that He breathed His Spirit into him, then they should be aware of Allah’s saying about Adam peace be upon him: ‘And [mention, Oh Muhammad], when your Lord said to the angels, "I will create a human being out of clay from an altered black mud. And when I have proportioned him and breathed into him of My [created] soul, then fall down to him in prostration’. (at-Tawba: 28-29)

So, Adam was also breathed into with the Spirit of Allah, so why have they been silent about this story from the time of Adam until the time of 'Isa (Jesus)? In this way, this argument has been refuted. Then, the next issue is concerned with Allah’s taking 'Isa up and his death, and we will clarify both issues. When we ask why they have been tempted concerning this matter, they say that 'Isa (Jesus) brought the dead to life. Have they not considered the incident in which Allah says to Ibrahim peace be upon him: ‘And [mention] when Ibrahim (Abraham) said, "My Lord, show me how You give life to the dead”. [Allah] said, "Have you not believed?" He said, "Yes, but [I ask] only that my heart may be satisfied”. [Allah] said, "Take four birds and commit them to yourself. Then [after slaughtering them] put on each hill a portion of them; then call them - they will come [flying] to you in haste. And know that Allah is Exalted in Might and Wise”’. (al-Baqara: 260)

So, the scope of temptation in the case of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him is also wide. Likewise, did Musa (Mosus) peace be upon him not bring his staff as a sign? He did not bring a dead object that was previously alive; Allah caused life to be created by his hand in an object which had never been alive. So, the staff – a lifeless object – became a snake, moving quickly. Why, then, were they not tempted with the staff of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him to worship him as a son of Allah? In this way, we see that it is not right for anyone to be tempted by the miracles associated with 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him or in his giving life to the dead by Allah's Leave. The followers of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him agree with us that Allah Glorified and Exalted is He is Unseen, but they differ with us on this point: They say that Allah wanted to comfort mankind by appearing in the form of a human for them, so he brought 'Isa peace be upon him in order to provide them with comfort.

We will examine this issue without any sensitivity or prejudice but in a rational manner. We ask: did Allah create 'Isa (Jesus) in order for Him to appear in a certain form? 'Isa (Jesus) was an infant, then he grew up, so at which phase of growth did 'Isa (Jesus) represent Allah? If it is the phase of childhood or maturity did Allah come in the form of a child or a middle-aged person? Allah has one form which we neither see nor comprehend, as '…there is nothing like Him…." (ash-Shura: 11) Which form represents Allah, as claimed? If all these forms represent Allah, this means that He undergoes changes; yet He Glorified is He is too Exalted to undergo changes. If He has one form, we say that Allah Glorified is He is stable and never changes. They also say that Allah wanted to take the form of a human in order to comfort the people, so He took the form of 'Isa (Jesus).

But there is a question: how long did `Isa (Jesus) live on earth? The answer is thirty years or slightly more. This means that the span of the people's knowledge of the Divine Form would be limited to these thirty years, according to your conception. There is an inevitable question: what is the entire duration of the human race? It amounts to millions of years. Did Allah leave His earlier creatures without revealing His Figure to them? Then, did He leave the creatures who lived after the end of 'Isa's (Jesus) mission and ascension without showing them His Figure? This is a conception of a tyrannical god; yet He Glorified and Exalted is He is too Exalted to be tyrannical. It does not make sense that He would take a human form for only thirty years and then withhold it. This statement is unacceptable to any intellect that trusts Allah's infinite justice.

These people also say that 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was crucified and they are excused for this saying, as Allah has excused them for this and has related a true and fair account, saying: 'And [for] their saying, "Indeed, we have killed the Messiah, 'Isa (Jesus), the son of Maryam (Mary), the Messenger of Allah”. And they did not kill him, nor did they crucify him; but [another] was made to resemble him to them. And indeed, those who differ over it are in doubt about it. They have no knowledge of it except the following of assumption. And they did not kill him, for certain’. (an-Nisa’: 157)

Allah has excused them for saying that 'Isa (Jesus) was killed or crucified because another was made to resemble him to them. It would make sense to them to seek a solution from Islam for this problem because Islam came to say that another was made to resemble him to them for they neither killed him, nor crucified him. If the crucified person was a god, or the son of a god, he would have power surpassing that of the one who crucified him. How could any person conceive that a god or the son of a god could be overpowered by a creature? Islam says that 'Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), was not crucified, as Allah has honoured him. In this way, you see that Islam came to purify all beliefs from the defects of perversion committed by the followers of these religions.

After this issue, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He presents to us an issue of debate that occurred during the era of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him This is in order that all people – Muslims, Jews and Christians – could come out of this confusion to a state of cordiality, for they all believe in worshipping one Deity. A delegation of the Christians of Najran came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in Medina and met with him. These people had a dispute with the Jews and with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him just as the Jews and the Christians together had a dispute with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him The origin of the dispute between the Jews and the Christians was that they had conflicting views about one another, which are stated by Allah: ‘The Jews say, "The Christians have nothing [true] to stand on," and the Christians say, "The Jews have nothing to stand on," although they [both] recite the Heavenly Books. Thus, the polytheists speak the same as their words. But Allah will judge between them on the Day of Resurrection concerning that over which they used to differ” (al-Baqara: 113).

The Jews said that Ibrahim (Abraham) was a Jew and the Christians rejected this saying that he was a Christian. The cause of the dispute that took place between the Christians and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was that they wanted to speak about the issue of ‘Isa (Jesus) and Allah Glorified and Exalted is He wanted to finally clarify the matter in order for it not to remain a pending matter that is circulated by people and made a source of sedition. The Christians of Najran assembled under the banner of their leaders, including a person named Sayyid and another named Al- 'Aqib, a giver of advice and a priest. Prophet Muhammad asked, ‘What do you say about 'Isa (Jesus)?’ They said, ‘He is the son of Allah’. Prophet Muhammad said that 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him said, ‘I am a Servant of Allah’, and he was His Servant, His Messenger and His Word that He bestowed on the Blessed Virgin Maryam (Mary)’. They became angry and said to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘Have you ever seen a person without a father? If you have seen that, then tell us!’ Then, the verse was revealed:

إِنَّ مَثَلَ عِيسَىٰ عِندَ ٱللَّهِ كَمَثَلِ ءَادَمَ ۖ خَلَقَهُۥ
مِن تُرَابٍ ثُمَّ قَالَ لَهُۥ كُن فَيَكُونُ ﴿٥٩﴾

In God’s eyes Jesus is just like Adam: He created him from dust, said to him, ‘Be’, and he was [59]
(The Quran, Al-’Imran: 59)

The final word came with a compelling proof: for if 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him came without a father, then they should remember that Adam peace be upon him came without a mother or a father. Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to them, ‘You know that I am the Messenger of Allah and the Prophet of this people’. They said, ‘Give us respite until tomorrow and we will discuss this matter’. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him called them to believe, but they said, ‘No’.

When Allah Glorified is He presents the struggle between truth and falsehood, He says: ‘…And indeed, we or you are either upon guidance or in clear error’. (Saba’: 24) This means that one group of us is guided and the other group is in error. Why? It is because the two issues are contradictory and mutually exclusive. Messenger Muhammad called them to meet him in an open place, to invite their women and children and to ask Allah to send His Curse upon the liars. In this regard, the following saying of Allah was revealed:

ٱلْحَقُّ مِن رَّبِّكَ فَلَا تَكُن مِّنَ ٱلْمُمْتَرِينَ ﴿٦٠﴾ فَمَنْ حَآجَّكَ فِيهِ مِنۢ بَعْدِ مَا جَآءَكَ مِنَ
ٱلْعِلْمِ فَقُلْ تَعَالَوْا۟ نَدْعُ أَبْنَآءَنَا وَأَبْنَآءَكُمْ وَنِسَآءَنَا وَنِسَآءَكُمْ وَأَنفُسَنَا وَأَنفُسَكُمْ
ثُمَّ نَبْتَهِلْ فَنَجْعَل لَّعْنَتَ ٱللَّهِ عَلَى ٱلْكَٰذِبِينَ ﴿٦١﴾

This is the truth from your Lord, so do not be one of those who doubt [60] If anyone disputes this with you now that you have been given this knowledge, say, 'Come, let us gather our sons and your sons, our women and your women, ourselves and yourselves, and let us pray earnestly and invoke God's rejection on those of us who are lying [61]
(The Quran, Al-'Imran: 60 - 61)

The clear truth and final word have come from Allah to his Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him so there is no room for doubt or argument. Whoever wants to resort to anyone's authority let them resort to the authority of Allah, the Just Who never judges falsely, for He Glorified is He is the Absolute Truth.

Then, the following saying is mentioned: '...Come, let us call our sons and your sons, our women and your women, ourselves and yourselves, then supplicate earnestly [together] and invoke the curse of Allah upon the liars [among us]'. (Al-'Imran: 61)

The two groups are invited to summon their women and children; so Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is invited to summon his women and children and whoever he is responsible for and to attend in person, in order for them to beseech Allah. A question may be raised: why should the women and children be summoned? The answer is that women and children are the close relatives that every person cares about whether he is a Messenger or not, for they are part of his own self and his family. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was commanded to ask them to bring their beloved ones, including women and children being the closest members and the dearest to the heart, to implore Allah. Imploring here means supplicating Allah to curse the liar.

When the two groups say, 'Oh Lord, may Your Curse descend upon the liar from among us', this supplication implies absolute justice; for the only

God that is able to send down a curse is Allah. He will send His Curse upon whoever associates partners with Him; if curses could be sent by multiple gods, they would descend upon the followers of One Allah.

This is the reason for calling the people to supplicate Allah to send His Curse on the liar. This represents earnest invocation to the Overwhelming Force which will dispose with the matter to end the dispute. Then, the intended meaning of invocation is clarified here. When we say, "Let us invoke Allah," this means "Let us supplicate to Allah”.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came to them with a command enjoined by Allah, the Absolute Truth, to summon their people, including their children and women, but they said to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘Give us a respite until tomorrow and we will come to you’. In the morning, they sent someone to see what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had done and whether he was really ready for this matter, or it was only an empty threat. Their emissary found that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had come, accompanied by Al-Hasan, Al-Hussain, Fatimah Az-Zahra' and ‘Ali ibn Abu Talib. Therefore, they said, ‘We cannot meet to supplicate Allah to send down this curse. By Allah, no people have held the meeting in order to invoke Allah to send down curse except that they were destroyed’. They tried to please the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by saying: ‘We will continue to follow our religion and Muhammad and his followers will follow his religion’. They thought that the call to perform invocation was only a threat and would not be carried out. However, the Messenger who had sincere faith came with his family ready for this meeting and invocation. This step cannot be taken except by a person who has deep faith and certainty. However, a person who has no certainty will never accept such an action; rather, he will back down.

They backed down, saying to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, ‘Let us agree that you will not raid us or scare us and we will send you jiziah (a poll tax required from non-Muslims living in an established Islamic state) in the months of Rajab and Safar, paid in horses and other things’. They fled from the invocation because they knew that they were doubtful about their stance. As for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, he was certain about that which Allah had revealed to him. When the Arabs went to war, they used to take their women with them so that men would be ashamed to flee and leave their children and women to be disgraced if thhe died; if they were killed, they would be killed along with them.

If we wish to end the dispute about the issue of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him we should heed the saying of Allah, Glorified and Exalted is He: '…Indeed, the example of 'Isa (Jesus) to Allah is like that of Adam. He created Him from dust; then He said to him, "Be," and he was. The truth is from your Lord, so do not be among the doubters'. (Al-'Imran: 59-60) This is the truth from the Lord; therefore, do not be among those who doubt this issue. We will settle any argument contrary to that which comes from Allah by saying, '…Come, let us call our sons and your sons, our women and your women, ourselves and yourselves, then supplicate earnestly (Together] and invoke the curse of Allah upon the liars [among us]'. (Al-'Imran: 61) None of them will dare to do so. Why? It is due to the fact that those who came before them fled from this invocation and because Allah wants the believers to have more faith in and contentment with the fact that the Message He has revealed to His Messenger is the truth.

Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says,

إِنَّ هَٰذَا لَهُوَ ٱلْقَصَصُ ٱلْحَقُّۚ وَمَا مِنْ إِلَٰهٍ إِلَّا ٱللَّهُۚ وَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَهُوَ ٱلْعَزِيزُ ٱلْحَكِيمُ ﴿٦٢﴾

This is the truth of the matter: there is no god but God; God is the Exalted, the Decider [62] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 62)

Allah's saying: 'Indeed, this is the true narration...' (Al-'Imran: 62) draws our attention to the fact that what He relates here is the absolute truth, not only a tale or a story. It is also not a mixture of fiction and fact, as occurs in the modern age, when the word "story" has been adopted by modern literary language from the western civilisation. Fiction plays a significant role in the popular modern form of the concept of a story. However, if we realise that the literary meaning of the word "story" in Arabic is derived from "narrating an incident", educated people would search for another word than "story" when writing their novels and fictions. In reality, the actual literary meaning of "story" is an account of what actually happened without any alteration or fiction.

Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says, ‘Indeed, this is the true narration. And there is no deity except Allah’. (Al-‘Imran: 62) If a narration comes from the Only Lord, we should be confident that there is no other god to come with a different narration because Allah, the One, is ‘…the Exalted in Might’ (Al-‘Imran: 62), i.e., in the control of His Dominion. Therefore, He is also Wise with regards to His Actions. However, did those who disputed take heed? No, they did not. Allah says,

فَإِن تَوَلَّوْا فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ عَلِيمٌۢ بِٱلْمُفْسِدِينَ ﴿٦٣﴾

If they turn away, [know that] God is well aware of anyone who causes corruption [63] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 63)

This verse indicates that Allah knew previously that they would not accept the meeting for invocation thus judging themselves as spreaders of corruption. So, Allah is truthful in His saying: ‘But if they turn away, then indeed - Allah is Knowing of the corrupters’. (Al-‘Imran: 63)

However, Allah commanded His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to call them to the complete religion as they believed in Allah and His Book; so Allah says*:*

قُلْ يَٰٓأَهْلَ ٱلْكِتَٰبِ تَعَالَوْا إِلَىٰ كَلِمَةٍ سَوَآءٍۭ بَيْنَنَا وَبَيْنَكُمْ أَلَّا نَعْبُدَ إِلَّا
ٱللَّهَ وَلَا نُشْرِكَ بِهِۦ شَيْـًٔا وَلَا يَتَّخِذَ بَعْضُنَا بَعْضًا أَرْبَابًا مِّن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ ۚ فَإِن
تَوَلَّوْا فَقُولُوا ٱشْهَدُوا بِأَنَّا مُسْلِمُونَ ﴿٦٤﴾

Say, ‘People of the Book, let us arrive at a statement that is common to us all: we worship God alone, we ascribe no partner to Him, and none of us takes others beside God as lords.’ If they turn away, say, ‘Witness our devotion to Him’ [64] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 64)

This is a call to an equitable word that includes no perversion: ‘... that we will not worship except Allah...’ (Al-‘Imran: 64), which is an undisputed matter. Then, Allah says, ‘…and not associate anything with Him...’ (Al-‘Imran: 64), i.e., we will not include with Him anything which is not able to match the majesty of His Perfection. Sound intellects reject the idea of associating anything with Allah in divinity.

The question is: Do some people associate partners with Allah in divinity with regards to the creation of the universe? Actually, any creature which they associated with Allah in divinity came into existence after Allah created the universe. Do they associate partners with Allah with regards to managing the affairs of this universe? If this is the case, it is not a worthy cause of associating partners with Allah because Allah Glorified is He is able to control the universe and has revealed Guidance that will cause the universe to be in harmony if followed by people. So, there is no need for associating partners with Allah.

If He had had a partner (and we seek refuge with Allah from this belief) and some sort of deity had enjoyed special powers, these powers would detract from the powers of the second deity. This is regarded as incapacity on the part of these deities. Allah settles this matter by saying, 'Allah has not taken any son, nor has there ever been with Him any deity. [If there had been], then each deity would have taken what it created and some of them would have sought to overcome others. Exalted is Allah above what they describe [concerning Him]'. (al-Mu'minun: 91) So, the issue of the partners is unacceptable.

Then, Allah says*:* '... and not take one another as lords instead of Allah...' (Al-'Imran: 64) i.e. we will not take from amongst ourselves people who act like middle-men between God and men, determining the permissible and impermissible matters for us. Allah is the Only One Who is entitled to permit and prohibit matters.

Then, Allah says*:* '…But if they turn away, then say, "Bear witness that we are Muslims [submitting to Him]"'. (Al-'Imran: 64) This means those who do not accept the worship of Allah- the One Who has no associates, nor other lords that permit and prohibit want deities and partners. This means that their hearts are not ready to accept the matter of faith which is based on the existence of only one entity that has Omnipotent Power. Faith is also based on the existence of a source of all actions: the One and the Unique so that no contradiction in natural laws occurs in the universe.

Allah gives the believers certain commands and prohibitions which they should follow; if there had been another deity, there would have been contradiction in natural laws in the universe. This would mean that these deities would be temporal beings with capricious desires.

Allah Glorified is He refutes this matter, saying, ‘But if the Truth had followed their inclinations, the heavens and the earth and whoever is in them would have been ruined. Rather, We have brought them their Message, but they are turning away from their Message’. (al-Mu’minun: 71)

The following is the approach of the call to Allah as adopted by His Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: ‘Say, "Oh people of the Book, come to a word that is equitable between us and you - that we will not worship except Allah and not associate anything with Him and not take one another as lords instead of Allah”. But if they turn away, then say, "Bear witness that we are Muslims [submitting to Him]”’. (Al-‘Imran: 64) This verse encompasses an equitable call free from any irregularities as Allah is the Only One Who should be worshipped and Allah is the only Source of commands and prohibitions and no one should be associated in worship with Him. In addition, no one should take another as a source that permits and prohibits matters. If the people being called refuse this call, the believers should say, ‘…Bear witness that we are Muslims [submitting to Him]’. (Al-‘Imran: 64) It means that there is only one Allah, and He has no partners and we do not take one another as lords. This is a testimony that Islam came with an equitable call that includes no irregularities and that commands that we follow its instructions. Then, Allah says*:*

يَٰٓأَهۡلَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ لِمَ تُحَآجُّونَ فِيٓ إِبۡرَٰهِيمَ وَمَآ أُنزِلَتِ
ٱلتَّوۡرَىٰةُ وَٱلۡإِنجِيلُ إِلَّا مِنۢ بَعۡدِهِۦٓۚ أَفَلَا تَعۡقِلُونَ ٦٥

People of the Book, why do you argue about Abraham when the Torah and the Gospels were not revealed until after his time? Do you not understand? [65] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 65)

Allah asks the people of the Book, about the reason they argued about Ibrahim (Abraham), the chosen one of Allah. The Jews among them ascribe themselves to Musa (Moses) and the Christians to 'Isa (Jesus). It is not possible that Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was a Jew, as the Jews claim for Judaism came after the time of Ibrahim (Abraham). Similarly, the Christians cannot claim that Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was a Christian because Christianity came after his time. Why, then, do they argue? The Torah and the Gospel were revealed after Ibrahim (Abraham), so how could he be a follower of the either the Torah or the Gospel?

Then, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says*:*

هَٰٓأَنتُمۡ هَٰٓؤُلَآءِ حَٰجَجۡتُمۡ فِيمَا لَكُم بِهِۦ عِلۡمٞ فَلِمَ تُحَآجُّونَ فِيمَا
لَيۡسَ لَكُم بِهِۦ عِلۡمٞۚ وَٱللَّهُ يَعۡلَمُ وَأَنتُمۡ لَا تَعۡلَمُونَ ٦٦

You argue about some things of which you have some knowledge, but why do you argue about things of which you know nothing? God knows and you do not [66] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 66)

They argued concerning the part of the Torah that still remained in their possession and they wished to argue about everything; yet they do not know what the All-Merciful Creator knows, for He knows all hidden matters.

Allah clarifies this matter, saying:

مَا كَانَ إِبۡرَٰهِيمُ يَهُودِيّٗا وَلَا نَصۡرَانِيّٗا وَلَٰكِن كَانَ
حَنِيفٗا مُّسۡلِمٗا وَمَا كَانَ مِنَ ٱلۡمُشۡرِكِينَ ٦٧

Abraham was neither a Jew nor a Christian. He was upright and devoted to God, never an idolater [67] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 67)

The verse confirms that Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was not a Jew because Judaism was revealed after his time. He was not also a Christian because Christianity was revealed after his time. Rather, he was the chosen one of Allah and '…he was one inclining towards truth, a Muslim [submitting to Allah]'. (Al-'Imran: 67) We know that that the literal meaning of the Arabic word "hanifa" is "the Pure Religion" which was revealed by Allah. The word is derived from the Arabic word "hanaf" which refers to the bend of the bottom part of the legs, or means “crooked.” Then, the word was used for everything that is not straight.

Here, a person may ask: Did Ibrahim peace be upon him follow a crooked or upright way? How could he be called "hanifa" (meaning the Pure Religion), while this word means "crooked"? We say that Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him followed an upright way, but he rose at a time of idolatry and extreme delusion, and he came to guide and get the people out of this crookedness and delusion. Since he deviated from this crookedness and delusion, he was upright because the Messengers were sent only at a time of religious corruption and tyrannical legislation.

When Allah Glorified and Exalted is He sends down His Guidance, He places some faith in every soul. This faith sometimes becomes strong, causing a person to adhere to the instructions of his religion; and sometimes, this faith fades, and so a person deviates. Then after deviation, sometimes a person observes the instructions of his religion, and so is the status of the self-reproaching soul which reproaches a person when he commits a sin. It also draws a person's attention to Allah’s prohibitions. The person then returns to Allah’s Guidance, repenting and seeking forgiveness. If a person does not have the self-reproaching spirit, then he has a soul that incites him towards evil which always turns to deviation. There are many other souls around the evil soul, trying to resist its evil and rectify its crookedness and delusion. These are the souls of some people from the surrounding environment and society.

Sometimes rectitude and the return to righteousness after sinfulness are urged by a person himself, i.e., from his self-reproaching soul. On other occasions, a person has no self-reproaching soul; rather, he incites towards evil, but the society around this person is not bereft of some goodness which guides to rectitude. However, if all the members of the society have souls that incite towards evil, who will rectify and reform it?

In this case, it is inevitable that Allah brings a new Messenger because a person lacks deterrence and the seed of faith on the part of his own self. In addition, he lacks deterrence on the part of the society because it is also empty of these good members. In this way, darkness spreads, and so Allah sends a Messenger to reignite faith in these souls. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He has guaranteed for the followers of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that no Prophet will come after him peace and blessings be upon him Therefore, goodness will necessarily remain within the community of Muslims. If a person is heedless, his self-reproaching soul will reform his attitude, and if a person has a soul that incites towards evil, there are many people who certainly will guide the evil soul to rectitude.

In this way, the followers of Muhammad will not be bereft of goodness at any time. As for the other previous nations, the matter is different, for Allah sent Messengers to them when the spark of goodness had been extinguished from the souls and tyranny and corruption had spread. At that moment, Allah intervened in order to reform and rectify crookedness and delusion.

So, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was declared hanifa because he deviated from the delusion that spread at his time. Since he deviated from delusion, he was upright; so tolerant hanifiah means uprightness. In this way, we can understand Allah's saying, 'Ibrahim (Abraham) was neither a Jew nor a Christian, but he was one inclining towards truth, a Muslim [submitting to Allah]. And he was not of the polytheists'. (Al-'Imran: 67)

Ibrahim (Abraham) is the father of the Prophets and if Judaism and Christianity had not been corrupted and distorted, it would be acceptable to say that the Jews and the Christians followed his religion. This is because Abrahamic religions do not differ in their fundamentals; they differ in some of their legislations in the manner that makes them appropriate to the times. For this reason, Ibrahim (Abraham) could not have been a Jew that follows the instructions of Judaism due to its distortion of Judaism. Likewise, he could not have been a Christian for the same reasons. Rather, he was '…one inclining towards truth, a Muslim [submitting to Allah]...' (Al-'Imran: 67) This means that he deviated from delusion.

A person may ask, "Why did Allah not say that Ibrahim (Abraham) was "upright," instead of using a word that means crookedness? We say that if He had said "upright," some people might have thought he adopted the line of his contemporaries who were crooked and misguided. Therefore, Allah describes Ibrahim (Abraham) saying, '...but he was one inclining towards truth, a Muslim...' (Al-'Imran: 67) The word "Muslim" here indicates submitting to Allah and believing in His Guidance. When Ibrahim (Abraham) submitted to Allah, he submitted to every command and prohibition. If we apply the same idea to all the Prophets and Messengers, we will find that Adam, Nuh (Noah) and all the Prophets who came before Messenger Muhammad, peace and blessings be upon them all, submitted to Allah, i.e., were Muslims.

Every Prophet and Messenger submitted completely to one Supreme Being: Allah. They followed the Guidance that He sent down. Therefore, the Prophets and believers who preceded Islam were described as Muslims, i.e., submitting to Allah. Then, the perfect guidance which sealed the heavenly Messages was revealed to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him including commands and prohibitions. Nothing new will be revealed and no one can bring about any Message other than that which was revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

The goal of submitting to Allah was perfected by sending down the perfect guidance. Islam became a firm and pure creed, to which the Islamic community, the followers of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is attributed. It will not be followed by any other community because it has surrendered to Allah in everything that was revealed to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Therefore, Allah says,

إِنَّ أَوْلَى ٱلنَّاسِ بِإِبْرَٰهِيمَ لَلَّذِينَ ٱتَّبَعُوهُ وَهَٰذَا
ٱلنَّبِيُّ وَٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ وَلِيُّ ٱلْمُؤْمِنِينَ ﴿٦٨﴾

And the people who are closest to him are those who truly follow his ways, this Prophet, and [true] believers – God is close to [true] believers [68] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 68)

We should notice that all of the Messengers sent before Muhammad, the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him were only sent to specific nations: Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was sent to the children of Israel, as was 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. Allah said, '...And [make him] a Messenger to the children of Israel...' (Al-'Imran: 49), i.e., a Messenger who submitted to the implementation of the Guidance that was revealed to him and to these Messengers. Then, some of the legislation was changed and the Message of faith was perfected by the final Message - the Message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him which is general for all humanity.

Some of the people of the Book believed in his Message, just as those amongst whom he was sent, and belief in the final religion continued until it reached us. In this way, the community of followers of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him became the final community that has submitted to Allah because Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the seal of the Prophets and Messengers.

Abu Hurayrah may Allah be pleased with him related that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'The likeness of me to the Prophets before me is as that of a man who built a house well and beautifully except for the place of one brick in one of its corners. People began to tour the house marvelling at it, saying, "If only this brick were in its place!" I am that brick and I am the seal of the Prophets'.

Some people say that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was a Jew or a Christian because he was the father of the Prophets. They want to ascribe the origin of faith to themselves as if it was transferred from one generation to another until it reached them. Faith is not related to race, nation, blood ties, or anything other than to Allah's Guidance. Accordingly, the people who have the best claim to Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him are not his descendants; rather, they are those who follow him. Our Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him certainly followed Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. Therefore, Prophet Ibrahim's (Abraham's) descendants have no claim to him, as they distorted the guidance that was conveyed by him and did not persevere in faith. Allah gives the final word in this issue regarding Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) when He Glorified is He says*:*

'And [mention, Oh Muhammad], when Ibrahim (Abraham) was tried by his Lord with commands and he fulfilled them. [Allah] said, "Indeed, I will make you a leader for the people". [Ibrahim (Abraham)] said, "And of my descendants?" [Allah] said, "My covenant does not include the wrongdoers"'. (al-Baqara: 124)

Allah tried Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) with commands and prohibitions and he peace be upon him fulfilled them in the most rigorous manner. It was not merely an outward, superficial fulfilment; rather, it was concerned with both form and content. An example of adherence to commands and prohibitions only superficially is a person who responds to Allah's Command to offer the five obligatory prayers by offering them without the heart being submissively attuned to the prayers. Another person, however, offers these five prayers in the manner they should be offered - he fulfils the divine commands in a way that pleases Allah.

Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was tried by Allah’s Commands that represent obligations, and he fulfilled them in the best way possible. Was Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him content merely with carrying out Allah’s Command to raise the foundations of the Ka'bah as high as his hands could reach? Had he done so, he would have carried out the command, but he peace be upon him wanted to fulfil the command to build the foundations of the Ka'ba in the best possible way. Therefore, he built it as high as his hands could do using every possible means; he brought a stone to stand on it so that the wall of the Ka'ba would be raised insomuch as the height of that stone. At that time, there were neither scaffolds nor the other tools that allow people to scale as high as they want today.

If Prophet Ibrahim peace be upon him had only raised the foundations of the Ka'ba as high as his hands could reach, he would have carried out Allah’s Command. However, he wanted to fulfil the task with his personal abilities as well as the innovative means he used, so he brought the stone to stand upon it in order to raise the height of the Ka'ba's wall. The place in which Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) stood, while building the Ka'ba is known as “Maqam Ibrahim.” When he fulfilled Allah’s Command in such a perfect manner, Allah Glorified is He said to him, ‘…Indeed, I will make you a leader for the people...’ (al-Baqara: 124)

This means that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) deserved to be a leader of the people with regards to religion because he fulfilled the commands and prohibitions thoroughly and perfectly. Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him had deep concern for his Lord’s Guidance, as he did not want it to be limited to his lifetime only; rather, he asked Allah to pass the guidance and leadership to his progeny. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He stated what Ibrahim (Abraham) said when he requested leadership to be entrusted to his descendants, “…And of my descendants....” (al-Baqara: 124)?

Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) was full of deep concern for the course of faith and he feared for it even after his death. But Allah Glorified and Exalted is He informs all mankind through Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) that His '…Covenant does not include the wrongdoers...' (al-Baqara: 124) This means that the transfer of faith and leadership is not a matter of inheritance because there were amongst his descendants those who wronged themselves, and amended the course of faith in a manner that suits their interests. Therefore, they were not fit for leadership. Allah informs us with the rules of inheritance of Prophethood which entail that Prophethood is only inherited by those who are able to implement the instructions of faith completely, without distortion.

As an example: Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him clarified this point when he said about Salman, the Persian: "Salman is one of us, from our family". The Master of mankind, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not tell Salman that he was one of the Arabs, but he ascribed him to the Prophetic family, i.e., to the inheritors of Prophethood which require perfect implementation of the instructions of faith. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him knew what Allah Glorified is He had taught Prophet Ibrahim about the inheritance of Prophethood, as it is not a matter of blood ties, but it is associated with the thorough and precise implementation of the instructions of faith. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him also learned this from the incident relevant to Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him which Allah revealed to him.

When Allah promised Prophet Nuh (Noah) to save him and his family from the flood, and he saw that his son was about to be drown, he wondered about the fact that Allah promised him to save his family, so he called his Lord, as the Noble Quran states, 'And Noah called to his Lord and said, "My Lord, indeed my son is of my family; and indeed, Your promise is true; and You are the most just of judges!"' (Hud: 45) Then, Allah said in response to Nuh's request to save his son: 'He said, "Oh Nuh (Noah), indeed he is not of your family; indeed, he is [one whose] work was other than righteous, so ask Me not for that about which you have no knowledge. Indeed, I advise you, lest you be among the ignorant"' (Hud: 46).

The reason why the son of Prophet Nuh (Noah) should not be considered as part of Nuh's family according to the Quranic explanation is that '...he is [one whose] work was other than righteous...’ (Hud: 46) Allah did not say that he is not an impious person, as a person himself is not the subject of concern because Allah judges according to deeds.

Faith is not concerned with lineage, a particular country, or tribe. It is concerned with one's deeds; whoever acts according to the Guidance conveyed by any Messenger is considered as one of that Messenger’s kin. Ascription to Prophets is not concerned with a person who is descended from a certain Prophet’s linage; rather, it is concerned with the deeds that this person does.

In another verse, Allah states a situation relevant to Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him indicating the Creator’s Mercy for all of His Creatures, both those who believe and those who disbelieve. Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him asked for provision for his family, whom he ordered to live in Mecca, as Allah says*:* ‘And [mention] when Abraham said, "My Lord, make this a secure city and provide its people with fruits - whoever of them believes in Allah…”’ (al-Baqara: 126)

Allah did not answer Prophet Ibrahim's (Abraham’s) supplication by giving provisions only to whomever believed in Him from among the people of Mecca, but He provided for both the believers and the disbelievers. He also informs Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) of this fact, when He says to him*:* ‘And whoever disbelieves - I will grant him enjoyment for a little; then I will force him to the punishment of the Fire and wretched is the destination’ (al-Baqara: 126).

Material sustenance is provided by Allah to all humanity, both the believers and disbelievers because He is the One Who has brought both a believer and a disbeliever into existence. However, the provision given due to following Allah’s Guidance is a different matter, for following Guidance necessitates submission to its content as a whole without any alteration. None but a few of those who came after Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him followed this guidance, as very few people also believed in the Message of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him without any distortion.

Then, Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him conveyed to the children of Israel a Message that was supposed to take them away from pure materialism to belief in the unseen. However, the Message of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was also distorted. Accordingly, the people who have the best claim to Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him are the followers of the final Guidance of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that includes the essence of all the preceding Messages. Allah is the Guardian of the believers who believe thoroughly and completely in the Message of Ibrahim (Abraham), the chosen one of Allah peace be upon him as well as the Message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Then, Allah Glorified is He says,

وَدَّت طَّآئِفَةٞ مِّنۡ أَهۡلِ ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ لَوۡ يُضِلُّونَكُمۡ وَمَا يُضِلُّونَ
إِلَّآ أَنفُسَهُمۡ وَمَا يَشۡعُرُونَ ٦٩

Some of the People of the Book would dearly love to lead you [believers] astray, but they only lead themselves astray, though they do not realize it [69] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 69)

The meaning of the Arabic word "waddat" is "would love to" or "wish to." Why does this faction of the people of the Book wish to lead the believers astray? Because when the deviant person sees the upright person, he realises his failure to abide by the religious obligations with its commands and prohibitions. However, the practising believer has been able to control himself. When the non-practising person sees a practising person, he despises himself and feels jealous of the believer because he is able to control himself.

The deviant person tries to cause the upright person to deviate and when he becomes unable to do so, he mocks and scorns him and tries to scheme against him to cause him to deviate.

Allah says, 'Indeed, those who committed crimes used to laugh at those who believed. And when they passed by them, they would exchange derisive glances. And when they returned to their people, they would return jesting. And when they saw them, they would say, "Indeed, those are truly lost". But they had not been sent as guardians over them"'. (al-Mutaffifin: 29-33)

This is what occurs nowadays: when the deviant people see an upright believer, they mock him with sardonic comments, or they attempt to belittle his faith. When they return to their companions, they jokingly tell them of how they mocked the believers, as though they make their companions happy by these tales. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He reassures the believers that they will have a day in which they will laugh at those disbelievers. ‘So, today those who believed are laughing at the disbelievers, on adorned couches, observing’ (al-Mutaffifin: 34-35). Allah will ask the believers, ‘Have the disbelievers [not] been rewarded [this Day] for what they used to do?’ (al-Mutaffifin: 36) This verse means that Allah asks the believers if they have known the reward of the disbelievers.

Therefore, the people with the best claim to Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) are the believers in the Message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him Some of the disbelievers are still trying to attract the believers to misguidance. They wish and aspire for this, but their wish will not be fulfilled. Allah Glorified is He refers to this matter, saying, ‘A faction of the people of the Book wish they could mislead you. But they do not mislead except themselves and they perceive [it] not’ (Al-‘Imran: 69). An example of this is what some of the Jews did when they went to Mu`adh ibn Jabal, Hudhayfa and `Ammar, the great Companions, in an attempt to delude them, but they were unable to do so.

We should know that the Arabic word "Al-Dalal" has many meanings; it may mean “loss and extinction”, as in the saying of Allah Glorified is He: ‘And they say, "When we are lost within the earth, will we indeed be [recreated] in a new creation?" Rather, they are, in [the matter of] the meeting with their Lord, disbelievers’ (as-Sajda: 10). The polytheists wondered if they will be recreated after the decay of their bodies and the loss of the basic elements of their bodies within the earth. "Al-Dalal" may also mean “a person’s misguidance”, as Allah says, describing His Messenger Muhammad peace be upon him when he refused to worship idols and remained in search of the true guidance: ‘And He found you lost and guided [you]’ (Al-‘Imran: 7). This verse means that Muhammad was not pleased with Quraysh’s act of worshipping idols and he remained in search of the True Guidance until Allah guided him and revealed to him this upright religion. Prophet Muhammad was lost, searching for guidance, then Allah sent down to him the perfect grace.

Another meaning of "Al-Dalal" is that a person realises the true guidance, but he deviates from it and he goes astray. An example of this meaning is the saying of Allah, ‘A faction of the people of the Book wish they could mislead you. But they do not mislead except themselves…’ (Al-‘Imran: 69). The question is: how can a person go astray? The deviant person who knows the true guidance but denies it commits a sin which aggravates the situation when he attempts to lead others astray. He is not content with his misguidance; rather, he aggravates his sin by attempting to lead others astray. This verse clarifies to us the saying of Allah Glorified is He 'And no bearer of burdens will bear the burden of another. And if a heavily laden soul calls [another] to [carry some of] its load, nothing of it will be carried, even if he should be a close relative…' (Fatir: 18). It also clarifies the saying of Allah the Exalted, 'That they may bear their own burdens in full on the Day of Resurrection and some of the burdens of those whom they misguide without knowledge. Unquestionably, evil is that which they bear' (an-Nahl: 25).

Therefore, the burden in the former verse mentioned in the chapter of Fatir refers to the burden of going astray, while the burden in the verse mentioned in the chapter of an-Nahl refers to misleading others. These misguided people are not merely satisfied with their own misguidance, but they increase the burdens of their misguidance by leading others astray. Therefore, they aggravate their misguidance. '…But they do not mislead except themselves and they perceive [it] not' (Al-'Imran: 69). They do not perceive the tragic outcome of this aggravated misguidance, for which they will be chastised. If they had only reflected a little on the matter of faith, they would have ceased to mislead others and to go astray. Then, Allah says,

يَٰٓأَهۡلَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ لِمَ تَكۡفُرُونَ بِـَٔايَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ وَأَنتُمۡ تَشۡهَدُونَ ﴿٧٠﴾

People of the Book, why do you deny God's revelations when you can see they are true? [70] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 70)

Allah asks them through the words of His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for the reason why they disbelieve in the miraculous verses of Allah, while they witness to their truth. A person may ask: Did the people of the Book witness the miraculous verses during the time of the Prophet Muhammad? The answer is: When the Jews prayed for victory against those who fought them, they asked Allah "by the illiterate Prophet," whom He has promised them to send at the end of time, to give them victory over their enemies. Then, they gained victory; however, when Prophet

Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent, they disbelieved in him out of transgression and jealousy. Allah says: ‘And when there came to them a Book from Allah confirming that which was with them - although before they used to pray for victory against those who disbelieved - but [then] when there came to them that which they recognised, they disbelieved in it; so the curse of Allah will be upon the disbelievers’. (al-Baqara: 89)

They disbelieved for the sake of temporal power, for they wanted rule and authority. 'Abdullah ibn Sallam, who had been a Jew before he embraced Islam, said about Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘I recognised him when I saw him in the manner I recognise my son, but my knowledge of Muhammad is deeper’.

So, they knew the attributes and characteristics of Prophet Muhammad from the Torah and they witnessed the clear verses, but they denied them out of greed for temporal power. They even distorted their religion and used it in gaining corrupt temporal power. An example of this is those who sold the contracts of forgiveness. Therefore, Allah says about those who distort His guidance: ‘So, woe to those who write the "Book" with their own hands, then say, "This is from Allah," in order to exchange it for a small price. Woe to them for what their hands have written and woe to them for what they earn’. (al-Baqara: 79) Torment is the destiny of those who distorted Allah’s saying and Guidance. Allah Glorified is He says:

يَٰٓأَهۡلَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ لِمَ تَلۡبِسُونَ ٱلۡحَقَّ بِٱلۡبَٰطِلِ وَتَكۡتُمُونَ ٱلۡحَقَّ وَأَنتُمۡ تَعۡلَمُونَ ٧١

People of the Book, why do you mix truth with falsehood?
Why do you hide the truth when you recognize [it]? [71]
(The Quran, Al-’Imran: 71)

The literary meaning of the Arabic word "talabbus" is to place something inside another thing. When a person wears his clothes, he places his body into the clothes; and in this way, the "wearer" is distinct from the "clothes worn.” In the sphere of da`wah (calling people to Allah), we do not always find the truth confronting falsehood, and some people mix truth with falsehood. This verse outlines the attempt of some of the people of the Book to confuse the truth with falsehood. This occurred when they distorted the Torah and the Gospel and placed within them statements which neither Musa (Moses) nor 'Isa (Jesus) conveyed. This was one of the attempts to confuse the truth with falsehood. Then, the most considerable attempt to confuse the truth with falsehood was their denial of the glad tiding of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him despite the fact that it was mentioned in their Holy Books.

They announced their belief in Prophet Musa (Moses) and Prophet 'Isa (Jesus), but did they not believe in Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him so they denied the tidings carried by Musa (Moses) and 'Isa (Jesus) about the final Message of Muhammad. This was the greatest confusion between the truth and falsehood because they announced their faith in two Messengers and refused to believe in the final Prophet, as they knew that Islam which was conveyed by Prophet Muhammad, was the True Religion. However, when they were alone together, they confessed this fact, but publicly, they rejected it. 'And they rejected them, while their [inner] selves were convinced thereof, out of injustice and haughtiness....' (an-Naml: 14) In addition, they tried to find a scheme by which they could drive the people away from this final Message, persisting in disbelief. Allah says on this occasion,

وَقَالَت طَّآئِفَةٌ مِّنْ أَهْلِ ٱلْكِتَٰبِ ءَامِنُوا۟ بِٱلَّذِىٓ أُنزِلَ عَلَى ٱلَّذِينَ
ءَامَنُوا۟ وَجْهَ ٱلنَّهَارِ وَٱكْفُرُوٓا۟ ءَاخِرَهُۥ لَعَلَّهُمْ يَرْجِعُونَ ﴿٧٢﴾

Some of the People of the Book say, 'At the beginning of the day, believe in what has been revealed to these believers [the Muslims], then at the end of the day reject it, so that they too may turn back [72] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 72)

Some of the people of the Book wanted to cause the Muslims to doubt their religion, so they devised this scheme. The believers from among the Arabs and Quraysh at that time were illiterate and they knew that the people of the Book were knowledgeable about religious matters and the Quran had not yet been revealed in its entirety to Prophet Muhammad peace be upon him. If some of them believed in the Message of Prophet Muhammad during the day and denied it at the end of the day, this would confuse the truth with falsehood, an act which involves deceiving the believers.

It is worth mentioning that the intended meaning of the Arabic words "wajh al-nahar" is the hours of morning up to the noon because the wajh (beginning) is the first thing to be encountered in any matter. For example, when we say about a fruit seller, "Sana' wajh lilfakihah", this means that he has placed the freshest fruits at the front of the cart and has hidden the rotten fruits behind the fresh ones. When a tradesman does something like this, his intention is to cheat and deceive because if a person buys an amount of these fruits, he will find that a quarter of what he has bought is fresh and the rest is rotten.

In the same way, some of the people of the Book attempted to deceive the believers by professing faith at the beginning of the day, then announcing their disbelief at the end of the day. Certainly, the goal was to make believers suspicious and dubious about this religion, as some of the illiterate people may say that the people of the Book who were knowledgeable about the Divine Messages reviewed this new religion and found it not conforming to the Divine Messages.

This verse may have been revealed regarding the issue of changing the direction of Qiblah (towards the Ka`ba, the direction faced in Prayer). When Allah Glorified is He ordered Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to change the direction of Qiblah from Jerusalem to the Ka'ba in Mecca, the disbelievers from among the people of the Book wanted to disobey it. Therefore, they thought of obeying Muhammad and praying towards the direction of the Ka'ba at the beginning of the day and then praying towards the direction of Jerusalem at the end of the day.

Allah wants to reveal that all the methods used by the disbelievers stem from a complete lack of shrewdness and thorough reflection on matters. They wanted to launch a psychological war against the Muslims in order that some of them might be dubious about the new religion. However, they did not notice that they had disgraced themselves and unintentionally admitted that those who believed in the Quran were the true believers, while they disbelieved. Allah Glorified is He says about them that they '…believe in that which was revealed to the believers at the beginning of the day and reject it at its end that perhaps they will abandon their religion...' (Al-'Imran: 72) They were content with their disbelief.

Those who tried to make the believers uncertain about their religion announced their belief in Islam in order that the people would know this about them. As they belonged to the people of the Book, they were able to judge it so that when they would reject Islam after getting to know it, they would say that the reason for their rejection of Islam was not ignorance or prejudice; rather, they reviewed this religion and found it inappropriate and inconsistent with the Message revealed to their Messenger. This is one of the methods of psychological warfare. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He unveiled the cunningness and deceit of those who tried to conceal their plot by which they intended to spread doubt and deceit. Allah sends down to His Messenger this following truth when he says*:*

وَلَا تُؤْمِنُوٓا۟ إِلَّا لِمَن تَبِعَ دِينَكُمْ قُلْ إِنَّ ٱلْهُدَىٰ هُدَى ٱللَّهِ أَن يُؤْتَىٰٓ
أَحَدٌ مِّثْلَ مَآ أُوتِيتُمْ أَوْ يُحَآجُّوكُمْ عِندَ رَبِّكُمْ ۗ قُلْ إِنَّ ٱلْفَضْلَ بِيَدِ
ٱللَّهِ يُؤْتِيهِ مَن يَشَآءُ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ وَٰسِعٌ عَلِيمٌ ﴿٧٣﴾

But do not sincerely believe in anyone unless he follows your own religion'– [Prophet], tell them, 'True guidance is the guidance of God'– [they say], 'Do not believe that anyone else could be given a revelation similar to what you were given, or that they could use it to argue against you in your Lord's presence.' [Prophet], tell them, 'All grace is in God's hands: He grants it to whoever He will – He is all embracing, all knowing [73] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 73)

Allah Glorified is He disclosed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the illiterate believers the plot devised by some of the people of the Book, as they pretended to believe in Islam at the beginning of the day and disbelieved at its end. Those plotters agreed to keep this matter secret so that the scheme would not lose its goal: confusing the illiterate Muslims. Therefore, they said to one another, 'And do not trust except those who follow your religion…' (Al-'Imran: 73). This means "do not reveal the scheme except to those who follow our religion." However, Allah disclosed the whole matter by sending down this verse to His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who conveyed it to the believers. In this manner, the planned confusion failed and the psychological warfare reverted to those who launched it. Then, Allah completed unveiling the scheme of some of the people of the Book with the following verse: '…Say, "Indeed, the [true] guidance is the guidance of Allah. [Do you fear] lest someone be given [knowledge] like you were given or that they would [thereby] argue with you before your Lord?"...' (Al-'Imran: 73)

Allah Glorified is He revealed the plot of this cunning faction of the people of the Book who wanted to profess faith at the beginning of the day as a kind of guidance, but actually this was a means of misguidance. This is because Allah's Guidance leads mankind to the goal that Allah wills, while this faction of the people of the Book desired, by means of scheming, to make Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him bereft of believers in Islam. This faction of the people of the Book advised one another to conceal their agreement to pretend to be believers at the beginning of the day and to be disbelievers at its end. They also agreed to unveil this plot only to those who followed their religion so that the plot would not lose its goal: confusing the Muslims.

They were consumed with fear because if the people accepted the religion of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him they would have knowledge of Allah's Guidance and the Guidance that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him conveyed is the final Guidance. This cunning faction from among the people of the Book wanted to prevent people from faith. Perhaps they feared that the Muslims would enter into debate with them concerning faith. This indicates a lack of wisdom that may amount to foolishness. This is because they imagined that Allah did not know their hidden intentions and the action they did in public; they forgot that Allah knows the treachery of the eyes and all that the hearts conceal.

This is in accordance with their ancestors' previous action, when they left Egypt and went into the wilderness, while travelling through the desert. They claimed that Allah said to Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him "Mark your houses, Oh Israelites, for I will descend and smite the land entirely". It is as if they believed that had they not placed marks on their houses, Allah would not have known which of them were believers. This statement indicates misguidance and failure. Allah says to His Messenger, Muhammad: '…Say, "Indeed, [all] bounty is in the Hand of Allah - He grants it to whom He wills. And Allah is all-Encompassing and Wise’ (Al-‘Imran: 73).

All bounty is in Allah’s Hand, and the people who plot against the Muslims will not be able to misguide and deceive them because when Allah gives His bounty to those who believe in Him, none can remove it except Him. Schemes cannot remove the bounty of belief in Allah because He has granted it. Allah is All-Encompassing, i.e. He can grant His bounty to all creatures and this would decrease nothing from His Bounty. Allah Glorified is He knows those who deserve this bounty because their hearts are preoccupied with their Lord. Then, Allah Glorified is He says,

يَخْتَصُّ بِرَحْمَتِهِۦ مَن يَشَآءُ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ ذُو ٱلْفَضْلِ ٱلْعَظِيمِ ﴿٧٤﴾

And He singles out for His mercy whoever He will.
His grace is infinite [74] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 74)

No one has any right over Allah, for every moment of life is a bounty from Him and He Glorified and Exalted is He grants His Mercy in the form of belief in His Guidance to whom He wills and He is the Owner of absolute bounty. Then, Allah Glorified is He says,

وَمِنْ أَهْلِ ٱلْكِتَـٰبِ مَنْ إِن تَأْمَنْهُ بِقِنطَارٍ يُؤَدِّهِۦٓ إِلَيْكَ وَمِنْهُم مَّنْ إِن تَأْمَنْهُ بِدِينَارٍ
لَّا يُؤَدِّهِۦٓ إِلَيْكَ إِلَّا مَا دُمْتَ عَلَيْهِ قَآئِمًا ۗ ذَٰلِكَ بِأَنَّهُمْ قَالُوا۟ لَيْسَ عَلَيْنَا فِى ٱلْأُمِّيِّـۧنَ
سَبِيلٌ وَيَقُولُونَ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ ٱلْكَذِبَ وَهُمْ يَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٧٥﴾

There are People of the Book who, if you [Prophet] entrust them with a heap of gold, will return it to you intact, but there are others of them who, if you entrust them with a single dinar, will not return it to you unless you keep standing over them, because they say, ‘We are under no obligation towards the gentiles.’ They tell a lie against God and they know it [75] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 75)

This verse indicates absolute divine equity: just because Allah revealed to the Messenger some of the cunningness of the people of the Book, this does not mean that there is a campaign against the people of the Book, as though they were all evil. Rather, some of them are marked with trustworthiness. This saying confirms the justice of Allah, the Just Deity.

Allah Glorified and Exalted is He addresses all people, whom He knows, as He knows that the da`wah (calling to Allah) of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came as a mercy to all people. He addresses the whole world including the people of the Book who know the signs of the coming of the Message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him Some of them attached great care to the da`wah (calling to Allah) of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to study and believe in it. If Allah had waged a campaign against all of the people of the Book, those who considered believing in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would have said that they were thinking of believing and they wanted to follow Allah's Commands, but Muhammad waged a campaign against all of the people of the Book.

When Allah says that some of the people of the Book are marked with trustworthiness, those who are considering embracing Islam will say that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him only conveys what his Lord wills to reveal. If the Quran had applied a general judgment on all of them, those who were considering believing in the Message of Allah's Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would have asked: "Why does this judgment apply to us all when we are thinking of belief?"

Therefore, Allah says the final word stating that some of the people of the Book are considering faith: 'They are not [all] the same; among the People of the Book is a community standing [in obedience], reciting the verses of Allah during periods of the night and prostrating [in prayer]'. (Al-'Imran: 113) This verse reassures those who preoccupied themselves with studying this religion and considered believing in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

If the Quran had cursed them all, those who were considering believing would have said that Muhammad came to curse them and they did not deserve to be cursed. Therefore, the verse that reads, 'And among the People of the Book is he who, if you entrust him with a great amount [of wealth], he will return it to you…' (Al-'Imran: 75) represents absolute justice and equity.

Some of the exegetes said that in this verse, the Quran refers to the Christians because among them are those who are conscientious of Allah. We know that the "people of the Book" refer to the Jews and Christians. This explanation does justice to the Christians, as Allah does not deny their good attributes; rather, He confirms them in the Quran which will be recited until the Day of Judgment. This is also in order for the people of the Book to trust the verses of the Quran with regards to any bad matter because the Quran is absolutely truthful. Since it mentions their good attributes, it must be honest when it mentions their bad attributes.

When Allah Glorified is He says*:* 'And among the People of the Book is he who, if you entrust him with a great amount [of wealth]...' (Al-'Imran: 75), Allah uses the Arabic word "qintar" here as a hyperbole that indicates a large quantity of money. When the Arabic word "amanah" is mentioned in the Noble Quran, we find that sometimes it is followed by the Arabic preposition "ba", as in this verse, "Man in ta'manahu biqintar" which means '…if you entrust him with a great amount [of wealth]....' (Al-'Imran: 75) But sometimes it (amanah) is followed by the Arabic preposition "'ala", meaning "over", as in the verse: 'They said, "Oh our father, why do you not entrust us with Joseph, while indeed, we are to him sincere counsellors?"' (Yusuf: 11)

Allah also says, 'He [Ya'qub or Jacob] said, "Should I entrust you with him [Yusuf or Joseph] except [under coercion] as I entrusted you with his brother before? But Allah is the best guardian and He is the most merciful of the merciful"'. (Yusuf: 64)

Therefore, the Arabic word "amanah"' is sometimes followed by the Arabic preposition "ba" and sometimes by the Arabic preposition "'ala". Both of these prepositions are mentioned for a certain reason, as the speaker is Allah.

The Arabic word "amanah" means "an object which is entrusted to someone without any guarantee except the conscience of the person entrusted." If the relationship between them is governed by a receipt, contract, or witnesses, this is not considered a trust because a trust is the object entrusted to a person who may take care of it or not.

We said before that a true believer must be cautious of trusts because there will be a time when a trust may be assumed and a time when it may need to be returned when its owner requests it. An example of assuming a trust is if a person gives another a sum of money and tells him to keep this money as a trust, and the latter agrees to do so and takes the money. This action is considered an assumption of trust. When the owner of this money asks for it and the other person returns it, this is called giving back the trust. Everyone is confident of himself when he assumes trust and he may have good intentions to keep the trust. However, the true believer cannot guarantee safety from the life circumstances of other people. Perhaps when the owner of the money requests his money back, the person entrusted with the money may betray the trust, being forced by his life circumstances or his soul may incite him to take possession of the trust and tell him that nothing will happen if he betrays the trust. The true believer cannot be sure of himself when the time comes to return the trust though he may be sure of himself when he assumes it.

Therefore, we must be aware of the two words that are associated with trust: assumption and redemption. Those who assume trusts, while having the intention of redeeming them are confident of themselves at the time of assuming it, but they cannot be confident of themselves at the time of returning the trust. Therefore, the cautious believer does not want to subject himself to this situation for fear that he may fail to give it back. Hence, he apologizes to the owner of the object which will be entrusted clarifying that he cannot take on this trust. He fears of not being able to redeem it and this occurred at the time of offering the trust to heavens and the earth, about which Allah Glorified is He says,“Indeed, we offered the Trust to the heavens and the earth and the mountains and they declined to bear it and feared it; but Man [undertook to] bear it. Indeed, he was unjust and ignorant….” (al-Ahzab: 72)

The heavens, the earth, and the mountains requested not to have free will and to remain under compulsion because they were not confident of themselves about the time of Allah’s redeeming the trust. However, as the human being is unjust and ignorant, he has claimed that he is intelligent and can arrange for this matter. The human being is unjust to himself and ignorant because he does not know what he will do at the time of redeeming the trust.

Accordingly, we understand Allah’s saying, ‘And among the People of the Book is he who, if you entrust him with a great amount [of wealth]....’ (Al-‘Imran: 75) We find that the Arabic word "amanah" (trust) is followed by the Arabic preposition "ba" which linguistically means “adherence and joining”. This means that wealth is closely associated with trust. At the moment of redeeming the trust, one should not be tempted by the treasure of gold, and betray the trust because considering the treasure without the trust is the real failure.

When the Arabic preposition "'ala" is used with the Arabic word "amanah,” it means “superiority.” This means that the trust should be considered superior to the treasure. Therefore, when a person thinks of taking the treasure because it will positively affect his life and will cause him to live in luxury, he will remember the superiority of the trust.

Accordingly, we find that some of the scholars have given a legal opinion to the effect that a thief’s hand should be cut off for stealing a quarter of a dinar; but they made the compensation for cutting off an innocent person’s hand five hundred dinars. Some people wondered, saying,

A hand is compensated with five hundred gold pieces, so why is it cut off for stealing a quarter of a dinar?A scholar answered a person objecting to this, saying:The rank of trust is superior and the disgrace of betrayal is mean; so understand the wisdom of the Creator!

Therefore, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says, ‘And among the People of the Book is he who, if you entrust him with a great amount [of wealth]….’ (Al-‘Imran: 75) In these words of Allah, the Arabic preposition "ba'" follows the Arabic word "amanah" (trust) in order to link the trust firmly to the one who is entrusted. If "amanah" is separated from the wealth, a person entrusted may think of taking hold of the wealth, and disregard the trust. Likewise, when the Arabic word "amanah" is followed by the Arabic preposition "'ala" (over), the trust becomes superior to the object that is entrusted; the trust must be held superior to the object entrusted, no matter how valuable it is.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘…And among the People of the Book is he who, if you entrust him with a great amount [of wealth], he will return it to you. And among them is he who, if you entrust him with a [single] silver coin, he will not return it to you unless you are constantly standing over him [demanding it]’. (Al-‘Imran: 75) This means that the owner of the silver coin which is entrusted should demand it constantly.

Then, Allah says, '…That is because they say, "There is no blame upon us concerning the unlearned...."' (Al-'Imran: 75) Some of the children of Israel deceived some of the illiterate Arab believers and denied their rights at the time of Prophet Muhammad, may peace and blessings be upon him. The Arabic word "Al-Umiyyin" here refers the believers who did not belong to the people of the Book. It may also mean those who are ascribed to their mothers, as Allah says*:* 'And Allah has extracted you from the wombs of your mothers not knowing a thing and He made for you hearing and vision and intellect that perhaps you would be grateful'. (al-Nahl: 78) It also may refer to the illiterate people of Mecca who were given this name because they were ascribed to Umm Al-Qura (Mecca).

How did the people of the Book know this double-faced way of dealing with people? Who devised this approach which involves deceiving the illiterate believers? Do merits and manners differ from dealing with one person to another? Do good morals involve taking the trust owned by an illiterate person then denying it, while returning the trust if it is owned by a Jew? Is it right that a person lends money with interest to the non-Jews and lends the Jews money without interest? These dealings are biased and double-faced. The rule should be fair, fixed, and suitable to be applied on every person at every time.

How did they bring this saying, while they are the people of the Book? This is contrary to the teachings of the Divine Book which was sent by Allah. They deceived themselves and added to Allah's Law new matters, as the Divine Book that was sent down to them did not divide people into two groups: The people of the Book (who are to be treated in a special manner) and the illiterate people (who are to be treated differently). It was incumbent upon them to learn from the just and fair conduct of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in their dealings.

Their history is truthfully and justly recorded in an honourable saying, which was revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and which we tackle in this book "Al-Khawater" (Thoughts). This verse records the history of the Jews with Islam, about whom Allah has not made a single judgment applicable to all of them. Rather, He has treated the truthful and just Jews fairly. Accordingly, the truthful and just persons among them had a firm belief that Islam has come with the whole truth. Had Islam issued only one general judgment against all of the Jews, whether those who opposed the da`wah (calling to Allah) of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him or the truthful and just among them who were considering embracing Islam, the fair Jews would have said that they were thinking of believing in Islam, so why did the Quran attack them in this way? However, Allah is Just and gives everyone his due right.

Allah said about those people, 'And among the People of the Book is he who, if you entrust him with a great amount [of wealth], he will return it to you….' (Al-'Imran: 75) This is a testimony of the true belief of those people. As for the ones who have been overwhelmed by materialism, they are described in this Noble saying: '…And among them is he who, if you entrust him with a [single] silver coin, he will not return it to you unless you are constantly standing over him [demanding it]'. (Al-'Imran: 75) This is a true statement about those who were so overwhelmed by materialism that a person would not return the object entrusted to him except after being followed and asked constantly to return it. In this way, the Quran chronicles their conduct truthfully.

The reason why those entrusted with a treasure return it is that they abide by the teachings of their religion, taking into consideration that their Lord is called "the Absolute Truth" and wants His servants to face all the situations of their lives with truthfulness. I repeat again that when the Arabic word "amanah" is mentioned in the Noble Quran, it is sometimes followed by the Arabic preposition "ba" and sometimes followed by the Arabic preposition "'ala"(over) because "ba" linguistically means close attachment between two objects. Therefore, it means that if something is entrusted to a Muslim, he should return it. When the Word "amanah" (trust) is followed by the Arabic preposition "'ala", it means that a believer should treat the object entrusted to him as something sublime which should not be stolen or abused.

For example, if a person is entrusted with one hundred pounds, he should not consider the material benefit he will get if he takes this sum for himself; rather, you must rise above this benefit. Oh believer, beware of dishonesty and being deceived by the benefit and preciousness of that which you misappropriate from the trust; rather, compare that thing with the weight of the trust and you will find that the trust is outbalancing.

The people of the Book who permitted the betrayal of trust did not pay heed to the fact that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was famous for his trustworthiness, both before and after the Message was sent down to him. They disregarded the fact that the True Religion does not differentiate between people with regards to the returning of trust. In addition, the True Religion encompasses a Law from Allah Who has created all the people. Therefore, we find that the law that differentiates between people with regards to the returning of trust was created by them and was not sent by Allah, He Who takes charge of the affairs of all His Creatures. Moreover, Allah refutes the reason for which they decided to deal with the illiterate people differently from the way they dealt with the people of the Book.

Allah Glorified is He says, '…And they speak untruth about Allah, while they know'. (Al-'Imran: 78) They know that they tell lies, for they know the true ruling, yet they deviate from it. In addition, they did not say that this ruling was created by them, but they ascribed it to the teachings of their religion, which are revealed by Allah. Accordingly, they invent a lie against Allah, and we seek refuge with Allah from such things, by saying that He has created mankind and divided them into two groups: The first one should have their trusts returned and the second one may not have their trusts returned. Therefore, they fabricated a lie about Allah, while being aware of that. Although they also knew the punishment awaiting the one who lies about Allah, they committed this act.

Allah did not mention the direct object in this verse as He did not say, "They are well-aware of such-and-such". When Allah omits the direct object, He intends to generalise the meaning and the action. Allah Glorified is He wants to inform us that those people knew that they were lying and the punishment of lying, as well. When an issue is negated and followed by the Arabic word "bala" ("but yes"), this implies that the issue preceding it is disproved. This means that the opposite is affirmed. They said, '…"There is no blame upon us concerning the unlearned"…' (Al-'Imran: 75) This Arabic saying is negated by the word "laysa" ("no"). Allah says in the next verse:

بَلَىٰ مَنْ أَوْفَىٰ بِعَهْدِهِۦ وَٱتَّقَىٰ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ يُحِبُّ ٱلْمُتَّقِينَ ﴿٧٦﴾

No indeed! God loves those who keep their pledges and are mindful of Him [76] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 76)

As Allah says the Arabic word "bala" ("but yes") at the beginning of this verse, He intends to disprove the previous claim of the people of the Book. It is as though Allah says, "Yes, there is blame upon you with regards to the unlearned people because the legislator is Allah to whom all people are equal. Then, Allah states a general issue: '... whoever fulfils his commitment and fears Allah - then indeed, Allah loves those who fear Him'. (Al-'Imran: 76)

Which commitment is referred to here? This is the commitment to faith which we have accepted, as we believe in Allah. When a person believes in Allah, he accepts every ruling issued by Him Glorified is He and he tries his best to adhere to everything enjoined by Him. If he does not adhere to Allah's Commands, his faith has no value because the benefit of faith is obtained by adherence. Therefore, we said that when Allah Glorified and Exalted is He wants to legislate a ruling for those who believe in Him, He first enjoins certain commands on the believers. He Glorified is He does not enjoin the commands on all people; He only enjoins them on the believers. It is as though Allah Glorified is He says, "Oh you who believe in Me as Allah: obey the command that I enjoin on you. I do not ask those who have not believed in me to obey the command".

Allah says, '…whoever fulfils his commitment and fears Allah - then indeed, Allah loves those who fear Him'. (Al-'Imran: 76) Some people may understand that whoever is committed to faith and fears Allah in the manner that his actions are in line with His Commands and Prohibitions, is loved by Allah. This is the meaning that may be understood at first glance, but Allah did not say this. "Love" is not related to a person; rather, it is related to one's deeds. Allah says '…indeed, Allah loves those who fear Him' (Al-'Imran: 76).

A person may commit a mistake and think that because Allah loves him, he can commit whatever mistakes he wants. We remind this person with the fact that Allah loves the good deeds that a person does sincerely for Allah. Therefore, He says, '... whoever fulfils his commitment and fears Allah - then indeed, Allah loves those who fear Him' (Al-'Imran: 76).

Those who fulfil their commitments and fear Allah, He will love the attribute of piety ascribed to them. Therefore, every believer should work hard to ensure that he is always characterized by this attribute so that Allah will always love him.

Hence, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He has clarified that individuals are reproduced by other individuals, all of whom are derived from one origin. It is not a matter of race; only good deeds matter. An example was previously given when Allah Glorified and Exalted is He promised Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him to save him and his family from drowning, then Nuh (Noah) was surprised that his son was amongst those who drowned. Allah Glorified is He says about this incident, '[But] he said, "I will take refuge on a mountain to protect me from the water". [Nuh (Noah)] said, "There is no protector today from the decree of Allah, except for whom He gives mercy". And the waves came between them and he was among the drowned' (Hud: 43).

What did Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him do? He called to his Lord, asking Him to rescue his son and said, 'My Lord, indeed my son is of my family; and indeed, Your promise is true; and You are the most just of judges!' (Hud: 45) Allah informs us, through His reply to Nuh (Noah), that the families of the Prophets are not their descendants; rather, they are those who follow their guidance, so Allah said to Nuh (Noah) about his son, '…"Oh Nuh (Noah), indeed he is not of your family; indeed, he is [one whose] work was other than righteous…' (Hud: 46)

Why should Nuh's (Noah's) son not be considered of his family? That is because the families of Prophets are those who follow the Prophets' guidance. Therefore, Allah did not say to Nuh (Noah) about his son, "He is not a good-doer"; rather, Allah Glorified is He said about Nuh's (Noah) son, '... he is [one whose] work was other than righteous….' (Hud: 46) Allah ascribes the matter to a person's deeds.

Therefore, the intended objective is that Allah Glorified and Exalted is He clarifies by His Quranic style that He loves a person's deeds and attributes. He did not say, "Those who fulfil their commitment with Him are loved by Allah." This clearly reveals that Allah loves the deeds of a person. Therefore if a person seeks Allah's Love, he must constantly adhere to Allah's Guidance. Then, Allah says:

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ يَشۡتَرُونَ بِعَهۡدِ ٱللَّهِ وَأَيۡمَٰنِهِمۡ ثَمَنٗا قَلِيلًا أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ لَا
خَلَٰقَ لَهُمۡ فِي ٱلۡأٓخِرَةِ وَلَا يُكَلِّمُهُمُ ٱللَّهُ وَلَا يَنظُرُ إِلَيۡهِمۡ يَوۡمَ
ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِ وَلَا يُزَكِّيهِمۡ وَلَهُمۡ عَذَابٌ أَلِيمٞ ٧٧

But those who sell out God’s covenant and their own oaths for a small price will have no share in the life to come. God will neither speak to them nor look at them on the Day of Resurrection – He will not cleanse them [of their sins] – agonizing torment awaits them [77] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 77)

When we hear the words "selling" and "buying", we must reflect on their meanings in order to precisely understand them. In the countryside, barter and exchange of items have an immediate benefit; for example, when one person exchanges wheat for cloth with another person, both walk away with what they needed. In the case of exchanging commodities, there is neither a buyer nor a seller because both parties have bought and sold. So, the question is: when does it become a matter of buying and selling?

Buying and selling occur when we exchange a direct source of provision with an indirect one; for example, when a person buys a loaf of bread for five dollars. This transaction is regarded as buying and selling because the five dollars are not a source of provision that have a direct benefit, as money cannot satisfy hunger or thirst nor provide shelter. Bread is a source of provision with a direct benefit because it satisfies one's hunger. When a person wants to buy something, the sum of money he pays is called the "price.” So, how can the price be bought?

Allah clarifies that prices are never bought, but they are paid in return for buying things. Accordingly, the first failure concerning the deal is that those who sell commitment to Allah for a trifling price have bought the price which cannot be bought, as the objects that can be bought are commodities. Even the price that they bought was very low and worthless. The prohibition of usurious interest stems from this point, as the usurer gives a person 100 hundred pounds and wants to receive back 110. In this way, the usurer has treated money as a commodity, so the deal becomes a failure from the outset. Therefore, the first failure faced by those who exchange guidance with misguidance is that they will suffer a loss: ‘Those are the ones who have purchased error [in exchange] for guidance, so their transaction has brought no profit, nor were they guided’ (al-Baqara: 16).

Allah Glorified is He says here, ‘Indeed, those who exchange the covenant of Allah and their [own] oaths for a small price.…’ (Al-‘Imran: 77) We know that the Arabic preposition "ba" is usually attached to the object that is discarded, so they have discarded the Covenant of Allah and the oaths they made that they would believe and support the Messenger if he came to them in need. They exchanged all this for a trifling price. How did this happen? Although this matter refers to an actual event, it has a general meaning which is not limited to a certain event. Therefore, no one should say that this verse was revealed about such-and-such and it has nothing to do with anybody else. Rather, this verse applies to everyone who exchanges Allah’s signs for a small price.

The actual event for which this verse was revealed was when a group of people came to Ka'b ibn Al- Ashraf, a Jew, seeking food and clothing during a time of drought and famine. He said to them, ‘Do you know that this person is the Messenger of Allah?’ They said, ‘Yes’. He said, ‘I was going to feed and clothe you, but Allah has prevented you from great blessings’. They asked, ‘Why has Allah prevented us from great blessings?’ He answered them saying, ‘You have declared your belief in Muhammad’. When they found themselves in this situation, they said to Ka'b ibn Al- Ashraf, ‘Leave us for a, while, for perhaps a doubtful matter has overcome us and we will consider the matter’. After a period of time, they preferred food and clothing to faith and said to Ka'b ibn Al- Ashraf, ‘We have read our books and found that we are mistaken; Muhammad is not a Messenger’. Then, Ka'b gave them food and clothing.

These are the people who exchanged Allah’s signs for a small price: food and clothes. Everyone who exchanges Allah’s signs for a small price veils one of Allah’s rulings for the sake of appearing to be modern before people, following the line adopted by people during his time, or urging those in authority to do something that does not please Allah. Therefore, whoever does these actions exchanges Allah’s signs and Messages for a small price and this verse applies to anyone who makes Allah’s signs subject to sale in return for a price. ‘Indeed, those who exchange the Covenant of Allah and their [own] oaths for a small price…' (Al-'Imran: 77) The meaning of "the Covenant of Allah" here is either a covenant which Allah causes people to adhere to by nature, or the covenant that He took from the people of the Book, which states that if they lived to see Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him they would declare their belief in him. This covenant is stated in Allah's saying, 'And [recall, Oh People of the Book], when Allah took the covenant of the Prophets [saying], "Whatever I give you of the Book and wisdom and then there comes to you a Messenger confirming what is with you, you [must] believe in him and support him". [Allah] said, "Have you acknowledged and taken upon that My Commitment?" They said, "We have acknowledged it". He said, "Then bear witness and I am with you among the witnesses"' (Al-'Imran: 81).

When they denied their faith after declaring it in return for food and clothes, they experienced great loss, as they exchanged Allah's signs for a small price. Therefore, Allah says about them, '... will have no share in the Hereafter and Allah will not speak to them or look at them on the Day of Resurrection, nor will He purify them; and they will have a painful punishment'. (Al-'Imran: 77) The Arabic conjunction "ula'ika" indicates linkage between '…those who exchange the covenant of Allah and their [own] oaths for a small price…' (Al-'Imran: 77) and anyone who is characterised by these attributes. This shows that all of them will have the same destiny. Although this verse was revealed in connection with those who bought food and clothes in return for abandoning their belief in the Message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him it also includes anyone who is characterised by these attributes in any time, whatever his religion is. Allah Glorified is He describes them saying*:* '…Allah will not speak to them or look at them on the Day of Resurrection…' (Al-'Imran: 77)

The Arabic words "khalaq", "khuluq", "khaliqah", and "khalq" have similar meanings. As they all have the same root letters of "kh", "lam" and "qaf". This word "khuluq" refers to an attribute which becomes deep-rooted in a person's character. Sometimes a person is characterised by truthfulness or generosity, and this means that truthfulness and generosity have become deep-rooted in this person's character, so he does not find it tiresome to be truthful or generous. This deep-rooted attribute is relevant to intangible matters, which is parallel to spontaneity and skills in the tangible realm because we know that every action requires training for a person to be expert in performing it.

For example, the one who weaves with a tool requires practice in manoeuvring the spool of thread and must learn how to do so between the threads of the weave, and then to take the threads together for them to latch onto the second movement of the spool when it returns. By these means, the textile is weaved. A person needs training and practice for a long period of time to become proficient. At the beginning, the action is difficult. Then, after receiving thorough training, the weaver is able to sit in front of the loom with his hands manipulating the spool skilfully and spontaneously. The matter has become a spontaneous action for the experienced weaver.

I previously gave an example of a person learning how to drive a car. The instructor teaches him how to turn the key, wait for the engine to warm up, release the handbrake, manoeuvre the gear stick and balance pushing between the accelerator and the clutch, then balance the speed of the car and slow it down by a gentle push on the brake. At the beginning, a person may make mistakes and be confused, but after receiving thorough training, he acts spontaneously without deep thinking. I also previously gave an example of a young person learning how to stitch clothing. He will take some time to get the thread into the eye of the needle and will make some mistakes in judging the distance between the stitches, but after training, he will get used to doing these actions that were difficult at first and will perform them skilfully. Spontaneous action in the tangible realm is the equivalent of a deep-rooted trait in intangible matters. It may be said that "So-and-so is characterized by honesty" which means that it is not tiresome for him to be honest but it has become second nature for him after many opportunities to choose between deceit and honesty.

When we teach our children grammar, for example, we tell them that the subject of a sentence is in the nominative case and the object is in the accusative. When the child reads a sentence, he tries to apply the rules, but he may forget them or stammer when speaking, and when he remembers them, he reads the words correctly. After practicing the rule, the child reads properly without making mistakes and grammar becomes easy and smooth for him.

Such is also the case with morals which are deep-rooted attributes that result in doing relevant actions easily and smoothly. It may be said that honesty, generosity, and bravery are morals which result in doing their relevant action easily and smoothly if a person is attributed with them. Allah Glorified is He says, '... will have no share in the Hereafter and Allah will not speak to them or look at them on the Day of Resurrection…' (Al-'Imran: 77). Some exegetes have explained this verse saying that those people will have no share of morals because morals are deep-rooted in a person's character.

Allah has specified the time saying, "in the Hereafter" when nothing can be rectified; it is the time of sound and final appraisal. A person may not have any share of upright conduct, so he rectifies his behaviour until he gains this upright conduct in the worldly life; but in the Hereafter, there is no way to make any rectification which is a tremendous loss. In the worldly life, a person may perform an action and receive no reward, or we may not see the reward that Allah gives him, but Allah will compensate him in the Hereafter for the action for which he received no reward in the worldly life. As for the one who has no share in the hereafter, it is impossible for them to be compensated. Allah adds, '…and Allah will not speak to them or look at them on the Day of Resurrection, nor will He purify them; and they will have a painful punishment' (Al-'Imran: 77)

Allah says in another verse in the Noble Quran about the disbelievers, 'He will say, "Remain despised therein and do not speak to Me"'. (al-Mu'minun: 108) Why does Allah say to them at one time, 'Remain despised therein and do not speak to Me' (al-Mu'minun: 108) and in this verse, '…and Allah will not speak to them…'? The answer is: Allah will not speak to them in a manner that will benefit them or He Glorified and Exalted is He will speak to them by means of the angels. But how will Allah not look at them?

Whenever we find that an attribute that is relevant to people has a counterpart that He ascribes to Himself Glorified and Exalted is He ,we must consider it in the light of '…there is nothing like unto Him…' (ash-Shura: 11) In our human realm, we may say, "So-and-so is not looking at so-and-so" which means that his eyes are not directed at him and the pupils of his eyes are turned away from him. It is not possible, however, to compare this to Allah because He is far above any comparison. In our human realm, we find that a person loves his friend and directs his face and his eyes at him. In addition, the Arabic phrase "fata Huwa qaid Al-`ayn" means that when the eye looks at him, it is attracted to him so that it cannot be turned away from him, perhaps, for example because this young man has fine qualities which prevent the eye from turning away from him. In this way, we consider that the eyes look at something as a sign of taking interest in it. This matter applies to the human realm.

However, when it comes to Allah, we must consider it in light of '…there is nothing like unto Him…' (ash-Shura: 11) In this way, we understand that when Allah does not look at '…those who exchange the covenant of Allah and their [own] oaths for a small price…' (Al-'Imran: 77), this means that He will disregard them, will not be concerned with them and will not be merciful to them. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He is far above any comparison.

In addition, we must understand the matter of not looking at them in the light of '... there is nothing like unto Him...' (ash-Shura: 11) When a person of authority amongst human beings desires to punish one of his subjects, he does not look at him and ignores him, so what about Allah's disregard for His servants? It means distancing them from His Mercy and Pleasure.

Allah Glorified is He adds:'…nor will He purify them; and they will have a painful punishment'. (Al-'Imran: 77) The Arabic word "tazkiyah" means "purification, praise, or blessed growth." The Arabic phrase "fulan zakka fulan" means that a person praised another, or purified him. Therefore, the word "zakat" means purification and blessed growth. When Allah Glorified is He informs us that He will not speak to those people, nor look at them, nor purify them from their sins, this introduces what He has prepared for them, as He says: '... and they will have a painful punishment'.

We must consider the power of an action according to the one who performs it. In our worldly life, when we hear that a child has hit a man, we naturally understand that a child's blow differs in strength from that of a young man which differs in turn from that of a boxing champion. Therefore, actions differ in accordance with the strength and weakness of a person who performs them upon the object of the action. If the one who torments is Allah, it will no doubt be grievous with limitless pain- may Allah save us all from it.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says,

وَإِنَّ مِنْهُمْ لَفَرِيقًا يَلْوُۥنَ أَلْسِنَتَهُم بِٱلْكِتَٰبِ لِتَحْسَبُوهُ مِنَ
ٱلْكِتَٰبِ وَمَا هُوَ مِنَ ٱلْكِتَٰبِ وَيَقُولُونَ هُوَ مِنْ عِندِ ٱللَّهِ
وَمَا هُوَ مِنْ عِندِ ٱللَّهِ وَيَقُولُونَ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ ٱلْكَذِبَ وَهُمْ يَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٧٨﴾

There are some who twist the Scripture with their tongues to make you [people] think that what they say is part of the Scripture when it is not; they say it is from God when it is not; they attribute lies to God and they know it [78]
(The Quran, Al-'Imran: 78)

This means that they distort Allah's Words with their tongues in order to alter their meanings, or that they distort their meanings with their tongues when they want to express them. The Arabic word "layy" here means "to twist"; a rope is twisted by coiling two lengths of cord together in order to make the rope strong because the cords have limited strength. However, when they are twisted, we increase their strength by coiling them. Therefore, the aim of twisting is to strengthen an object. In this way, they twisted their tongues altering Allah's Words and claiming that it was revealed by Allah, although it was not. They did this to strengthen their position, belittle Islam's position and slander Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him They had said before "Ra'ina", (an insult in Hebrew which means "listen to us" in Arabic), so Allah said to the believers, 'Oh you who have believed, say not [to Allah 's Messenger], "Ra'ina" but say, "Unzhurna" and listen. And for the disbelievers is a painful punishment'. (al-Baqara: 104)

Allah clarifies to us that we should not give them an opportunity to change His Words, as He Glorified is He says, 'Among the Jews are those who distort words from their [proper] usages and say, "We hear and disobey" and "hear but be not heard" and "Ra'ina" twisting their tongues and defaming the religion. And if they had said [instead], "We hear and obey" and "Wait for us [to understand]", it would have been better for them and more suitable. But Allah has cursed them for their disbelief, so they believe not, except for a few....' (an-Nisa': 46)

Allah Glorified is He has disgraced them because they distorted words from their proper usage. He says in this regard that what the Messenger Muhammad hears will not harm him, and He has recorded for them that they said, “We hear and disobey” and that they altered and distorted words and said, "Hear but be not heard". (an-Nisa’: 46) In addition, they changed Allah’s saying, ‘Qulu hittah’ ‘…and say, "Relieve us of our burdens"….’ (al-A’raf: 161) and said instead, "Qulu hintah" (a meaningless phrase based on the similarity of the spelling of the words in Arabic). This they did so the people would imagine that this distorted saying was actually from the Divine Book although it is not. In other words, they twisted some of the meanings that can be derived from the words so that the believers would imagine that these incorrect meanings were actually the intended meanings. They ascribed to the Guidance which Allah revealed things which were not actually revealed by Allah.

Therefore, He Glorified is He says*:* ‘…And they say, "This is from Allah", but it is not from Allah’. (Al-‘Imran: 46) They twisted their tongues and distorted the Words of Allah with the aim to deceive and defraud the believers in order for them to believe that they are from the Book revealed by Allah to their Messenger Musa (Moses). Had they only done that, it would have been possible for them to repent and return to their Lord, regretting what they did.

Their saying, “This is from Allah” indicates that they added something to the Book and insisted on it. They intended to absolve themselves from suspicion that they had distorted the Book. If they had not distorted the Book, would they have thought of saying this? Their action is in accordance with the saying, "When a person feels guilty, he is about to say to those who suspect him, ‘I am guilty‘out of fear”. With this saying, they attempted to conceal what they had done.

Allah Glorified is He emphasises that they were actually treacherous saying, ‘…but it is not from Allah…’ (Al-‘Imran: 78) This noble verse disgraces them and unveils their alteration of Allah’s Book. H Glorified is He says*:* ‘…And they speak untruth about Allah, while they know’. (Al-‘Imran: 78) They knew that what they were telling was a lie. It is known that a lie is a saying that is not in line with reality. Sayings ascribed to incidents appear in three types: Actual reality, mental thought concerning the incident, or a saying uttered about the incident.

If we know a person named Mohamed who is actually hard working, this is considered as actual reality. If it occurs to us to tell a friend of Mohamed that he is hard working, this refers to a mental thought. The moment that we tell a friend about this fact, it becomes a saying uttered concerning this person. Truthfulness is defined as conformity between the speech and the actual reality. For example, when a person says, "Mohamed is hard-working" and this man named Mohamed who is actually hard working, the one who says that Mohamed is hard working is a truthful person. However, if this particular Muhamed is not hard working, the saying is not in conformity with the reality, so it becomes a lie. Scholars differentiate between truthfulness and lying by this standard. Therefore, truthfulness means conformity between speech and reality and lying is the deviation of speech from reality.

Some of those who like spreading doubt tried to question the chapter of al-Munafiqun in which Allah says, ‘When the hypocrites come to you, [Oh Muhammad], they say, "We testify that you are the Messenger of Allah”. And Allah knows that you are His Messenger and Allah testifies that the hypocrites are liars’ (al-Munafiqun: 1). The hypocrites said, “We testify that you are the Messenger of Allah” and that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is indeed the Messenger of Allah and Allah says, ‘... And Allah knows that you are His Messenger...’ (al-Munafiqun: 1). Is their knowledge like Allah’s Knowledge? No, because Allah Glorified is He says, ‘... And Allah testifies that the hypocrites are liars’ (al-Munafiqun: 1). Why does Allah describe them as liars although they testified to the same thing that He testified to?

Allah does not belie them with regards to the fact that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah, as this is true; rather, He Glorified is He belied their saying, ‘...we testify...’ (al-Munafiqun: 1) because it means that their speech is in conformity with their belief; yet their saying is not actually in conformity with their belief. Therefore, they are considered liars.

Hence, Allah’s saying, ‘…And they speak untruth about Allah, while they know’ (Al-‘Imran: 7-8). This means that they utter speech that does not conform to reality, while realising that it is a lie. It cannot be said that they uttered it in ignorance, as they lied intentionally knowing that they were telling a lie.

Precision requires differentiating between a true statement and a truthful speaker. A true statement is the one that agrees with reality. Sometimes a speaker may be honest, but the speech itself is untrue. When someone says, "So-and-so spent all night studying" because he saw that the light in a person's room was turned on all night and that he opened a book, but in reality, he was only absorbed in reading a novel, the speaker here is honest, but the speech is untrue. In terms of this verse, however, we find that they were deliberately lying, as the tongue is a means of revealing what is in the heart: What is intended to say lies in the heart; the tongue is only a guide to the heart. Then, Allah Glorified is He says,

مَا كَانَ لِبَشَرٍ أَن يُؤْتِيَهُ ٱللَّهُ ٱلْكِتَٰبَ وَٱلْحُكْمَ وَٱلنُّبُوَّةَ ثُمَّ
يَقُولَ لِلنَّاسِ كُونُوا۟ عِبَادًا لِّى مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ وَلَٰكِن كُونُوا۟ رَبَّٰنِيِّۦنَ
بِمَا كُنتُمْ تُعَلِّمُونَ ٱلْكِتَٰبَ وَبِمَا كُنتُمْ تَدْرُسُونَ ﴿٧٩﴾

No person to whom God had given the Scripture, wisdom, and prophethood would ever say to people, 'Be my servants, not God's.' [He would say], 'You should be devoted to God because you have taught the Scripture and studied it closely' [79]
(The Quran, Al-'Imran: 79)

It is known that when Allah willed to reveal His Guidance, He sent it down as a book and this required that He Glorified is He chose a person to receive the Message. This means that the Messenger brings the guidance, applies it to himself and passes it on to mankind. A Messenger is chosen by Allah and his mission differs from that of a Prophet. The Prophet is also chosen to follow the Guidance so that people do not only hear the Message in words; rather, they see it implemented. Therefore, the Messenger is a means of delivering the Message and he also sets an example with regards to behaviour, while a Prophet is not a means of delivering a Message, but he only sets an example with regards to behaviour.

Allah Glorified and Exalted is He sends Prophets and Messengers and so He says*:* 'And We did not send before you any Messenger or Prophet except that when he spoke [or recited], Satan threw into it [some misunderstanding]. But

Allah abolishes that which Satan throws in; then Allah makes precise His verses. And Allah is Knowing and Wise'. (al-Hajj: 52)

Accordingly, we know that both Messengers and Prophets were sent by Allah, but the Messenger was sent to deliver Allah's Message and set a good example for people, while the Prophet was sent solely to set a good example for people because during some eras the Divine Message was present, but the motive needed to put it into practice was lacking - just like what happens in our present times. The Divine Guidance is present and all people know the permissible and impermissible matters, but the failure existing in this era stems from the fact that the people are not able to urge themselves to follow it. Therefore, they are in need of a good example to be copied in terms of behaviour. This is the explanation of "the Book" and "Prophethood." What is "sound judgement," then?

Allah has used the term "sound judgement" here to show that wisdom that is based on faith is not necessarily found in only Messengers and Prophets; rather, it may be granted to any person from amongst the believers who has genuine faith, and so he speaks according to this wisdom. Allah has told us Luqman's advice to his son because this advice represents religious Guidance. Accordingly, it is possible that a person who is neither a Prophet nor a Messenger will follow and admonish people with religious Guidance when he has strong and genuine faith. This is a clear Message from Allah that any person can follow religious Guidance and pass it on to people when he is convinced of it.

We must emphasise that whoever Allah grants wisdom with regards to calling to and following His Guidance does not add anything to it. By virtue of his sincerity to Allah, he will not claim that he is sent by Allah to mankind; he only calls people to worship Allah, and sets them a good example for people.

Why was this verse revealed? It was revealed after the debate that took place between the Christians of Najran and the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him in Medina during which a group of Jews joined them and asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him "In what do you believe and what do you command the people to do?" Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him informed them of the commands and prohibitions of the Message and the fundamentals of worship. As this group belonged to the people of the Book who included some Christians of Najran and some Jews of Medina that invented commands of worship which were not sent by Allah and wanted the people to obey them, they did not recognise the difference between the guidance of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with its commandments, and the commandments they had invented. Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him called people to worship Allah in the light of the guidance that He Glorified is He sent down to him. However, they asked people to obey commandments that they had invented themselves.

It is well established in all Abrahamic religions that Allah is the only One Who should be obeyed. If a person brings a commandment that has not been revealed by Allah and asks people to obey him, this means that a person asks the people to worship him -and we seek refuge with Allah from this- because obeying a person's commands which have not been sent by Allah commandments is a form of shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship). Therefore, the position was unclear to some of these people of the Book who imagined that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was calling them to obey his own commandments in the way they did after they had altered the religion, so they said, "Do you want us to worship you and take you as a god?"

They did not understand the difference between the Messenger, who treated Allah’s Guidance in a trustworthy manner and their own leaders, who had gone against the rulings and replaced them with other rulings. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not ask them to obey him in person; he asked them to obey the guidance he conveyed and followed as a Messenger. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him disapproved of what they said.

Then, Allah Glorified is He sent down His true saying, ‘It is not for a human [Prophet] that Allah should give him the Book and authority and Prophethood and then he would say to the people, "Be servants to me rather than to Allah’. (Al-‘Imran: 79) They reached such a level of heedlessness and idolatry that they thought that Allah did not choose a Messenger who was loyal with regards to the conveyance of the religion and they thought badly of Allah, or they imagined that the Messenger would alter the religion, just as they had done, turning from the worship of Allah to the worship of the one He sent as a Messenger.

Therefore, the final saying was revealed in this regard, ‘It is not for a human [Prophet] that Allah should give him the Book and authority and Prophethood and then he would say to the people, "Be servants to me rather than Allah”’. (Al-‘Imran: 79) The meaning may also include the fact that some of the Companions of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him revered him and it is known that every believer should revere and glorify Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him Due to the Companions' great love for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him some of the people of the Book said to him, "Should we greet you just as we greet one another or prostrate to you?"

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not ask anyone to prostrate to him. Allah Glorified is He enjoined on His believing servants to honour His Messenger, saying: ‘Do not make [your] calling of the Messenger among yourselves as the call of one of you to another. Already Allah knows those of you who slip away, concealed by others. So, let those beware who dissent from the Prophet's order, lest fitnah (temptation) strike them or a painful punishment...’ (an-Nur: 63) What is required is to revere Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him but not to do with him the same acts that should be devoted solely to Allah.

The reverence that should be shown by Muslims to Prophet Muhammad is represented in calling him in a way different from the way Muslims call each other. Allah says in this verse which is relevant to the topic we are handling, ‘…but [instead, he would say], "Be pious scholars of the Lord because of what you have taught of the Book and because of what you have studied”’. (Al-‘Imran: 79) The Arabic word "lakin" (meaning “however”) is used here as a disjunctive and, as we said before, the Arabic word "bala" negates the statement preceding it and affirms the contrary statement that follows it. Allah here sets right the matter for us to understand that no one has the right to say, “Worship me” after Allah has given him Revelation, sound judgment and Prophethood. The statement that is affirmed here and for which the preceding sentence is negated is "kunu Rabaniyyin" (or "Be pious scholars of the Lord"). The Arabic words "*Rabban*y,” "Rab", "Rabbiyun" and "Rabban" include the Arabic letters "Ra” and “Ba" which indicate raising, guardianship, parenting and other meanings within the same scope. The "Rabban" (captain) of the ship is the one who controls it, is he not? The Arabic word "Rab" means the one who undertakes guardianship and raising. Then, what is the meaning of the word "Rabbany"? When a person puts the word "*Ra*b" in the possessive case, he says, "Rabby." If he wants to put the word "Rab" in the intense form, he will add the Arabic letters "alif" and "nun," so it becomes "Rabbany." In the modern Arabic expressions, we find other similar terms. For example, when a person wants to ascribe something to the Arabic word "'ilm" (meaning “knowledge”), he says, "'almany" which is an intense form of ascription to the word "'ilm". The difference between the words "'ilmy" (scientific) and "'almany" (secular) is that the later refers to a person who claims that all of his affairs proceed in accordance with knowledge apart from religious beliefs. The word in Arabic has the same two letters added to it.

A person may say, "Why should the ascription to Allah be emphasised 'by the word "Rabbany?" The answer is: Because the word is derived from the Arabic word for "Rab"(Lord) which indicates several meanings. Everything concerned with the Message must be revealed by the Lord, as the Messenger did not make any additions to this Message; this means that the source of his Message is only the Lord. Therefore, he has become "Rabbany" (the pious scholar of the Lord). This word also has another meaning: The Messenger adopted the morals enjoined by the Lord Who refines the people's morals in order that they achieve the objective intended they are asked to accomplish. Therefore, when he passes the religious teachings to mankind, he becomes a "murabby" (instructor), managing affairs for the sake of success and righteousness.

Allah Glorified is He says, ‘…because of what you have taught of the Book and because of what you have studied’. (Al-‘Imran: 79) The word "'ilm" in the Arabic text means the acquisition of religious texts. The word tadrusun" (study) in the Arabic text is intellectual examination of the religious text. Therefore, the people say in the countryside "nadris Al-qamh" (thrash the grain) meaning that they thrash it with a sharp tool like a thrasher so that the seeds of grain separate from the hay. Then, this thrashing will result in extracting the useful part of the grain.

Therefore, there is a difference between the Arabic word "tu'allimun," which means “teaching others Allah’s Guidance (which should be revealed by Allah)” and "ma kuntum tadrusun" meaning “that which you have studied”, or teaching your own thoughts concerning the understanding of the texts.

Understanding the text requires interactive study. The Arabic verb "darasahu" means a person studying with another. In addition, the Arabic word "tadarasna" means exchanging what has been studied and understood in order to deduce a ruling from the text. The text may have only one meaning or it may encompass more than one meaning. Because a person has learned and studied the text, he must be able to recognise the texts that have only one meaning. Since a person has exchanged learning with people of discernment, he must have understood that the texts that encompass different meanings should be explained clearly and in accordance with Allah’s Guidance. Therefore, a person must be "Rabbany" (a pious scholar of the Lord) in both matters. Then, Allah Glorified is He says,

وَلَا يَأْمُرَكُمْ أَن تَتَّخِذُوا۟ ٱلْمَلَٰٓئِكَةَ وَٱلنَّبِيِّـۧنَ أَرْبَابًا ۗ
أَيَأْمُرُكُم بِٱلْكُفْرِ بَعْدَ إِذْ أَنتُم مُّسْلِمُونَ ٨٠

He would never command you to take angels and prophets as lords. How could he command you to be disbelievers after you had devoted yourselves to God? [80] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 80)

This means that no person whom Allah has granted the Book, authority and prophethood is entitled to order people to take the angels and the prophets as lords. It is not acceptable for a person who has been given knowledge, a Book and prophethood from Allah to ask the people to worship him, the angels, or the prophets because Allah Glorified is He says, ‘…Would he order you to disbelief after you had been Muslims?’ (Al-‘Imran: 80)

Allah’s saying, ‘…after you had been Muslims’ (Al-‘Imran: 80) indicates that the incident behind the issue that is under explanation took place with Muslims. It seems that when they intended to revere Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him they said that they wanted to declare and glorify him in a manner that had not been shown to anyone else and wanted to prostrate to him, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him clarified to them that they should not prostrate to anyone but Allah.

Therefore, those who asked them to prostrate to him were Muslims who intended to honour Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him If Messenger Muhammad had agreed with them, this would have meant taking them out of the fold of Islam. No one can imagine that this act could be done by our beloved Prophet peace and blessings be upon him or by any other Prophet. Allah Glorified is He says*:*

وَإِذْ أَخَذَ ٱللَّهُ مِيثَٰقَ ٱلنَّبِيِّـۧنَ لَمَآ ءَاتَيْتُكُم مِّن كِتَٰبٍ وَحِكْمَةٍ ثُمَّ جَآءَكُمْ
رَسُولٌ مُّصَدِّقٌ لِّمَا مَعَكُمْ لَتُؤْمِنُنَّ بِهِۦ وَلَتَنصُرُنَّهُۥ ۚ قَالَ ءَأَقْرَرْتُمْ وَأَخَذْتُمْ عَلَىٰ
ذَٰلِكُمْ إِصْرِى ۖ قَالُوٓا۟ أَقْرَرْنَا ۚ قَالَ فَٱشْهَدُوا۟ وَأَنَا۠ مَعَكُم مِّنَ ٱلشَّٰهِدِينَ ﴿٨١﴾

God took a pledge from the prophets, saying, 'If, after I have bestowed Scripture and wisdom upon you, a messenger comes con- firming what you have been given, you must believe in him and support him. Do you affirm this and accept My pledge as binding on you?' They said, 'We do.' He said, 'Then bear witness and I too will bear witness' [81]
(The Quran, Al-'Imran: 81)

This verse clarifies the reasons why Allah sent the Messengers. It is well known that Allah sent down to Adam peace be upon him the first Guidance which contained everything that causes life to proceed in harmony. Then, Adam peace be upon him passed this guidance on to his children just as he taught them things relevant to their life affairs, exactly in the manner that a father teaches his children those matters that will help them in their lives and the teachings of their religion. Then, the children taught them to their children and the Message was passed down from generation to generation so that the religion could reach the progeny. However, with the passing of time, some of the prerequisites of religion were forgotten.

This is a sign that people have become heedless of the religion; and we see that negligence of the religion occurs in different forms. After the religion is conveyed to humans, we find one person who is heedless of a single part of the religion and he reproaches himself for losing that part. We term such a person as a possessor of a self-reproaching soul; he sins, but then his soul wakes up and returns to Allah's Religion because he is in possession of immune faith cells. Another person enjoys going against the religion and his soul urges him to do so. He is a possessor of an evil-inciting soul; he always finds an excuse for himself to commit sins and such a person needs someone else to lead him back to good.

Then what happens to a community if all its members have become possessors of an evil-inciting soul? This means that corruption has become total and so a Messenger must surely come because the Will of Allah Glorified is He is to guide mankind. Allah has created us and He is in possession of all Attributes of Perfection. Our creation has added nothing to Him. In this regard we quote a Qudsi Hadith (a holy saying whose meaning is only revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him) narrated by Abu Dharr, Allah be pleased with him, who says: 'Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him narrates that Allah Glorified and exalted, says: "Oh My servants! I have forbidden oppression for Myself and I have made it forbidden amongst you, so do not oppress one another. Oh My servants, all of you are astray except those whom I have guided, so seek guidance from Me and I shall guide you. Oh My servants, all of you are hungry except those whom I have fed, so seek food from Me and I shall feed you. Oh My servants, all of you are naked except those whom I have clothed, so seek clothing from Me and I shall clothe you. Oh My servants, you commit sins by day and by night and I forgive all sins, so seek forgiveness from Me and I shall forgive you. Oh My servants, you will not attain harming Me so as to harm Me and you will not attain benefiting Me so as to benefit Me. Oh My servants, if the first of you and the last of you and the humans of you and the jinn of you were all as pious as the most pious heart of any individual amongst you, then this would not increase My Kingdom an iota. Oh My servants, if the first of you and the last of you and the humans of you and the jinn of you, were all as wicked as the most wicked heart of any individual amongst you, then this would not decrease My Kingdom an iota. Oh My servants, if the first of you and the last of you and the humans of you and the jinn of you were all to stand together in one place and ask of Me and I were to give everyone what he requested, then that would not decrease what I possess except what is decreased of the ocean when a needle is dipped into it. Oh My servants, it is but your deeds that I account for you and then recompense you for. So, he who finds good, let him praise Allah and he who finds other than that, let him blame no one but himself".

Allah has created us, having the full eternal Attributes of Perfection forever and ever, and this creation has added nothing to Him. He*, Glorified and Exalted*, says in this context*:* 'I want no provision from them, nor do I want them to feed Me– Allah is the Provider, the Lord of power, the Ever Mighty'. (adh-Dhariyat: 57-58)

So, when Allah Glorified is He legislates something for us, He does it for our benefit; He Glorified is He wants His handiwork to attain happiness through the Religion with its "do and not do" commands. Hence, He sent down the Religion. When this Religion orders people to "do and not do" things, it does not want to restrict man's freedom of movement except in a way that protects him: It limits one freedom here to protect another there. When Allah prohibits stealing, for example, the matter is all-inclusive for all humanity, so no one is allowed to steal from anyone else, while Allah Glorified is He prevents one person from stealing; He prevents other millions from stealing things from that one person. This provides protection for all humanity against stealing and represents a source of gain for everyone.

So, when you look at Divine Legislation, do not look at it as just something required from you, but look at it as something required for you as well. Another example: Religion prohibits a male believer from casting his eyes on a woman that is not his mahram. This prohibition is not directed towards only one person; it is directed towards every believing person. As a single person, you are ordered to lower your gaze away from others, while, for your sake, millions of other eyes are forbidden from looking upon you.

So, every believer enjoys a tranquil life through the Divine Legislation and all sacred laws have come for the benefit of us all. Hence, Allah Glorified is He has been merciful to us as shown in the procession of Messengers He sent us, from Adam peace be upon him until Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the teachings of all these Messengers never contradict as they all represent a source of benefit for mankind. Thus, it is far from being possible that the march of one Messenger goes against the march of another.

What, then, is the cause of contradiction that exists among the religions although the Legislator is One and all people are dependent on Him? We absolve the Messengers of bringing any contradiction eventhough some people have attempted to depict a picture full of contradictions. We must know that those followers of the Messengers do want to have a temporal power for themselves by which they can rule on earth. Those who had a temporal power in a religion such as Judaism or Christianity were responsible for that. When Christianity came to the Jews, the rabbis said: "We do not want Christianity." Why? Because the temporal power was in their hands and if those rabbis had adhered to what Allah had sent down to them, they would have kissed the hands of any new Messenger. Being grateful for his coming, they would have verily said to him: "Help us to have a deep understanding of Allah's Religion." So, differences do not occur except when caprices are in control of temporal powers.

Since Man was first created, the procession of Divine Messages has been marked by harmony, not disagreement. When a Messenger comes upon people who do not believe in any god, the job becomes quite easy as he will guide them to One Allah and to the Religion that Allah wants. But the problem is much bigger with that group of people who actually have a Messenger and a Divine Message. When a Messenger from Allah Glorified is He comes to them, he comes at a time when these people have established a temporal power through their claimed attribution to a former Messenger, just as happened with the Jews and the Christians. They stuck to the religion that they already had ignoring the fact that their leaders had corrupted the religion to gain a temporal power.

The procession of Messengers continued as Allah wanted to protect humanity from corruption. Allah Glorified is He has selected the followers of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to lead humanity since Allah Glorified is He has guaranteed the preservation of good in this community. When you see people who have gone to extremes in their atheism, trust that there are others whom Allah Glorified is He has provided with more power so that there can be a sort of balance. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says*:* 'Be an ummah [community of Muslims] that calls for what is good, urges what is right and forbids what is wrong: those who do this are the successful ones'. (Al-'Imran: 104)

In another place in the Glorious Quran, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says*:* 'You are the best ummah [community of Muslims] singled out for people: you order what is right, forbid what is wrong and believe in Allah. If the People of the Book had also believed, it would have been better for them. For although some of them do believe, most of them are defiantly disobedient'. (Al-'Imran: 110) Then, once a member of Muhammad's ummah (community of followers) loses the conscience of his self-reproaching soul, other faithful Muslims will help him return to the right path. Allah Glorified is He does not make people faultless. He, Glorified and Exalted, says*:* 'By time, Man is [deep] in loss, except for those who believe, do good deeds, advise one another to be truthful and advise one another to be steadfast'. (al-'Asr: 1-3) Allah Glorified is He states the phrase "advise one another "and does not say just "advise others" to show us that advice is a mutual practice among community members. When a person has a moment of weakness in relation to the religion, another person should be strong enough to give him some good advice. This point also applies to the one who gives advice, for he might also experience a moment of weakness and then he will surely find someone to advise him. So, we see that there are no special people entrusted with advising, while others are charged with receiving the advice. Rather, it is an exchange of role-playing, or what we may call solidarity of faith. Once a person becomes weak concerning a certain point, he finds another believing brother to advise him: "Get rid of this weakness". This act is alternately done to resist the vicissitudes of the human soul as these vicissitudes do not stabilize Man's life. So, if we see a person who is too weak to adhere to a commitment, we must advise him as well as advising one another to be truthful and patient. You, too, will find people from your brethren in faith to advise you when you are weak.

This is the picture of the followers of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him As for the former peoples, they used to not prevent one another from wrongdoing. So, Allah intervened and brought a new Messenger with a new miracle to forcibly alert people's minds to the fact that there are certain things that miracles can bring which are contrary to natural law. This was a signal from Allah Glorified is He to make people aware of the spheres of His Omnipotence.

Allah took the covenant of the prophets that they would pass the following message on to their people: Be alert in looking for Messengers sent by Allah Glorified is He and when a Messenger comes to convey Allah's Religion, stand by him and support him. The Messengers, peace be upon all of them, were ordered to state in the religion and the crux of it, that when Allah intervenes and sends a new Messenger, all of their people must follow him and not be bigoted. They must welcome him and submit with him to Allah. This is because a Messenger only comes to help people find the True Guidance. However, the followers who are fond of possessing a temporal power distort facts on purpose and in order that Allah Glorified is He protects His creation from this plague, He takes the covenant that He wants from the Prophets, saying: 'And [recall, Oh People of the Book] when Allah took a pledge from the Prophets, saying, "If, after I have bestowed Scripture and wisdom upon you, a Messenger comes [with a scripture] confirming what you have been given, you must believe in him and support him …"'. (Al-'Imran: 81) Someone might say that this statement makes sense when a messenger comes at a time, while another messenger is already present. An example of this is when Shu'aib ('Jethro),' peace be upon him, lived at the same time of Musa ('Moses)' peace be upon him, while another one is when Lut ('Lot)' peace be upon him, was a contemporary of Ibrahim ('Abraham)'peace be upon him. We would say that this occurs too, when messengers are not contemporaries of one another, for the True Lord Glorified is He wants every messenger to convey a clear message to his people. If two messengers are contemporaries of one another, the first messenger still has to provide his people with the means to protect themselves against bigotry. As the people are believers and followers of the first messenger, they must cordially welcome the messenger who comes after him. Every messenger must convey the following message to his people: 'Be prepared for Allah's intervention at any moment. When He Glorified is He intervenes at any time and sends a messenger to confirm what is with you, beware of doing harm to him or showing him enmity. Instead, you must support him.' This is an explicit statement with no ambiguity. 'And [recall, O People of the Book] when Allah [God] took a pledge from the prophets, saying, 'If, after I have bestowed Scripture and wisdom upon you, a messenger comes [with a scripture] confirming what you have been given....' (Al-'Imran: 81).

Here we are going to explain the phrase '…a messenger comes confirming what you have been given...' (Al-'Imran: 81). The religion raises some issues that are generally accepted since doctrines, chronicles and stories are the same. The difference lies in legislative rulings that might be appropriate for one time and inappropriate for another. When a messenger 'comes with a scripture confirming what you have been given...' in the sphere of doctrines, chronicles, or stories, you must then believe in him. The Jews, however, did not do so when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came to newly guide the group that believed in the messengers and had a god. Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came with a religion of clear doctrine, as well as incorruptible chronicles and stories that supported it; likewise, he introduced legislation appropriate to the time. The coming of the last Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was a great shock to those who enjoyed temporal power. Some of them insisted on solely following their own messenger and their corrupt religion and refused to follow Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him Others believed in the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him A third group believed in another messenger. Failure is an inevitable result of bigotry. So, the Call of Islam aims to purify the doctrines and ask every follower of a former message to study and contemplate if the last Religion has come with something different from the doctrines of the former religions or has it come to confirm them?

The last Religion comes to confirm doctrines, chronicles, and stories that preceded it. However, it differs in legislation, which may be appropriate to one era, yet inappropriate to another. We can say that the True Lord Glorified is He wants to protect humanity from thoughtless and blind bigotry that results from following a particular messenger, while refusing to accept another. When Allah Glorified is He sends a messenger and prophet, He gives him the chronicles and facts, while taking a pledge from him and his believers that they will be prepared to believe in every contemporary or upcoming messenger; they must confirm what he brings, and the prophet must advise his followers of the necessity of this belief.

Why? This is due to the fact that the True Lord Glorified He wants the processions of messengers of the faith not to be enemies of one another. They must instead face the enemies of the religion, united. What has made atheism widespread nowadays is that the followers of the divine religions are in disagreement. The enmity that exists amongst them is perhaps greater than the enmity between them and the atheists who deny Allah altogether. This disagreement allows the atheists to say, 'If these religions were true, their followers would agree and not disagree. Then, what does it mean when the followers of every messenger say that they follow a messenger sent by Allah?'

The disagreement among the followers of the Divine religions gives atheists an opportunity to sow the seeds of atheism amongst people. Basically, some atheists do not find any unity or power of faith among those who believe in Allah and His Religion. The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: 'And [recall, O, People of the Book] when Allah took a pledge from the prophets...' (Al-'Imran: 81). This means that Allah Glorified is He took a pledge from every prophet He had sent and had given the Scripture and wisdom, that if a messenger came to his people confirming this Scripture and wisdom, they would believe in him. It is not enough for the first prophet and his people to announce their belief; they must also support the new messenger. We may say that if the followers of every prophet had acted in accordance with this pledge, atheists, in general, would not have had any argument. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He then says: "Have you acknowledged and taken upon that My Bond?" They said, "We have acknowledged it.'"He said, "Then bear witness and I too will bear witness."'' (Al-'Imran: 81). Acknowledgment is one of the best forms of evidence as said. Bond means a strong vow. We say, 'the bond of love', i.e. a strong, firm connection. When addressing Allah, the procession of prophets say, 'We have acknowledged it', and then The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: 'Then bear witness.' Witnessing always requires a witness, a person(s) involved in witnessing, and what is being witnessed.

Since the True Lord Glorified is He is the One Who says to the prophets to give Him the true covenant and pledge by saying, 'Then bear witness', so they are the witnesses here. Then, who are the people involved in witnessing? And what is the content of witnessing? Do the prophets bear witness in relation to themselves or does every prophet bear witness concerning the other prophets? Or is it that he bears witness that he has delivered the Divine Decree to his people?

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him bears witness concerning his ummah (followers), whereas the prophets testify for each other. Thus, the witness could be a prophet, and the person involved in witnessing could be another prophet, while what is being witnessed might be that the believers must believe in and support the new messenger. Once again, the witness could be a prophet, while the people involved in witnessing could be his followers. What is being witnessed is that he has informed them of the necessity of believing in the coming messenger and his Divine Religion. Since the people of a given community believe in a messenger, they must support him and the messenger coming after him so that the procession of Faith would not disappear behind the falsehood of atheism: '...you must believe in him and support him. [Allah] said, "Have you acknowledged and taken upon that My Bond?" They said, "We have acknowledged it." He said, "Then bear witness and I too will bear witness." (Al-'Imran: 81).

Let us put the testimonies mentioned in this Glorious verse in order: The prophets bear witness concerning one another; the prophets bear witness concerning their followers; then Allah testifies for the prophets.

Confirming this point, we should note that if we find the followers of a previous religion being intolerant towards a new religion especially after the latter has brought a miracle that proves the veracity of what the new messenger brings from Allah, and then it becomes clear that those followers have betrayed the religion. Allah wants to keep the Call of Faith in total harmony so that no messenger may be intolerated for his own self, his race or his homeland. The same thing applies to the followers who must not be blindly following for their doctrine or creed because they all deliver the Message of one God and have one religion. So, the religion must remain coherent, with no intolerance for other prophets or creeds. The aspired goal is to have a cohesive and unified procession of of messages. Thus, there are no grounds for any prophet or a follower of his to oppose the call of any new messenger, as long as he confirms the truth that comes before him.

The True Lord Glorified is He tells us that He has demonstrated the testimonies of the prophets concerning each other, the testimonies of the prophets concerning their followers, and Allah's own Testimony for all, which is the most faithful and trustworthy of all testimonies. Hence, the procession of faith becomes so clear and unified that we can hardly find a believer in a divine message oppose one of another divine message. Let us leave opposition to those who do not believe in the Divine Messages. When the followers of the Divine Messages join forces, they can stand against atheists. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says:

فَمَنْ تَوَلَّىٰ بَعْدَ ذَٰلِكَ فَأُولَٰئِكَ هُمُ الْفَاسِقُونَ ﴿٨٢﴾

Those who turn away after this are the ones who break pledges [82] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 82)

The words 'Turn away' here are the opposite of 'approach'. 'Approach' means 'come face to face'. 'Turn away' means 'keep away from', or state a well-known expression, 'He turned his back on me.' This means that he does not care about me nor does he approach me. So the goal of taking pledges is to make people approach that religion. Allah threatens those who turn away and give their backs to the new Faith by saying: 'Those who turn away after this are the ones who are defiantly disobedient.' (Al-'Imran: 82) What does 'after this' in the glorious verse mean? The verse refers to turning away after taking the pledge and covenant from the prophets, along with the testimonies of the communities concerning each other and Allah's Testimony for everyone. So, there is no excuse for anyone. What will be Allah's Punishment for those who turn their backs on the new prophet, 'Muhammad' peace and blessings be upon him?

The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He describes them: '...those... are the ones who are defiantly disobedient', i.e. the punishment prepared for them by Allah is similar to that of the defiantly disobedient. Disobedience, as we may know, means straying from the confines of Allah's Obedience. It is well known that words take their meanings from tangible things. Tangible things are the first to be established within the human conscience, then what follows are abstract concepts that depend on tangible things themselves. In Arabic, the word fisq (defiant obedience) is derived from the extraction of a ripe date out of its skin. When a date ripens, it becomes small and moves away from its skin. When a date becomes small in size, the skin becomes so loose that the fruit can easily come out of it.

We say in Arabic that a date fasaqat (in the past form) which means that it came out of its skin. The Quran borrows this expression to describe those who leave Allah’s Religion. It is as though Allah’s Religion surrounds man in all his actions. Thus, when man abandons Allah’s Religion, he is like a date that comes out of its skin.

We have discussed major disobedience, but there is minor disobedience as well. Now, let us ask this question: Is disobedience here representing just a violation of the Religion of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him that must be obeyed? Such a violation may be committed by all sinners who still believe in the religion, but they partially stray from the straight path. We say that the sinner ‘has strayed from the right course’, i.e. he believes in the religion, but he ignores some of its legislations. Meanwhile, the disobedience that the True Lord Glorified is He is referring to, is the gravest one because it is abandonment of the procession of faith in its entirety. Since Allah has taken the pledge, and the prophets have borne witness concerning their communities, and the communities have borne witness concerning each other, and Allah Glorified is He has testified for all, could there be any excuse after this for a person to turn away and reject the Guidance? Why then does this person turn away and reject the Guidance? He does so because he wants another religion, which is other than that sent down by Allah. Had he been convinced of Allah’s religion, he would have turned to this religion. What religion do you want, O you who are not satisfied with this testimony and this confirmation? You surely know that there is no true religion except this one and that there is no other god who can send other religions.

Thus, we realize that the alternative to Allah's Religion is a religion created by humans for each other. We should ask those who follow a religion other than Allah’s Who has put a certain person in a position that qualifies him to be followed by others?’ Followers have to select the one they follow, and this person must be superior to them. It is wrong for a man to follow another who has created a religion of his own. This is a grave disobedience of Allah's Religion, as equals must not follow each other at all. It is from Allah’s Grace that He has given His Own Religion to all people so that they will not follow one another. Why did He do that? The purpose is to prevent the mind of a certain person to control the destiny of another person, while the True Lord Glorified is He has no caprices.

Man must direct his mind to be in accordance with the Will of Allah who has created all humanity.

Since there is no god except Allah, what is then the religion with which man can be pleased? If man does not follow Allah's religion, he will certainly be satisfied with man made religions which are always based on whims. When whims exist, we find that every human lawmaker works on his own; and this leads to the corruption of the universe. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He, says:

'But if the Truth [i.e. Allah] had followed their desires, the heavens, the earth and whoever is in them would have been ruined. Rather, We have brought them their Message, but they, from their Message, are turning away.' (al-Mu'minun: 71).

If they are not satisfied with Allah's religion, what disobedience do they commit? It is truly a most grave disobedience because Allah Glorified is He has taken their pledge, as well as the pledge of their prophets, and has confirmed these pledges. So is it other than Allah Glorified is He they desire? Yes, they want other than Allah Glorified is He. But who is this other? Is it another god? No, for there is no god but Allah. Rather, they have put created beings in place of the Creator. So Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says:

أَفَغَيْرَ دِينِ ٱللَّهِ يَبْغُونَ وَلَهُۥٓ أَسْلَمَ مَن فِى ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ
وَٱلْأَرْضِ طَوْعًا وَكَرْهًا وَإِلَيْهِ يُرْجَعُونَ ﴿٨٣﴾

Do they seek anything other than submission to God?
Everyone in the heavens and earth submits to Him, willingly or unwillingly; they will all be returned to Him [83]
(The Quran, Al-'Imran: 83)

Not believing in the Message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, whom Allah sent as a prophet and messenger, reveals their desire for a religion other than Allah's. But nothing is available to them except the religions of humans which rely on whims and inevitably lead to misguidance. Allah Glorified is He wants His human creatures to think logically. Allah Glorified is He has clarified His religion as if to tell us that we have been made successors upon earth, and we are the masters of all, who are served by the entire universe. Look at all the species in existence, and you will find that they are at your disposal; animals are less intelligent than you are. Plants are inferior to animals regarding the senses, while inanimate objects are inferior to plants.

So, all the species of the universe including animals, plants, and inanimate objects conform to your will, O man. Plants serve animals, and animals serve you, O man, while inanimate objects serve all. The various things that we humans take from inanimate objects also benefit plants and animals. Then, you can see with your own eyes that every species in existence serves the species that has superiority over it. Inanimate objects serve plants. Inanimate objects and plants serve animals. Inanimate objects, plants, and animals serve man. Yet, who do you serve, O man? You must have thought, O man, of the One to whom you are related in a way, matching your superiority over the other species. You must have searched for the one who has given you mastery over the other species. Have you, O man, subdued these species by means of your power and might? No, for you possess no inherent power that would allow you to do as such. Has it not occurred to you to think about the power that has enabled you to subject what you have no control over and make it serve you when you have no power, and even serve you, while you are sleeping? Has that thought never occurred to you?

You, O man, must be honest with yourself and search for a master who matches your mastery over others. You have no master in this tangible universe. But if someone tells you that there is a god unseen to you who orders you to serve Him, you must say: ‘This is a logical statement in view of my understanding of the universe.’ Afterwards, look at the universe; for you are not alone in it; there are other species, and every species has its own laws and mission. Animals have a mission, plants have a mission, and inanimate objects have a mission. Have you ever found species rebelling against its mission? No.

For example, you easily mount a horse that has a saddle of silk and leather and a bridle of silver. On another occasion, you use this horse as a means or a mount to willingly carry fertilizer made of animal dung. Thus, it serves you as a mount and as a carrier, and it never rebels against you. Every species duly performs its mission, and thus, matters go smoothly. Why do matters go in such a smooth way? Allah is the One Who has created these species and subdued them (to man) as if to say to them to‘serve people whether they are believers or non-believers.’ This is the Divine Justice; so these species do not delay or rebel in their service of humankind.

Have any of you ever seen the sun saying, ‘Man no longer pleases me; so I will not rise for him anymore, and, in fact, I will disappear today?!’ Has the air ever rebelled by saying, ‘No, mankind no longer deserves to breathe air; so I will not allow them to benefit from me?’ Have we ever seen rain refuse to come down? Has man ever planted crops in good soil and then have it disobey him? No, everything in existence humbly and dutifully fulfils its mission. In this context, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He, says: ‘And made them [grazing livestock] obedient so that some can be used for riding, some for food, some for other benefits, and some for drink? Will they not give thanks?’ (Ya Sin: 72-73).

The True Lord Glorified is He sets some animals free, so they are neither subjected to the will of man nor tamed by him. The purpose here is to know, O man, that the camel, for instance, is not tamed by your own power. If you had absolute power over the universe, would you tame some of the snakes of this world? Or tame the lion?

O man, you see many runaway, untamed creatures in this universe such as snakes and wild animals. The True Lord Glorified is He shows us through this exception that you cannot subdue such creatures to serve you with your own power unless Allah subjects them for you. This subjection and taming of these creatures is a grant and a grace from Allah Glorified is He to you, O man, who is still a weak and impotent creature.

We can hardly find anything beneficial in the universe that has disobeyed man because all the creatures are subjected by Allah to serve mankind, both the believers and the disbelievers. This is the Divine Sustenance that encompasses all creatures. The Most Generous Creator is the Lord of all humanity Who gives provision. Hence, the other species obey man whether he is a believer or a disbeliever. If a disbeliever conducts his life well, he will be successful (in this world), in contrast to a believer who fails if he does not work hard or conduct his life well. Again, this is the Divine Sustenance that is extended to all people. As for the Divine Bestowal, it is related to commandments and prohibitions ‘do and not to do’. It is extended to the believers alone.

So this is the image of the universe. It performs its mission in an optimal way and experiences wonderful total harmony. Here, we may ask ourselves from where has the imbalance in the universe come from? The imbalance has come from you, O man. Hence, whenever you find corruption in the universe, be sure that man has a part in it. But when man does not intervene, corruption never occurs.

Have you ever seen anyone complaining that the air has been insufficient? No.

This is because man has nothing to do with this matter. However, we intervene in the air issue via polluting it with exhaust and waste. It is a fact that the True Lord Glorified is He generously grants man discoveries that could lessen this corruption; but when mankind gets involved afterwards, things are corrupted. Does this mean that we should not get involved at all? Should we stand aside with no actions? No, we must be involved in the universe, but according to Allah's Guidance.

If you get involved in the universe according to Allah's Guidance, everything will run through subjection and taming. Just as the sun performs its mission, inanimate objects perform theirs; and animals perform theirs. You, O man, are required to perform your mission which is to obey Allah Glorified is He by ‘doing so and so and not doing so and so’. If you adhere to the Guidance of ‘do and not to do’, verily you will be in harmony with the universe.

Allah concludes this issue with a deeply moving and touching question for the believers: ‘So is it other than the Religion of Allah they desire, while to Him have submitted [all] those within the heavens and earth, willingly or by compulsion, and to Him they will be returned?’ (Al-‘Imran: 83)

Everything in the heavens and earth has submitted to Allah, willingly or by compulsion. One may ask what the meaning of ‘willingly’ is. ‘Willingly’ refers to obedience stemming from subservience, as the heavens and earth said in the wise text of the Quran: ‘Then He turned to the heaven, which was smoke—He said to it and the earth, “Come [into being], willingly or by compulsion,” and they said, “We come willingly.” (Fussilat: 11)

Everything that has not been given the freedom of choice comes in obedience and subservience to Allah Glorified is He. Then what is the meaning of 'by compulsion'? Some scholars say that 'willingly' denotes that the species of angels, inanimate objects, plants, and animals fulfil their missions in submission. None of them objects or even has the capability to disobey. As for the phrase of 'by compulsion', some scholars have understood that it refers to those people who serve others by force, such as slaves. In reference to scholars who say this, we may say that it is not correct or sound to give the opponents of Islam a chance to claim that Islam forces a man to serve another unwillingly because the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: 'There is no compulsion in [acceptance of] the religion. The true Guidance has become distinct from error. So whoever rejects taghut [false gods] and believes in Allah has grasped the firmest handhold, one that will never break. Allah is All-Hearing and All Knowing.' (Taghut is an Arabic word that means false objects of worship such as idols, heavenly bodies, spirits, human beings, etc.) (Al-'Imran: 256)

Since Allah does not force anyone to believe in Him, how does He force a person to serve another one?! So we must understand 'by compulsion' according to its real meaning. The True Lord Glorified is He has informed us that the whole universe is subservient to Him because He Glorified is He is the One Who created it, and there is no god but He. This is a fact beyond doubt. The entire universe is possessed by Allah, and He is the Arranger and Subjugator of it. The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: 'Allah [God] has never had a child. Nor has there ever been any god beside Him. [If there had been,] then each god would have taken his creation aside and sought to overcome the others. 'Exalted is Allah above what they describe [concerning Him]' (Al-'Imran: 91).

Since He is the One and the Creator, no one can rebel against His Will. It is necessary for man to understand his mission as being the only creature that Allah has given him the freedom of choice and made him responsible for his own actions, while other species have no choice and are not held responsible before Allah Glorified is He concerning 'do and not to do' commands. Responsibility is verily the result of free will. The religion asks you to 'do and not to do so and so' because the One Who has sent it down and created you knows well that you are capable of doing what He commands you to do and not doing what He commands you not to do.

Consider this example. Man's hand is created to move as he wills. This is quite true because when the nerves that connect this part of the body to the brain are severed, this part is paralysed. Furthermore, if the afflicted person wants to lift his hand, he cannot [we seek Allah's refuge from such a bad thing]. The hand, then, is under the control of man and when your will, O man, is in accordance with Allah's Guidance, you will direct it in the course of His 'do and not to do commands'. When you are told, for instance, 'Do not use your hand to strike anyone,' this means that the hand is capable of striking. When you are asked to take the hand of the one who may stumble', then your hand is able to take the hand of the one who may stumble. So, you have been created in such a way that your body organs willingly respond to your will. Religion comes to order you to do the following: 'Go with the will for so and so, and do not go with the will for so and so'.

When man follows the religion, he is in perfect accord with the subservient things and does everything in the best manner. But man loses this accord when he does not adhere to the religion and breaks away from the unity of the universe. Let us read what Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says: 'Do you realize [Muhammad] that to Allah prostrates [submits] whoever is in the heavens and whoever is on the earth, and the sun, the moon, the stars, the mountains, the trees, the moving creatures and many of the people? But upon many others the punishment is well deserved. Anyone disgraced by Allah will have no one to honour him. Indeed, Allah does whatever He wills.' (al-Hajj: 18)

All the species lie prostrate to Allah: the sun, the moon, the stars, and the mountains. All of these inanimate objects prostrate. The trees and plants, too, prostrate to Allah Glorified is He and so do the animals and the moving creatures. So many people also prostrate. However, in contrast to the so many humans who do prostrate, we find that there are many who do not, and so the punishment has been justified upon them. If man had only adhered to Allah's Guidance, he would have been like all the other species; but he has chosen to be different by saying: 'I undertake to bear the Trust (Commands of Allah) because I am learned and wise.' For example, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He tells us: 'Indeed, We offered the Trust to the heavens and the earth and the mountains, yet they declined to undertake it and feared it; but man [undertook to] bear it. Indeed, he has always been unjust and ignorant.' (al-'Ahzab: 72).

If man accepts the Guidance of Allah in accordance with the 'do and not to do' commands, he will be in harmony with all the created beings, and thus no violations will occur on his part or the part of the other species. When this does occur, the universe will be in perfect harmony. We know that when man is occupied with some of his scientific ambitions, he intends to do good, but he is aware of some aspects and ignorant of others. If man learned from Allah, the Knower of all things, the world would be in harmony.

The inventors who designed engines that run on petrol have made human transportation much easier, but the exhaust and waste produced by petrol harm the universe. This is why scientists are making great efforts to find ways to combat environmental pollution. When firewood was the only fuel available, there was no environmental pollution. Why? Because every element was fulfilling its mission: as a part of the burned wood became charcoal, another part turned into gases; thus, everything took a natural course.

This shows us that man has approached modern inventions with only half his knowledge. Man has planned to make movement easier, transport heavy loads and shorten journeys, but he has not considered the consequences that affect the environment and cause pollution. Hence, we have encountered waste materials that corrupt the environment. If man had comprehensive knowledge, he would have, when inventing these engines, searched for a way to avoid these waste materials.

Let us contemplate the Greatness of the True Lord Glorified is He. He lets the human intellect develop, but the human intellect is limited and does not apprehend factors which certainly result in harm. Those who have invented insecticides thought that they had made a major breakthrough in the universe, but the Will of the True Lord Glorified is He decreed that the very people who invented these insecticides were the ones to ban them because they found them to be harmful. In this regard, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: ‘Say, [O, Muhammad], “Shall we inform you [believers] of the greatest losers as to [their] deeds? [They are] those whose efforts are lost in this worldly life, while they think that they are doing good work.” It is those who disbelieve in their Lord’s Verses and Signs and deny that they will meet Him’, so their deeds become worthless; and on the Day of Resurrection We will not assign to them any weight [i.e., importance]’ (al-Kahf: 103-105).

If you want to perfect your product, search for the best one in the light of Allah's Guidance. The True Lord Glorified is He gives us the clearest of examples.

We know that the waste products of our inventions are harmful, like the waste of factories, vehicles, etc. On the other hand, the waste excretions of the creatures of Allah Glorified is He like animals, for example, are beneficial. Man takes animal droppings and manufactures fertilizers out of them to increase soil's fertility. It is not strange that animal dung that fertilizes land is not repulsive to us, nor does it have the same stench that human waste has. Why is this? This is because animals eat according to their need. They might find before them many different kinds of food, yet they will eat dry grass only. When an animal is full, it stops eating, and so its waste is not foul-smelling. The human being, on the contrary, eats many different kinds of food, eats beyond his need and does not control his desires and appetites. An animal has no free will and is ruled by instinct. It finds before it what can be eaten and what cannot be eaten, and it, instinctively, chooses the appropriate food. When its belly is full, it stops eating because it is governed by instinct and subjugation. Meanwhile, man enjoys free will which corrupts him, distances him from Allah's Guidance and causes him to cross the boundaries of satiation since he has the power to do so. Thus, we clearly see that the entire universe willingly submits to Allah Glorified is He by way of subjugation.

Never think that Islam could exist by force and compulsion. Some scholars have missed this point and thus have given those who oppose Islam a chance to argue and say, ‘Your religion spread by the sword.’ We may say to them that nobody can accept Islam by compulsion. The sword was only raised for one cause: the protection for the freedom of choice. The sword was raised to prevent compulsion and eliminate the hegemony of some people who forced others to accept their beliefs; so the sword addressed them saying, ‘Know your limits and let people choose what they believe.’ The proof of this is that the lands that Islam conquered still contain non-Muslims. If they had been conquered by the sword, we would not have found any religions there other than Islam. We would have also found the opponents of Islam further emphatically saying, ‘You (Muslims) impose jizyah or ‘protection fee’ (a tax taken from non-Muslims living in a Muslim state to protect them).

We could say to them, refuting their argument that we do not impose jizyah on the believers, but only on the disbelievers whom we freely leave to disbelieve. A disbeliever pays jizyah so that the believers can defend him if the homeland is attacked.

Then, how should we understand Allah's Statement that man sometimes submits by compulsion? We can understand this by the following statement: Man does not understand matters well. Some matters fall under his control, whereas he has no control over other matters which happen to him against his will and choice. A person chooses his own actions, but he does not choose the things that happen to him or around him. For example, none of us chooses the day he is born, the day he dies or the day he becomes ill. A wise man is the one who recognises this fact by saying to the one who does not know or ignores it, ‘O man! Get rid of such foolishness. You are compelled to unwillingly surrender to Allah Glorified is He during some times in your life. You submit to Allah Glorified is He against your will concerning many matters that happen to you and that cannot be prevented. So why not fulfill yourself by submitting to Islam with its freedom of choice?’

All creatures surrender to Allah Glorified is He and so does man since he is incapable of repelling the things that happen to him or around him. Here man, like other beings, is forced to surrender to Allah Glorified is He Who has the upper hand over these areas of submission, in which you, O man, play no part, or have no control. Then, must you not surrender in all aspects of your life? Is it possible for a disbeliever to prevent some parts of his body from surrendering [to Allah's Will] and performing their functions?

Let us see what would happen to this disbeliever if he thinks he can do so: he must stop breathing because breathing occurs whether he likes it or not; and his heart must stop beating because it beats without him ordering it. Since there are people who enjoy disbelieving, let them make all their body parts disbelieve; yet they cannot, for they will find that they want certain things that do not come to them and that they dislike things that happen to them. No one can avoid surrendering to Allah because Allah Glorified is He has predestined for every person the day he is born and the day he dies. Allah Glorified is He has decreed that man cannot resist the things that happen to him, thus becoming submissive against his will. The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: '..., while to Him have submitted [all] those within the heavens and earth, willingly or by compulsion, and to Him they will be returned?' (Al-'Imran: 83).

So, let us understand 'willingly' to mean beings other than man, as well as the believers who carry out the Teachings of Allah's religion, whereas 'by compulsion' refers to all the undesirable matters that happen to man, for which he has no control over. He is unable to prevent them because the one who causes them to happen is the Creator Who does what He wills. Since there are some aspects of your life, O man, in which you are drawn, why have you rebelled concerning the matters of free will? It is incumbent upon the disbelievers to accept this point and say 'no' to disbelief and turn to faith. A believer is actually aware of this point, saying, 'I want to be in harmony with the entire universe so that no (natural) endowment may supersede another, and no will may dominate another. This represents Allah's Glorified is He Mercy with the creation.'

When man surrenders himself to Allah Glorified is He he does what the religion requires and abstains from what the religion forbids. We could say to whoever refrains from following Allah's Commands of 'do and not to do': If you do what Allah wants, what will be the benefit for Him? Nothing will benefit Him, so you must consider this matter carefully, for a command may be rejected or rebelled against if the one who gives the commands seeks to benefit from them. There is no benefit for the True Lord Glorified is He behind what He wants from the creation except what is in the best interest of the creation itself.

Then the Guidance of the True Lord Glorified is He is for the benefit of mankind. The one who refuses Allah's Guidance only harms himself and loses harmony with the creation. If someone does not want to surrender to Allah Glorified is He let him try not to surrender (to Allah) concerning those things on which he has no control. This is impossible.

Let us carefully contemplate what the Quran says after the True Lord Glorified is He talks about the covenant, pledge and testimonies: ‘So is it other than the Religion of Allah they desire, while to Him have submitted [all] those within the heavens and earth,willingly or by compulsion, and to Him they will be returned?’ (Al-'Imran: 83). The one who desires a religion other than Allah's religion is not being logical, or honest, with himself or with the universe because the entire universe belongs to Allah Glorified is He. Included are the heavens and the earth with all they contain, both animate and inanimate objects, as well as the people who accept Allah’s Guidance, and even the disbelievers who submit to Allah Glorified is He concerning the things on which they have no control.

The word ‘submitted’ in this Glorious Quranic context means surrendered, and we are subjected and forced to obey. But the True Lord Glorified is He mentions that the heaven and the earth ‘... said, “We come willingly.”’ (Fussilat: 11). Naturally, the heavens and the earth submit to Allah's Commands, but when ‘They said, “We come willingly.”’, they actively submit to Allah Glorified is He. All must return to Allah Glorified is He. Mankind, both the believers and the disbelievers, will most assuredly return to Allah Glorified is He.

The verb ‘return’ at the end of the verse can be found in other places in the Quran; sometimes it comes in the passive form ‘they will be returned’, which means that they are compelled to return to Allah Glorified is He; and sometimes it is in the active form ‘they will return’, which means that they wll rushed forward to return to Allah Glorified is He. In this verse, we understand that those who desire religions other than Allah’s religion do not wish to return to Allah Glorified is He and so they will be compelled to return, as Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says in the passive form in another chapter of the Quran: ‘On that Day they will be violently thrust into the Fire of Hell’ (at-Tur: 13).

After this, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says:

قُلْ ءَامَنَّا بِٱللَّهِ وَمَآ أُنزِلَ عَلَيْنَا وَمَآ أُنزِلَ عَلَىٰٓ إِبْرَٰهِيمَ وَإِسْمَٰعِيلَ
وَإِسْحَٰقَ وَيَعْقُوبَ وَٱلْأَسْبَاطِ وَمَآ أُوتِىَ مُوسَىٰ وَعِيسَىٰ وَٱلنَّبِيُّونَ
مِن رَّبِّهِمْ لَا نُفَرِّقُ بَيْنَ أَحَدٍ مِّنْهُمْ وَنَحْنُ لَهُۥ مُسْلِمُونَ ﴿٨٤﴾

Say [Muhammad], 'We [Muslims] believe in God and in what has been sent down to us and to Abraham, Ishmael, Isaac, Jacob, and the Tribes. We believe in what has been given to Moses, Jesus, and the prophets from their Lord. We do not make a distinction between any of the [prophets]. It is to Him that we devote ourselves' [84] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 84)

When we examine this verse, we find that the True Lord Glorified is He groups Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him together with those who believe in him and the former messengers regarding the belief in Allah. Allah Glorified is He talks about Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the believers as one faithful entity. The True Lord's word 'Say' is directed (in the Arabic imperative singular form) to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the statement 'We [Muslims] believe...' is evidence of the unity between Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the Ummah (followers) that believes in him. It is as though the Muslim Ummah is included in 'Say', and as though Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is included in 'We [Muslims]believe...'. Thus, complete harmony, or unity, is achieved between Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and those who believe in him. So when the True Lord Glorified is He addresses them, He addresses a single faithful unity that has no divisions.

The True Lord Glorified is He uses this form of discourse to clarify for us that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not come in order to gain ascendancy over his ummah; rather, he came to carry the burdens of this ummah. As we have said before, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had two forms of faith: he had faith in Allah Glorified is He and he was faithful to the believers. The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him will intercede on our behalf (on the Day of Resurrection) because he had made so many great efforts to intercede for his entire ummah. He delivered the Message in the best manner and assumed responsibility for the benefit of his entire ummah. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: 'Say: "We [Muslims] believe…" Some may argue that it would be more obvious in this context to say,' I [Muhammad] believe,'or to say, 'Say (all of you): We [Muslims] believe….' Be certain that True Lord Glorified is He in His Glorious Quran puts every word in its proper place, in such a way that there is cohesion between the word and its meaning. The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: 'Say: "We [Muslims] believe…"' in order that we know that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is a messenger who is inextricably mixed with his Ummah, and that the Muslim ummah willingly obeys her Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. Thus the commands come to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, from the True Lord Glorified is He and all are required to obey these commands. This shows or proves to the opponents (of Islam) that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has a strong, faithful following. If Allah Glorified is He had said, 'Say: I [Muhammad] believe…,' this would have meant that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him possesses nothing more than his own personal belief. But the fact is that the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him was believed to be a prophet by his ummah, as well as many others, which includes those who embraced Islam at the Fath (Conquest) of Mecca, as the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: 'When the Victory of Allah comes and He opens up your way [Prophet], when you see people embracing Allah's [God's] Religion in Crowds...' (an-Nasr: 1-2).

When we read the True Lord's words: 'Say, "We [Muslims] believe in Allah [God] and in what was sent down upon us..."' (Al-'Imran: 84), we should note, as we have said before, that scholars discuss the issue of Revelation (Inzaal or Nuzul in Arabic). Sometimes the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: '...And who believe in what has been revealed to you, [O, Muhammad], and what was revealed before you, those who have firm faith in the Hereafter.' (al-Baqara: 4)

Other times, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: 'And We have not sent down upon you the Book ''the Quran", [O Muhammad], except for you to make clear to them that wherein they have differed and as guidance and mercy to those who believe.' (an-Nahl: 64)

So, when the concept of Revelation is expressed, we sometimes find that the verb 'reveal' is used, followed by the proposition 'to' ('ila' in Arabic); and sometimes the phrasal verb 'send down' is used, followed by the proposition 'upon' ('ala' in Arabic). Other scholars say that when speech is directed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'sent down upon you', it is as though these scholars make –unintentionally– a distinction between Allah's revelation to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and His revelation to his ummah. They do not keep in mind that the goal of sending down the religion upon Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the guidance of the ummah.

We should say that we must not consider the matter in a superficial manner because according to the direct usage of the language, there is a subtle usage of it here.Namely, both 'to' and 'upon' imply that the religion has been sent down to the ummah together with her Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He sometimes uses 'ila' (to), which combineswith the verb 'reveal', when the statement is addressed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as in: 'And when they hear what has been revealed to the Messenger, you see their eyes overflowing with tears because of what they have recognised of the Truth. They say, "Our Lord, we have believed, so count us among the witnesses."' (al-Ma'ida: 83)

On another occasion, the True Lord Glorified is He uses 'ala' (upon), which combines with the phrasal verb 'send down', when the statement is also addressed to the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him as in: 'And We have not sent down upon you the Book " the Quran", [O Muhammad], except for you to make clear to them that wherein they have differed and as guidance and mercy to those who believe.' (an-Nahl: 64)

Yet another time, the True Lord Glorified is He talks about 'coming down' (Inzaal or Nuzul in Arabic) when addressing the believers themselves: 'And it has already come down upon you in the Book [the Quran] that if you hear people denying and ridiculing Allah's Revelation so do not sit with them unless they start to talk of other things, or else you yourselves will become like them. Indeed, Allah will gather the hypocrites and disbelievers in Hell all together.' (an-Nisa': 140).

This Supreme Book came down from heaven for the benefit of the ummah. So the use of 'ala' (upon) implies loftiness that matches this supreme Ummah and puts the religion in a high status for the believers since it came for their interest. According to Arabic, coming down, or sending down of, (the revelation) requires loftiness which is shown in the proposition 'upon'. This coming down also requires having a goal which is conveyed in the proposition 'to' when used with 'reveal'. So, this religion comes from the True Lord Glorified is He 'upon' and 'to' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who delivered to the believers for their own benefit. Thus, we say that if a (religious) ruling seems to limit an individual's freedom, we should not misunderstand that Allah Glorified is He wants to actually limit this freedom; rather, this limitation limits millions of people for the sake of the freedom of this individual. An example of this is the religion's prohibition of stealing: this is a command for every one among the millions of people in existence, which strives to benefit every person. The Quran is revealed for your benefit, as well as the benefit of all the believers.

When we read the words of the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He: 'Say [Muhammad], "We [Muslims] believe in Allah and in what was sent down upon us and to Abraham, Ishmael, Isaac, Jacob, and Al-Asbaat [the Tribes representing the twelve children of Prophet Jacob]. We also believe in what was given to Moses, Jesus and the prophets from their Lord. We do not make a distinction between any of the [prophets]. It is to Him that we devote ourselves [as Muslims]."' (Al-'Imran: 84), we find that this statement clarifies that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came only with a religion that contains the most truthful doctrines, stories and chronicles in accordance with the procession of messengers from the day that Allah created the earth and sent the first messenger. Allah Glorified is He took a pledge from the prophets and their followers that whenever a messenger comes, confirming what is with them, they must believe in him. Allah Glorified is He also took a pledge from Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that he must believe in the former messengers because he did not come to destroy the religions, yet rather to perfect them. So we find the Glorious Quran say: '…This day I have perfected for you your Religion and completed My Blessing upon you and have approved for you Islam as religion.' (al-Ma'ida: 3)

The previous religions with all their correct doctrines, stories, and chronicles are similar to Islam; moreover, Islam comes with legislation that is appropriate to every time and place. In this regard, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him addresses us in his noble Hadith, saying: 'The likeness of me to the prophets before me is as that of a man who built a house well and beautifully, except for the place of one brick in one of its corners. People began to tour the house, saying: "We would not have seen finer than this, if only for the place of this brick!' I am that final brick." (1)

So, the religion perfected itself with the coming of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him since Allah Glorified is He took a pledge from the other messengers that they would believe in him when he came. Meanwhile, he trusted and believed in the prophets who preceded him. No one came afterwards asking Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his followers to believe in him. The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He ends this Glorious verse saying: '... "It is to Him that we devote ourselves [as Muslims]."' (Al-'Imran: 84)

This means that none of the followers of any previous messengers has anything that would grant them a temporal power. Rather, everything starts with Allah, Glorfied is He, and ends with Him. This is the final word in the procession of messages. Islam means man's submission to Allah Glorified is He to be in harmony with himself as well as with the universe that contains animals, plants, inanimate objects and others. Thus, the whole universe, including believing people who surrender to Allah Glorified is He becomes subjected to Him, or His Will. When the universe and mankind have become subdued to Allah Glorified is He no action will be in conflict with another because the One Who has this authority is the One Who makes laws to govern man's daily life and protect him from clashing with other beings. We find that people have managed to set standards for themselves which can prevent that which may result in disasters and crises.

(1) Narrated by Muslim: Traceable to Prophet Muhammad's Hadith

For instance, let us look at railways. There is one who is called 'track controller' whose job is to change tracks for trains so that one train coming from a particular direction can change its course so as to avoid colliding with another train coming on the same line. This is the action of mankind in relation to his inventions of trains and forms of transport: he has designed ways to prevent these vehicles from hitting each other. So, what about the True Lord Glorified is He to whom belongs the noblest descriptions and Who has created man himself? He Glorified is He has granted us the Guidance so that no movement, or action, in the universe may clash with another.

Let us compare the sphere of subjugation with that of the free will. Have we ever heard of two camels walking along opposite paths and hitting each other? This has never happened because a camel keeps itself, and what it carries away from other camels and what they carry. Yet, we have heard about vehicles crashing into each other since a vehicle does not drive itself; it is driven by a person who has the will of choice and who can make it collide with other things and cause disasters due to his carelessness.

So, clashes between movements occur only in the matters which are governed by free will, e.g. a person who is heedless of his job, as is the case of the track controller when directing trains. Meanwhile, the clash of a movement in the universe with another is impossible because the matter is in the hands of the Most High, the Overseer Who controls the earth and the heavens. He Glorified is He keeps the universe in complete harmony and teaches us His Attributes, as when He says: 'Allah – there is no deity except Him, the Ever-Living, the Sustainer of [all] existence. Neither drowsiness overtakes Him nor sleep...' (al-Baqara: 255). This means that He has the means to sustain your life and arrange your affairs. He neither sleeps, nor slumbers, and nor does He become heedless; so we can sleep, for He has subdued the entire universe for us.

Since this is the nature of Islam and due to the fact that the universe is self-harmonising, why do you deviate from all existence, O man? And why do you deviate from your own intrinsic, innate nature? Why are you not in harmony or in unison with the universe? If you are in harmony or in unison with yourself and the universe, you will be a happy person.

Today, we see that the world has materially developed in such an incredible way that, for example, if something happens in America, we see it immediately on television, and that a person can board a spaceship and travel to outer space. However, does the world feel comfortable or at peace now? No, it has faced more hardships, as though it has racked its brains and burdened scientists in their labs to invent things that inevitably caused it to be more disturbed, unsettled, divided, and conflicted. Thus the world is always witnessing real and cold wars.

All of this is the result of managing the world's affairs through human caprices, or whims. We do not all return to a single source of guidance which commands us, and thus we obey, and which forbids us, and thus we refrain. Rather, every person follows his own desires, and this is why we see worries, conflicts, disasters, and screams of terror everywhere. One of today's afflictions is drugs. A drug addict is a person who is unhappy with his life and does not want to face his problems. Instead, he tries to escape his reality by means of addiction. To such a person, we may advise him that this is not a solution to any crisis because when a person faces a problem, he needs an intellect other than his own in order to tackle it. You, addict, squander your own intellect through this addiction, despite the fact that you are required to use another intellect beside yours to solve your problems. Fleeing problems does not solve them; rather, it results in foolishness and lack of intelligence as problems become more complicated. We may say to the communities that suffer from such inflictions that if you would only take your laws from Allah's Guidance, you would be protected from such disasters.

Thus, we see that all new inventions always lead first to evil, and if we find that they have no evil intent, we direct them towards good. If only they were good purely for Allah's Sake, but if they are a deviant and distorted good because those who do not possess such inventions, such as the developing countries and the Third World, are made to be slaves and guinea pigs for the inventors, as a result of their discoveries and inventions. The latter use their advancements as ways to enslave and degrade others, even if they seemingly appear to do otherwise.

Why is this so? It is because we have been truely honest neither with ourselves nor with the reality of our advancements. Unlimited scientific ambitions should not be causing us all this trouble; we should have achieved more comfort after the actualisation of these ambitions. But this has not occurred. Why? This is because we, humans, are being led by our whims, which are not trustworthy guides. The true trustworthy guide is the Law of Allah Glorified is He Who legislates only for the good of those He has created. Since Islam outlines the safe way with the Creator, the self and the universe around us with all the species on it, then the religion of Allah Glorified is He is surely Islam (which means submission and surrendering to Him). This is the inevitable conclusion. So the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: '...It is to Him that we devote ourselves [as Muslims].' (Al-'Imran: 84) The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He then continues saying:

وَمَن يَبْتَغِ غَيْرَ ٱلْإِسْلَٰمِ دِينًا فَلَن يُقْبَلَ مِنْهُ وَهُوَ فِي ٱلْءَاخِرَةِ مِنَ ٱلْخَٰسِرِينَ ﴿٨٥﴾

If anyone seeks a religion other than [islam] complete devotion to God, it will not be accepted from him: he will be one of the losers in the Hereafter [85] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 85)

What will bring happiness to the entire world is the religion of Islam. Whoever desires a religion other than it, Allah Glorified is He will not accept it from him. If anyone is not pleased by the Legislation of Allah and with amasement says, 'This legislation is too harsh; you cut off a person's hand and disfigure him.' We reply to such a person with the following analogy:

A car might crash into another and disfigure tens of people inside both cars, or a train accident might cause a disaster and disfigure hundreds of people. If we count the number of hands that have been cut off throughout the entire history of Islam, we will find that the number is considerably lower than the number of people disfigured by road accidents. Any argument about protectng the beauty of human beings is indeed ironic, for the law of hand amputation regarding thieves brings righteousness and discipline to life, whereas whimsically motivated wars have disfigured and annihilated hundreds and even thousands of people. This kind of statement is sheer sophistry. Does the carrying out of the legislation of punishments cause crimes to occur? No; carrying out the legislation of punishments is meant to act as a warning for people to commit such crimes.

When we tell anyone, ‘If you kill someone, the authorities (commissioned by the ruler) will kill you’, is this not a way of preserving his life as well as the lives of others? When legislation in the religion preserves one person’s life, it preserves the life of every person at the same time. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says: ‘Fair retribution saves life for you, people of understanding so that you may guard yourselves against what is wrong.’ (al-Baqara: 179)

Thus, this legislation is proven to be perfectly sound. Then, the Statement of the True Lord, Glorified and Exalted is He: ‘And whoever desires other than Islam as religion – never will it be accepted from him…’ (Al-‘Imran: 85) indicates that whoever legislates a law that contradicts what Allah Glorified is He has legislated, it is as though he has put Allah Glorified is He in the wrong. In essence, it is like he is saying to Him: ‘We are more concerned about humanity than you, O Lord, because you have erred in this issue.’

This statement is a clear deviation from the Law of Allah Glorified is He and man must always behave properly with his Creator, and refer all matters back to Allah, his Lord. When you refer all matters back to your Lord, O man, then you can rest and relax with peace of mind and in comfort unless you benefit through deviation. If you benefit through deviation, this means that you desire what Allah Glorified is He does not. But if you desire the good of the people, you will find that the True Lord Glorified is He has legislated laws that serve the interests of all mankind. So, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: ‘And whoever desires other than Islam as religion – never will it be accepted from him, and he, in the Hereafter, will be among the losers.’ (Al-‘Imran: 85).

Someone might say regarding this statement, ‘... never will it be accepted from him…’ (Al-‘Imran: 85) that it does not completely reassure me that I will be rewarded by Allah in return for my good deeds, for He Glorified is He may or may not accept them since no one can force Him to do anything. To such a person, we can say that you will eventually meet or come back to your Lord whether you like it or not; so why do you utter such words? Be as wise as you can be and do not rebel against the Commands of your Lord. '…and he, in the Hereafter, will be among the losers.' (Al-'Imran: 85). A loser as a word is a noun whose present participle (gerund) is 'losing', which means, in Arabic, waste and squandering of capital. The Hereafter is a final life. Yet man is foolish enough to say, 'I will be tortured a little, and then it will be over.' No; it will never be over because the Hereafter is an eternal life after which there is no other life that follows it. Then the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: 'Why would Allah guide people who deny the Truth, after they have believed and acknowledged that the Messenger is true....' (Al-'Imran: 84).

كَيۡفَ يَهۡدِى ٱللَّهُ قَوۡمٗا كَفَرُواْ بَعۡدَ إِيمَٰنِهِمۡ وَشَهِدُوٓاْ أَنَّ ٱلرَّسُولَ
حَقّٞ وَجَآءَهُمُ ٱلۡبَيِّنَٰتُۚ وَٱللَّهُ لَا يَهۡدِى ٱلۡقَوۡمَ ٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ ٨٦

Why would God guide people who deny the truth, after they have believed and acknowledged that the Messenger is true, and after they have been shown clear proof? God does not guide evildoers [86] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 86)

Here we witness incredible use of language: The True Lord Glorified is He calls on us to wonder at the act of those who disbelieve after having believed. Had they not announced their faith before, we would have said that they had not tasted the sweetness of faith. However, can the one who has believed and tasted the delight of faith go back to disbelief? This is a bizarre rebellion.

Someone might ask the following question, 'Since Allah Glorified is He has not guided them, why are they held accountable?' To such a man, we should stress what we have always repeated in this context in order to clarify a certain issue which is common among the non-religious people who say: 'Allah did not want to guide me, so what can I do?' This is an argument to give an excuse for being deviant.' Such a statement only comes from someone who has transgressed against himself (by sinning). This statement never comes from someone who obeys Allah Glorified is He. That one who says, 'It has been ordained by Allah that I should commit sins, so why am I held responsible?' must learn that obedience also comes from Allah Glorified is He, so why does he not say instead, 'Obedience is from Allah; so why does He reward us for that?' Why do you, O sinner, ignore mentioning the reward of obedience and think only of sins? You say that you'have been destined by Allah to commit sins, so why does He punish you?' You should have also said, 'Since Allah has decreed that I should obey Him, why does He reward me for that?' We can say to those who justify deviating from the right course that they want to be rewarded for obedience and to escape the punishment for disobedience.

You need to duly understand this matter. I have said before, that 'Guidance' has two meanings. First, it means simply directing (people) to the way that leads to the aspired goal. An example of this is inanimate road signs. Every sign shows a specific road and guides towards it. There is no one at these signs to help any person and say to him, 'I will help you and repair your car' or 'I will get in the car with you and take you to your destination.'

These signs are only a means of guidanc, i.e. they show the road that leads to the desired destination. Allah Glorified is He has guided all people, the believers, and the disbelievers, i.e. Allah Glorified is He has shown them the way that leads to the ultimate goal. Afterwards, people have been divided into two groups: a group that accepts the religion is pleased with it and acts as Allah wants, and a group that does not. When a believer resorts to Allah's Omnipotence and believes in Him, it is as though the True Lord Glorified is He says to him, 'You have believed in Me and My Religion, and so you will have another reward. I will assist you to overcome the troubles of life.' This is the second form of Guidance which Allah Glorified is He grants as a reward to those who believe in Him and choose His religion. This form of Guidance means 'assistance'. Allah Glorified is He gives His believing servant the sweetness of obedience and helps him to do good deeds, energetically. So, Guidance sometimes means 'direction' and sometimes means 'assistance'. I repeat these words so that this point may become clear to the mind of everyone. Let us always remember this matter and ask, 'Who assists man?' The one who assists man is the One Who man believes in. As for those who disbelieve in Allah Glorified is He they are not assisted by Him.

I have cited this example several times: A person drives towards Alexandria, then he gets confused about choosing the correct direction to reach his destination. He finally finds a policeman and asks him how he can reach Alexandria. The policeman shows the motorist the way leading to Alexandria by saying, ‘This is the correct road to Alexandria.’ Here, the policeman is directing this man, and when the motorist says to him, ‘Praise be to Allah that I have found you here, for you have made the journey easier to me. ‘These words soften the heart of the policeman and make him give further information to the motorist, showing him in detail how to get to his destination. He may warn him of any obstacles he might face. If the motorist thanks the policeman more and more, this will please the policeman and motivate him to get in the motorist’s car and lead him to the right course, explaining to him the obstacles he needs to avoid. Thus, the policeman has given all forms of assistance to the one who thanked him profusely.

Suppose, however, that another man asks the policeman about the right path, and then he refuses to believe him. In such an instance, the policeman will ignore this man. I give this example with the objective to clarify, not to compare. Allah Glorified is He provides (His slaves) first with the general guidance that covers all people and shows them the right path to the religion. Whoever believes in Allah Glorified is He and relies on His Omnipotence will be granted a second guidance, the guidance of facilitation and assistance.

‘Allah has increased the guidance of those who follow the right path, and given them their righteousness...’ (Muhammad: 17). The True Lord Glorified is He gives them the true sweetness of guidance: righteousness. It is as though He says to the believing servant, ‘Since you have accepted Faith in Me, you are, thereby, granted the sweetness of this Faith.’ As for the one who disbelieves and wrongs his own soul by being polytheist, the True Lord Glorified is He withholds the guidance of assistance from him because he has already experienced the general guidance that showed him the straight path, but he has not followed it. So, the question in this verse: ‘Why would Allah guide people who deny the Truth, after they have believed…?’ (Al-‘Imran: 86) is for denial and exclusion, and not regarding general guidance of showing the straight path, but in regards to the guidance of assistance instead. In other words, the question is ‘Why would I assist those who disbelieve in Me?’

This question refers to some people of the Book to whom the description of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had been revealed in their scriptures to the extent that Abdullah ibn Salam God be pleased with him who was one of them said, 'When I saw Muhammad, I knew him well, as I know my own son. Indeed, my knowledge of Muhammad is even better.' The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He confirms this fact in the Glorious Quran, saying: '...those... who follow the Messenger – the unlettered Prophet (Muhammad) they find, described in the Torah that is with them, and in the Gospel– who commands them to do right and forbids them to do wrong, who makes good things lawful to them and bad things unlawful, and relieves them of their burdens, and the iron collars that were on them. So it is those who believe him, honour, and help him, and who follow the light which has been sent down with him, who will succeed.' (al-A'raf: 157)

Let us contemplate the accuracy of the Quranic expression in this verse, which does not say: '... the unlettered Prophet (Muhammad) whose description they find in the Torah that is with them and in the Gospel...' Rather, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: '…the unlettered Prophet [Muhammad] they find, described in the Torah that is with them, and in the Gospel …' (al-A'raf: 157).

It is as though whoever reads the Torah and the Gospel is able to see the very image of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by means of a precise description. The Torah and the Gospel knew him in a detailed, comprehensive way with supporting statements described by some people of these two messages. There is a difference between 'knowing' and 'speaking': a person might know something and conceal it, but they knew Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and admitted this fact. They used to pray for victory over the disbelievers through this prophet, as the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: 'When there came to them a Book (the Quran) from Allah confirming what they already had, and when they had been praying for victory against the disbelievers, even when there came to them something they knew [to be true], they disbelieved in it: so the curse of Allah will be upon the disbelievers.' (al-Baqara: 89).

Before the coming of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him they considered him a source of their victory over the disbelievers by saying, 'There will come a prophet, and we will follow him. We, together, will kill you as was the case with the people of 'Ad and the City of Iram.' But what did they do on the ground? The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He answers: '…even when there came to them something they knew [to be true], they disbelieved in it: so the curse of Allah will be upon the disbelievers.' (al-Baqara: 89)

So, they had believed in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him before he came. But when he came, they disbelieved in him. See the Fairness of Allah Glorified is He when He guides them to honesty, truth, and faithful dignity: '… Say, Allah– and those who have [true] knowledge of the Scripture– are sufficient witness between us."' (ar-Ra'd: 43)

Those who have knowledge of the Scripture are the Jews and the Christians. They bear witness that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the Messenger of Allah Glorified is He. The most equitable Quran is fair to the Torah and the Gospel: the books that are in their possession: 'Why would Allah guide people who deny the Truth, after they have believed and acknowledged that the Messenger is true…' (Al-'Imran: 86). They believed in him as a messenger relying on their own books, then announced this belief when they said, 'There will come a prophet, and we will follow him. We, together, will kill you as was the case with the people of 'Ad and the City of Iram.'

Since they have done such a thing, why would Allah guide them? Neither are they prepared for guidance nor shown any signs of love towards Allah Glorified is He. So, Allah Glorified is He does not assist them to be rightly guided. Had they only turned to Allah Glorified is He He would have assisted them, for He Glorified and Exalted is He declares as such: 'Allah has increased the guidance of those who follow the right path, and given them their righteousness...' (Muhammad: 17). For those who have not sought guidance, Allah Glorified is He has left them without the guidance of assistance. This clarifies the meaning of Allah's words: '... If Allah leaves anyone to stray, you [Prophet] will never find the way for him.' (an-Nisa': 88)

Those, who do not follow the general guidance of adhering to the right path and, thus, turn down faith, Allah Glorified is He sends them astray, i.e. leaves them in their delusion and disbelief. Does Allah Glorified is He help those who originally reject Him and grant them His Guidance of Assistance? Of course, he does not. Having disbelieved in Allah Glorified is He are such people going to trust that Allah Glorified is He grants facilities and conveniences to His slaves? No, they are not going to trust that. You must know that the guidance of showing the right path is a general guidance for all people of every age. As for the guidance of assistance, it is solely for those who accept faith in Allah Glorified is He.You can say that the True Lord Glorified is He addresses man as follows: ‘you have believed in My General Guidance, so take My Guidance of Assistance’, or ‘you are worthy of My Assistance’, or ‘you will find easiness in all matters’. As for the one who disbelieves, Allah Glorified is He does not guide him.

Allah Glorified is He does not assist a disbeliever because assistance first requires an action on the part of the one being helped, and a disbeliever has not done what he is required to be granted this assistance. He has not believed, and so the final word is this: ‘...and Allah does not guide the disbelievers’ (al-Baqara: 264), and the true word is this: ‘…and Allah does not guide the defiantly disobedient people.’ (al-Ma‘ida: 108), and the true word is also this: ‘…and Allah does not guide the wrongdoing people.’ (Al-‘Imran: 86) These are the wrongdoing people who commit the greatest evil: attributing partners to Allah. The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says in response: ‘Luqman counselled his son, ‘My son, do not attribute any partners to Allah: attributing partners to Him is a terrible wrong!’ (Luqman: 13)

When the True Lord Glorified is He leaves them, He increases their misguidance and seals their hearts so that they do not know the path to Faith: ‘Why would Allah guide people who deny the Truth, after they have believed and acknowledged that the Messenger is true, and after they have been shown clear proof? Allah does not guide evildoers.’ (Al-‘Imran: 86)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came to them with signs, proving the sheer truthfulness of his Message, but they wronged themselves greatly and terribly by attributing partners to Allah Glorified is He. But was this verse revealed in regards to the people of the Book who had in their possession a description of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him along with signs and glad tidings of his coming? Or was it revealed on another occasion to the point that some people believed in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and then disbelieved in him?

In fact, the two groups are included here: the people of the Book who believed in the previous messengers, but did not believe in the Message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and those who believed in the Message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and then denied it, as during the time of the Messenger in the case of Ta'ma ibn Ubayriq, Ibn Al-Aslat and Al-Harith ibn Suwayd. They all announced their faith, went to Mecca and stayed there. One of them repented, so his brother obtained a pledge of protection for him from Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, while the others did not repent. This actually applies to both groups, and Allah's Glorified is He Glorious Words refer to the members of both: 'Why would Allah guide people who deny the Truth, after they have believed and acknowledged that the Messenger is true, and after they have been shown clear proof? Allah does not guide evildoers.' (Al-'Imran: 86)

The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He explains to us the punishment of these people with His Wise Words:

أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ جَزَآؤُهُمۡ أَنَّ عَلَيۡهِمۡ لَعۡنَةَ ٱللَّهِ وَٱلۡمَلَٰٓئِكَةِ وَٱلنَّاسِ أَجۡمَعِينَ ٨٧

Such people will be rewarded with rejection by God, by the angels, by all people [87] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 87)

'Curse' in this verse means deprivation of mercy. Allah Glorified is He knows every cursed man belonging to those people. Since they are deprived of the Mercy of Allah Glorified is He then the angels who believe in Allah Glorified is He and witness what man does not see repeat this curse. The believers among Allah's Creation and everyone do as well. The question is this: How could the people all together, the believers and the disbelievers curse them? How could the disbelievers, in particular, curse them? We know that when a disbeliever sees a person committing a sin, he both looks down upon and despises him.

Suppose that a disbeliever meets with a person who disobeys the religion and commits sins. Does this disbeliever not curse such a person? Actually he does because the disposition instilled by Allah Glorified is He in mankind rejects this and never approves it.

It is the Will of the True Lord Glorified is He to make them, as disbelievers, curse one another. We also find that everyone rejects them because they disbelieved Allah's (God's) Glorified is He religion after they had believed. This has led them to commit sins causing them to be rejected by everyone. Moreover, they are eternally cursed, as Allah Glorified and Exalted says:

خَٰلِدِينَ فِيهَا لَا يُخَفَّفُ عَنْهُمُ ٱلْعَذَابُ وَلَا هُمْ يُنظَرُونَ ﴿٨٨﴾

And so they will remain, with no relief or respite for their suffering [88] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 88)

'…with no relief... for their suffering.' (Al-'Imran: 88) means that the torment will remain always and forever. Some people might imagine that when a disbeliever enters Hell and is burnt in it, his affair will, thereupon, come to an end. No, this is not the case. One remembers one thing and ignores another; he forgets the True Lord's Words: 'We shall send those who reject Our revelations to the Fire. When their skins have been burned away, We shall replace them with new ones so that they will continue to feel the pain: Allah [God] is Mighty and Wise.' (an-Nisa': 56).

They will continue suffering by the Command of the True Lord Glorified is He forever and ever. Some may say that science has proven that man's feeling of pain as a result of whipping decreases after the first twenty lashes. These people forget that torment in the Hereafter is of another kind. Allah Glorified is He will create for the tormented person a new sensation so that he will feel the torment eternally. The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: '... with no relief or respite for their suffering.' (Al-'Imran: 88) This means that their torment is not questioned, for the True Lord Glorified is He does not even give them respite from such torment. Afterwards, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says:

إِلَّا ٱلَّذِينَ تَابُوا۟ مِنۢ بَعْدِ ذَٰلِكَ وَأَصْلَحُوا۟ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ غَفُورٌ رَّحِيمٌ ﴿٨٩﴾

Not so those who afterwards repent and mend their ways – God is most forgiving and merciful [89] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 89)

The True Lord Glorified is He is the Creator of all creatures and wants them to be as He wants them to be since they are the handiwork of Him. Allah Glorified is He loves both those who turn to Him and those who keep themselves clean. He Glorified is He has ordered His servants to sincerely repent to Him, faithfully, honestly, and with no setbacks. This repentance requires renouncement of sins, regret for what happened, determination never to return to repeating them and finally seeking the forgiveness of those you have wronged, if there are any.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him says regarding this, 'Allah, stretches out His Hand during the night so that the people may repent for the faults committed from dawn till dusk, and He stretches out His Hand during the day so that the people may repent for the faults committed from dusk to dawn. (He would accept repentance) before the sun rises in the west (before the Day of Resurrection).'(1)

This way, the True Lord Glorified is He lays down the conditions for His slaves' repentance so as to reform the universe, for had Allah Glorified is He not laid down repentance for the sinners, this would have meant that those who have been heedless of Allah's religion even for a single incidence, would have become, in their own view, lost, corrupted and guilty of committing sheer follies. It is as though Allah Glorified is He by encouraging man to repent from sins, provides an opportunity for sinners, who have wronged themselves, to return to Him, as well as bestowing mercy on the community by preventing the evils of these corrupt people. Thus, repentance is laid down for the good of the universe and the benefit of mankind so that they can enjoy Allah's Love. For this reason, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says: 'Not so those who afterwards repent and mend their ways– Allah [God] is Most Forgiving and Merciful.' (Al-'Imran: 89) Despite their previous disbelief, Allah Glorified is He by His Mercy, exempts them from this admonition since they still have a chance to repent. The meaning of 'aslaha' is to do what elevates something that is already good and righteous. Allah Glorified is He has not created anything in the universe that is fundamentally corrupt. Rather, corruption results from the misdeeds man commits by his free will. Repentance entails that one increases righteousness in the universe, which, in turn, guarantees that he would not corrupt anything that is already good and righteous. Since repentance means to elevate something that is already good, it necessarily includes not damaging or harming what is good and righteous.

(1) Narrated by Muslim: good and authentic Hadith

Perhaps those who have wronged themselves at a moment of heedlessness and decrease of faith would remember the sin or misdeed they have committed with remorse and be determined to do good deeds with diligence and sincerity; so Allah Glorified is He will blot out their previous sins by virtue of their latter good deeds.

For this reason, many of those who strive with zeal and perseverance in the cause of goodness and reformation may have previously wronged themselves in some way, so they try to make amends for their past by doing good deeds in many different ways. It is as though Allah Glorified is He were saying to each of them, 'You have committed something that I have forbidden, and I want to guide you to what I have ordained you to do so as to compensate for that.' Allah, the True God Glorified is He thus, turns an individual's past sins into a compelling motivation that constantly picks at their conscience and directs them to diligently do good, so they would generously give charity to the poor so as to undo their past. Perhaps those who do good without sufficient earnestness or zeal do not have any powerful incentive in their lives.

However, those who have constantly trespassed the limits of Allah Glorified is He are the ones continually motivated by this fierce power so that when any of you sees a person who has transgressed against himself by doing sins, prays to Allah Glorified is He to guide them to the Straight Path. Know with certainty that Allah Glorified is He will ease the means for him to do good because no one can ever cause the universe to deviate from the laws of the Creator. This applies to those whom Allah Glorified is He describes in the Noble Quran, by saying: 'Not so those who afterwards repent and aslahu…' (Al-'Imran: 89). 'Aslahu' means to do righteous deeds with earnestness and zeal, motivated by the kindled remorse constantly felt over previous transgressions so that always struggling to do righteous deeds, would lead to eliminate previous deviations.

Next, Allah, the True God Glorified is He says:

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ بَعْدَ إِيمَـٰنِهِمْ ثُمَّ ٱزْدَادُوا۟ كُفْرًا لَّن تُقْبَلَ
تَوْبَتُهُمْ وَأُو۟لَـٰٓئِكَ هُمُ ٱلضَّآلُّونَ ﴿٩٠﴾

[although] the repentance of those who, having believed, then increase in their disbelief, will not be accepted. They are the ones who have gone [far] astray [90] (The Quran, Al-’Imran: 90)

This verse of the Noble Quran talks about those who not only disbelieve after having believed, but also increase in disbelief. The repentance of such people will not be accepted, and they are truly astray. This verse follows, contrasting the previous one: It talks about those who do not repent in comparison with those who do. But how does a disbeliever increase in disbelief? He not only disbelieves in Allah, but also forms an obstacle for other people to believe. He is not content with his own failure; rather, he attempts to spread disbelief among others. This is an increase in disbelief. [We seek refuge with Allah from it!]This verse has been revealed to tell about some of the Jews who had believed in the signs that foretold the advent of Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. Then when Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) was sent by Allah Glorified is He they denied his Message, and when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent as a Messenger, their denial of the Truth was further increased.

They first disbelieved in ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him and then increased in their disbelief when they denied the Message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and claimed they were the children and beloved, or chosen people of Allah Glorified is He. These are not among those who have repented. They may have claimed their repentance with their tongues, but their hearts were not sincere, and ‘deliberately violating repentance in disrespecting Allah. May Allah protect us all from such a calamity!

Next, Allah, the True God Glorified is He says:

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ وَمَاتُواْ وَهُمۡ كُفَّارٞ فَلَن يُقۡبَلَ مِنۡ أَحَدِهِم مِّلۡءُ ٱلۡأَرۡضِ
ذَهَبٗا وَلَوِ ٱفۡتَدَىٰ بِهِۦٓۗ أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ لَهُمۡ عَذَابٌ أَلِيمٞ وَمَا لَهُم مِّن نَّٰصِرِينَ ٩١

Those who disbelieve and die disbelievers will not be saved even if they offer enough gold to fill the entire earth. Agonizing torment is in store for them, and there will be no one to help them [91] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 91)

They disbelieved, and Allah Glorified is He did not decree that they should repent, so they died as disbelievers. Allah Glorified is He explains to us the end results of their deeds in life, as well as their destiny in the Hereafter. They are punished for the misdeeds they have committed in the worldly life since they were given free will to choose between good and bad; therefore, they are deprived of this privilege of a good life in the Hereafter and have no free will to choose their destiny. Scholars of the Quran have debated a point in this verse: Does '…enough gold to fill the entire earth…' (Al-'Imran: 91) figuratively mean that they have spent in their lives the equivalent of an earth-full of gold? We can say concerning this that no matter how much they spend on good causes in this life, they do not benefit from their spending since Allah has erased all their deeds due to their disbelief.

Suppose a disbeliever dies without repenting to Allah Glorified is He and had spent the equivalent of an earth-full of gold for a good cause. We tell them that this spending will bring a disbeliever no fruits in the Hereafter, for they have committed the greatest treason against Allah Glorified is He: disbelief in Him combined with denial of the Truth He has sent. As long as he does not believe in Allah Glorified is He it means he had spent that money for the sake of people who are definitely in no position to reward him for these good deeds in the Hereafter. His intention had not been directed to Allah when he did his good deeds, so he receives no reward from Him. Whoever does a deed should seek reward from whomever they have done it for. Was Allah Glorified is He in the mind of that disbeliever when he did a given good deed? No, because he died, while still disbelieving, so even if he spends an earth-full of gold, it will not be accepted from him.

People are in his mind when doing a given good deed, and they already have given him the praise they think he is worthy of. He could be an inventor, a philanthropist or whatever beneficial position, and he will receive his reward from mankind. Concerning people like this, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'You did that so that such-and-such would be said (in praise of you), and indeed it was said.'

It is as though Allah Glorified is He were saying to him, 'I was not in your mind when you did that good, so why do you ask Me for a reward in the Hereafter? It did not cross your mind that all the dominion is Mine.' He the Exalted and Almighty, says in the Quran: 'The Day when they will come out with nothing about them will be concealed from Allah. "Who has control today?" Allah, the One, the All-Powerful!' (Ghafir: 16)

Some people say that they have generously enriched the world and added to people's welfare with countless discoveries and innovations with which they have reduced humanity's pains and suffering; so how is it that they will have no reward in the Hereafter?!' To them, I reply that, indeed, they have done much for humanity, but humanity has given them their due reward already. They have been eulogized and commemorated in history. Statues, records, celebrations, and prizes have been dedicated to them. They have worked for the sake of people, and people have rewarded them, so no injustice has been done to them. The intention behind their deeds was not directed to Allah Who vividly depicts their situation in The Quran, saying: 'But the deeds of those who disbelieve are like a mirage in a desert: the thirsty person thinks there will be water, but when he gets there, he finds only Allah, who pays him his account in full–Allah is swift in reckoning!' (an-Nur: 39)

A mirage is seen from afar in the form of a water hole in the eyes of a thirsty desert traveller; in actuality, it is only an optical phenomenon formed by light rays. A traveller keeps moving towards the imagined water and pins desperate hopes on reaching it, but when he arrives, he finds nothing and is surprised to find that only Allah Glorified is He is there. Remorse strikes him, and he receives his recompense. Even if he spends an earth-full of gold in good deeds, it will not be accepted from him, nor will Allah Glorified is He accept from him an earth-full of gold to ransom himself in the Hereafter, if he has such a ransom at all. Even if he has an earth-full of gold to ransom himself in the Hereafter, will Allah Glorified is He accept it from him? No, and in fact, he will not even have the gold, for in the Hereafter, he will have nothing, not even choice. Allah Glorified is He says in the Quran: '…Who has control today?" Allah, the One, the All-Powerful!' (Ghafir: 16)

Allah Glorified is He also says in the Quran: 'If the evildoers possessed the earth's assets twice over, they would offer them to ransom themselves from the terrible suffering on the Day of Resurrection; God will show them something they had not reckoned.' (az-Zumar: 47)

'... Agonizing torment is in store for them, and there will be no one to help them.' (Al-'Imran: 91) These people will face an agonizing torment because every action derives its power from the power of him who performs it. When torment is from Allah Glorified is He Who has Omnipotent Power and Might, this torment will be insufferable. The evildoer will find no one who can spare him this torment. For he will have no one to help him or intercede for him; no one will make the following offer: 'So-and-so is suffering severe torment, let us go and help him.' No help will be offered by anyone.

After this, Allah, the True God Glorified is He says:

لَن تَنَالُوا۟ ٱلْبِرَّ حَتَّىٰ تُنفِقُوا۟ مِمَّا تُحِبُّونَ ۚ وَمَا تُنفِقُوا۟ مِن شَىْءٍ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ بِهِۦ عَلِيمٌ ﴿٩٢﴾

None of you [believers] will attain true piety unless you give out of what you cherish: whatever you give, God knows about it very well [92] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 92)

The Arabic stem formed from the letters 'b-r-r' denotes 'ampleness', 'vastness', etc. 'Barr' may mean 'ample', 'extensive', etc., or it may refer to the spacious land on earth in contrast to the sea. Someone might say that'the sea is wider than land (barr) because the size of the continents is far smaller than the waters running through or separating them!' We can reply to someone who might say this that your movements, however, are far more expansive on land than they are at sea; a ship or even a log is required, in most cases, to move through the sea, which is a form of constraint. As for land, on the contrary, one can walk, ride, or run, so one's scope of movement on land is wider than at sea.

The Arabic word 'berr' mentioned in the verse may mean 'true piety', 'devotion', or 'Paradise'. Thus, they are all interrelated since they all denote 'ampleness'. True piety and devotion lead one to attain the ample Mercy and reward of Allah Glorified is He and paradise is the fruit to be reaped as a result. They are all interrelated because they all denote the meaning of 'ampleness'; worship and piety constitute the cause for attaining such ampleness, and Paradise is the outcome. Someone might ask why Allah speaks about spending after speaking about the suffering of the disbelievers. The answer to this is that when Allah, the True God Glorified is He speaks about those who will be grievously tormented because they disbelieved and died as disbelievers and that they will have no help in the Hereafter, the following contrast comes to mind: those who believe, do good deeds and die as believers,will be spared such grievous suffering and granted the opposite of it which is delight, and they will find abundant help and reward unlike the disbelievers who will find no one to help them. Believers will receive their reward from Allah Glorified is He for their true piety (berr); 'berr' is a word that denotes every form of goodness, and when it is mentioned generally, it refers to the reward Allah Glorified is He grants believers for such goodness, the ultimate manifestation of which is paradise.

How Allah Glorified is He deals with believers, is thus presented in contrast with His way of dealing with disbelievers. The Quran is the Miraculous Speech of Allah and when He the Exalted addresses His creatures, who are entrusted with delivering and committing to His Message, He addresses the human faculties which He has created; so this Speech must enrich and satisfy those faculties. If speech is not addressed by the Creator of those faculties, there may not be tuning between the speech and such faculties. However, since these are the Words of Allah (the Creator), they are necessarily in harmony with the nature of these faculties.

Human nature encompasses several faculties which are linked together precisely; so it is possible when addressing the faculty of hearing that the sentimental faculties can be stirred and moved. Were speech from other than the Creator Who has Omnipotent Knowledge of such faculties, it would not be able to influence the faculty of hearing, while also agreeing with and affecting sentimental faculties in such a way that makes human nature capable of grasping meanings and associating them with each other. ‘Association of meanings’ is a unique quality true of human beings. It is the process through which one grasps a particular meaning that, in turn, brings to the mind other meanings linked to it. For example, when you see a person you know, this process of ‘association’ brings memories to your mind, makes you recall your relationship with him, and retrieves your mental image of his family, friends, acquaintances, etc. All what has passed between you and him along with the events you have witnessed together flash in your mind upon seeing him, and this is what we call ‘association of meanings’, the process of one meaning invoking another.

When Allah the Glorious and Exalted addresses mankind, He addresses every quality within their disposition, all at the same time so that one quality will not be nourished at the expense of another. The Speech of Allah Glorified is He has come in its miraculous way to completely satisfy all the qualities human nature is comprised of. For example, The True Lord Glorified is He has commanded that idolaters should be forbidden from circulating the Ka’ba in the Sacred Mosque of Mecca. Before that divine prohibition, idolaters used to circulate the Ka’ba. They came from far and wide to witness the season of pilgrimage; they brought their money along to spend it on the people of Mecca and bought everything they needed from there. The season of pilgrimage was also an economic season. When Allah Glorified is He decreed the prohibition of idolaters from performing pilgrimage to the Sacred Mosque of Mecca, He addressed the Muslims who lived then in Mecca so they would prevent idolaters from circulating the Ka’ba. He the Exalted and All Knowing knew the abilities He has created and that the prohibition would provoke one of those abilities, so He says in the Quran: ‘Believers, those who ascribe partners to God are truly unclean: do not let them come near the Sacred Mosque after this year...’ (at-Tawba: 28).

When this command was revealed, it inevitably provoked certain qualities in the natural disposition of the human soul; Allah knew, through His Eternal, Omnipotent Knowledge that the natural human instinct that craves economic benefit would be kindled in the people of Mecca upon hearing this command, and that this would induce some of the Muslims who lived then in Mecca to say, ‘If we stop idolaters who come to us with their money to buy our goods, the economic season, on which we depend for sustenance throughout the year, would recede, and then what will we do?!’ Allah Glorified is He knew that prohibition of idolaters from approaching the Sacred Mosque of Mecca would inevitably awaken this disposition of the human soul that cares about material benefit, so He the Exalted says directly afterward: ‘…And should you fear poverty, then [know that] in time Allah will enrich you out of His Bounty, if He so wills: for, verily, Allah [God] is All Knowing, Wise!’ (at-Tawba: 28)

Allah Glorified is He knows that poverty would be a concern, and concerning this, the magnificence of His Speech is clearly manifested. When a person speaks, he may well forget to stress some ideas of importance, which may cause confusion, uproar, and chaos to erupt among his addressees. The True High Lord, however, says: ‘...those who ascribe partners to God are truly unclean: do not let them come near the Sacred Mosque after this year...’ (at-Tawba: 28). Then directly comes reassurance: ‘….And should you fear poverty, then [know that] in time Allah will enrich you out of His Bounty…’ (at-Tawba: 28), and indeed He did. Allah *Glorified is He*provided the people of the Sacred Mosque with produce. It was as if He were saying, ‘Do not think this provision has come on its own; rather, it is, truly, provision from Us’, a meaning which He confirms in His Words: ‘They say, ‘If we were to follow guidance with you (Prophet), we would be swept from our land.’ Have We not established for them a secure sanctuary where every kind of produce is brought, as a provision from Us? But most of them do not comprehend.’ (al-Qasas: 57).

No one has the choice to offer sustenance to the people of the Sacred Mosque or begrudge them of it. Rather, provision is brought to them by the Will and Bounty of Allah Glorified is He as a reassurance to the soul’s inclination to seek material benefit. Allah the Exalted gives economic security for which life necessitates. If we closely examine the verse of The Quran, we find that they are arranged in context in such a way where the idea in each verse is associated with those represented in the preceding and following verses. This perfect arrangement of the Quranic context aims at satisfying all the qualities comprising the natural human disposition so that nothing of what is revealed falls short of generating such satisfaction. Let us consider an example of this when Allah Glorified is He says: '…and they say to themselves, 'Why does not Allah chastise us for what we are saying?' Hell shall be their allotted portion: they shall [indeed] enter it – and how vile a journey's end!' (al-Mujadala: 8)

The idolaters did not disclose what they had in mind to anyone, but they said it within themselves. However, Allah, the True God, the Most High and All-Knowing, reveals their secrets and also what they conceal. He is the One Who knows all the secrets of His servants and their natural dispositions He has created within them. Ponder these words of Allah the Exalted: 'None of you [believers] will attain berr [true piety, or Paradise] unless you give out of what you cherish: Whatever you give, Allah knows about it very well.' (Al-'Imran: 92) This verse encourages the believers to give generously, and, for a reason, it follows another verse declaring that there is a form of spending Allah will not accept: 'Those who disbelieve and die disbelievers will not be saved even if they offer enough gold to fill the entire earth. Agonizing torment is in store for them, and there will be no one to help them.' (Al-'Imran: 91)

When people realize that there is a kind of charity that Allah Glorified is He rejects, association of ideas in the human mind would make them wonder what, then, is the charity He accepts. This has made it necessary to make the following declaration: 'None of you [believers] will attain berr [true piety or Paradise] unless you give out of what you cherish….' (Al-'Imran: 92) Just as Allah Glorified is He warns against the kind of charity He rejects, He also tells us of the kind He accepts. Therefore, we see that the verse that encourages spending is in har with the one before it. 'None of you [believers] will attain berr [true piety or Paradise] unless you give out of what you cherish….' (Al-'Imran: 92) Some may wonder why one should spend of what he prefers in order to attain berr (true piety/ Paradise).' As a matter of fact, the human soul is naturally inclined to greed; that is why Allah says in the Noble Quran: 'Remain, then, conscious of Allah as best you can, and listen [to Him], and pay heed. And spend in charity for the good of your own selves: for such as from their own covetousness are saved – it is they that shall attain to a happy state!' (at-Taghabun: 16)

Human greed stems from insecurity; man fears strength would turn into weakness, so he craves material possessions to secure himself against such a perceived weakness, which makes him reluctant to give. From this, the notions of possession and property arose, for they did not exist at the dawn of mankind creation; instead they started when resources became scarcer than needs. If resources accommodate needs, there will be no reason to worry about possible weakness, inability, or destitution.

Suppose a man bought a large box of oranges and took it home. His children would be allowed to indulge themselves. However, if there were not that many oranges, his wife would make sure to divide them between the children. She would not let every child get what satisfies his desire at the expense of the others.

When man was first brought on earth, land and fruits were right at man's disposal to have of them as much as he liked. When opportunities grew gradually fewer in the face of needs, due to the scarcity of resources, there emerged a desire for appropriation and possession. In this regard, Allah Glorified is He draws our attention to an important point: If you look at spending in its true light, you will find that you are only a worker for Allah and one for whom He guides to do good deeds so as to set things aright. The meaning of 'worker' is that you work in the cause of Allah Glorified is He using what He has endowed you with: a mind to plan with, strength to employ with diligence and materials to use. So what do you actually possess?

The dominion is only Allah's; everything is His, and you are only a worker who possesses nothing. Since this is the case, O servant of Allah, do your duty to Him as you should. Allah is in no need for whatever you give, for He is the Richest of the rich. Instead, fulfill your duty to Him by helping your weaker brothers who are unable to produce what they need. Do not think Allah Glorified is He wants you to spend out of what you cherish because He wants to begrudge you by asking you to give charity. Rather, when He asks you to help your poorer brother, while you are capable of it, He is only reassuring you that, if you were to become weak or poor yourself, He takes out of the possessions of the able to satisfy your need. This is reassurance from Allah Glorified is He.

Allah Glorified is He wants to motivate us to spend generously and lovingly on others, but perhaps one may feel inclined to spend out of what he does not cherish, so he would give worn-out clothes or shoes that are no longer fit to use to a poorer person. However, Allah Glorified is He commands us to spend out of what we cherish. See how the Companions of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him reacted when they heard this verse: 'None of you [believers] will attain berr [true piety or Paradise] unless you give out of what you cherish...' (Al-'Imran: 92). When Abu Talha Allah be pleased with him heard this, he said, 'O, Messenger of Allah, the most beloved of my possessions to me is Bayruha' (a tract of land with plantation, and I am giving it to Allah's cause.' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied, 'Then divide it among your relatives.' So, he did. Zayd ibn Haritha Allah be pleased with him heard this noble verse, and he had a horse named 'Sabal' that he loved. So he said, 'O, Messenger of Allah, you know how I love my horse, so I am giving it to Allah's cause.' Prophet Muhammad peace be upon him took it from him and brought Usama ibn Zayd Allah be pleased with him to mount it. So, Zayd said, 'I felt something in my soul.' When he said this, he meant that he felt sadness. Then, he said, 'O, Messenger of Allah, I had meant to give this horse to Allah's cause, and you give it to my son to ride!' Hence, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him told Zayd, 'Indeed, Allah has accepted it from you!'

The Companion Abu Dharr Allah be pleased with him gave a no less admirable reaction to the aforementioned verse. He had some she-camels and a stud that helped them to produce offspring. That stud was the dearest to him among his possessions. A guest came to Abu Dharr, and the latter said to him, 'I am busy, so go to my camels, and choose the finest one to slaughter for your reception.' The guest went out and returned with an emaciated she-camel. When Abu Dharr saw it, he said, 'Brother, I told you to bring the finest camel!' The guest said, 'O Abu Dharr, I saw that the finest was a stud, and I thought of the day when you would need it.' Abu Dharr replied, 'The day when I need it is the day when I am placed in my grave!'

The great Companion, Abu Dharr, realized that the day a person is put in his grave is the most important day worthy of preparing for.

The Companion 'Abdullah ibn 'Umar Allah be pleased with him had a beautiful slave-girl from Persia, whom he loved. When he heard the aforementioned verse, he said, ‘Nothing in my possession is more beloved to me than this slave-girl.’ So, he freed her. He could have married her afterward, but he said, ‘If I did not fear it would diminish my reward [from Allah] for freeing her, I would marry her.’ The Companion Abu Dharr Allah be pleased with him has taught us an invaluable lesson concerning the issue of spending, a lesson that shows his understanding of human psychology. He said, ‘Wealth belongs to three partners: fate, which does not ask your permission before afflicting you with destruction and death.’ When Allah Glorified is He sends His Decree, He asks no one’s permission before doing as He wills with his wealth, so riches may be destroyed or dear ones may pass away, and one would not be able to stop it. So the first partner that shares one’s wealth is fate.

As for the second partner, Abu Dharr said, ‘It is your inheritor who awaits the day when you lay down your head (die) then takes control of your wealth.’ By death, one is deprived of everything he had possessed in this world as he stops being an inhabitant of it. It is as if an inheritor said to himself, ‘Let me enjoy what is left for me!’ This is the second partner in one’s wealth.

Abu Dharr Allah be pleased with him then clarified the third partner to which wealth belongs: ‘The third partner is you; so if you can avoid being the weakest of the three, then do so.’ Do not let fate or inheritors defeat you in regards to your wealth. Unless you spend out of your wealth generously for Allah’s cause, the other partners will outdo you!

So did the Companions of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him react to the verse when it was revealed. They competed in giving their most beloved possessions to others, and the reward of their doing was Paradise. They grasped well the meaning of the Words of Allah Glorified is He: ‘None of you [believers] will attain berr unless you give out of what you cherish...’ (Al-‘Imran: 92). ‘Berr’ can mean paradise, as a result of one's obedience to Allah, piety, expansive blessing or an increase of strength, which are all interrelated meanings denoting ‘ampleness’. Allah Glorified is He says in a Divine Hadith: ‘People requited doers of good deeds in worldly life with goodness, and today I requite them with Paradise.’

The True Lord Glorified is He grants berr [piety/paradise] as a reward for giving charity, and He knows whether you have spent out of what you truly cherish or have chosen to give away something inferior you no longer value. Beware, O, believer, of cheating yourself in this matter, for He Who promises piety and paradise as a reward for spending out of what you cherish knows fully well the secrets of the soul and what you conceal. Thus, He Glorified is He says: '…Whatever you give, Allah knows about it very well.' (Al-'Imran: 92) Allah has All-Encompassing Knowledge; He knows your real intentions and in what manner you have given charity.

Allah the Exalted has thus clarified the kind of spending He rejects, even if it were an earth-full of gold and the kind He accepts and grants paradise as a reward for. This helps us to clearly see the meaning of both through contrast. What is the need for this clarification? Some of the people of the Book denied the Message revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him at the onset of his call. They denied the glad tidings that foretold his prophethood eventhough such glad tidings and the attributes of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him are stated in the Books sent down to them: the Torah and the Gospel. They rejected and denied his Message eventhough they had previously believed and hoped in this good news that the disbelievers might embrace faith: '... they had been praying for victory against the disbelievers, even when there came to them something they knew [to be true], they disbelieved in it...' (al-Baqara: 89).

Allah Glorified is He has chosen to disclose their ill will and what they had done to the Torah though they believed it to be their scripture. They had distorted some of the Words of Allah Glorified is He in the Torah, imagining that such distortion would remain secret from the rest of the world. Allah Glorified is He disclosed their falsehood through events that were beyond their expectations in order that it would clearly understand that they had corrupted the Torah. We have mentioned before the woman from Khaybar who committed fornication and whom the leaders of the Jews wished to lessen her punishment, for the punishment prescribed for fornication in the Torah is stoning. Those leaders said, 'Let us go to Muhammad, for perhaps he has some lighter punishment.' When they went to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him he told them stoning was the prescribed punishment. They said, 'No, you are not just in your judgment.' Hence, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him told them to seek judgment from the Torah that they held to be their book. The Torah was brought forth, and the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him asked them to start reciting. When they reached the verse of stoning, they wanted to skip it, so Ibn Salam Allah be pleased with him said, 'O, Messenger of Allah, they have skipped the verse where stoning is mentioned!'

This made everyone realise that the leaders of the Jews wanted to disregard and deny one of rulings Allah has prescribed in their book, just as they erased the description of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him described in it by leaving no trace of it. Allah Glorified is He however, made them forget to erase other parts of the Truth so that they would serve as a proof of the truthfulness of the Message revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him On another occasion, when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him declared that the consumption of the milk and meat of camels is permissible, they said those two have been forbidden since the days of Ibrahim (Abraham) and even before him, during the days of Nuh (Noah). Therefore, they could not accept their lawfulness eventhough Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him explained to them that Allah Glorified is He has allowed their consumption.

They should have understood that even if the consumption of the milk and meat of camels had been forbidden before, a Messenger was then sent by Allah Glorified is He with a legislation that abrogated what came before it. However, camel meat and milk had not actually been forbidden, and for this reason, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ordered that the Torah should be consulted. This event is, in and of itself, magnificent evidence that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him received revelations from Allah Glorified is He for he would not have ordered that the Torah be consulted unless he was confident that it would bring forth a ruling that would support what he was saying. This was despite the fact that he could neither read nor write! The Torah was brought forth, and a statement was found in it that confirmed what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said. Allah reveals this fact in The Quran, saying:

كُلُّ ٱلطَّعَامِ كَانَ حِلًّا لِّبَنِىٓ إِسْرَٰٓءِيلَ إِلَّا مَا حَرَّمَ إِسْرَٰٓءِيلُ عَلَىٰ نَفْسِهِۦ مِن
قَبْلِ أَن تُنَزَّلَ ٱلتَّوْرَىٰةُ ۗ قُلْ فَأْتُوا۟ بِٱلتَّوْرَىٰةِ فَٱتْلُوهَآ إِن كُنتُمْ صَٰدِقِينَ ﴿٩٣﴾

Except for what Israel made unlawful for himself, all food was lawful to the Children of Israel before the Torah was revealed. Say, ‘Bring the Torah and read out
[the relevant passage] if you are telling the truth [93]
(The Quran, Al-’Imran: 93)

When Allah’s Prophet Ya’qub (Jacob/Israel) peace be upon him forbade consuming certain foods for himself eventhough he was free to do so. Perhaps he did that so as to fulfill a religious oath, or as a form of medical treatment or as a way of practising asceticism, but Allah Glorified is He did not forbid him from such a thing. The pretext the Jews sought, as a proof of their claim, was concerning only Prophet Ya’qub's case which he applied only to himself. Allah says: ‘All food was lawful to the Children of Israel except what Israel made unlawful for himself…’ So why do you claim that the milk and meat of camels were forbidden?

They shamefully plotted this falsehood to conceal their wrongdoing and spare themselves disgrace. Nevertheless, Allah discloses their disgrace in the Noble Quran: ‘And unto those who are Jews, We forbade every (animal) with undivided hoof, and We forbade them the fat of the ox and the sheep except what adheres to their backs or their entrails, or is mixed up with a bone. Thus, We recompensed them for their rebellion [committing crimes like murdering the Prophets and eating of Riba (usury)]. And verily, We are Truthful.’ (al-An‘am: 146)

So some things, like the foods listed in the aforementioned verse, were made unlawful for the Jews because of their wrongdoing, thus, they were being punished for their sins as the noble verse points out. The verse clearly says all animals with feet that included undivided hooves (like camels, ostriches, geese and ducks), except for the fats on their backs, the fats contained in their entrails and the fats that mix with their bones. That prohibition was not made to protect the prohibited animals from harm; rather, it was their punishment for wronging themselves and transgressing against others.

I say this so there would be no chance for whoever desires to trespass the laws set by Allah Glorified is He to say this: 'What is the harm that requires such-and such to be forbidden?!' Posing such a question reflects a desire to trespass the limits set by Allah Glorified is He. Prohibition might be legislated for the purpose of discipline or chastisement. On our human level [and, undoubtedly, Allah's is the Highest Description; nothing is comparable to Him], one may forbid his child from pocket money or candy to punish him for disobeying his mother. Likewise, the aforementioned prohibition was recompense for the Jews due to their evildoing, as Almighty Allah says in the Quran: 'For the wrongdoings done by the Jews, We forbade them certain good things that had been permitted to them before: for having frequently debarred others from Allah's path; for taking usury when they had been forbidden to do so; and for wrongfully devouring other people's property. For those of them that reject the truth, we have prepared an agonizing torment.' (an-Nisa': 160-161).

This is the recompense that Allah Glorified is He has decreed for them.

It is as if divine legislation is laid down as a warning to wrongdoers who deviate from the Path of Allah Glorified is He to think twice about the reason for which they commit the transgression.

Why do they commit injustice? Why do they eat riba (usury)? Why do they hinder people from the way to Allah Glorified is He? Why do they usurp the wealth of others? Wrongdoers commit the likes of these in order to gain enjoyments of which they have no right to. Hence, the divine legislation forbids them from lawful enjoyments to chastise them for craving unlawful ones.

For example, it is prescribed that a murderer is denied inheritance of the one he has murdered since he has murdered him to hasten a privilege Allah Glorified is He has delayed for him, namely, receipt of his inheritance, which is why he committed murder. Thus, the divine law withholds from him inheritance, the very privilege he sought to hasten by sinning.

It is as though the Legislator said to him: 'Since you harboured evil intention, you are deprived from inheritance.' This ruling guarantees protection of anyone who possesses wealth, or else they would face the threat of their inheritors' attempts to murder them so that their wealth would be transferred to them. The Legislator addresses them by saying, ‘No! There will be no inheritance for them. They have committed various forms of transgression: denying the Truth, blocking off people's way to Allah Glorified is He accepting riba (usury) and wrongfully consuming the property of others. The more they craved gains that were not their right, the more Allah forbade them from things that were previously lawful for them.

The Jews at the time of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him absolutely did not want such things to be known about them, so they said, ‘This food was prohibited for the children of Israel.’ However, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him then found out that these foods were permitted in the Torah, and thus he exposed what they tried to conceal not causing them to be disgraced eventhough they were trying to avoid that.

Why does this verse follow these words of Allah Glorified is He: ‘None of you [believers] will attain berr [true piety/ Paradise] unless you give out of what you cherish...’? (Al-‘Imran: 92). We know that this verse follows the one that describes the kind of spending Allah Glorified is He does not accept. Let us review what we mentioned earlier about the association of meanings in the human mind. Within the human disposition, when one quality is stimulated, it influences other qualities. When the True Lord says: ‘All food was lawful to the Children of Israel...’ (Al-‘Imran: 93), those who hear this will react in different ways. A satiated person may not pay full attention to this point; a person who has little to satisfy his hunger may be provoked to wish for other kinds of food, and he who barely has any food will long to know what food is permissible and what is not.

Therefore, before stating the rulings of what is permissible and forbidden, the ruling would stimulate a hungry person’s desire for food and cause sadness over its scarcity; Allah Glorified is He first encourages the able to give out of what they have. For this reason, before Allah the Exalted and Almighty, mentions food so as not to trigger the poor's desire for it, He revealed to His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him the followng: ‘None of you [believers] will attain berr [true piety/Paradise] unless you give out of what you cherish...’ (Al-‘Imran: 92). Thus, Allah Exalted is He first encourages the wealthy to give generously before revealing the ruling that would incite sorrows of the destitute. This way, the balance, on which basis Allah Glorified is He has created the universe, can be struck.

He is the Lord Who manages the affairs of His universe, and never does He forget anything. '...My Lord does not stray, nor does He forget.' (Ta Ha: 52) His Omnipotent Knowledge encompasses all things, and He is the All-Knowing, Almighty Creator. He does not remember some of His creation and forget some; rather, He makes some poor and some rich for a reason.

Allah has made some people poor to be a reminder and a lesson to the rich, but He has not abandoned them. Poverty reminds every person that the ability to accumulate wealth is nothing but temporary. A person who is now able to earn may become incapable of it at any given time, and the strong may turn weak. When the strong and the able learn this lesson, they will be encouraged to give generously to others; and, in turn, Allah Glorified is He will be there for them if they become weak and will send them help through the strong. Therefore, it is for the good of the able to help the needy as Allah Glorified is He commands them, for if they become the needy party, those who are able will help them and relieve their distress.

As we have learnt, this verse of the Quran: 'None of you [believers] will attain berr [true piety/Paradise] unless you give out of what you cherish...' (Al-'Imran: 92) serves the purpose of its preceding verse which tells that Allah Glorified is He will not accept charity given by any disbeliever even if it amounts to an earth-full of gold. Since they disbelieve in Allah Glorified is He, their deed will be rendered futile, and they will reap no fruit from it.

After elucidating this point, Allah Glorified is He clarifies the kind of spending that will not be in vain. Then, He discloses the falsehood of the Jews by unveiling a ruling stated in the Torah, which they had lied about. Since that ruling is also related to food, Allah Glorified is He knew it would rouse the natural desire for this worldly pleasure in the souls of the poor. Reactions of the rich and poor to such an issue will not be the same. To prevent poverty from kindling the longing of the poor for what they miss and afflicting them with distress, Allah Glorified is He first softens the heart of the rich by encouraging them to give generously to the poor and prevent their feelings of distress: 'None of you [believers] will attain berr [true piety/ Paradise] unless you give out of what you cherish. Whatever you give, Allah knows about it very well.' (Al-'Imran: 92) Then, Allah Glorified is He says: 'All food was lawful to the Children of Israel, except what Israel made unlawful for himself before the Taurat (Torah) was revealed. Say (O Muhammad...): "Bring here the Taurat (Torah) and recite it, if you are truthful."' (Al-'Imran: 93)

The Arabic word for 'lawful' used in the aforementioned verse is 'hel' which is a noun stem that has no plural in the Arabic language; so it does not take the plural form even if it functions as a modifier of a plural noun, as in this verse of the Noble Quran: 'O, you who have attained to faith! Whenever believing women come unto you, forsaking the domain of evil, examine them, [although only] Allah is fully aware of their faith; and if you have thus ascertained that they are believers, do not send them back to the deniers of the truth, [since] they are not [any longer] hel (lawful) to their disbelieving husbands, and they are not [any longer] hel (lawful) for them...' (al-Mumtahana: 10).

In this verse, the singular word 'hel' is used as a modifier for 'they', the plural pronoun referring to a group of women. In reference to the main verse, the True Lord says: 'All food was lawful to the Children of Israel, except what Israel made unlawful for himself...' (Al-'Imran: 93), which means Prophet Ya'qub (Israel) forbade certain foods for himself, while he was free to eat them.Perhaps, he forbade these foods for himself, and Allah sanctioned that, due to the fact that when a person vows something that Allah Glorified is He has not enjoined on him, he has thus made himself bound before Allah to fulfill that vow.

The time when Prophet Ya'qub (Israel/ Jacob) forbade these certain foods for himself was '…before the Taurat (Torah) was revealed…' (Al-'Imran: 93). This proves that this prohibition was not from Allah Glorified is He. This is why Allah Glorified is He commands His Noble Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to address the children of Israel: '…Say (O Muhammad...): "Bring here the Taurat (Torah) and recite it, if you are truthful."' (Al-'Imran: 93) Their falsehood was exposed, and they knew that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him knew that the text would confirm his veracity was in the Torah. Therefore, the Jews did not bring forth the Torah; they knew it contained a clear, indisputable text confirming what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said. Since they did not bring forth the Torah to resolve the argument, this was clear evidence of their untruthfulness. Allah Glorified is He says in the following verse:

فَمَنِ ٱفْتَرَىٰ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ ٱلْكَذِبَ مِنۢ بَعْدِ ذَٰلِكَ فَأُو۟لَٰٓئِكَ هُمُ ٱلظَّٰلِمُونَ ﴿٩٤﴾

Those who persist in making up lies and attributing them to God after this are the wrongdoers [94] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 94)

This statement contains a clear warning that no one should make up anything about Allah Glorified is He that He did not reveal to any of His Messengers or in any of His Books. Whoever invents lies about Allah does not wrong anyone but himself. Allah then says:

قُلْ صَدَقَ ٱللَّهُ ۗ فَٱتَّبِعُوا۟ مِلَّةَ إِبْرَٰهِيمَ حَنِيفًا وَمَا كَانَ مِنَ ٱلْمُشْرِكِينَ ﴿٩٥﴾

[Prophet], say, 'God speaks the truth, so follow
Abraham's religion: he had true faith and he was never an idolater' [95] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 95)

Allah Glorified is He commands Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to say: '(Prophet), say, "Allah speaks the truth, so follow Ibrahim's (Abraham's) religion: he had true faith..."' (Al-'Imran: 95).

We know that the religion of Ibrahim (Abraham) is that which first gave the name of 'Muslim' (one who surrenders to Allah) to all those who believe in Allah Glorified is He. Allah's command for us to follow the religion of Ibrahim (Abraham) elucidates that the essence of faith is one with all the messages of Allah; all the Messengers and Prophets call for one faith. The word 'follow' means that there is a leader and a follower. The word 'religion' encompasses all beliefs and general legislations just as 'law' encompasses rulings and 'creed' includes beliefs.

We have said before that the word 'hanif' means he who walks in a straight line and, likewise, follows a straight, upright way. We call our religion, Islam, 'the tolerant hanifiyya (true religion)'. What most would be surprised to know is that the root word 'hanaf' means 'clubfoot' which is a kind of deformity, or deviation. How, then, is it plausible to say that the True Religion, guiding to the Straight Path of Allah, is 'hanif'?

We have said before that Allah sent each of his Messengers at a time when corruption was prevalent. In a world rife with corruption, the one who deviates from it is the one who is guided to the straight path, so 'hanif' means a definite deviation from corruption, and the one who does so is truly upright. '[Prophet], say, "Allah speaks the truth, so follow Ibrahim's (Abraham's) religion: he had true faith and he was never an idolater."' (Al-'Imran: 95).

'Allah speaks the truth', of course, because 'truth' is when speech conforms to reality. When Allah, the True God, speaks and He is the eternal All Knowing, what happens? Invariably, reality must conform with what He Glorified is He says. It does not make sense that Allah Glorified is He would make a statement through a Messenger and his followers that life's reality would contradict or variate. The True Lord Who has eternal, omnipotent knowledge, sends down speech with the main purpose of calling to His guidance.

Logically, therefore, when Allah the All-Mighty and All Knowing mentions an aspect of faith, He has eternally known that it would happen according to what He said even when the circumstances in which His Words were revealed did not seem to lead to immediate comprehension, or understanding. In the beginning, the believers were oppressed and subjugated, and those who had no ties to clans that could protect them had to emigrate from Mecca, or else they were tortured and oppressed. Amid such hardship which was right at the time when oppression of the believers reached its peak, Allah sent down these reassuring words to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him: 'Their forces will be routed and they will turn tail and flee.' (al-Qamar: 45)

When the Companion 'Umar Allah be pleased with him heard this verse, he wondered what those forces were. The reality of the situation at that time offered no clue for understanding. Later, at the Battle of Badr, the believers did meet the forces who turned their back, were defeated, and thus fled. Allah Glorified is He had foretold an event and guaranteed that it would take place. This is the Absolute Truthfulness. One may choose to deny what is told as truth if it is told by other than the One Who has created all things and Who possesses Absolute Knowledge of them as well. So, from where can contradiction emerge? This is the meaning referred to in the following verse: ‘Will they not, then, try to understand this Quran? Had it come from any other but Allah, they would surely have found in it many an inner contradiction!’ (an-Nisa’: 82)

The Quran is the truth told by the True Lord and One Creator of all things Who has Eternal, Omnipotent Knowledge. Surprisingly, people of the Scripture, Jews and Christians disputed over Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham): the Jews claimed he was a Jew, and Christians claimed he was a Christian. They disregarded the fact that the revelation of Judaism and Christianity was long after the time of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham), so how could he have been a Jew or a Christian since these religions came after him? For this reason, Allah gave them the following reply in the Noble Quran:

‘People of the Book, why do you argue about Ibrahim (Abraham) when the Torah and the Gospel were not revealed until after his time? Do you not understand?’ (Al-‘Imran: 65) Then, Allah Glorified is He clarifies the religion of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him: ‘Ibrahim (Abraham) was neither a Jew nor a Christian. He was upright and devoted to God, never an idolater.’ (Al-‘Imran: 67).

How could they allege that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) was a Jew or Christian? Only someone who is utterly bereft of insight would make such an allegation. The words of Allah Glorified is He in the aforesmentioned verse, brings forth a clear statement that is the undeniable truth: Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham), as the verse says, was ‘never an idolater’. Are the people of the Scripture idolaters? Yes. When they claim that ‘Uzayr (Ezra) and ‘Isa (Jesus) were the sons of Allah; such a claim is a form of associating other divinities with Allah. The Arabs, who were idolators too, likewise claimed that they were followers of the religion of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham); they brought forth the following pretext for their false claim in the fact that the rituals of pilgrimage were first revealed to Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. To refute this allegation and clear Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) of it, Allah Glorified is He says in the Quran: ‘[Prophet], say, “Allah speaks the truth, so follow Ibrahim’s (Abraham's) religion: he had true faith and he was never an idolater.”’ (Al-‘Imran: 95) This indicates that the religion of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) conforms to the religion of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and Islam is essentially the same religion as the religion of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him called for. Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

إِنَّ أَوَّلَ بَيْتٍ وُضِعَ لِلنَّاسِ لَلَّذِى بِبَكَّةَ مُبَارَكًا وَهُدًى لِّلْعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿٩٦﴾

The first House [of worship] to be established for people was the one at Bakkah (Mecca). It is a blessed place; a source of guidance for all people [96] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 96)

We have previously discussed the process of the association of meanings through which Almighty Allah satisfies every quality in the human disposition. Before the aforementioned verse, which discusses construction of the Sacred Mosque in Mecca, Allah addresses the truth about Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him: '[Prophet], say, "Allah speaks the truth, so follow Ibrahim's (Abraham's) religion: he had true faith and he was never an idolater."' (Al-'Imran: 95)

Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was the first of the Prophets to have a connection with the Sacred Mosque of Mecca. He raised the foundations of the Sacred Mosque after it was buried by the Great Flood that took place at the time of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him. When the story of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) and his message is mentioned peace be upon him the greatest event in his history comes to mind which is the construction of the Sacred Mosque of Mecca. Furthermore, when Allah Glorified is He speaks about the debate between the Muslims (led by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and guided by the Quran) and the people of the Scripture (in whose hands were the distorted Torah and Gospel), He the Exalted refers us back to one thing: the religion of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) who gave all believers the name of Muslims [literally those who surrender to Allah]. Allah Glorified is He wants people to be guided by divine values and abide by them through their actions.If whims replace these values, the balance Allah wants to strike on earth will be shaken by contradiction, and human's actions, deviating from the divine guidance, will be squandered and fruitless.

For a person to act upon the beliefs ingrained in his heart and approved by his mind, he must possess a physical form through which puts the Laws of Allah into action. Otherwise, such laws and beliefs would remain confined to the heart and mind and would never find their way to the world by performing the mission for which mankind are created.

For this physical body to perform this mission, acts of worship have been ordained for refining and elevating it above mundanity. As we work for the prosperity of the world, we also direct our faces to the Scared House of Allah and direct our intentions to Him in all our deeds. Allah has sent His Messages to reveal to us His Laws by which He governs both the human heart and the physical form. He has enjoined on us salat (the Five Daily Prayers) that we observe by directing our bodies to the Sacred House of Allah as we direct our hearts to Him, feeling His Presence. Why is it necessary to engage the body with the heart in worship?

When Allah Glorified is He sends down His Mercy and Revelations, He wants the human body to be prepared for receiving these blessings. The Sacred House of Allah Glorified is He toward which every Muslim directs his face represents the unity of religion. Just as Allah has created unity in the Messages sent down to all His Messengers, He has also decreed to emphasise unity among the believers by directing them, their bodies, and their hearts to His Sacred House. Every place where Allah Glorified is He is worshiped, in the manner He commands, is a mosque, and Allah has made this easy for the nation of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who said: 'The earth has been made for me a mosque and a pure place (for worship).'

Observing acts of worship in the previous religions required a special place, but Allah Glorified is He has granted anabundance of His Mercy to the nation of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as He has not granted to any prior nation of any other Prophet.

Sand of the earth is ritually pure. Therefore, when water is unavailable to perform ritual ablution, dry sand, which is commonly considered as unclean when accumulated on a given surface, has been made a means for attaining purity for us.

A person can perform dry ritual ablution with clean sand when water is unavailable. Allah Glorified is He has thus made it exceptionally easy for every person of the nation of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him to get ready for standing before Him in salat (prayer). Every place where a Muslim worships and prostrates himself to Allah Glorified is He is considered a mosque.

However, there is a difference between any place where we worship Allah and a mosque. A worker may worship Allah in his factory, a student in his classroom, a farmer in his field and even a person walking on the street may observe salat (prayer) anywhere. However, when somewhere is dedicated to be a place of worship, it must be solely for worship, where none of life's daily activities may be pursued in it, for it is a consecrated place.

It is permissible to observe worship anywhere, but there is a difference between a place where one engages in a worldly activity, but can perform worship as well, and a place designated to be a mosque. A mosque is a place made solely for worshiping Allah Glorified is He so Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ordered that nothing should be pursued in connection with our worldly lives in this consecrated place. He taught us that whoever engages in a business transaction in a mosque will not have that transaction be blessed by Allah; whoever uses a mosque to announce something he lost will not find what he is looking for, and even if he prayed, Allah will withhold from him whatever he lost.

Twenty-three hours is more than enough time to managing daily worldly affairs. Thus, it befits a believer to then devote the remaining hour observing acts of worship sincerely for Allah and leaving all the cares of this life just as he leaves his shoes at the door of the mosque. It is not showing enough respect and good etiquette with Allah Glorified is He for one to engage in anything other than worshiping Allah. This is especially true when he is in the place appointed solely for worship, during the times ordained to be dedicated to it.

Once you enter a mosque, you should keep yourself getting involved in any frivolous talk, along with making the intention to remain there as a form of spiritual retreat by observing worship only. When a particular place is chosen to be a mosque, what direction should worshipers face as they stand before Allah Glorified is He? Should everyone be left to choose his own direction? No. Unity amongst the believers manifests itself by their all directing toward one particular place: the Sacred House of Allah (in Mecca). We are given freedom to choose whatever place to use as a mosque, yet in all of them, we are commanded to direct ourselves toward the place chosen by Allah: His Sacred House.

By so doing, all the believers everywhere will be facing each other every time they stand before Allah in salat (prayer). It is like forming a vast circle of worshipers all over the world with all of them directed towards the Sacred House of Allah along with facing each other. Now, why must we face the Ka'ba each time we observe salat (prayer) eventhough Allah Glorified is He says:

'And to Allah belong the east and the west, so wherever you turn (yourselves or your faces), there is the Face of Allah (and He is High above, over His Throne). Surely! Allah is All-Sufficient for His creatures' needs, All-Knowing.'? (al-Baqara: 115).

The answer is that there is no contradiction; this verse supports what we are saying. Indeed to Allah Glorified is He belongs the east and the west. At first, people recognised the east and the west, then the north and the south. In addition to these four directions, science later specified the intercardinal directions: the northeast, northwest, southeast, and southwest. All these directions belong to Allah, and by directing to the Ka'ba from all over the world, we do actually face all of these directions from our various places, and this conforms to the aforementioned noble verse.

When a person faces the Ka'ba, the east might be behind him and the west in front of him. At the same time, another person might be facing the west with his face directed toward the Ka'ba. A third might be in a different spot of the world and also facing another cardinal point. This way, human beings from the east, west, north, south and all other directions face the Ka'ba throughout the day.

Thus, the words of the Almighty Allah: 'And to Allah belong the east and west...' are in harmony with the fact that the believers all over the world face all the various directions as they direct themselves towards the Ka'ba. No direction is preferred or more sacred than another. I do not want to further mention the belief that the Ka'ba is the focal point of the earth and that the earth was created from it; if an object is spherical, any point on it can be the focal point; therefore, let us not dwell on such a discussion. Is it not proof enough that it is superior since Allah has chosen it to be His Sacred House? Yes, this is more than enough. It is superior to all other places because it is the House of Allah chosen by Him the Almight and this suffices.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has taught us matters that the intellect cannot resolve; those that do not constitute a fundamental part of faith should not be a point of dispute or debate. It has been narrated on the authority of Companion 'Ali ibn Abu Talib Allah be pleased with him that a man asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him this question,

‘Is this the first Sacred House of Allah?’ Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him explained that before it there were other Sacred Houses of Allah, but it is the first ever set up for all of mankind. The Ka‘ba is, therefore, the first place of worship Allah Glorified is He has made for mankind, as He the Exalted and Almighty says: ‘The first House [of worship] to be established for people was the one at Bakkah (Mecca). It is a blessed place; a source of guidance for all people.’ (Al-‘Imran: 96) However, if species other than the human race have existed before, there must have been other places of worship.

No human being ever preceded Adam in existence, but other Adam preceded mankind at a distance. For this reason, existence of the Sacred House of Allah may clash with the logic of common Muslims who have only a shallow religious background. When one of them hears that discoveries have been made of fossils dating back to millions of years ago, he may wonder how that is possible when Adam did not exist millions of years ago. Let us suppose that five generations descended from Prophet Idris (Enoch), three generations from Prophet Nuh (Noah), eleven generations from Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) and thirty generations from Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him This means that human existence dates back to thousands of years, not millions!’

Concerning this question, we reply by asking if anyone has ever claimed that Adam was the first creature to exist on earth. Islam does not claim as such, rather, it says that Adam is the father of the human race, but it does not mean he was the first person to live on the earth. Therefore, leave scientists to say that the earth has existed for millions of years, while we reflect on the words of Allah: ‘Prophet, do you not see that God created the heavens and theearth for a purpose? He could remove all of you and replace you with a new creation if He wished to.' (Ibrahim: 19)

Basically, there is no need for us to conduct such an investigation, which is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'No, there were several Houses of Allah before it.' Allah the Exalted and Almighty clarifies that the jinn lived on earth before us: 'The jinn We created before, from the fire of scorching wind.' (al-Hujurat: 27)

Does Allah Glorified is He not say that He has willed placing humans on this earth as successors to which the angels replied: 'Prophet, when your Lord told the angels, "I am putting a successor on Earth," they said, "How can You put someone there who will cause damage and bloodshed, when we celebrate Your praise and proclaim Your holiness?" He said, "I know things you do not."' (al-Baqara: 30)

What the angels meant to allude to what other creatures who preceded human existence on earth did. So Allah Glorified is He tells us that the Ka'ba was the first place of worship ever set up for mankind, and its useless and needless to ask about matters the mind cannot resolve. If Allah Glorified is He wanted to tell us that the Ka'ba was the first place of worship ever built on earth, He would say: 'The first House [of worship] to be established on Earth...' and would not specifically point out the race that House was set up for. However, Allah Glorified is He says: 'The first House [of worship] to be established for people was the one at Bakkah (Mecca). It is a blessed place...' (Al-'Imran: 96). Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him clarified that there were other places of worship before it, but it was the first one set up for mankind. It is an answer that can well encompass and supercede all that science may claim.

Let us ponder the Words of Allah Glorified is He: 'The first House of worship) to be established for people was the one at Bakkah (Mecca). It is a blessed place...' (Al-'Imran: 96). What is the meaning of 'first'? It means, or implies the beginning of something, but does every beginning necessarily lead to an end? No, some things have beginnings but no ends. Take numbers, as an example. Roughly, we may say numbers start from 'one', but can we specify where they end? We have perhaps imagined numbers running into decillions, yet there are other far larger numbers. In the past, people stopped at one thousand and would describe a million as ‘one thousand thousands’. Paradise is another example of an entity that has a beginning, but no end.

So the first place of worship set up for mankind was the Ka‘ba. The previously mentioned verse proves that a place of worship was indeed set up for mankind, and as long as Adam is one as well as the first of mankind, then that House was set up for him too which means it preceded his initial appearance on earth.

This leads to the conclusion that the Sacred House was built before Adam, which is true, for Adam is from mankind. Allah Glorified is He further elucidates this point by saying: ‘The first House [of worship] to be established for people….’ (Al-‘Imran: 96) Is Adam not one of ‘people’? Therefore, the Sacred House must have been built before him. Some people believe that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was the one who built the Sacred House in Mecca. To those who adhere to this belief, we say in reply that we should first understand The Quran, for such a statement contradicts what Allah Glorified is He says in it: ‘The first House [of worship] to be established for people….’ (Al-‘Imran: 96) And since many people existed before Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him did they not have a place of worship to direct to in their devotion? Is this a privilege granted only to people who came after Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him?!

Allah has granted those who lived prior to Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him the same rights as those who came after him. A Sacred House, then, must have been made for them, as well. In the Quranic text: ‘The first House [of worship] to be established for people...’, the doer of the action of ‘establishing’ is not mentioned, and the past participle form ‘established’ implies that such doer is not one from mankind. This leads one to ask who set up the Sacred House. Were they the angels?

We may consider the possibility that the angels received a command from Allah Glorified is He to undertake the building thereof, but Allah Glorified is He says about the Sacred House: ‘... a source of guidance for al-’alamin...’ This Arabic word literally means ‘worlds’, which implies that the Sacred House of Allah Glorified is He is a source of guidance for the angels as well since they too form a ‘world’ among the creatures of Allah. It may, therefore, be suggested that Allah Glorified is He set up the Sacred House before the existence of the angels. Indeed, the human mind will fall short of comprehending everything in this endless universe, so let the mind rest and respect its limits by not exceeding them to realms beyond its capacity. The idea that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was the first to set up the Sacred House is indicative of misunderstanding the Quranic text that states: 'And (remember) when Ibrahim (Abraham) and (his son) Ismail (Ishmael) were raising the foundations of the House (the Ka'ba at Mecca), (saying), "Our Lord! Accept (this service) from us. Verily! You are the All-Hearer, the All-Knower."' (al-Baqara: 127).

What does 'raising' mean? It means establishing the third dimension, which is height, as well as implying that length and width had already been specified. This is clear proof that the House already existed before Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him raised its foundations. Bearing this in mind, we reach the conclusion that just the foundations and height of the Sacred House remained to be established, but its length and width that marked the area of that sacred spot had already been there. The sacred place of worship had already existed and just needed to be marked by raising the building. This is proven by the fact that when the Ka'ba was destroyed, people still made pilgrimage to the place itself. When we pray in the third floor of the sacred place, we face the air above the Ka'ba. If we were to dig a hole in the ground a thousand metres deep to pray, we would face the roots of the Ka'ba, thus proving that the Sacred House encompasses the Ka'ba and its surrounding environment.

Accordingly, what Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him did was just the construction of the building, marked by that place and not actually setting the place itself up. Let us contemplate, guided by our understanding of faith, what happened with Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him set out with his wife Hajar and her son, Ismail (Ishmael) and left them in Mecca. Hajar knew that the basic necessities of life are water, air, and food. Seeing that there was no water in that place, she asked Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him 'Do you leave us here of your own volition, or by a command from Allah?' He replied, 'By a command from Allah.' So she said, 'Then I am relieved. Allah will never abandon us.'

Her worries were cast away when she realised that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him, left them there as an act of obedience to the command of Allah, and this is the pinnacle of faith. If a mother's faith had not been strong, would she let her husband leave her alone with her little child in such a place that had no foreseeable source of food or water? It was not in Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him that she put her trust, but in the Lord of Ibrahim Glorified is He. It is worth mentioning that Allah Glorified is He quotes from Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) in the Quran as saying: 'Our Lord, I have established some of my offspring in an uncultivated valley, close to Your Sacred House, Lord so that they may keep up the prayer. Make people's hearts turn to them, and provide them with produce so that they may be thankful.' (Ibrahim: 37)

According to this verse, we realise that the time when Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him left his family in that area, the Sacred House of Allah did exist. Besides, we know that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him did not raise the foundations of the House alone because it was his son Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him who helped him: 'And (remember) when Ibrahim (Abraham) and (his son) Ismail (Ishmael) were raising the foundations of the House (the Ka'ba at Mecca), (saying), "Our Lord! Accept (this service) from us. Verily! You are the All-Hearer, the All-Knower."' (al-Baqara: 127)

Undoubtedly, Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him must have been older and grown up enough to have been able to help his father, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him in raising the foundations of the Sacred House. We have learnt that when Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him was a child in the very place where his father, Ibrahim, left him with his mother, the Sacred House did exist. Therefore, we arecertain that the Sacred House was there before Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. Now, let us examine the meaning of the Arabic word 'Bakkah' which is mentioned in the noble verse: 'The first House [of worship] to be established for people was the one at Bakkah (Mecca). It is a blessed place...' (Al-'Imran: 96). The place where the Sacred House exists has names: one of which is 'Bakkah'and the other 'Mecca'. Some scholars say that the Arabic letters mim (m) and ba' (b) are related in regards to the articulation as well as the meaning of both. Regarding articulation, we would notice that a person with nasal problems would pronounce (m) like (b). The Arabic letters mim and ba' are phonetically close to each other, and the words starting with them are sometimes correlated in meaning.

Let us examine the derivation of 'Mecca' and 'Bakkah'. The Arabic verb stem bacca means 'crowded', so we can understand the Words of Allah Glorified is He in this light: 'The first House [of worship] to be established for people was the one at Bakkah. It is a blessed place...' (Al-'Imran: 96). So it is the ever-crowded place to which people come from all around the world to perform the pilgrimage to the Sacred House of Allah Glorified is He. Due to this inevitable, undeniable crowdedness, Allah Glorified is He pardons men and women for mixing together, while circulating the Ka'ba.

Another difference may be that Bakkah is the name of the place where the Ka'ba lies and circumambulation takes place, whereas Mecca is the name of the whole city where the Sacred House is located. As for 'Mecca', it is derived from the verb makka which refers to the suckling of a mother's udder by a young cow or camel until it is empty. Consuming all the milk of a she-cow or she-camel until the last drop means the baby is hungry. Due to the scarcity of water resources in Mecca, people tend to consume any small amount of water they can find; hence the name is due to the resemblance and its name.

The word mubarak (Arabic for blessed) is derived from the root (b-r-k) that denotes 'durability'. So does it mean absolute durability or growing durability, which increases in the face of consumption? In daily life, we say money is 'blessed' when it seems never to decrease by spending, so it is like a durable source that continues to give and does not run out. Likewise, the word birka (the Arabic for pool) is derived from the same root; no matter how much we take of its water, it is ever abundant.

We say tabaraka Allah, which means that Allah Glorified is He has always existed, with no beginning and no end; He is the Self-Sufficient, the One God, Who has no partners, Who does not have a need for anything or anyone and Who never changes and is above experiencing any decrease Glorified is He. Thus, we see that the concept of 'durability' is intrinsic to the meaning of the name of the Sacred House of Allah. The Sacred House is ever blessed. How? The reward for goodness performed there is multiplied. Could blessedness come in any better form? It is a place where all sorts of provisions are ever abundant and never cut off. In the past, a pilgrim would travel with all his needs, even his burial shroud, a needle and thread, salt, etc. Now, pilgrims to the Sacred House of Allah find all they need there. Allah Glorified is He says about the sacred, blessed House as being: '... a source of guidance for all people.' (Al-'Imran: 96). What is guidance? We have defined it previously as the direction that leads to a goal. Whoever visits the Sacred Mosque returns from it purified from his sins as pure as the day he was born. Hajj (Islamic pilgrimage) has, therefore, made him closer to Paradise. It is by making Pilgrimage to the Sacred Mosque that one finds the path to paradise. That is what makes it 'a source of guidance'. When Allah the Exalted and Almighty speaks about the Sacred Mosque of Mecca, He specifically mentions the Station of Ibrahim (Abraham) Glorified is He eventhough there are many other signs worthy of mentioning: Allah Glorified is He says:

فِيهِ ءَايَٰتُۢ بَيِّنَٰتٞ مَّقَامُ إِبۡرَٰهِيمَۖ وَمَن دَخَلَهُۥ كَانَ ءَامِنٗاۗ وَلِلَّهِ عَلَى ٱلنَّاسِ حِجُّ ٱلۡبَيۡتِ
مَنِ ٱسۡتَطَاعَ إِلَيۡهِ سَبِيلٗاۚ وَمَن كَفَرَ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ غَنِيٌّ عَنِ ٱلۡعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿٩٧﴾

There are clear signs in it; it is the place where Abraham stood to pray; whoever enters it is safe. Pilgrimage to the House is a duty owed to God by people who are able to undertake it. Those who reject this [should know that] God has no need of anyone [97] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 97)

For those whose minds cannot comprehend the thought that Allah Glorified is He has softened the boulder for Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him we say that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him made a plan, due to fearing that his feet would slip as he stood on the boulder to build the Sacred House. Therefore, he carved a place in the boulder the size of his feet so that they would be firm as he carried and raised the stones. These are clear signs. Let us look more deeply into the story. Allah Glorified is He aided Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him because he had decided to raise the foundations for the House higher than the level his hands could reach. So Allah Glorified is He helped him to do this. We know that there are two kinds of guidance: the guidance of direction and the guidance of assistance:

'Allah [God] has increased the guidance of those who follow the right path and given them their righteousness...' (Muhammad: 17).

Allah Glorified is He says: 'There are clear signs in it; it is the place where Abraham stood to pray; whoever enters it is safe...' (Al-'Imran: 97). Signs, in this verse, mean amazing matters that cannot be denied or overlooked. Entering the Sacred House produces a feeling of security and inner peace. It is a feeling commonly associated with the place where the Sacred House is built eventhough it has witnessed feuds, blood and war among the tribes that once lived there. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He explains the condition that bloodshed must be prevented: '... whoever enters it is safe....' Why is this? It is the House of Allah Glorified is He and it does not befit its sacredness that anyone should be punished or oppressed in it, even if he has committed a crime for which Allah Glorified is He has prescribed a punishment. A statement of 'Umar Allah be pleased with him illustrates this point further when he said, 'If I find the killer of Al-Khattab (his father) there, I would not stand up against him.'

However, this is not meant to be a way of escaping justice, for a criminal must be closely guarded until he leaves the Sacred House. This safety only pertains to his worldly life. As for his safety on the Day of Resurrection, this is a different issue. This is a high status Allah Glorified is He bestows on whom ever He wills, out of His Grace. The clear, indisputable signs in the Sacred House are witnessed by everyone who visits it. May Allah Glorified is He answer the hopes and intentions of everyone who desires to visit or revisit His Sacred House. As you face one side of the Ka'ba, another person is perhaps facing an opposite side of it; thus, the sacred building is surrounded by worshipers from all directions. When we are at the Sacred House, we direct our faces to the building that we know which makes up a part of the Ka'bah because we can plainly see it. We know this building, along with Hatim, the semicircular wall around the Stone of Ismail (Ishmael), form the entire construction of the Ka'ba. At one time, insufficient funds caused the construction of the building not to be completed, and the wall was made to demarcate the location of the Ka'ba. As such, it remained like this. When a person is far from the Ka'ba, it is sufficient that he faces its direction.

For this reason, we find that the rows around the Ka'ba are circular during salat (prayer) since those who pray inside the Mosque can see it. As for those who pray farther away from it, they can face its direction even if the length of a row runs a thousand metres long. That makes the rows of the worshippers, while praying always straight when praying outside the Scared Mosque; this is due to the fact that they all face one direction, whereas inside, rows are circular since all are directing their faces towards the Ka'ba, where the longest dimension of it is twelve and a quarter metres. Among the one of the more amazing signs seen round the Ka'ba is how people struggle to kiss the Black Stone which is just a stone that belongs to the species of inanimate objects, the lowest species after mankind, animals, and plants.

We see people, and masters of the universe submit to the command of Allah Glorified is He Who would not completely accept their ritual unless they kiss that Stone or greet it. It is incredible how Allah Glorified is He thus makes the highest species among His creatures show such respect to an object belonging to the lowest species. People crowd around the Black Stone, and those who do not manage to kiss it feel that they have missed out on something tremendous, a wonderful manifestation of how people submit to the ordinance of their Lord and Creator. Even human arrogance is humbled when one fulfills a command from Allah to kiss or greet a stone, even when a simple greeting suffices. Therefore, one strives to kiss it to perfect his observance of the religious ritual. Although merely a stone, an inanimate object of the lowest species, it is so lovingly shown reverence solely due to the fact that Allah Glorified is He has ennobled it. It is a command intended to let man transcend his ego, and no one should interpret it to be any form of stone-worship or idolatry, whereas there is another stone that Allah Glorified is He commands performers of hajj (Islamic Pilgrimage)at which to throw pebbles.

So it could not be stone-worship. That would be out of the question, for we find that one stone is made sacred, whereas another is pelted with pebbles. We find one stone venerated and sought to be kissed, while another is despised and cursed. This is only to show submission to the Will of Allah Glorified is He. When He commands us to honor a stone and pelt another with pebbles, a believer does so only in obedience to Allah Who commands us to do as such. The nature of the stones themselves is completely irrelevant. Some of those inclined to think the worst of everything claim that Islam has preserved a form of idolatry.

For those who think that, I pose a question: Why do you mention veneration of the Black Stone and deliberately disregard the pelting with pebbles of the three stones representing Satan?! A believer observing hajj (Islamic Pilgrimage) venerates one stone and despises three others only because Allah Glorified is He commands him to do so. That is the significance of the ritual since it is not the stone itself that is meant to be worshipped. Allah Glorified is He has elevated us above the baseness of idolatry which is the sheerest form of disbelief. He has commanded us to kiss the Black Stone, so when we do, it solely out of respect for His commandment. This is the peak of trust and glorification of the Lord Who has given this command. Both are stones, yet the veneration shown to one represented the height of polytheism, while that shown to the other is the height of belief in the One Allah. Are these not clear signs?

Is the Well of Zamzam that is located near the Ka'ba a clear sign as well? It is the miracle that commemorates the struggle of Hajar who kept running between the mountains of Safa and Marwah, desperately seeking water for her infant son, Ismail (Ishmael), whom she left beside the Ka'ba. In her quest for water, Hajar ran seven times back and forth between Safa and Marwah hoping to see a bird or a person who could lead her to a source of water so as to quench the thirst of her infant son. Had she found water between Safa and Marwah when she began running, would she have confirmed what she said to Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him when he left her in that place: 'Allah will never abandon us'? Rather, Allah let her exert herself first in order to teach her and everyone that one must exhaust all possible means, for success comes from Allah Who grants when He sees His servant truly striving. Water did not emerge where she ran, instead it appeared under the feet of Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him. This proves her statement, 'Allah will never abandon us.' Allah the Exalted and Almighty let Hajar run seven rounds, and a woman of her age, in all likelihood, could not manage to do more than that. This is a lesson meant to teach us that one must exhaust all possible means, while his heart depend only on the One Who controls those means: Allah Glorified is He. Such is the criteria that should govern human behavior and struggle in this life. When we see the Well of Zamzam where Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him moved his little feet, this is a clear sign that delivers a message since it happened around him instead of between Safa and Marwah where Hajar struggled. The message taught is that we should exert our best effort, while directing our hopes and trust only to the One Who manages all affairs.

This teaches a believer that true faith truly means reliance on Allah Glorified is He. However, it does not mean that one should do nothing and just wait for the sky to rain good luck. Rather, it is working hard, while trusting that success comes from Allah Glorified is He only. To do nothing and expect that Allah will do everything for you, claiming that this is trust in Him, is but idleness. I say to such a person that if your belief is true, why do you stretch out your hand to attain food and eat with such an appetite? Why not wait for food to jump into your mouth? Do you not trust Allah?! Such is a true quality of the indolent; they would exhaust every possible means to satisfy their desires, yet when it comes to work, they sit back, claiming that is what it means to rely on Allah Glorified is He. The lesson we learn from Hajar, from the effort she made and from the gushing forth of water is that we should exhaust the means Allah has given us when we have an end to seek.

In the Sacred Mosque, one is so preoccupied thinking about his relationship with Allah to think of those around him, even the absolute dearest to him. Once one looks at the Ka'ba, the world and its cares flee from the mind. When the rituals are finished, one's mind becomes preoccupied once again with his work, family, money, etc. If one's attachment to the Sacred House remained so strong all the time, this blessed place would constantly be too overcrowded to give peace or calmness to anyone. Allah the Exalted says about the Sacred House: '…whoever enters it is safe…' (Al-'Imran: 97). Here, we must understand the difference between a sentence meant to describe reality and that meant as a command eventhough it comes in the form of a statement.

The Arabic sentence rendered as '…whoever enters it is safe…' (Al-'Imran: 97) is not meant as a description of reality, otherwise, many things would contradict it since the security of worshipers at the Sacred Mosque was threatened at times.

We know the story of the attack attempted by Juhayman some decades ago. When Juhayman attacked pilgrims at the Sacred House of Allah, they were stripped of the feeling of security, and some of them may have wondered how that could happen since it contradicts what Allah says: '...whoever enters it is safe...'! Some maliciously alleged that the assault Juhayman launched against worshipers at the Sacred Mosque proves the verse '... whoever enters it is safe...' is an untrue statement. This allegation is overwhelmingly refuted when we know that statements in Arabic language can be either informative or imperative.

Were the aforementioned sentence meant as a statement, it would mean that no one may ever be attacked or frightened so long as he is in the Sacred Mosque. However, that sentence is meant as a command and cannot be judged as true or false. Rather, a command can be obeyed or disobeyed. When Almighty Allah says: '... whoever enters it is safe', it is as if He means, "O, believers, whoever enters the Sacred Mosque should be kept safe."

Let me give an example [and Allah Glorified is He is above all comparison]. If you tell your son, 'O son, know that ours is a house of hospitality', would you mean to state an essential fact that no guest has ever been or may ever be treated in your house other than hospitably? Or would it rather be meant as a command to your son?

It is in the form of a statement, yet it implies a command to your son that he should be generous and kind to any guest who visits the house. Such a command is likely to be obeyed or contravened, based on how docile the son is. Likewise, we understand from the following Words of Allah Glorified is He: '... whoever enters it is safe...' that the sentence is meant as an imperative one that will likely be obeyed or disobeyed. Another example of this is the noble verse where Allah Glorified is He says: 'Corrupt women are for corrupt men, and corrupt men are for corrupt women; good women are for good men and good men are for good women. The good are innocent of what has been said against them; they will have forgiveness and a generous provision.' (an-Nur: 26).

Some people say that we find reality to be in conflict to this; a good woman would be doomed to marry a bad man, or a good man would be afflicted with a bad wife; so how is it plausible that Allah says so? The answer to this is that Allah Glorified is He in the aforementioned verse does not mean to state an actual fact of life, but He is giving a command that should be obeyed. In accordance to that verse, Allah Glorified is He enjoins on the believers that a good man should be married to a good woman, and so should the corrupt be married to each other. If people obey the commandments of Allah, reality will synchronise with the outcome expressed in the noble verse. Otherwise, good men will be married to bad women, and vice versa.

Thus, the Words of Almighty Allah: '...whoever enters it is safe...', though apparently a statement, is meant as an imperative sentence. So whoever wishes to be faithful to what Allah Glorified is He commands should provide security to whoever enters the Sacred Mosque. After giving that command, Allah Glorified is He says in the same verse: '... Pilgrimage to the House is a duty owed to Allah by people who are able to undertake it. Those who reject this (should know that) Allah has no need of anyone.' (Al-'Imran: 97).

When one hears the phrase 'owed to', it is understood that the benefit goes to the object of the prepositional phrase and the obligation is on the subject of the verb 'owe'. If we say: 'so-and-so owes something to so-and-so', it means the benefit is for the object of the preposition and the obligation is on the subject. Based on the same rationale, when Allah Glorified is He says: '...Pilgrimage to the House is a duty owed to Allah by people...' (Al-'Imran: 97), the benefit thus goes to Allah Glorified is He and the obligation is on people. However, if we grasp the meaning of the sentence, we find that Allah Glorified is He does not benefit from anything that He commands us to do; hajj (Islamic pilgrimage) is observed for the sake of Allah, but the benefit goes to the one who observes it. Whatever you do for Allah, he returns it to you; so it is an obligation on you and a benefit for you at the same time.

The fruit of every command of Allah that you obey actually returns to you; so it does not befit Him, which is how we understand the noble verse: '...Pilgrimage to the House is a duty owed to Allah by people...' (Al-'Imran: 97) that 'owed to' implies that Allah benefits from your obedience of this obligation. You perform hajj (pilgrimage) for the sake of Allah Glorified is He but the benefit goes to you and is meant for you only. Allah Glorified is He is far exalted above deriving benefit from any of the rulings He enjoins upon us. When He the Exalted ordains something, a believer must know that the benefit of submission is meant for him only. Worship must be devoted to Allah Glorified is He and the intention behind it directed to Him and none but Him; yet the fruit of devotion goes to the servant of Allah for his obedience.

Allah the Exalted and Almighty orders the believers to make hajj (pilgrimage) to the Sacred Mosque in Mecca, and He is the Creator and knows that obligations are always heavy to the soul. Still, for a believer to undertake a difficult responsibility, he must reflect on the benefit that comes from compliance. That makes it easier for him to bear the difficulty. When one does not consider the reward he would be granted for devotion, he finds obedience tiresome and feels reluctant to observe acts of worship. Likewise, when one thinks only of the pleasure derived from a sin and ignores the punishment, it is easy for him to commit that sin without any remorse. Consider the purpose of obedience, and you will realise that its fruit goes to you only. You will understand that it is for you, not against you.

If a sinner thinks of the punishment for disobedience, he will realise that it is against him, not for him, and the pleasure derived from it is only transient. Heedfulness of punishment would prevent him from ever approaching a given sin. However, when one commits a sin, he thinks only of the instant ecstasy he feels and never thinks of the requital. Were one honest with himself, he would let reminder of punishment at the moment of desire reason away and desist the lure of sinning. Remembering punishment extinguishes the desire to sin. I always find that the best example to give here is the fiercest of human instincts: sexual desire.

Suppose that a man saw a beautiful girl and wanted to win her affections. I advise him then to think of the punishment prepared for him. Imagine yourself before a blazing fire and just about to be thrown into it. This is what you should expect if you were to enjoy that girl outside the lawful boundaries of marriage. Would he then insist on winning the affections of the girl or even think of his desire, seeing that such severe torment awaits him? Will this sexually deviant approach such a sin? No, for the desire to sin disappears upon recalling its punishment. Allah the Most High says: 'Pilgrimage to the House is a duty owed to Allah by all who can make their sabeelan (way) to it' (Al-'Imran: 97). In Arabic, 'sabeelan' signifies the path leading to a goal. Such path is usually well-trodden. When a person sets off to fulfill his/her obligation of the Hajj (pilgrimage), s/he is a pilgrim travelling on this path. There are three points to observe regarding this:

1. a pilgrim: a person upon whom Allah ordains Hajj who must be legally qualified to perform the Hajj,
2. a well-trodden path,
3. an ultimate end: the pilgrimage to the Sacred House.

Since the pilgrim will take a road, s/he must have the ability to use this path. However, how could s/he get this ability? The ability, prior to taking it, requires the attainment of provisions and means of transport. As such, the pilgrim needs provisions and a means of transport in his/her Hajj journey.

Furthermore, the way to Hajj must be safe and free from danger. To conclude, the ability to perform Hajj requires three things: provisions, a means of transport and safe road. Provisions usually pertain specifically to the personl; s/he provides for him/her self only. However, if this said is supporting a family and young children,the legal ability requires that s/he must leave them sufficient provisions that would last until his return from the journey of Hajj. We should carefully observe that the Divine formula used in all obligations is the following: ‘O you who have believed, (such-and-such) is ordained upon you…’ Yet, in Hajj, Allah Glorified is He clearly states that Hajj is a Divine Obligation due to Allah upon all people, Muslims, or non-Muslims. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him even invited the people of the Book who laid claim to Ibrahim (Abraham) as their prophet, to make pilgrimage to the Sacred House of Allah. However, they refused. If Hajj was only for Muslims who believed in the Message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him Prophet Muhammad would not have offered the Jews and Christians pilgrimage to the House of Allah so that it would be a means of gathering all of mankind in the House of Allah to worship One God, the Lord of the House, but they refused. As such, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him strongly condemned those who do not go to perform Hajj without having a legal excuse, such as a debilitating illness, fears from tyrant rulers, or abject poverty and penury.

Imam 'Ali Allah be pleased with him narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Whoever has the provisions and the means to enable him to go to Allah’s House, and he does not perform Hajj, then it does not matter if he dies as a Jew or a Christian. Simply, Allah Glorified is He says in His Book: 'Pilgrimage to the House is a duty owed to Allah by all who can make their way to it' (Al-'Imran: 97).

It is for that reason that the obligation of the Hajj is directly followed by Allah's saying: 'But whoever disbelieves' (Al-'Imran: 97). In other words, do those who do not perform Hajj without a compelling, legal excuse, fall into disbelief? Concerning this, scholars have to elaborate. In response to this question, the scholars say that, indeed, they do fall into disbelief.'Why? According to scholars, there are two kinds of disbelief: first, the disbelief in Allah, and second, the disbelief in the blessings of Allah. For example, Allah the Glorious and Exalted says: 'And Allah presents an example of a town which enjoyed peace and security; its provision coming to it in abundance from all places, but it denied the favours of Allah. Thereupon, Allah afflicted them with hunger and fear in punishment for their evil deeds' (an-Nahl: 112).

It may also mean actual disbelief, as pertains to the case when a person dies as a Jew or a Christian. In this instance, we say to be careful and not to issue biased judgments that would disregard any of the given contextual evidence. This practical obligation is clearly set out by Allah Glorified is He in His words: 'Pilgrimage to the House is a duty owed to Allah by all who can make their way to it.' (Al-'Imran: 97) Do you dispute that this is obligation? Or, do you believe in it but fail to carry it out?

The obligation is 'Pilgrimage to the House is a duty owed to Allah by all who can make their way to it' (Al-'Imran: 97). Do you believe in it or not? 'Yes' is the normal answer of all believers. However, it differs from one believer to another. Some believers are careful to keenly perform the obligations prescribed by Allah Glorified is He; those are the obedient believers. Others may not show keenness to perform the obligations and thus become disobedient.

In this regard, we find that disbelief is of two kinds. Some disbelieve in the ruling of Hajj, that is, they deny the obligation of it as owed to Allah Glorified is He by the people. These are truly disbelievers. There are others who may commit the sin of denying Allah's blessings; Allah has given them the ability, i.e. provisions, a means of transport, safe passage and enough provisions for their dependents. In this case, it is obligatory upon them to perform Hajj. As such, a God fearing man, endowed with esoteric knowledge, once said: 'If any of them is told that he has a share of inheritance in Mecca, they will make their way thereto by all possible means.'

Therefore, Allah's Glorified is He saying: 'Pilgrimage to the House is a duty owed to Allah by all who can make their way to it.' (Al-'Imran: 97) Therefore, it is an article of faith; those who believe in it are free of disbelief, whereas those who dispute or deny it fall into disbelief. Whoever performs Hajj is obedient, and whoever does not, whilst believing in the Hajj is disobedient.

Let us consider the exactness of the Quranic discourse in Allah's, saying: 'But whoever disbelieves, then, indeed, Allah is free from need of the worlds.' (Al-'Imran: 97) Someone may raise a question and ask: why does Allah not say: 'but whoever disbelieves, then indeed, Allah is free from need of 'them'?' instead of saying, 'Allah is free from need of the worlds'? The proper response to this is that Allah is really in no need of any of His creatures. Be careful! Never think that those who believe and observe their obligations do any favour to Allah by their obedience. Allah is All-Sufficient; He needs neither the obedient nor the disobedient. Beware of presuming that those who obey Allah have done Him any favour or lent Him a hand: 'Indeed, Allah is free from need of the worlds' (Al-'Imran: 97).

He is in no need of those who obey or those who do not. After this, the True Lord the Most High says:

قُلْ يَٰٓأَهْلَ ٱلْكِتَٰبِ لِمَ تَكْفُرُونَ بِـَٔايَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ وَٱللَّهُ شَهِيدٌ عَلَىٰ مَا تَعْمَلُونَ ﴿٩٨﴾

Say, 'People of the Book, why do you reject God's revelations? God witnesses everything you do?' [98]
(The Quran, Al-'Imran: 98)

When you hear 'say', it is a command from Allah to His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him as previously stated. When you entrust someone with a message to another, does this person mention the command 'say' or just say the message? For example, when you say to your son, 'Say to your uncle," My father will visit you tomorrow."' Your son goes to his uncle and says: 'My father will visit you tomorrow.'

Someone might say, ‘Would it not have been sufficient enough for Allah to have said to Prophet Muhammad peace be upon him: ‘Say, O Muhammad.’ As such, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would have passed it on to us saying, ‘O, People of the Book, why do you disbelieve?’ That would have been enough, but Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him delivered the commandment itself from Allah; he only narrated it verbatim as he had received it from (Allah). The message Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him received from Allah was the following: ‘Say: "O, People of the Book.”’ This indicates that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him delivered the message he received from Allah verbatim. There are many verses in the Quran that begin with Allah’s Command: ‘O, People of the Book’ without preceding it with the introductory verb, ‘Say.’ Other verses begin with the command ‘Say.’ What is the difference between these two styles? We find that the True Lord sometimes kindly addresses His creatures directly so He shows that they are worthy of being addressed directly. He does this by saying: ‘O, People of the Book!’ This is a direct address from Allah Glorified is He to them. Other times, He says to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: ‘O, Muhammad, Say to them’ because they do not have a position worthy of being directly addressed by Allah. When Allah Glorified is He addresses mankind, the address may or may not begin with ‘Say’; so, we know that when the True Lord addresses His creatures directly, He is honouring them as being worthy of the direct Divine address. However, when they show obstinacy, He tells His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to ‘say to them.’

An example of this [and Allah Glorified is He is beyond compare] from everyday life is when one of us says to a person next to us, ‘Tell the one with the loud voice to keep silent.’ This person deems himself above directly addressing the person with a loud voice, so he asks his neighbour to tell the noisy person to keep silent. When an address comes to the people of the Book, we know that they are the Jews, the Companions of the Torah, and the Christians, the Companions of the Gospel. Allah Glorified is He refers to them saying: ‘O, People of the Book.’

No one has ever said to us, ‘O, People of the Quran’. Why? The answer is simple: when the Lord says to them, ‘O, People of the Book’, we know that any written material forms a ‘book’, but their disbelief contradicts the revelation written in their books as sent down to them by Allah Glorified is He. Furthermore, Allah Glorified is He is the One Who sent it down to them, and He knows that it calls to belief, not to disbelief. Since He is the True Lord Who sent down the revelation, He also stands as Witness over them. It is absurdity on the part of the people of the Book to throw themselves into the snare of disbelief. This way, they tell lies against Allah. Allah the Most High records that they went against the revelation written in their Books. However, if the people of the Book can deceive the people of the world, they will never be able to do so with the Creator of the heavens and earth.

When Allah Glorified is He says: 'Why do you disbelieve in the verses (revelation) of Allah' (Al-'Imran: 98), should we understand that their disbelief in Allah's verses mean their concealment of Allah's revelation from the onset? Or does it mean that they first believed in them but fell to disbelief afterwards? The glad tidings of the coming of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him were written in the Torah and in the Gospel. They even believed them before his coming. Yet, when Prophet Muhammad peace be upon him actually came, they disbelieved. In this respect, the Wise Quran declares:

'And when there came to them a Book from Allah confirming that which was with them, although before they used to pray for victory against those who disbelieved. Then, when there came to them that which they recognised, they disbelieved in it, so the curse of Allah will be upon the disbelievers.' (al-Baqara: 89).

Why did they disbelieve in Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessings be upon him? It is because he removed temporal power from them that was causing them to sell both paradise and Allah's Glorified is He pleasure in order to achieve their own interests without the least regard of the rulings of Allah Glorified is He. I said before that Quraysh had refused to say 'La ilaha illa Allah', i.e. there is no deity worthy of worship but Allah. This refusal proved that they understood the meaning of 'La ilaha illa Allah.' If it were just a simple phrase, they would have said it. However, they knew and understood that there is no one, who is worthy of worship, of obedience and of having the right to legislation and commandments, except Allah Glorified is He. In His Address to the people of the Book, Allah Glorified is He says:

قُلۡ يَٰٓأَهۡلَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ لِمَ تَصُدُّونَ عَن سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ مَنۡ ءَامَنَ تَبۡغُونَهَا
عِوَجٗا وَأَنتُمۡ شُهَدَآءُۗ وَمَا ٱللَّهُ بِغَٰفِلٍ عَمَّا تَعۡمَلُونَ ﴿٩٩﴾

Say, 'People of the Book, why do you turn the believers away from God's path and try to make it crooked, when you yourselves [should be] witnesses to the [truth]? God is not heedless of anything you do' [99] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 99)

Suppose that you betrayed yourselves and bore the sins of your own misguidance, why would you also bear the consequences of sending other people astray? Is it not enough that you bear your own sins without also bearing the sins of misguiding others? Allah the Most High says: 'They shall bear their own burdens in full on the Day of Resurrection and some of the burdens of those whom they misguide without knowledge. Unquestionably, evil is that which they bear' (an-Nahl: 25). This judgment came eventhough Allah the Most High says: 'No burdened soul carries the burden (sins) of another' (Fatir: 18).

The one who does not bear any burden other than his own is the misguided person who does not send others astray; this person bears only his own sins. As for the one who bears his own burden along with the burdens of others, such is the misguided person who sends others astray. In this verse, the Lord the Glorious and Exalted asks them from the mouth of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'Why do you hinder him/her who believes from the way of Allah? You seek (to make) it crooked' (Al-'Imran: 99). It is as though the Lord is saying to them: 'What do you want from the religion that connects the servants to their Lord? Do you not want it to be an upright religion? You seek to make it crooked.' The crookedness only occurs for some evil intent. Simply, the crooked way is not straight and is thus elongating distances. Why should a person who travels a straight path want to divert from it and make his journey longer? If one wants to reach a destination directly, he will choose the straight path. As for the one who diverts from the straight path, he does not want to reach the intended destination. Rather, he makes his journey longer and might never ever reach the destination.

The True Lord says: ‘Why do you hinder him who believes from the way of Allah? You seek (to make) it crooked….’ (Al-‘Imran: 99) The Arabic word ‘‘iwajan’, or ‘crooked’, has two pronunciations: ‘‘Awajan and ‘iwajan.’ Each of them has a different meaning. The former describes a slanted upright thing such as a wall or a spear, whereas the latter describes the abnormality of values and morals. For this reason, the True Lord spoke to them about their crookedness in values and morals: ‘You seek (to make) it crooked, while you are witness, and Allah is not heedless of what you do.’ (Al-‘Imran: 99) Allah Glorified is He as a result, tells them that they want the religion to be crooked despite the fact that they shall stand as witnesses over the Truth brought by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him He is only delivering the message of truth which they used to foretell, for which they previously besought Allah for victory over the pagans of Mecca. It is like He is saying, ‘A prophet will soon come whom we will follow and with whom we will destroy you just like 'Ad and Iram were destroyed.’ O people of the Book, you are witnesses to the truth of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

They committed several acts of disobedience: they went astray and they strove to lead others astray. If only this were a result of ignorance! Indeed, it was committed intentionally with full knowledge. Although they were witnesses to the truth, they insisted on going astray and leading others astray. The meaning of ‘witness’ is that they knew exactly what they were saying since witness can stand for seeing things. Seeing something is not like hearing about it. For this reason, Allah the Most High reminds them: ‘Allah is not heedless of what you do’ (Al-‘Imran: 99).

The Message that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him delivered is very clear as also mentioned in their own manifest scriptures. What has caused your deviation, from the way of the truth, O, people of the Book, although you count as witnesses to that truth? You must have doubted Allah’s awareness of this. As such, Allah Glorified is He says to them: ‘Allah is not heedless of what you do’ (Al-‘Imran: 99). After this, Allah the Most High says, ‘O, you who have believed, if you obey a party of those who were given the Scripture, they would turn you back, after your belief, [to being] disbelievers.’ (Al-‘Imran: 100). In this verse, Allah Glorified is He warns the believers that those who disbelieve in Allah's revelation will not be at ease so long as you, O, Believers, are firm and upright. The disbelievers who deny the Divine revelations will not be at ease unless they stir doubts in the hearts of the believers about their religion. All they want is to make it crooked and turn the believers into disbelievers after they have accepted Islam.

The believers must be aware of this issue because those who want to advocate crookedness have gone astray and lead others astray, as well, eventhough they are witnesses to the truth and know that Allah is not unaware of what they do. What should then the stand of the believers be? Allah makes it evident in His saying: 'O, you who have believed...' (Al-'Imran: 100).

The people of the Book try to prevent the believers from the path of Allah. The meaning of 'al-sadd' or prevention does not refer to someone who prevents believers from faith; rather, it refers to an attempt on the part of the people of the Book to convince the believers to denounce their faith and apostatise from it. The believers, in this sense, refer to the group that adheres to Allah's Commandments. Therefore, Allah warns them by saying: 'If you obey a party of those who were given the Scripture, they would turn you back, after your belief, [to being] disbelievers' (Al-'Imran: 100). In this verse, Allah Glorified is He specifies only a group from the people of the Book which is a clear sign of the truthfulness, objectivity, fairness, and unbiasedness of this account. It is as if Allah the Most High is telling us that there is a group from the people of the Book who will behave in a straight manner and will eagerly come to Muslims, individually or in groups, to accept Islam. As such, Allah was not referring to all the people of the Book. He only says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوٓاْ إِن تُطِيعُواْ فَرِيقٗا مِّنَ ٱلَّذِينَ أُوتُواْ
ٱلۡكِتَٰبَ يَرُدُّوكُم بَعۡدَ إِيمَٰنِكُمۡ كَٰفِرِينَ ١٠٠

You who believe, some of those who were given the Scripture would turn you into disbelievers if you were to yield to them [100] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 100)

Allah Glorified is He relates the accounting of events in full preservation of the truth. After that, He says.

وَكَيْفَ تَكْفُرُونَ وَأَنتُمْ تُتْلَىٰ عَلَيْكُمْ ءَايَٰتُ ٱللَّهِ وَفِيكُمْ رَسُولُهُۥ ۗ
وَمَن يَعْتَصِم بِٱللَّهِ فَقَدْ هُدِىَ إِلَىٰ صِرَٰطٍ مُّسْتَقِيمٍ ﴿١٠١﴾

How can you disbelieve when God's revelations are being recited to you and His Messenger is living among you? Whoever holds fast to God will be guided to the straight path [101] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 101)

It is a rhetorical question states a denial of believers possibly returning to disbelief after enjoying the delights of the Divine Knowledge. The messages of Allah are recited to them and Prophet Mohamed, the true Messenger of Allah, is actually with them.

Allah the Most High says to the believers: 'If you obey a party of those who were given the Scripture…' (Al-'Imran: 100). This verse has a story to tell. The Jews of Medina had dominated the economy with absolute authority; they mastered the financial transactions. Since they were acting as moneylenders, those who were in need of loans would go to them. The Jews also excelled in knowledge because they had the scripture, whereas most of the people of Mecca and Medina were illiterate and had no access to the divine scriptures. In addition, there was another way the Jews showed excellence: their experience in war, for they had fortresses and strongholds. Hence, the Jews had three points of excellence: wealth which lent them dominance and leadership over the economy, knowledge of scripture which helped them to achieve scholarly superiority and finally their experience in the arts of war. Moreover, they would attempt to create and deepen conflicts among groups of people. For example, they attempted to stir up enmity between the tribes of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj. They frequently bestirred this enmity to keep war raging at all times so they could guarantee the marketability of arms trade which they manufactured and sold to all conflicting parties. When Islam started to flourish, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him united the tribes of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj, then the Jews lost their economic superiority.

Islam brought forth a religion and a scripture that superseded all past scriptures; thus, the Jews lost their scholarly status. Likewise, the Jews lost their military advantage as they witnessed a small number of believers making the disbelievers suffer an emphatic defeat at Badr. Due to these reasons, all the powers of the Jews in Medina faded away. Consequently, they wanted to return to their pre-Islamic situation. They decided to rekindle and stir up enmity between Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj. A Jew, Sha's ibn Qays, once passed by the men of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj as they were experiencing faithful harmony and peace. He was so irritated by their kind friendship and sincere smiles that he said, 'By Allah, we must cause war to break out again and return them to their former state of hatred and enmity, for we will have no stability as long as they are united.'

Then, he sent a young Jew to sit with men of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj. The Jew led the conversation to the memories of the Day of Bu'ath, a pre-Islamic day in which Al-Aws defeated Al-Khazraj. This Jew kept quoting chivalrous poems said in the context of military victories achieved on that day to rouse the passions of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj. Consequently, the conflict grew with the boastings of achievements, and tempers flared. As such, a fight was about to break out. They shouted, 'Take arms! Take arms!' Thus, the plan worked and news of the event reached Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him He went out with his Companions until they reached the gathering of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj where they found the situations at the height of agitation, conflict, and rage. Weapons were at hand. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Do you recall the shouts of the pre-Islamic days of ignorance, while I am amongst you?' In other words, you should be ashamed of yourselves because the Messenger of Allah is amongst you. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him then added, 'Allah has honoured you with Islam, by means of which He has removed the affairs of the days of ignorance from you and united your hearts!' What was the effect of the Prophet's words on the souls of the people? His words made them put their weapons, weep, and then embrace each other. They left in the company of the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him No day began uglier yet ended finer than that day.

Reflecting on the Jewish act of inciting the civil strife between Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj, we find that they understood the nature of the old conflicts between them and wanted to reignite old hatred and enmity. Likewise, we find that their stirring up the emotions of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj had opened a door for chaos, causing fighting to almost break out. When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him spoke to them, they calmed down, dropped their weapons, and regretted their actions.

If we wanted to deeply envisage why this happened, we would find that the Jewish knowledge of the conflict between the tribes of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj inspired them to reignite the old vendetta. Then, the tribal fanaticism of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj led them to take up arms.

In this way, we find that the perception of something has three stages: firstly, perception; secondly, emotional reaction to it; and thirdly, the corresponding behaviour. When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him spoke, Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj understood the matter in the correct manner; so they dropped their weapons, their anger abated, and they abandoned these incorrect perceptions.

The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him reminded them of three things: ‘Do you recall the shouts of the pre-Islamic days of ignorance, while I am still among you? Allah has honoured you with Islam, by means of which He has removed the affairs of the days of ignorance from you and united your hearts!’ In response, they first put down their weapons before weeping. Such was the result of being emotionally moved which inevitably led them to embrace one another. In other words, they corrected their perceptions and behaved in the opposite manner. When this happened, the Jews were enraged, disappointed and gloomy. The one who narrated this account said, ‘There never was in Islam a day that began uglier yet ended finer than that day.’

The day began gloomily and ended with reassurance. Prophet Muhammad’s peace and blessings be upon him words acted as a shield against any evil suggestions within the souls of the believers: ‘Do you recall the shouts of the pre-Islamic days of ignorance, while I am still among you? Allah has honoured you with Islam by means of which He has removed the affairs of the days of ignorance from you and united your hearts!’

This noble statement was remembered, thus, thwarting every evil suggestion or enemy’s scheme. The True Lord Glorified is He immunised the believers of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj from the wicked plots and devilish temptations. Hence, we see that Allah even uses a disbeliever to raise the status of faith. If this event had not happened, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would not have made his poignant speech. As such, Muslims would not have had this immunity from such tensions amongst them. If one of the followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had said these words, his words may have had the same temporal effect. However, having these words said by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him created an immunisation from other similar situations that had yet come whether the prophet was there or not.

For this reason you, O, believer, if you look at the disbelievers, you will find that their intellects are miserable. They spread Islam, unintentionally, by their foolish attitudes. For example, they said to the people of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj, 'A prophet will soon come whom we will follow and with whom we will destroy you just like the people of 'Ad and Iram were destroyed.' Then, what happened? Once the people of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj heard about the new religion, they said to each other, 'Listen, people, it is the religion that the Jews foretold. Before they rush to it, let us be ahead of them.'

The Jewish arrogance and boastfulness against Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj motivated them to embrace Islam. In this way, Allah Glorified is He makes the disbelief of disbelievers a means to strengthen the belief of believers.

When the Lord the Most High says: 'And how could you disbelieve, while Allah's messages are being conveyed to you and His Messenger has come to you? And whoever holds firmly to Allah has [indeed] been guided to a straight path' (Al-'Imran: 101), we understand that this is a divinely formed rhetorical question. When you hear, 'How could you disbelieve' it is an astonishing matter, for it is so unlikely that the believers could disbelieve, whilst the Book of Allah Glorified is He is being revealed and recited to them and the Messenger of Allah is amongst them.

After this comes the call to hold firmly to Allah Glorified is He. The Arabic word 'i'tisam' (holding firmly) signifies the firm adherence to something that is of superior position. For example, 'I adhered firmly to the rope of faith.' A human being has integral weight. If this weight is not lifted by something else, the person will fall. This does not happen unless the person is hanging in the air, while holding on to a rope with no one to push him down, but he does fall due to his own weight. Whoever adheres firmly to Allah and to the rope of faith protects himself from falling.

In essence, we feel that holding firmly to Allah Glorified is He is to follow the verses recited to us and the example of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him To illustrate further, the key to the firm adherence to Allah Glorified is He is by following the Book of Allah and the example of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him Likewise, the presence of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him amongst them was needed at the time due to the fact that they were immersed in the mire of ignorance. The presence of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him showed them that Allah Glorified is He had saved them by pulling them out of the darkness into the light. The True Lord did not take His Messenger's soul until after He had perfected the religion for us, completed His favour upon us and chosen Islam as our religion. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘I have left with you two things with which will keep you from going astray: the Book of Allah and my Sunnah.’

In this way, we see that the presence of Allah’s revelation and the Sunnah of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him protect and guide us to the Straight Path. Guidance, as well known, is a means leading to the desired destination. Suppose that your goal was going to a specific place; what leads you to this place is guidance. Whatever directs a person to a destination is called ‘guidance’.

Allah the Most High created all the creatures making some of them subservient and others free-willed. All the creatures in the universe are subservient except for mankind. However, human beings are subservient in some matters. As we have stated before, every single being other than mankind fulfils its predestined purpose; the sun never refuses to rise, the wind never refuses to blow and the sky never refuses to rain. For example, the earth never says to man, ‘You disobey Allah, so I will not produce crops for you.’ Likewise, no one attempts to ride a tamed steed and endures its refusal by it saying, ‘You are sinful, so I am going to buck and not allow you to mount my back.’

Therefore, in this respect, we see that everything except mankind is compelled to fulfil its intended purpose which is the serving of mankind. Only human beings are endowed with free will. As such, we must always be aware that Allah's plans decreed that all creatures of every species shall be subservient by nature and act in harmony with one another except for mankind who has free will and, thus, suffers division. In this regard, Allah the Most High says: 'See you not that to Allah prostrates whoever is in the heavens and whoever is on the earth, and the sun, and the moon, and the stars, and the mountains, and the trees, and Ad-Dawab (moving living creatures, beasts, etc.), and many of mankind? But there are many (human beings) on whom the punishment is justified. And whomsoever Allah disgraces, none can honour him. Verily! Allah does what He wills.' (al-Hajj: 18)

The subservient inanimate objects that humbly prostrate are 'the sun, the moon and the stars; and the subservient plants that prostrate are the trees; and so do the beasts as included in the Divine decree of uniformity and agreement. All these subservient beings are subservient to Allah's command by their very nature. As for the human being, the Lord says about them: "But there are many (human beings) on whom the punishment is justified…" (al-Hajj: 18).

Therefore, what is the source of division amongst humans? Simply, it is because Allah Glorified is He endowed mankind with free will. Was it not possible for Allah Glorified is He to create mankind subservient like the rest of His creation? Is it not a truism that subjecting these creatures substantiates the power of the Dominant Lord, as nothing from His creation can escape His Power? This is absolutely true. However, in the same respect, the Lord wanted to confirm His Power and Might by subjecting His creatures. He also wanted to acknowledge His love of the creation by granting them free will. Whoever is endowed with free will to believe or to disobey then he chooses to believe, he is, in essence, asserting his love of Allah Glorified is He.

Thus, in light of this, Allah Glorified is He classified the creation into two groups: a subservient group that naturally submits in recognition of His Power and a free group that is endowed with freedom of choice in confirmation of the Divine Love of the creation. Allah willed mankind to have freedom of choice to do an act or not to do it. Why then, do human beings not always act in harmony with the faith? It is due to the fact that desires have an outer glitter that attracts mankind just as fire attracts moths. When a person lights a fire in the open, its light attracts moths. Then the moths burn in the flame of the light. The light attracted and allured them, while they were not aware that it will burn them.

An Arabic proverb says: ‘Many a soul has longed for its own ruin!’ The same holds true for desires that appear alluring and attractive to human beings, leading them to nothing but destruction. But how can mankind protect themselves from this? Protection occurs only in following the Divine Guidance: ‘Do’ and ‘Do not do.’ Anyone who seeks salvation from the schemes of Satan and their lower self should submit to Divine Guidance in Commands and Prohibitions.’ I have previously said that it is inconceivable that someone would manufacture anything and forget to develop a manual of its rules for effective maintenance. Mankind, in their limited crafts, do not forget this, so what about the Creator in His absolute Omnipotence? The Creator the Glorious and Exalted created human beings and revealed the effective rules for the maintenance of humankind as declared in His Commands and Prohibitions: Do that! Do not do that! Whoever wants to hold fast to the firmest rope and escape satanic temptations, schemes of enemies or capricious desires must stick firmly to Allah’s guidance. Indeed, Allah Glorified is He is the Creator Who created mankind and placed His guidance as a Divine manual for the maintenance of His creation.

Allah the Most High says: ‘And whoever holds firmly to Allah has [indeed] been guided to a straight path’ (Al-‘Imran: 101). The fundamental meaning of ‘i’tisam’ is when a person is hanging in the air and his own weight pulls him down. However, when he holds firmly to Allah’s Glorified is He guidance, he saves himself from decline and fall. The main work of Satan is to make sins alluring and make humans drawn to them. Therefore, Satan will come on the Day of Resurrection, arguing against us. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And Satan will say when the matter has been decided: Verily, Allah promised you a promise of truth. And I too promised you, but I betrayed you. I had no authority over you except that I called you, so you responded to me. So blame me not, but blame yourselves. I cannot help you, nor can you help me. I deny your former act in associating me (Satan) as a partner with Allah (by obeying me in the life of the world). Verily, there is a painful torment for the zhalimun (polytheists, wrong-doers, etc.)''' (Ibrahim: 22)

Confirming what we already know, authority is of two kinds: firstly, to control by force, but Satan cannot control the mankind in this manner and secondly, to convince a human being to commit a sin and Satan may convince a person to commit a sin. In this regard, what is the difference between forced control and convincing? In forced control, Satan forces a human being to do something against the will of man, but this is beyond the capability of Satan. In the case of convincing, however, Satan makes the sin seem alluring to a person, and so he does it out of his own free will. Satan will announce on the Day of Resurrection, 'I had no power over you, O, mankind, to make you disobey Allah. I only made the sin alluring to you, O, mankind, and you responded to me.' Satan will say on the Day of Resurrection, 'I cannot help you, nor can you help me' (Ibrahim: 22). What does the word musrikhiyya (help me) mean in the verse in question? It is derived from the verb (Asrakh) which means 'to hear a cry for help and respond to it.' Satan is saying that he cannot help mankind, and mankind cannot help him.

As such, the heavy inclination of human souls to this world leads them to plummet into hell without being pushed or thrown therein by force. There is no rescue for humankind from this plummeting or falling except by holding fast to the rope of Allah Glorified is He. Divine Guidance acts as a rope extended to us all, and whoever holds on to it is saved from this falling.

Since we hold fast to Allah's rope which is the Quran revealed from our Creator and the pure Prophetic Sunnah, Allah is well aware of the natural inclinations of human beings, and He will surely guide us to the Straight Path. After giving that command, Allah Glorified is He says in the same verse:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ ٱتَّقُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ حَقَّ تُقَاتِهِۦ وَلَا تَمُوتُنَّ إِلَّا وَأَنتُم مُّسْلِمُونَ ﴿١٠٢﴾

You who believe, be mindful of God, as is His due, and make sure you devote yourselves to Him, to your dying moment [102] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 102)

Allah Glorified is He has granted believers the basic rules for protection: first, they should not listen to the words of the enemies of the religion. When we hear the word ‘‘ittaqu Allaha' or fear Allah, we must understand that there are things that will cause you exhaustion and suffering, therefore, you must take a preventive action from them. For this reason, the True Lord says: ‘And fear the Fire, which is prepared for the disbelievers.’ (Al-‘Imran: 131) Allah instructs human beings to make a shield and a barrier between themselves and Hell in order to save themselves from it. For example, Allah the Most High says, ‘Fear Allah. Verily, Allah is Swift in reckoning’ (al-Ma‘ida: 4); this means to place a barrier between yourself and Allah to avoid His Wrath. Someone might ask, ‘How can this be when I am a believer, and I want to live in Allah’s company?’ The answer is that you shall protect yourself from the Divine Attributes of Might and remain in the shade of the Divine Attributes of Beauty. The true believer is the one who protects himself from the Attributes of Might such as the Overwhelming Power, Dominance, and so on. Likewise, Hell is one of the agents of Allah’s Attributes of Might.

When Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Fear the Fire’ (Al-‘Imran: 131) or ‘Fear Allah’ (Al-‘Imran: 102), the meaning is the same. When a person hears the words of the Most High Lord: ‘’ittaqu Allaha haqqa tuqatihi ' (i.e. fear Allah as He should be feared’ (Al-‘Imran: 102), what does ‘’ittaqu Allaha haqqa tuqatihi’ mean? In Arabic, the word ‘haqqa’ refers to the ‘firmly confirmed and invariable fact which never ends or quivers'. Surely, this is the truth. But how can one fear Allah Glorified is He as should be feared? One can fear Allah Glorified is He as should be feared when his faith is firm and unwavering. The should-be feared is manifested by following His guidance, obeying all of His Commands, glorifying Him with frequent remembrance and thanking Him without any trace of ingratitude. Obedience is achieved by following the guidance of ‘do’s' and 'don’ts'.’One may frequently engage in the remembrance of Allah and may obey and follow His guidance, but he may become distracted by the graces of Allah Glorified is He. Allah’s guidance calls you to remember all the Divine Blessing you have, yet beware of forgetting the One Who bestows them upon you.

The worshiper should praise Allah Glorified is He in a way that is due to Him, and should not be ungrateful for the blessings bestowed upon him. As long as you accept, O, servant, each and every blessing and return to Allah by saying ‘this is what Allah has given; there is no power except by Allah’, which is an expression of gratitude for blessings, you are fulfilling the rights of the blessing. Fulfilling the right of a blessing is to praise the Lord for it and avoid ingratitude.

It is said that ‘as He should be feared’ means that no critic can waver your firm belief in Allah Glorified is He and that you shall speak the truth, even if it is against yourself. Such is the utmost, best form of fearing God. It is to fear Allah as He should be feared with sincerity and piety. The scholars say that when this verse was sent down and the Companions of the Prophet Muhammad heard it, they considered themselves too weak to live up to it. Some of them then said, ‘Who could ever be up to this level of piety?’ In response, Allah sent down: ‘So keep your duty to Allah and fear Him as much as you can.’ (at-Taghabun: 16)

Does this mean that Allah first commanded the believers to something beyond their ability, and then provided them relief by saying: ‘So keep your duty to Allah and fear Him as much as you can’? No, Allah Glorified is He does not charge a soul beyond its capability. People might misunderstand His words, ‘So keep your duty to Allah and fear Him as much as you can,’ by claiming that they are unable to fulfill this obligation. Furthermore, they might think that this obligation is no longer incumbent upon them. The truth of the matter is that this is a form of misunderstanding. The Divine Direction ‘So keep your duty to Allah and fear Him as much as you can’ means that you should be conscious of Allah within your given abilities, so what you can do, you should do. No one is allowed to understand the opposite meaning and say, ‘I am unable.’ To put it more simply, Allah Glorified is He knows the limits of your capability.

When you are unable, He is the One Who can relieve you. You cannot relieve yourself, O, servant. Only the True Creator is the One Who knows whether a given matter is beyond your capability or not, and, therefore, could relieve you. Consequently, a person must not manipulate Allah words: ‘Allah does not charge a soul except [with that within] its capacity’ (al-Baqara: 286) by taking them out of context. Indeed, a human being cannot assess the ability to make a parallel evaluation of the religious duties accordingly. Rather, man must understand that Allah Glorified is He is the One Who created the soul, and He is the One Who sent down the religious duties and responsibilities according to the ability of human beings. Since the Creator of man is Allah, He knows better the duties and responsibilities that man can bear. He the Most High is the One Who assigns the responsibilities, and He knows better that the soul has a limited capability. Thus, He does not burden a soul with more than it can bear. If He gives a commandment, know, O, servant that He has commanded that which is within your capability. Likewise, when something happens to a person that is arduous for him or completely prevents him from performing that which he is responsible for, He the Most High grants exceptions so as to provide relief, as set out in legal concessions.

For example, those who are sick or in a state of travel have the concession to break their fast in Ramadan. Similarly, a traveller may shorten the four-unit prayers during the time of his journey.

Evidently, Allah the Most High is the Omniscient and knows the bounds of the capability of the human soul, which He created. In conclusion, do not calculate your capability first, and then measure the religious duties against it. Instead, you should respect the religious duties first and maintain the attitude that as long as Allah has commanded it, it must be within your capability. Allah concluded this noble verse saying: ‘Die not except in a state of Islam (as Muslims)’ (Al-‘Imran: 102). In this verse, we have a proscription: ‘Die not unless you are surely submitting yourselves (as Muslims) to Allah at your dying moment.’

How could that be done? Can anyone ask another person not to die! Death falls into the arena of which man has no choice. It is part of the divine decrees. If someone says to you ‘Do not die,’ you would definitely find it strange because it is beyond your power or control. However, if someone says to you ‘Do not die except as a Muslim [in submission to Allah the Exalted],’ you begin to realise the intended meaning of the command through contemplation. The person has no control over death, but he does have control over the state he is in when death approaches. It is a divine command not to die except as Muslims [in submission to Allah Glorified is He.] There is no doubt that this is within the capability and control of a person. The phrase ‘except as Muslims [in submission to Him]’ in the verse renders the action within a person’s capability because he can make the choice to submit himself to Allah the Exalted.

It is true that one does not know when he shall die. Therefore, he has to be wise and quickly submit to Allah the Exalted so that whenever death befalls him, he would die as a Muslim [in submission to Allah the Exalted].

Thus, the divine command in the verse, 'do not die except as Muslims [in submission to Him]' is a prohibition from doing the first action, 'not to die', which is not within the scope of human power or choice. Furthermore, it is a prohibition from being in a state contrary to what is enjoined at the moment of dying, and this is within a person's power and choice. The verse says: 'Do not die except as Muslims [in submission to Him].' (Al-'Imran: 102). How can we reconcile the two commands? No one has any choice or control over the time of his death, and, likewise, no one knows when the calamity of death will befall him. However, a person has control over the state in which he dies. We are enjoined to submit ourselves to Allah the Exalted and hold fast to Islam so that whenever death approaches us, we would meet our Lord as 'Muslims' (in submission to Him). Allah the Exalted is commanding us to hold fast to Islam, i.e. submit to Allah Glorified is He because we do not know when the calamity of death will befall us.

The concealment of the time of death is not vague as some people may think. Rather, it is the pinnacle of clarity because the concealment of the time, the cause, and the surrounding circumstances of death best clarifies the essence of death. Why? Allah Glorified is He has ordained that such information is exclusively His. Accordingly, each of us should expect death at any time. As long as a person expects death at any time, this is the perfect clarity as referred to. Then, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Hold fast to Allah's rope all together; do not split into factions. Remember Allah's favour to you: you were enemies and then He brought your hearts together and you became brothers by His grace.You were about to fall into a pit of Fire, and He saved you from it– in this way God makes His revelations clear to you so that you may be rightly guided.' (Al-'Imran: 103).

This verse is intended to warn the believers by reminding them of the Aws and Khazraj tribes that gave in to ugly tribal-pride and prejudice of the Pre-Islamic era. After Islam was introduced to Medina, Muslims were enjoined to find pride in Islam alone. If a Muslim gives in to ugly tribal-pride and prejudice and vies in boasting to others about having so-and-so as a member of his tribe, he should be reminded that this may have been acceptable before Islam.

It happened that some members of the Aws and Khazraj tribes vied in boasting with one another. A man from the Aws tribe said to one from

Khazraj tribe, ‘Khuzaymah is one of us.’ The man from the Khazraj tribe responded, ‘Well, Ubayy ibn Ka‘b and Zayd ibn Thabit are from us.’ Then, one from the Aws tribe said, ‘Well, Hanzhalah ibn Ar-Rahib is one of us, and he was bathed by the angels after his death!’ Khuzaymah ibn Thabit may Allah be pleased with him was an honourable companion whose testimony was made equivalent to the witness of two people by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him This was due to the fact that he may Allah be pleased with him possessed illuminating faith and the light of certainty which led him to sound judgments. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him once bought a horse from a Bedouin. He peace and blessings be upon him went to bring the money to pay for this horse. The Bedouin denied the sale agreement because someone else had offered him a higher price! The Bedouin called Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying, ‘If you want this horse, (then buy it), otherwise I shall sell it. ’Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to the Bedouin, ‘Have not I already bought it from you?’ The Bedouin said, ‘I swear by Allah, I have not sold it to you. Bring a witness!’ This Bedouin had taken advantage of the fact that there were no witnesses at the time when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him bought the horse from him. Khuzaymah ibn Thabit Allah be pleased with him was present when the Bedouin requested a witness. Driven by his absolute confidence in the truthfulness and honesty of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for which he was known possessing among his people even before he was commissioned to communicate the Divine Message to mankind, Khuzaymah may Allah be pleased with him said, ‘I bear witness that you have bought it.’

Because this Bedouin was lying, he perhaps said to himself that possibly Khuzaymah had seen what happened!’ He kept silent and left. After the Bedouin left, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him called for Khuzaymah ibn Thabit Allah be pleased with him and said, ‘O, Khuzaymah, how could you testify when you were not with us? On what (grounds) do you bear witness?’ He Allah be pleased with him said, ‘On grounds of believing you, O, Messenger of Allah, to be trustworthy.’(What he meant in saying this is: how can we believe in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him concerning all what he conveyed from heaven and not believe him in this?) Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him realised the illumination of trust and sound reasoning of Khuzaymah. He peace and blessings be upon him made the witness of Khuzaymah equivalent to the witness of two people.

Usually, two witnesses are required. However, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him honoured Khuzaymah Allah be pleased with him by making his testimony equivalent to that of two people. Let us now examine how Allah the Exalted united the Aws and Khazraj tribes after Islam by pondering over the compilation of the Quran. Zayd ibn Thabit may Allah be pleased with him who was entrusted with the duty and honour of compiling The Quran, had said: I obliged myself not to accept a verse of the Book of Allah unless two men gave evidence of its being so and attested to it until I found the last verse of the chapter of al-Tawba written, and only Khuzaymah Al-Ansari attested to it. I did not find it with anybody other than him. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said about him, "The testimony of Khuzaymah alone is sufficient."' It should be noted that Zayd ibn Thabit Allah be pleased with him belonged to the Khazraj tribe, while Khuzaymah Allah be pleased with him belonged to the Aws tribe. Allah Glorified is He had brought them together as evidenced by the incident of compiling the Quran. This underscores that people found pride in their tribal affiliation, or other worldly gains, before Islam. When they embraced Islam, Muslims of different races and colours found pride in their religion instead. Both the members of the Aws and Khazraj tribes should be proud of both Khuzaymah and Zayd ibn Thabit may Allah be pleased with them because they were united by the bond of Islam and the Quran. This is the way to hold fast to the divine bond with Allah the Exalted.

He says: 'Hold fast to Allah's rope all together; do not split into factions. Remember Allah's favour to you: you were enemies and then He brought your hearts together…' (Al-'Imran: 103). The Aws and Khazraj tribes were at war for one hundred and twenty years despite the fact the two tribes were originally of the same origin; they were the descendants of two brothers born to the same mother and father. When they embraced Islam, their hearts were brought together, and they became brothers by the grace of Allah the Exalted.

This indicates that every impulse of wickedness materialised by the actions of the limbs is the product of the heart's rage. A hand does not strike unless the heart is enraged. The condition of the heart is the most important factor.

This is why the verse underlined that Allah Glorified is He has 'brought your hearts together…' (Al-'Imran: 103). Then, He says: 'And you were about to fall into a pit of Hellfire and He saved you from it.' (Al-'Imran: 103) They were about to fall into hellfire. The verse means, 'You have been guided to Islam. Were it not for it, you would have fallen into Hellfire.'

Allah the Exalted concludes the verse by saying: '... in this way Allah makes His revelations clear to you so that you may be rightly guided.' (Al-'Imran: 103). Thus, we realise the blessing of being guided to Islam in this worldly life. A believer does not have to wait for the Hereafter to witness the power of faith saving humankind from hellfire; it can be witnessed in this worldly life as well. Before Islam, Arabs were steep in conflict, dispersed due to ugly tribal-pride and prejudice, and dealing with discord and dissension prevailing amongst them. When Islam was first introduced in the Arabian Peninsula, they were made brothers. Indeed, this is a great blessing conferred upon them in this worldly life, even despite the fact that this worldly life is not the abode of recompense. What about the Hereafter, which is the abode of recompense and eternal existence? Allah the Exalted says:

وَٱعۡتَصِمُواْ بِحَبۡلِ ٱللَّهِ جَمِيعٗا وَلَا تَفَرَّقُواْۚ وَٱذۡكُرُواْ نِعۡمَتَ ٱللَّهِ عَلَيۡكُمۡ إِذۡ كُنتُمۡ
أَعۡدَآءٗ فَأَلَّفَ بَيۡنَ قُلُوبِكُمۡ فَأَصۡبَحۡتُم بِنِعۡمَتِهِۦٓ إِخۡوَٰنٗا وَكُنتُمۡ عَلَىٰ شَفَا حُفۡرَةٖ مِّنَ
ٱلنَّارِ فَأَنقَذَكُم مِّنۡهَاۗ كَذَٰلِكَ يُبَيِّنُ ٱللَّهُ لَكُمۡ ءَايَٰتِهِۦ لَعَلَّكُمۡ تَهۡتَدُونَ ١٠٣

Hold fast to God's rope all together; do not split into factions.
Remember God's favour to you: you were enemies and then
He brought your hearts together and you became brothers by His grace; you were about to fall into a pit of Fire and He saved you from it – in this way God makes His revelations clear to you so that you may be rightly guided [103]
(The Quran, Al-'Imran: 103)

When the divine command requires that you should do something you are already doing, you should know that it is urging you to continue to do it and hold on to it. When Allah the Exalted says: 'O, you who believe,' (Al-'Imran: 102) it means, 'Renew and foster your faith so that you will continue to believe and hold on to it.' Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَلۡتَكُن مِّنكُمۡ أُمَّةٞ يَدۡعُونَ إِلَى ٱلۡخَيۡرِ وَيَأۡمُرُونَ بِٱلۡمَعۡرُوفِ
وَيَنۡهَوۡنَ عَنِ ٱلۡمُنكَرِۚ وَأُوْلَٰٓئِكَ هُمُ ٱلۡمُفۡلِحُونَ ١٠٤

Be a community that calls for what is good, urges what is right, and forbids what is wrong: those who do this are the successful ones [104] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 104)

The Arabic word for 'community' is 'ummah'. It may be used to refer to a group belonging to any given race, such as the community of Arabs, Persians, or Romans. The Arabic word ummah may also denote a way of life, i.e. a religion. A third meaning of the word is a period of time as it is used in the following verse. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And of the two (prisoners) he who had been freed and remembered after a long time said, "I will inform you of its interpretation, so let me go."' (Yusuf: 45).

The man, for whom Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him interpreted his dream in prison was reminded of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him after an ummah, i.e. after a long period of time. Sometimes the word ummah is used to refer to a man or leader who embodies all the good, righteous qualities. For instance, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Surely, Ibrahim was an exemplar (who embodies all the good, righteous qualities), obedient to Allah, upright, and he was not of the polytheists.' (an-Nahl: 120)

This is because it is not necessary that one person should be endowed with all the righteous qualities and attributes of goodness. Rather, one person may be endowed with one righteous quality, while the other is endowed with another one, and so on. Thus, the broader community is collectively endowed with all the good, righteous qualities. However, Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was endowed with all the good, righteous qualities.

When you say to a person, 'Be brave!' this means that he should train himself to be brave by training himself to embody this quality until it becomes second nature. When you tell someone, 'Be generous,' it means you are telling him to train himself to possess such a righteous quality.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'Be a community that calls for what is good...' (Al-'Imran: 104). This divine command in this verse is for the believers to train themselves to enjoin good and forbid evil. It may mean that the whole Muslim community is commanded to do as such, not just a group of them. Or, as some scholars say, a group from among the believers should undertake the duty of enjoining what is right and forbidding what is wrong.

However, there is a much more profound understanding of this verse suggesting that the entire community of believers should be one that calls for goodness and advises against evildoing. In other words, this verse commands the whole community of Muslims to shoulder this duty and not let it be confined to just a group from amongst them. Whoever knows a religious ruling should call his fellow Muslims to abide by it.

Based on this understanding, some Islamic scholars hold that committing sins should not prevent a Muslim from submitting to the command in this verse. Even if you commit a sin, this should not prevent you from cautioning others against it. So a believer is required to do two things: first, he should avoid committing evil deeds and second, he should call others to avoid it, as well. Therefore, when someone advises you against a sin eventhough he commits it, you should not say to him, 'Just practise what you preach!' An Arab poet once said: 'Avail yourself of my knowledge and do not focus on my action; reap the fruits and leave the wood for the fire!'

However, it befits one who enjoins what is right and forbids what is wrong to be the first to act upon his advice; in doing as such, he would not be among those addressed by the following admonition of Allah the Exalted: 'O, you who believe! Why do you say that which you do not do? It is most hateful to Allah that you should say that which you do not do.' (as-Saff: 2-3)

Based on this understanding, let us reflect the divine command again: 'Be a community that calls for what is good...' (Al-'Imran: 104). It is a command to the believers to be a community themselves in which each individual does his share of the duty of enjoining what is right and forbidding what is wrong. Allah the Almighty also says: 'I swear by Time! Surely, most of man is in loss, except those who believe and do good, and enjoin on each other truth, and enjoin on each other patience.' (al-'Asr: 1-3).

This noble chapter of the Quran underscores the essence of Islamic creed: faith reflected by good deeds. Let us further examine the command of Allah Glorified is He: 'enjoin on each other' which implies that every believer has a tendency to do wrong; no one is safe from temptation. A believer may be too weak to resist one given sin, but quite strong in the face of another. Thus, he should offer advice regarding the former and, meanwhile, receive advice regarding the latter. This is what Allah Glorified is He means by 'enjoin on each other'. Islam does not assign the duty of advising what is right and cautioning against what is wrong to one group and make the rest of the Muslim community just recipients. Rather, the duty should be collectively and interchangeably shouldered amongst all believers based on the situation of each. Every believer should offer advice when he sees his fellow believer weak in the face of a certain sin, and he himself should accept advice when he is offered it during his times of weakness. Therefore, enjoining good and forbidding evil is a role to be performed by all Muslims. At times you are the giver of advice, while at others you are the recipient. The same applies for enjoining one another to adhere to patience in the face of adversity.

When a calamity befalls a Muslim, his fellow Muslims should advise and encourage him to endure it patiently. The very advice giver in that situation may himself need it if a calamity were to befall him later. Thus, the whole Muslim community is required to shoulder this duty: '... and enjoin on each other truth, and enjoin on each other patience.' (al-'Asr: 3)

This is the best understanding of the noble verse: 'Be a community that calls for what is good, enjoins what is right, and forbids what is wrong. Those who do this are the successful ones.' (Al-'Imran: 104) The verse, thus, presents the divine command and also elaborates on its meaning: The duty to 'call for what is good' means to 'enjoin what is right and forbid what is wrong'.

Allah Glorified is He concludes the verse by saying: '... Those who do this are the successful ones.' (Al-'Imran: 104) The Arabic word used in the original text, muflihun (successful) denotes reaping fruits of a profitable deal. It is derived from the root f-l-h meaning 'to cultivate the land'. The one who ploughs the land then sows the seeds will reap the fruits in the end. The word muflihun is used figuratively to denote the wider meaning of 'success'. When Allah Glorified is He uses this word, He also wants to convey another deeper meaning. It is the fact that the difficulty one incurs when he does a good deed, will bring relief, and ease afterward. Whatever you give in the cause of Allah comes back to you many folds over. Consider a person who tills his land and sows in it a measure of wheat seeds. Suppose he had a foolish wife who would scold him: ‘We have only four measures of wheat! How come you threw one of them in the land like that?’ Such a woman does not know that this single measure of wheat seeds will produce a countless number of bushels of wheat in time. In the same manner, Islam does not command you anything except that which will certainly bring forth abundant fruits and rewards.

A farmer who works hard tilling the soil and irrigating the plants, whose forehead is covered with sweat and whose feet sink in mud and water, rejoices on the day of the harvest at the produce he gains. Another farmer who spares himself the trouble of work will reap nothing on the day of harvest except regret and distress. Muslim brothers and sisters do not therefore look on religious obligations as shackles or burdens meant only to deprive you of enjoyment. Rather, they are meant to protect you from regret and maximize your reward in both this life and the Hereafter. A Muslim should not assume that the ordinances of Allah are meant to impede his freedom. Rather, they are meant to protect people and prevent transgressions.

We have previously underlined that when the Islamic Shari'a (legal code) prohibits theft, for example, this is meant to protect the wealth of millions of people and not to restrict those who desperately need money! Thus, security prevails when people abide by the commandments of faith.

If we consider prohibitions in Islam in the same light, we will realise the true value of religious obligations. When Islam enjoins you to lower your gaze and refrain from looking at the women of your neighbour, for example, it simultaneously protects your own women from the eyes of other men. This commandment restricts the freedom of others so as to protect your women just as it restricts your freedom so as to protect the women of others.

Therefore, we need to remember that every Islamic obligation is meant to bring rectitude and success. The earth takes in a seed and gives you several shoots in return, each containing many seeds. Do not look at what religious duties take from your freedom, for it takes, for your sake, from the freedom of others, as well. Do not complain that religious obligations restrict your personal freedom; they earn you valuable fruits far greater in value than what you have to give. The True Lord then says:

وَلَا تَكُونُوا۟ كَٱلَّذِينَ تَفَرَّقُوا۟ وَٱخْتَلَفُوا۟ مِنۢ بَعْدِ مَا جَآءَهُمُ
ٱلْبَيِّنَـٰتُ ۚ وَأُو۟لَـٰٓئِكَ لَهُمْ عَذَابٌ عَظِيمٌ (١٠٥)

Do not be like those who, after they have been given clear revelation, split into factions and fall into disputes: a terrible punishment awaits such people [105] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 105)

This wise statement includes a prohibition of following whims and desires in regard to religion which, in turn, prevents conflict and disunity. Despite clarity of the signs and revelations of Allah the Exalted some insist on defying them. Those who follow their own whims after they were given clear revelations, therefore, deserve to be cast into hellfire. The severe torment awaiting them is in proportion to their flagrant denial of the clear truth. In the following verse, Allah Glorified is He says:

يَوْمَ تَبْيَضُّ وُجُوهٌ وَتَسْوَدُّ وُجُوهٌ ۚ فَأَمَّا ٱلَّذِينَ ٱسْوَدَّتْ وُجُوهُهُمْ
أَكَفَرْتُم بَعْدَ إِيمَـٰنِكُمْ فَذُوقُوا۟ ٱلْعَذَابَ بِمَا كُنتُمْ تَكْفُرُونَ (١٠٦)

On the Day when some faces brighten and others darken, it will be said to those with darkened faces, 'How could you reject your faith after believing? Taste the torment for doing so' [106] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 106)

In this worldly life, darkness and fairness of faces are associated with the various environments where people live. Allah Glorified is He has increased the colour pigments in the skin of darker-skinned, or black, people so their bodies can endure the conditions of their environment. As for the lighter or white-skinned, their bodies do not have the same level of colour pigments because their environment does not require them needing as such.

So darkness of skin in this world is not a sign of degradation in any way; instead, it is for the good of dark-skinned people and necessary for their survival. In the Hereafter, as the aforementioned verse clarifies, blackness and whiteness will have a totally different significance. Just as the earth and the heavens will be completely different, so will be the matter of blackness and whiteness; the environment will stop being the cause. You will be amazed on the Day of Resurrection to see that a person who was black in the worldly life is white in the Hereafter, and vice versa.

Needless to say, darker, or black skin in this worldly life is not a sign of debasement or dislike by Allah Glorified is He. To this we say an emphatic no. Allah the Exalted has made everyone in the form that best suits them; He has granted people who live in certain kinds of environments concentrated colour pigments so they can endure the conditions they live in. On a human level, vaccinations, for example, are given to any person travelling to an infected place so as to protect them from diseases. Likewise, and surely Allah is above all comparison, He has created every creature in the best physical form and provided him with the immunities that help protect him. Blackness of skin is not a sign of divine wrath or dislike, but a means of protection in tough environments. This does not apply on the Day of Resurrection. The earth will be a totally new one, and the faces of the believers will whiten and shine, whereas the faces of the disbelievers will turn gloomy and dark. Also, whiteness and blackness referred to in this verse may be figurative and not meant to actually allude to these colours. The face of a white person may be covered in gloom and repulsion, whereas a black person's face may be bright with the light of faith and trust in Allah; you would feel as if it were radiant due to goodness and piety that you cannot help to look at him. Allah Glorified is He says in the Quran: '(Some) faces on that day shall be bright, looking to their Lord.' (al-Qiyama: 22-23)

What lies within the soul shows on the face of a person. A black person might be bright-faced with cheerfulness and attractive warmth, while another person might have a white face, yet his dark soul spreads over it.In this way, we understand that darkness or blackness of a person's skin in this life is purely meant to help him be in harmony with his environment. Take the example of the eyes. Is the white of the eye better than its dark pupil, or vice versa? No, but both are equally vital with each having an essential role.

Let us reflect upon another example. Consider a builder who is bending a straight iron girder. Can we say that he has ‘disfigured’ the iron girder?! No, he has simply moulded it so it can fit or be used for a specific purpose. Similarly, blackness and whiteness of skin are created for people to enable them to live in different environments. In the Hereafter, the laws and norms of this worldly life will not exist; the earth will not be the same, and nor will the sky remain as it had been. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘On the day when the earth shall be changed into a different earth and the heavens (as well), and they shall come forth before Allah, the One, the Supreme.’ (Ibrahim: 48)

When a believer sees the eternal bliss Allah Glorified is He has prepared for him, with what elation he will receive the Mercy and Bounty of Allah? As for the one who sees his place in hell, his face must be pale due to his state of fear and anguish, no doubt. After declaring that their faces will be dark on that Day, Allah Glorified is He addresses the disbelievers: ‘…"How could you reject your faith after believing?..." (Al-‘Imran: 106). This may be interpreted as a question by which Allah Glorified is He reproaches them, or it may be a question posed by those who knew these disbelievers in this life. Perhaps they will be taken by surprise for seeing them on the Day of Resurrection with black faces, whereas they used to be white in the worldly life. Thus, they will wonder: ‘…‘How could you reject your faith after believing...’ (Al-‘Imran: 106)? They inferred by their dark faces that they had denied faith after having adhered to it; it is as if this darkness were the sign of forsaking faith. This will be their mark in the Hereafter, and as such people will ask, ‘What is it that has changed you into this colour?’ It is disbelief after having embraced faith. What does it mean that they have rejected faith after having accepted it? They had, at first, accepted faith, but then disbelief overcame them, and, as a result, they died as disbelievers. This statement refers to those who turned apostates after having been Muslims, such as Ibn Al-Aslat and others.

However, there can be another interpretation of the verse: ‘…"How could you reject your faith after believing?..."’ (Al-‘Imran: 106) So they had been believers and turned disbelievers afterward. How did this happen? Has Allah Glorified is He not brought from Adam’s loins his offspring and taken a pledge from them? Has He not said to them: ‘…"Am I not your Lord?" and they replied, "Yes, we bear witness."...’ (al-A’raf: 172)? Thus, all the children of Adam, when they were still seeds in the loins of their father, testified that Allah is their Lord. Whoever denies this truth has, therefore, disbelieved after having accepted faith. This verse may also mean that you (disbeliever) have disbelieved after having believed in Muhammad even after he had come to you with the signs and news that you had already known and read about in the Torah and the Gospel. They already expected his advent and knew he was the final Messenger of Allah peace be upon him. Therefore, they deserved to be addressed by these words of Allah Glorified is He: '... then when there came to them that which they had recognised, they disbelieved in it. So let the Curse of Allah be on the disbelievers.' (al-Baqara: 89).

Therefore, the question posed in the verse may refer to apostates who had proclaimed faith then forsook it, or it may be an allusion to the pledge taken from mankind when they were still seeds in the loins of Adam peace be upon him. It may also refer to denying the message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him after having found news and signs of his advent in the Torah and the Gospel. This verse may be addressed, as well, to those who have innovated in faith for that which has not been revealed by Allah Glorified is He and, thus, causing them to split into different denominations, all falsely alleging to be Muslims, such as the Bahá'ítes, the Qadianis and others. The aforementioned verse can be understood in all these ways. When we examine the Quranic text closely, we find it open to various interpretations.

In the verse, Allah Glorified is He speaks about the torment of the disbelievers: '... "How could you reject your faith after believing? Taste the torment for doing so." (Al-'Imran: 106) The statement closing the verse is addressed solely to disbelievers; their disbelief will cause them to be severely punished, which in turn means that faith will lead believers to be granted ample reward. Allah Glorified is He says:

وَأَمَّا ٱلَّذِينَ ٱبْيَضَّتْ وُجُوهُهُمْ فَفِى رَحْمَةِ ٱللَّهِ هُمْ فِيهَا خَـٰلِدُونَ ﴿١٠٧﴾

but those with brightened faces will be in God's grace, there to remain [107] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 107)

It is particularly worthy to notice that when Allah Glorified is He clarifies the reward of the believer for his faith and obedience, He sometimes says:

'…they are destined for Paradise, therein to abide.' (al-A'raf: 42), while at other times, He says: 'Allah will admit those who believe in Him and hold fast to Him into His mercy and favour; He will guide them towards Him on a straight path.' (an-Nisa': 175)

What is the difference between the two? With respect to worship, people are of two kinds. Some of them worship Allah Glorified is He aspiring to the never-ending delights of paradise; so Allah gives it to them as a reward for their devotion. Others worship Allah Glorified is He out of pure, unselfish love for Him. Paradise hardly ever crosses their minds. These are the servants of Allah whom He grants the essence of His Mercy because they are blessed with seeing the Face of Allah the Exalted above all that does not befit His Majesty.

What is the difference between the two rewards: His paradise and His Mercy? Paradise is one of the creations of Allah Glorified is He that He will keep as long as He wishes. Allah's Mercy, however, is an Attribute, and not created by Allah Glorified is He that will remain as long as He remains. This is an absolutely sufficient assurance; Allah's Existence has no end. Allah Glorified is He will grant those special rewards, His Mercy and seeing His Face, to His servants who worship Him purely out of love for Him, not just aspiration to His reward.

We have previously underlined that there is a rank in paradise called 'Illiyyun where there are none of the pleasures of paradise we have been foretold of except seeing the Face of Allah Glorified is He. In the Hereafter, the dwellers of paradise will experience no hunger and no need of any kind. So, what is better for them: the sensual pleasures of paradise or the matchless bliss of seeing the Face of Allah Glorified is He?

Which is better: enjoying blessings or enjoying the company of the Bestower of these blessings? No doubt, the delight of looking at the One Who bestows blessings is a far more profound type of happiness than enjoyment of sensual pleasures. The syntactic precision of the Arabic text of the Quran shows how overwhelming the Mercy of Allah Glorified is He will be for His righteous servants. They will not only be treated with Mercy, but they will be completely surrounded by it. They will not just feel it, but it will constitute the entire realm that encompasses their existence. In that Mercy, they will live forever '... therein to abide….' It is as if the Mercy of Allah were a vast space that His righteous servants will be admitted to and out of which they will never be taken. To the Mercy of Allah Glorified is He they will be admitted, and in the Mercy of Allah they will abide eternally.

In the following verse, Allah Glorified is He says:

تِلۡكَ ءَايَٰتُ ٱللَّهِ نَتۡلُوهَا عَلَيۡكَ بِٱلۡحَقِّۗ وَمَا ٱللَّهُ يُرِيدُ ظُلۡمٗا لِّلۡعَٰلَمِينَ ١٠٨

These are God's revelations: We recite them to you [Prophet] with the Truth. God does not will injustice for His creatures [108] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 108)

The 'communications' of Allah Glorified is He also include His evidences and recompenses. Among them are the rewards to be given to His servants on the Day of Resurrection: The disbelievers will have dark faces and will receive torment, while the believers' faces will be bright, along with them being granted the Mercy of Allah Glorified is He eternally. 'These are the communications of Allah which We recite to you with truth…' (Al-'Imran: 108). What makes a person conceal the truth? There must be some motive; perhaps the truth will cause him trouble, so he resorts to telling falsehoods. But is there anything that can cause trouble to the Creator? No, Allah is Exalted above any deficiency or failure. What then can prevent Him from speaking the truth? Absolutely nothing can. He speaks nothing but the truth, and the dominion of all things belong to Him.

Allah Glorified is He concludes the verse by saying: '...Allah does not desire any injustice to the creatures.' (Al-'Imran: 108). In another verse, Allah reasserts that no injustice may ever be done on His part: '... and your Lord is not in the least unjust to the servants.' (Fussilat: 46)

TheTrue Lord does not like injustice, neither from Him nor from His servants. Injustice may mean to punish or harm someone without their having committed any crime. This is a form of injustice. It may also mean begrudging a person the proper recompense he deserves. This is yet another form of injustice. Through injustice, one usurps benefits to which he has no right. He may take vengenance on an innocent person just out of bitterness and malice. He may falsely accuse a person of a crime because the latter poses a threat against a particular interest he longs for. A person of authority may detain someone who has committed no offense for simply objecting to his corruption or despotism.

One would not abandon the truth and resort to injustice unless he desires a benefit he has no right to, or he desperately wants to protect himself from danger. Allah Glorified is He has no need to do injustice to attain any benefit for Himself or ward off any harm that His creatures might cause Him! He is the Almighty Creator and Lord Who is far elevated above all that. He is the All-Powerful, Supreme Master over His servants. Allah Glorified is He says in this Divine saying: 'O, My servants, verily I have made oppression unlawful for Me and has forbidden it amongst you. So do not commit oppression against each other...'

In fact, oppression is a striking manifestation of ignorance and foolishness! It has only strengthened the oppressed for it has earned them support and assistance from Allah Glorified is He. An oppressor intends by his injustice to weaken the oppressed, but, in fact, he is of little sagacity. In reality, he has only added a new power to the oppressed: the power of being aided by Allah Glorified is He. Thus, an oppressor does exactly the opposite of what he wants. Consider the following example, and Allah Glorified is He is above all comparison. Imagine a child has wronged his brother. How will the father react? His heart would be inclined toward the wronged child; he will try to appease him and restore his right. The unjust child has harmed his brother a little that he, as a child, was able to inflict. He was unaware then that he has only given his brother such a benefit commensurate with the power of his father. He acted ignorantly of the fact that he has strengthened his brother, not vice versa.

We are all dependents of Allah Glorified is He. So what will He do when He sees one of His dependents oppressed? He the Exalted and Almighty will certainly be on the side of the oppressed person. This way, the oppressor has only shown his foolishness by strengthening the oppressed. Were he sagacious, he would have begrudged his opponent such power and would, therefore, have abstained from wronging him. He would have refrained from wronging him, so Allah Glorified is He would not grant him the great compensation of placing him directly under His protection and care.

One may commit injustice to gain a transient benefit, forgetting that he can never escape from the One Who has created him. I would love to say to such a person: You cannot escape from the One Who has created you. You may escape punishment of a mortal like you; you may crave a transient gain you have no right to. Remember then that your Almighty Creator is ever Watchful: He is overtaken neither by slumber nor by sleep. It is a reassurance from the Almighty Creator to the oppressed: Sleep to your hearts' content, for you have a Lord Who is never overtaken by slumber or sleep.

'... Allah does not desire any injustice to the creatures.' (Al-'Imran: 108) Injustice results from a desire to get an undeserved gain or inflicting harm without a just cause. Allah Glorified is He is free of the need to do either of the two. He is the Self-Sufficient Creator of all things and the Possessor of all creation. He says in the following verse: 'Everything in the heavens and earth belongs to Allah; it is to Him that all things return.' (Al-'Imran: 109)

He is the Holder of all control. Everything belongs to Him, is sustained by Him, and is part of His dominion; unto Him all things will return. We know that the Noble Quran has several modes of recitation. The closing sentence of this verse is recited in two ways: '... It is to Him that all things tarje'u (return)', or '… it is to Him that all things turja'u (are returned).' (Al-'Imran: 109) So in one recitation, the verb is in the active voice and in the other it is in the passive voice. In the same way, elsewhere in The Quran, we find the following: '... to Him you tarje'un (will return)', or it can be recited as: '... to Him you turja'un (will be returned)'. Based on these two different ways of recitation, we 'return' to Allah, or we 'are returned' to Him.

What is the difference between the two? Tarje'un (you will return) implies acceptance of our return to Him. The believer loves to meet Allah Glorified is He and longs to reach the Hereafter. He works doing righteous deeds in this worldly life because he aspires to the Afterlife and would love to return to His Lord, the Almighty. As for turja'un (you will be returned), the verb is in the passive voice since it applies to the disbelievers or sinners. Both would not like to proceed to the Hereafter, but it is not their choice. They are compelled to move to the Hereafter and receive their recompense, as Allah says: 'On that Day they will be thrust into the Fire of Hell.' (at-Tur: 13)

They are pushed into hell. They have no choice. Take this example [just for illustration, for Allah is above comparison]: A police officer would take hold of a criminal and push him into a cell. The criminal would not do that voluntarily. This is what the aforementioned verse refers to. Likewise, this is how we understand the words of Allah: '... to Him you turja'un (will be returned)'; they will be pushed with a compelling force to return to Allah and meet their final destiny. A true believer, contrarily, would love to hasten to his Afterlife, longing to see the Face of his Lord.

Now, let us contemplate the verse:

وَلِلَّهِ مَا فِي ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَمَا فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِۚ وَإِلَى ٱللَّهِ تُرۡجَعُ ٱلۡأُمُورُ ١٠٩

Everything in the heavens and earth belongs to God; it is to Him that all things return [109] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 109)

Someone may wonder if things are out of His control so that they would need to 'be returned' to Him. Let us answer this. When Allah Glorified is He created the world, He made it subservient to mankind for their own benefit and created in it the law of causality, i.e. when a person exhausts all possible means, Allah grants him the outcome he seeks. Other benefits are not dependent on any means; they are given to all people effortlessly. The sun rises for us all and spreads its light, warmth, and heat, due to Allah's order, for both believers and disbelievers. Allah does not command the sun to single out believers alone granting them the benefit of its rays. The air is available for believers and disbelievers to breathe, and water is there for all to drink. A disbeliever would reap the fruits when he cultivates a land; it is not an advantage confined to believers only.

Thus, the blessings Allah Glorified is He has created for us fall into two categories: one is made submissive to the service of all mankind, and the other is reached solely by effort. Whoever does the necessary effort will be granted such blessings, be they a believer or a disbeliever. Thus, in this life, Allah Glorified is He makes the means that lead to desirable results partly in the hands of His servants, and He is the holder of the complete control over all means, results, and the creation in its entirety. In the Hereafter, however, there are no causes or results: On that Day, all things 'return/are returned' to the control of Allah alone, and none of His servants will have possession of any authority. '"Who has control today?" "God, the One, the All Powerful..."' (Ghafir: 16).

In this world, Allah Glorified is He has decreed that some people possess abundant means, servants and power because such is the nature of this worldly life. In the Hereafter, this will not be the case. Allah, by His Will and Benevolence, has given us power over causes and means that we can use to attain our ends in this worldly life. In the Hereafter, we will be stripped of any such power, and all things will be returned to Him alone: '"Who has control today?" "God, the One, the All Powerful..."' (Ghafir: 16).

Whoever takes pride in the transient power he has over causes and means should know that causes and means can bring him no benefit by themselves. Rather, Allah Glorified is He has made them subservient to you. Some believe that physical strength is the source of activity and movement irrespective of the Creator Who has created it. Let them preserve that strength forever then if they can. Some are lured by their power and authority to the extent of forgetting about the Creator. Let them keep that authority forever if they can. No one has real power over anything. Allah Glorified is He has made the universe temporarily submissive to us in this life, but everything will return solely to Him in the Hereafter. Even though it may seem that certain things belong to you now, in the Hereafter, we all will be stripped of every power, and everything will be solely His. Allah Glorified is He has created all things from the beginning, and to Him all things will return in the end. Allah the Exalted says in the following verse:

كُنتُمْ خَيْرَ أُمَّةٍ أُخْرِجَتْ لِلنَّاسِ تَأْمُرُونَ بِٱلْمَعْرُوفِ وَتَنْهَوْنَ
عَنِ ٱلْمُنكَرِ وَتُؤْمِنُونَ بِٱللَّهِ ۗ وَلَوْ ءَامَنَ أَهْلُ ٱلْكِتَٰبِ لَكَانَ
خَيْرًا لَّهُم ۚ مِّنْهُمُ ٱلْمُؤْمِنُونَ وَأَكْثَرُهُمُ ٱلْفَٰسِقُونَ ﴿١١٠﴾

[Believers], you are the best community singled out for people: you order what is right, forbid what is wrong, and believe in God. If the People of the Book had also believed, it would have been better for them. For although some of them do believe, most of them are lawbreakers [110] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 110)

What makes the Muslim community 'the best'? The best community must have particular attributes to deserve this superiority: '…You enjoin what is right, forbid what is wrong and believe in Allah…' (Al-'Imran: 110). If any of these attributes is lost, there is no superiority in such a case, for being the best community is dependent on specific conditions: enjoining what is right, forbidding what is wrong and believing in Allah Glorified is He.

The words ma'ruf (right) and munkar (wrong) have special significance. The former is derived from the stem 'arafa which implies acceptance and approval. It describes a thing that one likes, takes pride in or is pleased to have others know about. The other word munkar implies disapproval and describes a thing that people are ashamed of. Naturally, approval and acceptance are granted to deeds of righteousness; such are the deeds one would love others to know about. Likewise, evildoing is subject to condemnation, and an evildoer is often keen to conceal or deny whatever misdeeds he has done.

Acts of goodness naturally lead to approval and regard even of the corrupt. A thief would not declare his 'profession' among strangers and would even profess contempt towards it whenever it is mentioned. Theft is a detestable act even by those who commit it. Allah Glorified is He has created in our natural disposition approval for ma'ruf (what is right) and disapproval for munkar (what is wrong). A sound disposition would always be inclined towards doing good deeds and see them deserving of commendation, while, on the other hand, would always see wrongdoing worthy of despise, even if the person himself commits bad deeds.

Why does Allah mention 'faith in Him' after 'enjoining what is right' and 'forbidding what is wrong'? Some people do good only to please themselves. They enjoin what is right, forbid what is wrong, do acts of righteousness, give generously, establish nonprofit medical and economic organisations for the needy and the weak, etc. Still, they do all that driven by an inner personal feeling, not out of keenness to follow the guidance of Allah and to please Him. Such a person will receive no reward from Allah Glorified is He for whatever good deeds he does, as it is not faith in Him that motivates him. Good deeds without faith will not avail their doer in the least. Allah Glorified is He rewards those who believe in Him, and who have Him in their minds when they do good. Whoever does good for the sake of gallantry, fame and reputation will gain his reward of the same type of his motives. Since he works for self-satisfaction, praise or commemoration, his reward will be nothing but what he has worked for. This is what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had explained, ‘The first whose case will be decided on the Day of Judgment, will be a man who had died as a martyr. He will be brought forth. Allah will remind him of the blessings He had bestowed upon him in life, and the man will acknowledge them. Then, Allah will ask him, ‘What did you do to express gratitude for them?’ The man will reply, ‘I fought for Your cause till I was martyred.’ Allah will say, ‘You are lying. You fought so it would be said, "He is a brave warrior", and so was it said.’ Then, orders will be given to drag him on his face and throw him into hellfire.

The next will be a man who had pursued [Islamic] knowledge, taught it to others, and recited the Quran. He will be brought forth. Allah will remind him of the blessings He had bestowed upon him in life, and the man will acknowledge them. Then, Allah will ask him, ‘What did you do to express gratitude for them?’ The man will reply, ‘I acquired [Islamic] knowledge, taught it to others and recited the Quran for Your sake.’ Allah will say, ‘You are lying. You acquired [Islamic] knowledge so it would be said, "He is a learned scholar", and you recited the Quran so it would be said, "He is an able reciter [of the Quran]", and so was it said.’ Then, orders will be given to drag him on his face and throw him into hellfire. The next will be a man whom Allah had given plenty of wealth. He will be brought forth. Allah will remind him of the blessings He had bestowed upon him in life, and the man will acknowledge them. Then, Allah will ask him, ‘What did you do to express gratitude for them?’ The man will reply: ‘I left no way in which You like money to be spent without spending in it for Your sake.’ Allah will say, ‘You are lying. You did that so it would be said, "He is generous", and so was it said.’ Then, orders will be given to drag him on his face and throw him into Hellfire.’

The reward he receives for his good deeds is people’s praise. Allah Glorified is He will grant reward in the Hereafter only to those who devoted themselves to Him and sought to please Him only by their good deeds. Allah the Exalted and Almighty says: ‘Who speaks better than someone who calls people to Allah, does what is right and says, "I am one of those devoted to Allah"?’ (Fussilat: 33)

A believer does good deeds and declares that he does so because he is one of those who surrender to Allah Glorified is He. He does not do good driven by communist, existentialist, or philanthropic impulses. Disbelief is the most flagrant act of perfidy. Whatever good works a person does, while not acknowledging that Allah Glorified is He is his Lord, will inevitably be futile. A disbeliever denies the existence of his Creator. Let him then receive his reward from whomever for whom he worked.

Thus, as the verse illustrates, the best community is that which enjoins what is good, forbids what is wrong, and believes in Allah Glorified is He. But what makes them do good for other than Allah and disbelieve in Him? It is their coveting of disingenious honour. At the onset of Islam, the people of authority from among the adherents of other religions thought Islam would strip them of their privileges, powers, positions and prestigious benefits they had come to enjoy. They sacrificed Paradise for transient worldly advantages. They feared for their mundane interests that showed they had but very little sagacity, for Allah Glorified is He says: '... If the People of the Book had also believed, it would have been better for them. Although some of them do believe, most of them are lawbreakers.' (Al-'Imran: 110)

Had they believed, they would have earned the pleasure of Allah Glorified is He and would not have lost their authority and prestige either. They would have received their reward twice: once in this world and another in the Hereafter. They would have been amply rewarded both for having believed in the Prophet who was sent to them before and for accepting the call of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as well. This is not a generalisation, though. Some of the people of the Book did believe, and Allah Glorified is He clearly states this fact in the Noble Quran: '... Although some of them do believe, most of them are lawbreakers.' (Al-'Imran: 110). Since disbelief is the opposite of belief, Allah would have said: '...Although some of them do believe, most of them are disbelievers.' However, He says: '... most of them are lawbreakers.' (Al-'Imran: 110)

It is Allah the Exalted and Almighty Who speaks, so every word is selected with utmost precision. Disbelieving, while having no prior knowledge of faith or the signs and proofs associated with it, is one thing yet disbelieving, while you know the fundamentals of faith, having read the Torah and the Gospel, is another thing.

People of the Book have read the Torah and the Gospel and have known the truth and clear signs of Allah Glorified is He from them. When they denied the message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him they thus added rebellion to disbelief and deserved to be called ‘lawbreakers’. The plausible outcome, or result of their recognition of the proofs and signs associated with the advent of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was that they should have embraced faith. Their denial of his prophethood makes them, not only disbelievers, but also defiers of Allah; they had recognised the truth, but then denied it.

As long as Allah Glorified is He says: ‘... Although some of them do believe, most of them are lawbreakers.’ (Al-‘Imran: 110), what then will the lawbreakers do with believers? The former constitutes the majority of the Jews and Christians, and they will sure plot against the believing minority and try to inflict harm and suffering upon them. This is why Allah Glorified is He says in the following verse:

لَن يَضُرُّوكُمْ إِلَّآ أَذًى ۖ وَإِن يُقَٰتِلُوكُمْ يُوَلُّوكُمُ ٱلْأَدْبَارَ ثُمَّ لَا يُنصَرُونَ ﴿١١١﴾ they will not do you much harm: even if they come out to fight you, they will soon turn tail; they will get no help [111]

(The Quran, Al-’Imran: 111)

Allah the Exalted reassures this minority that the disbelieving majority cannot do but a trifling harm to them. ‘These can never inflict more than a passing hurt on you...’ (Al-‘Imran: 111). It is a promise filled with relief for the minority of the people of the Book who have believed, such as ‘Abdullah ibn Salam Allah be pleased with him who converted from Judaism. Allah Glorified is He reassures them that the rebellious majority cannot inflict torment upon them. Allah Glorified is He reassures them that any attempt of the disbelieving majority to inflict harm upon them would not amount to anything more than a passing hurt.

What is the difference between darar (harm) and ‘adha (a passing hurt)? The latter causes pain at the moment of its occurrence then, this pain quickly dies away. As for harm, its pain continues, and its effect persists for some time. If one receives a simple blow, it hurts, but its pain subsides immediately. If the blow is powerful and causes bruising and swelling, this is what we mean by darar (harm). A passing hurt can be caused by a word; the disbelievers may mock the believers, insult them or utter words of disbelief. Such words do not cause the believers any real 'harm', rather, they simply offend their ears. Allah Glorified is He reassures believers that the people of disbelief cannot do much harm to them; all they can do is to cause them a trifling hurt that has no lasting effect.

Thus, the Words of Allah Glorified is He: 'These can never inflict more than a passing hurt on you…' (Al-'Imran: 111) that they will never be able to hurt believers except with mere insults, taunts, and gestures that hurt their feelings or praise disbelief or by uttering vile words that faith does not have moral support. This is the most that the impious can do, but as to really harming believers, they are in no position to do so. Reality afterward comes in accordance with this divine reassurance; we see how Allah Glorified is He protects Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his Companions Allah be pleased with them from disbelievers. Allah Glorified is He has made this statement: 'These can never inflict more than a passing hurt on you…' (Al-'Imran: 111), so it becomes a rule. Throughout the struggle between Muslims and disbelievers, it was clear the latter were not able to inflict more than a passing hurt on the people of faith.

Let us consider what happened to the tribes of Banu Qaynuqa', Banu Qurayza and Banu An-Nadir and what happened to the Jews of Khaybar: Did they inflict more than a passing hurt on the believers? They said to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'Let it not deceive you, Muhammad, that you have confronted feeble people who know nothing about war and defeated them. If you fight us, you will know who true men are!' That proved to be mere talk since history has kept an account of what has happened to them all: Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him inflicted a bitter defeat on them. No matter how hard they tried to inflict real harm on the believers, Allah Glorified is He did not allow them to. In light of this, He says: '…and if they fight against you, they succoured.' (Al-'Imran: 111). If disbelievers attempt to inflict real harm on believers, they will turn out to be too weak to do so; they will only turn their backs and flee before the believers, so their defeat will be inevitable.

In the Arabic language, the conditional particle 'en' (literally 'if') causes omission of the letter 'nun' (literally 'n') from the verbs in the subordinate and the main clauses when these verbs fall under the category of present verb forms suffixed with pronouns referring to the second or third persons: '…and en (if) they yuqatelukum (fight against you), they yuwallukum (will turn their backs upon you) [in flight]…' (Al-'Imran: 111).

The verb in the subordinate clause 'yuqatelukum' is originally 'yuqatelu(n)akum', but the 'n' has been omitted for the reason explained above. Likewise, the verb in the main clause 'yuwallukum' is originally 'yuwallu(n)akum', but the 'n' has been omitted for the reason explained above. When another clause is connected to the conditional sentence with the conjunction 'wa' (literally 'and'), the verb in that clause should also be without 'n' if it falls under the same category of present verbs, since it follows the same rule as the two verbs in the conditional sentence.

Nevertheless, the verb in that clause is written in the verse without omission of the 'n': '…and then they will not be yunsaru(n) (succoured).' (Al-'Imran: 111). Apparently, this is a breach of the rule established in the Arabic language which is bound to suggest to the Arab mind that there is a special reason for this since the speaker is Allah Who is far elevated above error. Why then is the letter 'n' kept and not omitted in the verb 'yunsaru(n)'? According to the Arabic grammatical rule explained above, the verse should read as follows: '…and en (if) they yuqatelukum (fight against you), they yuwallukum (will turn their backs upon you) [in flight], and then they will not be yunsaru (succoured)', with the 'n' omitted in all three verbs. Were the verse written this way, with the verb in the third clause 'yunsaru(n)', it would mean this verb falls within the scope of the conditional sentence and is dependent on the occurrence of the condition in them. Were this to be the case, all three clauses would have been referring to a single situation, a single battle and describing the results to be expected in that single battle only.

However, Allah Glorified is He in the third clause means to state a general truth, not dependent on the conditional sentence or occurrence of the condition stated in it. Reflect upon this verse: '…then they will not be yunsaru(n) (succoured).' (Al-'Imran: 111) This wise statement incorporates a matter beyond the realm of the preceding conditional sentence; it does not take the form of the two verbs in the conditional sentence since it does not follow them in meaning and is not dependent on occurrence of the condition involved in them. It is a ruling from Allah Glorified is He that disbelievers will never be aided, whether or not they fight against the believers. The clause after the conditional sentence refers to a separate issue, a truth which is not dependent on the condition. The disbelievers will not be aided in any way, whether or not they fight against the believers just because they have disbelieved in Allah Glorified is He.

Now that we have examined the sentence as a whole, let us examine it more closely, and we will find in it a new meaning. In Arabic, 'thumma' (later afterward) and 'fa' (immediately after) are both particles implying order and succession, yet the latter implies 'immediate succession'. Therefore, one might assume that the verse should read instead: '…they will turn their backs upon you [in flight], fa (and immediately after) they will not be succoured.' (Al-'Imran: 111) That would mean disbelievers would not be able to defeat you if they were to attack you again immediately after their defeat. However, Allah Glorified is He uses the particle 'thumma' which denotes deferred, not immediate, succession. By this, Allah Glorified is He means disbelievers will not defeat you, O, believers, even if they take time to prepare for another battle to snatch victory from you after they had fled defeated from the earlier battle. Using the particle 'thumma' (later afterward) denotes an open-ended consequence, namely, defeat of the disbelievers whether they fight again immediately or later after fleeing. The particle 'fa', on the other hand may be used to denote, or imply, a direct consequence that immediately succeeds the earlier action. The particle 'fa' is used in such contexts of the Quran as in the following verse: 'Then He causes him to die, fa (and immediately after) assigns to him a grave.' ('Abasa: 21). Use of the particle 'fa' is appropriate in this verse because entering the grave comes directly after death. Look also at the verse that follows immediately after the aforementioned one:'Thumma (later) when He pleases, He will raise him to life again.' ('Abasa: 22).

Again, fa denotes, or implies, immediate succession, while thumma implies deferred succession. The use of 'thumma' in the verse we are discussing implies that disbelievers will not gain victory over the people of faith, neither sooner and nor later. They are doomed to be defeated regardless of when they choose to fight against believers again. '…And thumma (later) they will not be succoured.' (Al-'Imran: 111). If Allah had said, '... they will not gain victory', the verse would not involve such strong emphasis. Why? 'Succoured' implies that disbelievers will not succeed by their own means, and nor will they be aided by any other means so as to achieve victory.

'…And thumma (later), they will not be succoured' is a declaration that is a lasting fact, which is not confined to just the time of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him but will continue forever. The disbelievers may never gain victory over the believers, either by their own means or through the assistance from others.

Improper understanding might lead a person to think that an error occured in the verb form in the aforementioned clause, but we have already explained why the verb 'yunsaru' (succoured; aided) comes in this form instead of 'yunsaru(n)'. It is a promise from Allah Glorified is He which gives reassurance and security to the Muslim nation that disbelievers may never, by any means gain victory over them. As we have noted also, this expression is more accurate than '... they will not gain victory', for 'gain victory' implies that they may not be able to defeat the believers by their own means, whereas '…they will not be succoured' implies that they may never achieve victory even if they are joined by allies who attempt to succour them so that they may defeat the believers. Thus, whether by themselves or through assistance from allies, disbelievers may never gain victory against believers.

O, Muslims, know then if disbelievers gain victory over you, whether by their own doing or by the help from others, it means you do not abide by the guidance of Allah Glorified is He in your fight against them. Someone might ask: how do the Jews defeat us, while we are Muslims?! To this, I reply with pertinent questions: Do we presently follow the guidance and spirit of Islam? Do we have firm faith in our hearts that we put into action, abiding by the ordinance of Allah Glorified is He? Do you think Allah Glorified is He has let you down by causing your defeat? Do you consider your battle an Islamic one in the first place?

The answer is a resounding'No!' We are motivated to fight for anything else but Islam. We give precedence to socio-cultural prejudice, nationalism, and ethnic affiliation over faith. So how is it plausible that we hope for aid from Allah? We have no right to ask for His aid unless we enter into our battle as His troops who hold fast to His guidance and fight in His cause. Defeat results from straying from the path of Allah for He has guaranteed victory and predominance for those who follow His path: 'And the ones who support Our cause will be the winners.' (as-Saffat: 173)

If we do not win a given fight, be certain then that we are not true supporters of His cause. Allah Glorified is He says in the following verse:

ضُرِبَتۡ عَلَيۡهِمُ ٱلذِّلَّةُ أَيۡنَ مَا ثُقِفُوٓاْ إِلَّا بِحَبۡلٖ مِّنَ ٱللَّهِ وَحَبۡلٖ مِّنَ ٱلنَّاسِ وَبَآءُو
بِغَضَبٖ مِّنَ ٱللَّهِ وَضُرِبَتۡ عَلَيۡهِمُ ٱلۡمَسۡكَنَةُۚ ذَٰلِكَ بِأَنَّهُمۡ كَانُواْ يَكۡفُرُونَ
بِـَٔايَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ وَيَقۡتُلُونَ ٱلۡأَنۢبِيَآءَ بِغَيۡرِ حَقّٖۚ ذَٰلِكَ بِمَا عَصَواْ وَّكَانُواْ يَعۡتَدُونَ ١١٢

and, unless they hold fast to a lifeline from God and from man- kind, they are overshadowed by vulnerability wherever they are found. They have drawn God's wrath upon themselves. They are overshadowed by weakness, too, because they have persistently dis- believed in God's revelation and killed prophets without any right, all because of their disobedience and boundless transgression [112] (The Quran, Al-'Imran: 112)

The Arabic word 'dureba' (cleave) is also used in the context of money. It refers to making coins by stamping metal. A blank disc is made when an image is struck on it. The softer metal used to make the coin is poured into a mold made of a harder metal, and then this image is impressed on it. In this context, the verb dureba means 'impressing'. The blank disc is forced to take the shape of the mold and cannot resist it. The images in the mold are impressed onto the disc that cannot be formed in any other way.

Thus, 'dureba' implies forcing or coercion. Accordingly, when Allah Glorified is He says: 'Abasement durebat (is made to cleave) to them,...' it means that abasement has been forced on them just as an image in a mold is impressed on a blank disc to make a coin: They can never be rid of such abasement just as the metal disc of a coin can never be separated from the shape and image impressed on it. Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '...wherever they are found', which means abasement will follow them wherever they go. Still, there is an exception to this. What is this exception?

We find it in the words of Allah the Exalted '… except under a covenant with Allah and a covenant with men…' (Al-'Imran: 112). They will not suffer from indignity and disgrace when they are under a covenant of protection from Allah, or from strong people. When they were under a covenant from Allah first and a covenant from Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him after his arrival in Medina, they were safe. When they breached that covenant, what happened? They were overshadowed by ignominy again.
